MEDICAL MINISTRY IN THE FAR EASTERN DIVISION

Mrs. R. F. Waddell, assistant medical secretary in charge of nursing service and nursing education.

C. P. Sorensen, president of the Division.

GREETINGS from the 42 hospitals and clinics operated by the Seventh-day Adventist Church in the Far East. This territory extends from Japan and Korea in the north to Indonesia in the south, as well as from Guam in the east to Thailand in the west.

Eighteen of these institutions are general hospitals having a combined bed capacity of 1,394. Of the remaining 24, two are dental clinics and 22 are out-patient facilities. Our 189 physicians, 16 dentists, 629 nurses and 16,000 other medical workers provided for over one million patient-visits during 1965.

"To make man whole" has long been the objective of Adventist medicine. This motivating force has prompted highly skilled individuals to dedicate their lives to the task of restoring in man the image of his Creator. In order to effectively accomplish this purpose, priority is placed on advanced training along with continuing programs of professional upgrading at all levels. Hospital chaplaincy and patient counselling are held as important elements of successful therapy.

Medical activities of Seventh-day Adventists are generally recognized as being of exceptional quality. They are frequently referred to in tourist brochures and in the press as "tops" in medical and dental care.

Our seven schools of nursing have a total enrollment of 600 students and graduate approximately 125 each year. The curricula of these schools meet government and denominational requirements. Their education programs are directed toward the rendering of superior nursing care. Paramedical education is also provided in appropriate areas.

Preventive medicine is featured in all our institutions. Village and mobile clinics with health education emphasis are sponsored, and extensive medical-welfare service is carried on in remote places of the lands in which we operate.

Seventh-day Adventist medical institutions have been developed for the express purpose of serving the communities in which they are located, regardless of race, creed or economic status. They are public services. For this purpose they were established and to this end they are dedicated.

PREVENTIVE medicine, health education, and public health are believed to be appropriate activities of the church. Our hospitals have developed teams of health workers that visit villages, islands, and remote areas of the countries in which they are located in order to provide much needed medical and dental care, to teach a better way of life, and to improve levels of nutrition and environmental sanitation.

These teams usually consist of physicians, dentists, nurses, and chaplains or their assistants. They take welfare supplies along with them as they go into areas where such are needed. Literally thousands of tons of food, clothing and medicine are distributed annually to the underprivileged by these means.

INTRODUCING ADVENTIST MEDICAL CARE

VERY early in the history of Seventh-day Adventists attention was drawn to the importance of health as well as ways and means of promoting it. In 1863 the church was called to a change in living habits in order that the human mechanism might function with increased efficiency. The idea of a departure from the empirical approach to medicine and health was welcomed by the public. In 1866 our first health journal was published, focused upon health education for the masses.

The church's first medical institution was opened in Battle Creek, Michigan, in 1866. It immediately became popular. As it grew it attracted people from all walks of life from almost every part of the world.

Seventh-day Adventists opened their first medical college in Battle Creek in 1895, known as the American Medical Missionary College. The church's center of medical education later shifted to Loma Linda, California, with the establishment of the College of Medical Evangelists in 1909. Our education facilities at Loma Linda were renamed the Loma Linda University in 1961. Since that humble beginning seventy years ago the church has graduated 3,900 physicians.

The University's School of Dentistry opened in 1953. Since that time it has been graduating from 50 to 60 highly qualified dentists annually. It is ranked professionally as one of the best in the world.

Nursing education has always been a prominent feature of Adventist education. It is conducted on all levels ranging from practical nursing, diploma, and collegiate programs to graduate schools conferring Master's degrees.

Paramedical education is conducted as schools of laboratory technique, radiography, physical therapy, occupational therapy, dental hygiene, hospital administration and hospital chaplaincy.

Arrangements have been developed whereby Adventist youth in overseas countries may be trained near their homes. This may be accomplished in either institutions that are affiliated in some way with our church or in those with which we have no official connections. From schools in all corners of the globe come a continuing stream of dedicated workers committed to the selfless service of mankind. "To make man whole" is their objective.

Adventist Sanitarium and Hospital at Tsuen Wan, Hong Kong.

THE Adventist Sanitarium and Hospital in Tsuen Wan was officially opened on May 20, 1964, by Dr. the Honorable P. H. Teng, O.B.E., director of Hong Kong's Medical and Health Services. It is located in the city's textile manufacturing district and, although it caters largely to factory workers and refugees living in that area, it has first-class rooms as well.

A new medical institution is planned for Hong Kong by the Adventist Church. It will be located on Stubbs Road. It is expected to be of a silo-type design and will represent the latest in hospital construction. It will have ultra-modern equipment and facilities for providing high level patient care.

Pastor E. L. Longway (left) and H. W. Miller, M. D., have actively promoted the medical program in the Hong Kong area and other parts of the Division.

ALTHOUGH large medical institutions are required in order to provide clinical resources for training programs, it is believed that maximum benefit accrues to a greater number of people through the establishment of many smaller hospitals in strategic places. The Seventh-day Adventist Church has attempted to locate medical facilities throughout the Far East in those areas where a need is felt and where such activities have been requested.

