ADVENTURE IN FAITH

Before a recent joint economic committee, Henry Ford, II, chairman of the board of the Ford Motor Company, made the following statement: "In my 30 years as a businessman, I have never before felt so uncertain and so troubled about the future of both my country and my company."

This pessimistic view is being expressed by millions of people throughout the length and breadth of our country.

My words to you are that we need not fear the future unless we forget how God has led us in the past. With economic disaster looming on the horizon, it is a glorious opportunity for the people of the living God to show their confidence in Him.

The Adventure in Faith offering which is to be received on April 26, 1975, is an opportunity for all of us to exercise faith in God.

This offering is to be a sacrificial offering. Many individuals are planning to show evidence of their faith by giving to God and His program one week's salary.

We could spend a great deal of time discussing what the funds are to be used for. We could mention that 70 percent of the funds received will return to the local conference for evangelism and other special projects. I would rather, however, take just a moment to say what this opportunity will do for us.

The Adventure in Faith offering is just that—an adventure in faith. It is the widow's mite. It is showing complete confidence in God's ability to take care of not only His church but our individual needs as well.

I would encourage each of you to enter into this experience. We will be blessed spiritually as we enter into this sacrificial relationship with God. If we do, our testimony will be that of the Psalmist David, "I have been young and now am old; yet I have not seen the righteous forsaken or his children begging bread." (Ps. 37:25, R.S.V.)

The moment of truth, April 26, 1975—an Adventure in Faith.

COVER

Loma Linda University has been lighting the world with love for 70 years. It was an institution born of inspiration and sacrifice. To be able to continue to send lights of God's love into all the world, people must continue to sacrifice. Give a light to a dark place. Give an offering of sacrifice to God on April 19.

Sister Cecelia Marie Fehner, left, expresses her desire for baptism into the Adventist Church to Toni Vollburg who studied with her; Elder William K. Dennis, the local pastor; and Elder Charles Keymer, executive secretary of the Michigan Conference.

Sister Changes Habit; Joins Remnant

A sermon on the Holy Spirit by a Catholic priest; correspondence lessons from the Voice of Prophecy; a follow-up contact by a Seventh-day Adventist woman; and Sister Cecelia Marie Fehner left her retirement home in a Pennsylvania convent to be baptized by immersion in Fenton to become a "sister" in the great Adventist family.

As a young teaching nun, Sister Cecelia, after hearing a moving Sunday morning sermon, made a vow to make the Holy Spirit her "friend and silent partner . . . through life." They became a team, she says, enjoying the blessing of service and facing life's problems together.

After fifty years of teaching primary grades, the nun retired to the Motherhouse of the Catholic order to which she belonged and decided to make an in-depth study of the Word of God. The study guides offered over the air on a Voice of Prophecy broadcast seemed to promise the help she was seeking. She wrote asking to be enrolled in the Bible course.

Later she was visited by Mrs. Carlton (Toni) Vollburg and another party, Adventists who were checking to see if Sister Cecelia needed additional help in her studies. After Sister Cecelia finished the Voice of Prophecy's basic "Faith" course, others followed. Advanced lessons revealed deeper spiritual truths, and she also received from her Adventist friends a number of books to strengthen her. Steps to Christ and Desire of Ages were "most helpful."

Having been baptized as an infant in 1904, Sister

Cecelia's studies on baptism by immersion created a strong desire for baptism in this manner. Daniel and

On seven different occasions serious health problems, including a bout with cancer, brought her close to death's door. But she recovered, each time feeling that God had something more in store for her. She prayed for the Spirit to enlighten her regarding God's plan. Nothing

That path began to unfold in August 1974, when she received a letter from Mrs. Vollburg who had moved to Michigan and was now a member of the Fenton Church. The letter was an invitation to visit this Adventist family. "Come to Michigan," Toni wrote. "Spend some time with us and let us spoil you a bit." Sister Cecelia accepted the kind invitation and early in October arrived at the Vollburg home. Here she was warmly received by Toni, her husband, their son Carlton, and seven-year-old Lisa.

After only two days in the Adventist home Sister Cecelia revealed her long-felt desire to be baptized by immersion. Little was said then by Toni but when she left to do some shopping, the nun was left at home with The Great Controversy to read.

When Toni returned she startled her guest by saying, "Sister Cecelia, the pastor is coming to see you!"

"Who?" the Catholic nun questioned.

"My Adventist minister, Elder Dennis," Toni explained.

