AGE OF ANXIETY

by A. R. Mazat, Manager

Periodical Department, Pacific Press Publishing Association

Some years ago a sociology class made a scientific study of one of the rundown slum sections in Baltimore. The class members tabulated cards, 200 of which were marked, HEADED FOR JAIL. On each card was listed a little rough urchin whose background, attitude toward life, and prospects indicated he was headed for jail. The report was filed in the archives of the university.

Twenty-five years later another class in sociology found this survey of 200 children, black and white, boys and girls, headed for jail. They decided to check every card and see what happened to these young people.

The first card investigated finally led them to a prominent physician in Baltimore. They went to him and said, "You're listed here as an incorrigible kid headed for jail. How come you never got there?"

"It's true," the man agreed. "I was a bad boy in the neighborhood—but a kind elderly lady believed in me and put some good ideas into my mind. She told me that God needed me to be a physician. It gave me a lift to have someone believe in me. I felt that I could not let her down."

The new sociologic group followed up on another card and found the man managing a large supermarket. "You're on the list to land in jail. How come you missed that experience?" He told the following story:

"I worked in a grocery store in that old neighborhood. I used to steal stuff for a gang of kids. I was a provider of food, and I stole it all. Of course, I got caught. But somehow a kind lady had confidence in me. She found a way for me to pay back my bill, cleared me with the police, and shampooed my mind with real values in life. She told me that someday I was going to run the largest supermarket in Baltimore. I started to believe that and did not want to let her down."

The survey showed that out of the 200 originally earmarked for jail, only two ever got there. Why? Because someone cared—someone manifested concern—someone took time to place in the minds of those youngsters worthwhile ideals.

Today, in our present age of anxiety, we can manifest similar care and concern for our youngsters by placing in their hands a symphony called Listen. This journal tunes out the falsetto of make believe and fills the mind with full measures of "right on" information.

A club of 10 Listen subscriptions placed in a pool hall or bowling alley costs only $32.50.

A club of 10 Listen subscriptions sent to Mohammedans in Southern Asia or the Middle East, costs only $35.00. The Pacific Press Periodical Department is in a position to supply the needed overseas names and addresses.

Thank you for processing your new Listen subscriptions through your church lay activities secretary this week.

BAPTISTS REAPING "SPIRITUAL AWAKENING" IN AFRICA

More than 26,000 public decisions to follow Christ were made by Nigerians during the last 17 regional Baptist evangelistic campaigns. Baptist churches in Africa are reporting record membership increases in Tanzania, Rhodesia, and Kenya as well. Success is attributed to a "spiritual awakening" and evangelistic efforts of Southern Baptist missionaries.

RELIGION LOSING INFLUENCE ON SOCIETY?

Fifty-six percent of Americans feel religion is losing influence on society. Five years ago the figure was 75 percent. In the new poll almost one third thought religion was gaining ground. Gallup also found Bible reading up slightly from 61 percent who read the Scripture weekly in 1970 to 63 percent last year. The Gallup survey was conducted in 300 U.S. localities. A significant increase was found in the number of young adults who believe religion's influence is gaining.

L.L.U. SCHOOL OF HEALTH WILL HOLD ALUMNI CONVENTION

Sandwiched between the alumni conventions of the Loma Linda University Schools of Medicine and Dentistry is the School of Health's first alumni convention, UPDATE Convention '75. The March 1 to 7 schedule of sessions on public health topics is purposely being planned to attract members of the medical and dental professions. Anyone who is interested in community health programs and in promoting better public health should write for more information to the School of Health Alumni Association, Loma Linda University, Loma Linda, California 92354.

EUROPEAN STUDY TOUR TO BE OFFERED BY L.L.U. SCHOOL OF NURSING

"European Heritage," a study tour on historical and present influences on health care will be sponsored by the School of Nursing at Loma Linda University, July 31 to August 22.

This study tour offers nurses and other health care personnel an exceptional opportunity to visit centers which have played and are contributing an important part in the evolution of Western Health Care Systems.