Even though many of our institutions are comparatively small, they are generally well equipped and possess adequate well-trained staffs to provide medical care that is above the standard of their respective communities. Many of the smaller units function as satellites to larger and more centrally located mission hospitals. They draw upon their mother institutions for personnel as well as for diagnostic and therapeutic services not expected in lean sophisticated institutions.

As an affiliated institution of Loma Linda University, most of the staff of the Bangkok Sanitarium-Hospital, who have American Board qualifications, are also faculty members of Loma Linda University. This makes it possible to conduct a residency program for physicians in the main medical specialties.

Modern, safe and adequate anesthesia has become mandatory as better trained surgeons make their way to overseas institutions which must compete with rapidly advancing standards throughout the Orient. The most international group of all, the graduate nurses who have finished the special one-year course in anesthesia, have scattered around the world.

The School of Medical Technology, offering an intensive two-year program, graduates from four to ten qualified technologists every year. Besides filling the needs of our institutions in Thailand, many of these graduates are today holding important positions of service in other Far Eastern Division medical institutions.

EVEN a brief trip through Asian lands today can overwhelm the traveler from other parts of the world with its staggering population problems. People seem to be everywhere in steady streams on every roadway and overflowing every public vehicle.

You might say, "What chance have we as missionaries of the Lord in earth's closing days of even scratching the surface, much less in reaching every kindred, tongue, and people in these populace lands?"

In spite of impressive statistics compiled every year by the Bangkok Sanitarium and Hospital, our largest denominational overseas mission hospital, and by its smaller but no less active daughter institutions scattered over the northern and southern part of the country, we are still hardly touching the thirty million people in this fascinating though relatively small kingdom.

The answer to this challenge, we believe, is TRAINING! Jesus Himself did not try to reach the whole world with His medical ministry but He patiently taught and prepared a small group of followers who literally turned the world upside down and changed the course of history in the years that followed.

The same Jesus, who wrought such miracles in the hearts of common fisherman, small businessmen, and other humble people who followed Him, can perform similar miracles in and through the hearts and lives of His workers in the Bangkok Sanitarium and Hospital. A great army of consecrated medical evangelists is formed as these groups are multiplied by hundreds of other groups around the world. The oppressive pessimism that grips the hearts of most of us as we begin to grasp the magnitude of the work that is before us, can change to optimism and a new respect and appreciation of what God can do with the human heart and life that is fully dedicated to Him and has been adequately trained for His service.

Graduate nurses in Thailand are expected to be qualified midwives as well. Thus each nurse at the Bangkok Sanitarium and Hospital school of nursing spends six months of intensive training during her senior year in the 30-bed charity midwifery hospital. Besides delivering babies, these students conduct pre-natal and post-partum clinics for mothers, and well-baby clinics for children.

To-date 370 nurses have received diplomas from the Bangkok Sanitarium and Hospital School of Nursing. This school ranks among the best in Thailand, and applications far outnumber those who can be accepted each year. The school is now directed by a Thai national, a member of the first class of nurses to graduate in 1950. She has since completed requirements and received her M. S. degree from Loma Linda University.

The School of Practical Nursing, long anticipated and very much needed, was launched in late 1963. Pictured above is the first graduating class completing the one-year course. Every graduate is a Seventh-day Adventist and can be found today working in one of Thailand's five Seventh-day Adventist medical institutions.

INTRODUCING HOSPITAL CHAPLAINCY

THE "team concept" is held by Seventh-day Adventists as a vital force in bringing about the physical restoration of man. This "team" consists of the clinician, the chaplain and the nurse. All three are important in arriving at an understanding of the patient's needs and in bringing healing to his diseased body, mind and soul. As the team plans and works together it develops a dynamic interchange that possesses tremendous therapeutic value. We believe that trust in God and true religion go hand in hand with the laws of health.

Some of the employees of the Haad Yai Mission Hospital gather around the chaplain's desk for Bible instruction.

Patient counselling not only takes place in the chaplain's office or at the patient's bedside, but the men in the business office often give help to the patient or his friends.

A scene from a patient's room in the Youngberg Memorial Hospital. The chaplain with his Bible in his hand gives comfort and hope to this man who has come to the hospital for physical healing.

HOSPITAL chaplaincy is believed to be one of the most effective means at modern medicine's disposal of breaking through the psychological barrier that frequently retards physical healing. A recognition of man's relationship to God, to his fellowmen and to himself is essential to optimal health. "To make man whole" is the objective of Adventist medicine and is accomplished through meeting mankind's total needs at all levels.

Christlike work for the body and Christlike work for the soul is considered to be the true interpretation of the gospel. These avenues of approach to sickness are thought to be the most effective in bringing about a restoration in man's hour of need. The "team concept" includes the physician, the dentist, the nurse and the chaplain.

INTRODUCING EMERGENCY TRANSPORTATION AND CARE

In Korea this type of conveyance is often seen at our medical institutions. Not a very modern means of transportation but it conveys the patient to the place where he can receive medical attention.