Lectures and discussions will be presented by nursing, medical and allied health personnel of the various countries and by Loma Linda University faculty. Cultural, political, economic, and geographic influences affecting health care will be explored. Emphasis will be given to the impact of nursing and Seventh-day Adventist institutions on health care in each country.

The study tour will provide 30 contact hours in educational programs equaling 3 C.E.U. (continuing education units). Nurses eligible for admission to L.L.U. graduate programs may enroll for two units of graduate credit. The costs for C.E.U. tuition are $60 and $116 for graduate tuition.

The tour is limited to 40 persons so early reservations are essential. A deposit of $100 plus tuition to be turned in by March 30 is necessary to hold your reservation. The total cost of the tour is $1,200 subject to adjustment due to change in fares or currency exchange rates, and the balance is due by May 30. Full payment by March 31 assures no increase in costs due to inflation. Included in the cost of the tour are the transportation, hotels, meals, and sightseeing tours listed on the schedule. More information on the tour can be obtained from Lucile Lewis in the School of Nursing, (714) 796-7311, extension 2601.

Bottom, Dr. Millie Urbish Youngberg, top, and Dr. John Youngberg, bottom, talk with groups of parents about leadership roles within the nuclear family during a winter seminar in their home.

OPERATION FAMILY by Sharon Leach

A unique approach to family life education is the result of research done for a doctoral dissertation by John B. Youngberg, assistant professor of education at Andrews University.

He believes his program is adaptable for use in many Adventist churches, although he cautions that the conclusions of his study would have to be supported by further investigations before being applied too strictly to any population group other than the one he studied—Pioneer Memorial Church at A. U.

Churches need to plan programs and activities for family togetherness instead of almost completely bypassing families, as is often the case, says Youngberg. "There has to be a renewed emphasis on the family in the church," he declares.

"It seems so often churches work in direct opposition to family togetherness," he continues. "The church plans programs to take one age group of kids one place, the mother is at another meeting, and the father is involved in still another activity. Sometimes it seems we couldn't do a better job of separating families if we tried."

At Pioneer Memorial, he encourages "familyness" through a new program he calls "Operation Family," a series of small group seminars on family leadership conducted during campouts and at his home. The seminars are sponsored by the lay activities committee of the church.

The program differs from typical family group therapy procedures designed for families who need counseling for specific problems. Instead it is intended to be preventive education, with the aim that each family member discover his own leadership gifts which can be used to accomplish the shared goals of the family.

The program is also unique because it deals with the entire family unit. "Most family life education is 'parent education,' and that generally becomes 'mother education,'" explained Youngberg.

A typical campout seminar involves about ten families who belong to Pioneer Memorial Church, and this usually provides a heterogeneous group with parents and children of all ages. Many of these campouts are on the Pere Marquette River at Baldwin, Michigan, though others are held at various state parks in Michigan and Indiana. Some retreats have been planned for those who have campers, trailers, or tents and can stop for the weekend, while other camps have been on a drive-in-for-the-day basis.

A weekend retreat to Baldwin includes a four-hour canoe trip on Sunday, and in that situation, comments Youngberg, "a family can really see graphically how well they work together." Other activities include a self-evaluation by parents and children of personal values, writing appreciation notes to each family member, and rating the family leadership and each person's role in it up to that time.

Seminars last winter, which provided data for Youngberg's dissertation, included Friday night and Sabbath at a camp, followed by two-hour sessions on Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday nights at the home of Dr. Youngberg and his wife, Dr. Millie Urbish Youngberg, associate professor of education at A.U.

Youngberg, who received his Ed.D. degree summa cum laude from Western Michigan University earlier this year, is teaching at A.U. in the area of religious education. He hopes the curriculum he has formulated for family life education can eventually be shared with pastors and teachers so that they in turn can conduct similar or adapted programs for families in local parishes and communities.

"The family leadership approach differs from the clinical psychology approach in that it does not require a highly trained professional," he states, "and thus falls within the range of what the local pastor could plan and implement. The clinical psychology approach can be very effective; however, it is limited by the extreme scarcity of trained personnel who are qualified to use it and by its emphasis on the remedial approach. Our program is preventive education to teach a family about leadership as a basis for structuring family life and preventing many major problems from arising."

In his doctoral study, Youngberg postulated that there are three basic leadership roles within a family group—group task and structure roles, or the initiator of tasks; group building and maintenance roles, or the encourager and harmonizer; and the negative role, or the non-cooperator. "The negative role is not always undesirable," he comments. "Sometimes the family is headed in the direction of a wrong plan or goal, and a negative must be injected."

He found few families that fit traditional stereotypes in which the father carries the structure role and the mother the maintenance. In most families he worked with, roles were shared according to various situations.

At the weekend seminar, the entire group is together about 60 percent of the time, hearing lectures and discussing the material and its application. The rest of the time is spent in small groups working on typical family problems.

One of these small-group discussions divides the children by age into separate areas to give their opinions, while the parents are divided into two groups to discuss mother and father roles. Each group contains men and women, but is divided so that husbands and wives are not in the same circle. One section discusses and arrives at a consensus on criteria for a successful father-role, the other for the mother-role.

Often the group is split up into family units to work out a problem proposed by Youngberg. One such problem involves the family deciding where to take a two-week vacation. Criteria for the trip include a visit to one set of in-laws, a day spent picking fruit, and the necessity of each family member contributing one week's salary for the expenses of the trip.

"These criteria bring out any latent hostility the family members might feel," said Youngberg. "In that way, the family can see how it makes fairly tough decisions."

Using this kind of problem, Youngberg had an observer record the number of times each family member spoke and what his attitude was each time. He believes some of his findings tabulated from these responses "could be quite important in today's culture with its diminishing father-role.

"For example," he explains, "when the father acted as the encourager—the one who promotes solidarity within the family, raises the status of others, and makes others feel successful—there were less negative acts from the children. Encouragement from the mother had significantly fewer results in curbing the children's negative role."

Before joining the Andrews faculty, Youngberg served as lay activities, Sabbath School, radio, MV, and education secretary of the South Chile Conference; as educational secretary of the Uruguay Mission and the Austral Union in South America; and as president of Bolivia Training School. He also taught religion courses at River Plate College in Argentina and at Uruguay Academy.

SANITARIUM AND HOSPITAL

Joyce Griffith, Correspondent

An administrative procedure that could apply to Saigon Adventist Hospital as well as to Hinsdale is discussed by Le Cong Nghiep, left, and Paul Pelley, director of management systems at the hospital. Nghiep and Pelley became acquainted three years ago in Saigon when Pelley was completing a tour of service with the U.S. Army.

SAIGON HOSPITAL WORKER RETURNS UNEXPECTEDLY TO VIETNAM

An urgent telephone call from Saigon Adventist Hospital interrupted Le Cong Nghiep's stay at Hinsdale Sanitarium and Hospital to study administrative procedures.

Nghiep was sent by Saigon Adventist Hospital, where Harvey A. Rudisaile, formerly associate administrator at Hinsdale, is now the administrator, for a three-month tour of observation and study in hospital administration in Hinsdale.

Almost a month before Nghiep's visit was scheduled to end, Rudisaile placed a long-distance call to him from Saigon, asking him to return to Vietnam to participate in "urgent" decisions that needed to be made.

Before Nghiep left the U.S., members of the hospital's administrative staff and some of his friends gathered for a farewell supper and prayer service.

"Times are very uncertain in Vietnam," Nghiep said. "We talk about inflation of 10 or 12 percent here, but in Vietnam it is 50 or 60 percent every year." The political situation has become more tense in recent weeks and the work of the church in this important sector of the world sometimes seems in jeopardy.

"We need your prayers," Nghiep said. The hospital would move this summer from a former U.S. Army field hospital to a new, more suitable building but the hoped-for source of financial support did not materialize so that the new hospital could be completed. "In America $350,000 wouldn't build much of a hospital, but in Saigon that is all we would need to provide a completely new and representative hospital."

In arranging for Nghiep's visit to Hinsdale, Rudisaile commented that the future of the hospital in Saigon could well rest on Nghiep's shoulders before long. He holds an administrative position at the hospital and carries responsibility exceptionally well, Rudisaile said.