The Seoul Sanitarium and Hospital conducts a clinic on Cheju Island, one of Korea's off-shore islands. A lad is waiting on a stretcher for his turn to receive care.

DENTISTRY has become an integral part of man's effort to provide optimal health for his community. An increasing number of highly trained dentists have joined their fellow Adventist medical workers in providing comprehensive health services to the people of the Far East. Missionary dentistry is an excellent pioneer health service. It has penetrated into the mountains and jungles of the Orient bringing the first hope and relief that many sufferers have known.

Several of our hospitals, as well as individual dental clinics, have well-equipped dental offices that compare favorably with the best in the Occident. The contributions that these well-qualified and dedicated men make to Adventist health service is most significant.

INTRODUCING RESIDENCY AND IN-SERVICE TRAINING

MODERN missionary medicine is never static. Advanced training in all areas of medical and nursing services is emphasized by Seventh-day Adventists. Dynamic programs of in-service education are conducted on a continuing basis in all areas of institutional practice. Physicians, dentists and nurses are constantly aware of trends and developments in scientific patient care. Classes, seminars and professional meetings are held regularly in order to keep our health workers alerted to the latest in diagnosis and treatment.

INTRODUCING NURSING EDUCATION

The 1965 graduates from the Seoul Sanitarium and Hospital school of nursing sat for the National Licensing examinations and, of the twenty-five schools of nursing represented, our students rated the highest.

INTRODUCING SEVENTH-DAY ADVENTIST MEDICAL INSTITUTIONS OF THE FAR EAST

A clinic in Bandung, Java, which is operated under the supervision of the Bandung Sanitarium and Hospital

NEWS FROM HERE & THERE

● Pastor G. A. Munson, for many years ministerial and radio-TV secretary of the Korean Union Mission, has accepted a call to the Sabah Mission to be the president of the mission. The former president, Pastor Andrew Peters, and family, will spend some time in the States but hope to return to the Far East in the not too distant future.

● We have an apology to make to the West Indonesia Union Mission. In the March issue of the Outlook we listed the Nusa Tenggara Mission as being a part of the East Indonesia Union, whereas it is a part of the West Indonesia Union. Sorry!

● We welcome a second doctor to the Adventist Medical Center in Okinawa in the person of Dr. Stanley E. Pollman who recently arrived from the States with his family. Dr. E. E. Keuster is the medical director of that growing institution.

● Two families have recently left Manila for short furloughs in the States, namely Pastor and Mrs. T. C. Murdoch and Pastor and Mrs. R. C. Williams and children. The former is the president of the North Philippine Union and the latter is the union ministerial secretary.

● Miss D. Lois Burnett is being asked in returning from the Philippines to the States to go to London via Singapore and Bangkok in order to assist Southeast Asia Union and the Bangkok Sanitarium and Hospital School of Nursing to secure recognition from the General Nursing Council of England. Miss Burnett has been in Cebu, Philippines, to assist in the developing of a school of Nursing for Mountain View College and one of the medical institutions in the South Philippines.

● Two of the members of our secretarial staff at the Division office have left for short furloughs in their homelands, namely Misses Faye Welter and Marion Barlow. Both plan to attend the General Conference Session in Detroit, Michigan.

● R. F. Waddell, M. D., our division medical secretary, was pleasantly surprised recently to receive a cable from F. E. J. Harder, alumni president, Andrews University, informing him that he had been designated as the Alumnus of the Year by Andrews University Alumni. Congratulations, Dr. Waddell!

● Pastor Don A. Roth writing from San Francisco, California, on April 21, reports that the Japan Missionary College choir tour has made a wonderful start. Quoting: "They had a fabulous time in Hawaii. Three thousand people attended their first concert in Honolulu. At La Sierra College last night, a capacity audience gave them a standing ovation. Many friends from Loma Linda were present at the concert. The Loma Linda University gave them a dinner on the University campus."

● Pastor and Mrs. C. G. Oliver arrived in Singapore from Djakarta on April 27. Pastor Oliver has been the president of the West Irian Mission for a number of years. The Olivers plan to return to Indonesia after their well-earned furlough.

● Pastor G. A. Haas, for many years president of the Far Eastern Island Mission, has asked for permanent return to the States. Pastor C. L. Shankel has been called to fill the vacancy and his acceptance has been received. Pastor Shankel has spent many years in Indonesia, more recently serving as laymen's secretary of the West Indonesia Union Mission.

● Two changes in personnel concern the Far Eastern Academy. D. F. Aldridge, principal of the academy, has accepted a call to the Sarawak Mission. He will relieve Pastor James Wong, principal of the Sunny Hill School in Kuching, who will go to the States for further studies. He plans to enroll at La Sierra College.

Pastor Garth Thompson, Bible teacher at Southeast Asia Union College, has been invited to be the principal of Far Eastern Academy. The Thompsons are due to leave for a furlough and during Pastor Thompson's absence, R. R. Greve, formerly the principal of the Guam Academy and presently a member of the Far Eastern Academy teaching staff, will be the acting principal.