NON-SMOKERS' BANQUET WILL FEATURE DR. McFARLAND

A banquet for people who have quit smoking will be sponsored by the Five-day Plan to Stop Smoking on Sunday, March 2.

Featured speaker for the event will be J. Wayne McFarland, M.D., associate secretary of the health department at the General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists. Dr. McFarland was a member of the original doctor-minister team that planned and conducted the first Five-day Plan to Stop Smoking in Taunton, Massachusetts in 1959.

The banquet, with an all-vegetarian menu, will be held at the Sheraton Oak Brook, a luxury hotel and restaurant in Oak Brook, Illinois.

HORSEMEN CAMP SCHEDULED

The Indiana Conference youth department again will sponsor a camp for Adventist horsemen.

Judging from the enthusiasm of the 13 people who spent a wonderful week exploring the 100 miles of horse trails at scenic Brown County State Park last summer, the first horse camp was a huge success.

We're going to do it again in 1975 and we want you to join us! June 22 to 29 are the dates and you don't have to live in Indiana to come. Everyone is welcome. This is a wonderful family vacation. Write for details and appli-

FAREWELL TO INDIANA

Dear Friends:

It is with difficulty that my family and I say goodbye to Indiana after having spent 11 happy years serving the Lord as pastor, ministerial secretary, and in 1969 accepting the call as president of the Indiana Conference.

We have prayed earnestly that the Lord could use our talents in forwarding His work in this conference. We have appreciated so much the cooperation of each of the constituents as we have labored together for the Lord. We have especially thrilled as together we have become involved in various types of evangelism and we have labored diligently to forward our One Percent Fund and Indiana Academy. We want to say, "Thank you, each one!"

As of the first of January, I have taken up my new duties as president of the Wisconsin Conference. We want you to know that our prayers will be with you that you will continue to support the Lord's work in Indiana as Elder G. W. Morgan has assumed the leadership of this state.

Thank you again, and we ask an interest in your prayers that the Lord's spirit may be in our hearts in every way possible. May God's richest blessing be with each one of you.

Sincerely,
Robert Dale

TANNERS WELCOMED TO INDIANA

Richard Tanner

After the retirement of Elder Harold Otis, Elder Richard Tanner, publishing director for the Mountain View Conference, was invited to assume responsibilities in Indiana.

We are happy to welcome Elder and Mrs. Tanner to our working force. The Tanner family includes two daughters, Romona, age 15; Joyce, age 5; and one son, Victor, age 8.

Elder Tanner is a native of Ironton, Ohio, and his wife, Maxine, was born in Aberdeen, Maryland.

Elder Tanner began his work in the Potomac Conference as a literature evangelist. Later he served as an assistant publishing director in the Mountain View and Pennsylvania conferences. For the last six years he has served as publishing secretary for the Mountain View Conference which was formerly the West Virginia Conference.

We know the Indiana Conference will benefit greatly from his leadership in our literature work in our conference.

ADVENTIST RECEIVES NATIONAL BUREAU OF PRISONS AWARD

Mary A. Butler of London Church in Maybee, Michigan, won the U.S. Bureau of Prisons Sanford Bates Award for 1974. This award is given to one non-supervisory employee in the Bureau of Prisons annually.

Mrs. Butler received $500 cash, a plaque, and a trip to Washington, D.C., to receive the award from Attorney General William B. Saxbe.

Recommendation from the Federal Correctional Institution, Milan, Michigan, and nomination for the award at bureau headquarters, is based on outstanding service to the Bureau of Prisons. It was mentioned in Mrs. Butler's recommendation her affiliation with and active participation in the Adventist Church. Congratulations to Mary Butler for being a light bearer!

The quotation on the plaque reads: "Presented in recognition of Mrs. Butler's outstanding performance as Medical Records Technician at the Federal Correctional Institution, Milan, Michigan. Her dedication, energy, and willingness to contribute beyond what is required has had a positive effect on both inmate and staff and has greatly furthered the mission of the Institution."

WILLIE GEORGE— A FAITHFUL WORKER FOR GOD

To the union of Willie George and Fannie Mae Washington of Newbern, Alabama, was a born a baby girl, Willie George on May 26, 1891. She was named Willie George because it was her father's request that the baby be named after him. He passed away a few months before she was born. Her mother honored the request even though she was a girl.

Mrs. Washington, the mother of Willie George, accepted the Seventh-day Adventist faith in 1894 when Willie was three years old.

Willie received her elementary education in church school. After completing the ninth grade in Little Rock, Arkansas, she attended the Oakwood Training School in Huntsville, Alabama. She was a member of the first graduating class of that school which is now Oakwood College.

In 1906, while attending Oakwood Training School, she was baptized into the Seventh-day Adventist faith. After leaving Oakwood, she taught church school in Hattisburg, Mississippi, and McKinley and Mobile, Alabama.

On October 12, 1912, she married Edward Jones in Demopolis, Alabama. To this union was born eight children. She and her husband worked faithfully together in God's cause for 62 years. During this time she served as Sabbath School teacher, church clerk, treasurer, pianist, and church school teacher. She and her husband were leaders in organizing the first Seventh-day Adventist Church in Gulfport, Mississippi.

In 1967, they moved to Milwaukee where they were affiliated with the Sharon Church. She was faithful until she fell asleep in the Lord last September 10.

Her soft, tender voice and kind expressions seemed to relieve one's anxieties as she related her personal experiences and gave simple solutions to problems that confronted her friends.

City Temple Church was given one half hour of free time on this program recently to expose the work of the Adventist Church to the television audience. Elder Samuel Flagg, pastor of City Temple, appeared as moderator giving a brief history of the church. Mary Davis, a registered nurse, talked about the work of Adventists in the medical and missionary fields.

Gwenervere Flagg, a student at Andrews University and whose life's ambition is to be a cardiologist, spoke about the curriculum that Andrews offers. Miss Flagg is planning to enter Loma Linda University in March to pursue her medical studies.

Nathaniel Higgs, principal of the Frank L. Peterson school in Inkster, Michigan, emphasized the importance of Christian education and how God is manifested in science and education.

The program was favorably received by the viewers. An invitation has been extended to present another phase of our work. The Pathfinders are to appear on this program the first of March.

Other guest speakers included R. R. Hegstad and Herbert Pritchard of the General Conference religious liberty and insurance departments. Derek Mustow of the Southern Publishing Association represented These Times magazine.

The Lake Union Conference sent a number of its leaders to also assist in the various discussions. They included F. W. Wernick, president; Frank L. Jones, secretary; and the following departmental directors: A. W. Bauer, Gordon Engen, H. R. Jenkins, and F. R. Stephan. Each Michigan Conference departmental director also had the opportunity to present to the workers his emphasis for 1975.

THREE SERVICE CENTERS OPENED

Ribbon cutting ceremonies were held on three different Sundays in November for the community service centers at Frankfort, Irons, and Lake City.

The Frankfort Center is now located in what used to be the dining room of a former hotel. The building, in a good location in town, was purchased recently by an Adventist couple who live in part of the building. Only a token rent is paid yearly for the space occupied by the center.

Mayor Pro Tem Dale H. Carter, in his remarks prior to the cutting of the ceremonial ribbon said the "center's development shows there still are people who can provide needed service without waiting for the government to do it for them."

The little country church at Irons, also in the Frankfort district, two weeks later celebrated the opening of their center. For 17 months prior to the event the 15 members of the Irons Church worked and struggled to develop this community outreach. The building and land were donated by Mr. and Mrs. Gathilf Grentz, members of the local congregation. The old wood siding of the building was completely replaced by white aluminum. The renovated interior now has panelled walls and a drop ceiling.

Within hours of the opening the center was able to bring help to its first patron. While visiting their hospitalized daughter a local couple's home burned to the ground. Selecting necessary things from items already on hand made it possible for the Adventist group to immediately respond to this emergency need.

A few days before Thanksgiving Lake City Adventists gave their community something to be thankful for when local officials and church representatives joined together for ribbon cutting ceremonies at the center on M-66 one mile south of the city limits. The building was dedicated for a multi-purpose use as a disaster center and a center for instruction in healthful living. Land for the site was given by a local Adventist, Willa Collins.

According to Elder W. M. Buckman, director of community services for the conference, two more openings are currently scheduled for early spring. These are the centers at Grand Ledge (April 6) and Lansing (April 13).

GUILD PLANS CHORAL FESTIVALS

Plans have been formulated for two musical choral festivals for Adventist choirs and singers of Michigan.

The first is slated for March 22 at the Troy Church while the second is scheduled for Battle Creek on April 12.

The choir festivals are being planned and promoted by the Michigan Chapter of the Adventist Church Musicians' Guild with Gladys Benfield of Okemos as its president. Members of the Guild believe that "sacred music needs a new and uplifted emphasis in our personal and church lives," and are initiating these programs to help meet this need.

Current plans call for an all-day program with participation by the mass choir in the morning worship hour and a special afternoon festival following. The program is not just for professionals, Mrs. Benfield reports, but for all "folk who like to sing." And part of the music being selected will call for participation by the "congregational choir."

Sponsors of the program believe that this will be a first in the musical history of the Michigan Conference and invite all singers and choral groups to have a part. Other church members are urged to plan to be present for the musical spiritual feast that is being planned.

Specific information has been mailed to church music leaders and pastors. If you are interested but need further information write for it as follows: for the Troy program contact Mrs. Norman Moll, 2563 Daniels Road, Route 1, Sanford, Michigan 48657; for information on the Battle Creek festival write to Gladys Benfield, Box 348, Okemos, Michigan 48864. You are urged to do this immediately as certain information regarding participation is needed by the leaders as early in February as possible.

MARQUETTE SEES MEMBERSHIP EXPANSION

The seats in the balcony were being dusted by a church member with a vision. So what if the chairs in the balcony had never been needed for a service during the many years Adventists had worshiped in that building. This member had faith that the coming evangelistic series would fill the sanctuary and necessitate the opening of the balcony.

In recent years, an average of only 25 Adventists have met each week at Marquette. But now Elder Robert Collar, conference evangelist, was scheduled for a special one-week evangelistic series and the church was preparing for a good attendance.

Groundwork for the meetings began two years ago when Lynn Covell of the Marquette congregation, a literature evangelist and Bible instructor, was made part-time pastor. Through his contacts selling Adventist literature Covell was able to organize a number of Bible studies, many of which were in the immediate neighborhood of the church.

As the result of his work and the faithful efforts of the small membership the short "Reach Out for Life Crusade" was a success. Seven people joined the church with others continuing to study and plan for baptism. All but two of the 20 people Covell has been studying with attended at least some of the meetings. An average of about 50 persons, more than half being non-Adventists, heard Elder Collar each night.

On the next to the last meeting 86 people crowded into the little church and half of the balcony was full. God has answered the faith of one who had dusted off the seats in the balcony!

Roland Bruntz spent Christmas vacation in his classroom.

TEACHER REDECORATES CLASSROOM

Roland Bruntz, a new teacher at the Green Bay church school, had a desire to improve the atmosphere of his classroom.

When money was pledged to cover the cost of improvements, Bruntz volunteered his entire Christmas vacation to get his room remodeled. With help from three firemen, two carpenters, a refrigeration contractor, a building contractor, and a business machine executive, the school room and two lavatories were repainted, new cabinets were installed and children's desks sanded and varnished. The teacher's desk received a new formica top, and new fluorescent lights were installed to replace outdated incandescent fixtures. New drapes are being made.

The final result of one teacher's interest in improving his classroom has reflected in an attitude of concern for the entire school.

NON-SMOKERS VOICE RIGHTS ON TV

Dr. Wesley McNeal appeared with Charlotte Buchanan from the Wisconsin Lung Association on the program Winter Folk narrated by Chris Ostrowski on Channel 11 to present a program called "Kick the Habit" on January 10.

The program was part of a campaign by the National Interagency Council on Smoking and Health to inform the public about the dangers of smoking. The council is made up of 34 voluntary and governmental organizations.

Wisconsin Governor Patrick Lucey joined the council in proclaiming Education Week on Smoking January 11 to January 17. January 11 was the 11th anniversary of the report by the Surgeon General of the United States which revealed the health hazard of cigarettes.

Other members of the council include representatives from the Green Bay City Health Department, the Wisconsin Heart Association, the Wisconsin State Division of Health, and interested citizens.

The Non-Smoker's Bill of Rights declares that non-smokers have the right to breathe clean air free from harmful and irritating smoke, the right to speak out when disturbed by tobacco smoke, and the right to take action through legislative channels and social pressure to discourage smokers from polluting the air.

Since a 1972 report by the Surgeon General, which declared that non-smokers can be harmfully affected by breathing tobacco smoke, several states and localities have passed laws restricting smoking. Currently the only law in Green Bay against smoking is a fire ordinance which prohibits smoking in gatherings of 100 persons or more. Dr. C. W. Crawford is working through the Green Bay Board of Health to restrict smoking in the Green Bay hospitals.

Dr. McNeal answered questions called in by TV viewers relating to health and smoking. He conducts the Five-day Plan to Stop Smoking with the pastor several times a year.

David Hodge, assistant professor of agriculture at Andrews University, has been elected vice-president of the Berrien County Dairy and Herd Improvement Association.

HODGE ELECTED V.P. OF LOCAL DAIRY ASSOCIATION

David Hodge, assistant professor of agriculture at A.U., has been elected to a one-year term as vice-president of the Berrien County Dairy and Herd Improvement Association. Hodge is manager of the A.U. dairy, the largest in the county.

As vice-president, he will represent the county in district and state association meetings, as well as direct administrative details at A.U.

Since Hodge became dairy manager at A.U. seven years ago, milk production at Andrews has increased by one ton per year, a rise of 8.5 percent. He believes that county production as a whole would rise if dairymen improved breeding techniques. And production would not suffer, he said, if local dairymen would avoid costly feed mixes and rely exclusively on what they could grow themselves. Even so, he predicts that county production will drop this year as the smaller dairymen are forced out of business by rising costs.

PHYSICS DEPARTMENT RECEIVES $2,100 CONTRIBUTION

Tecktronix, Inc., an electronic equipment company in Oregon, last month awarded the Andrews University physics department $2,100 toward the purchase of its

$5,395, 150-megahertz oscilloscope (displays electric wave patterns on TV-like screen).

Such contributions go only to a few universities selected by the company, said physics department chairman Robert Kingman. Tecktronix chose Andrews, Kingman speculated, because it trains up to 30 premed students a year, future M.D.'s who will later be in the market for electronic instruments.

This may also explain why the company granted A.U. similar contributions of $4,000 for previous equipment now in use in the general physics laboratory.

With the new instrument and such others as the $30,000 electromagnet donated by Ford Motor Company, the A.U. physics department can now conduct magnetic resonance experiments (changing direction of electron or proton spin), said Kingman.

In other department news, David Bushnell, representative of the national physics honorary society, Sigma Phi Sigma, has helped organize a local chapter at A.U.

SPECIAL MISSION INSTITUTE CONVENES AT A.U.

A special Institute of World Mission of the General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists convened at Andrews January 20 and will continue till February 13.

This is the first time the institute has been conducted during the winter quarter. Previously it has been held only during the summer quarter. The additional session was held so that more individuals could benefit by it.

Dr. Gottfried Oosterwal, chairman of the department of world mission at A.U., was the coordinator of the institute program, which is designed for missionaries under appointment to a mission field. Oosterwal was assisted by Elder D. Baasch, secretary of the General Conference.

R. F. Waddell, M.D., of the medical department of the General Conference taught a course in adjustment, health, and hygiene in foreign fields with special emphasis on the tropics. Other courses taught were principles and practices of world missions and missions to people of other faiths.

Dr. Oosterwal had recently returned from a ten-week study tour in the Buddhist world. Two issues in particular were the topics of his investigation: What is the Actual Status of Buddhism in Asia Today? and What Challenges and Opportunities are There for S.D.A. Missions in the Buddhist World? He presented some of the findings of his investigation, Tuesday, January 21, during the institute.