Soon after Elder William K. Dennis' arrival, Sister Cecelia reiterated her desire for baptism. She had a strong wish to belong to the Adventist "vegetarian" family even though, and she laughs a little as she admits it, she hated vegetables.

After she expressed this desire, Dennis questioned her about Adventist doctrines and was satisfied with the knowledge gained through her studies of the Bible lessons. The following morning Toni, Sister Cecelia, and Pastor Dennis visited the Michigan Conference office in Lansing. Here they talked with the conference secretary, Elder Charles Keymer, who after questioning the nun, agreed that she was ready for baptism. Thus on October 12, 1974, after seventy years of being a member of the Roman Catholic Church, Sister Cecelia Fehner was baptized by immersion. She entered the baptismal tank still wearing her veil, her crucifix, and the ring which signified her marriage to the Catholic Church. She paused, then slowly removed each item, handing them to Pastor Dennis. Then she was baptized by immersion.

Many years have passed since the Catholic missionary Father had pleaded with his hearers to accept the guiding of the Holy Spirit. As a young teaching nun Sister Cecelia had accepted the challenge and now it had led her to take this step and begin a new way of life. As a result "an indescribable feeling of joy and serenity overwhelmed" Sister Cecelia. Keeping Saturday as the Sabbath made her know she was really keeping the Ten Commandments of God.

Is she happy? Most assuredly so! And her greatest desire and prayer, she reports, is that the Holy Spirit will continue to be her guiding light so she can show others the way to truth. She wants, she says, to be prepared as part of the remnant church, to meet her Lord at his second coming.

LOMA LINDA UNIVERSITY OFFERING, APRIL 19

Lighting the World with Love

SEVENTH-DAY ADVENTISTS HAVE BELIEVED THAT HEALTH EVANGELISM IS ONE OF THE MOST EFFECTIVE MEANS OF OPENING CLOSED DOORS AND CLOSED MINDS

Because you are a Christian, you care. You care about a world full of people who are lost; people whose minds have been distorted by the madness of modern life, whose bodies are being destroyed by ignorance of sound health principles, whose spiritual sensibilities are being numbed by sin.

You can't help but see these things happening today; they're all around you, calling out to you to do something. Ellen White in 1905 heard this call, and in order to meet today's confusion, Mrs. White sent an agent, John Burden, to buy 76 acres of land in Southern California, including a health-resort hotel, to be used in establishing what we know today as Loma Linda University.

How does a university complex that encompasses two major campuses, that graduates some of the most highly-qualified medical personnel to be found anywhere, that operates an extensive and respected liberal arts program come to be? How does it arise out of such humble beginnings?

To answer these questions, we must think in terms of years of expansion and growth; we must think of buildings, of financial sacrificing, of major crossroads successfully negotiated. But even more, we must think of people.

Loma Linda University is the fruit-tion of dreams, commitments, and sacrifices by people whose farsightedness envisioned an institution of quality education, where students could prepare to minister to man's needs in the spirit of Jesus Christ.

When the Southern California Conference accepted the land Ellen White had arranged to buy, it took only 12 months for the $38,900 purchase price to be covered by donations. Why? Because the people were moved by a vision of how God could use medical evangelism in reaching the world—moved enough to become personally and sacrificially involved.

From the very beginning, Seventh-day Adventists have believed that health evangelism is one of the most effective means of opening closed doors and closed minds. We have also believed that the medical work will be one of the areas of witness remaining available to us during the tumultuous moments immediately preceding the second coming of Christ. Above all others, these are the reasons why Loma Linda University came to be. And they are the reasons why Loma Linda University exists today.

All universities are concerned with quality education. But at Loma Linda the word "quality" takes on a specialized meaning. Too often, success has been equated with "bigness." But at Loma Linda University, we believe that the opposite is true. Quality education can be seen in the intimacy of a class small enough for a teacher to take time to really listen to a student; it can be seen in a curriculum planned with the individual student in mind, and with an awareness of the areas of practical need graduates will face. It can be seen in the faculty members who have come to Loma Linda because of a shared vision with those who founded the institution.

There is no need in our world greater than the need for young men and women who are not afraid to sacrifice their own comfort and security in order to be agents of reconciliation, in order to be part of the healing process, ministering to the whole man. From the School of Nursing, established 70 years ago, to the School of Dentistry, established in 1954, dedicated nurses and dentists have been filling mission appointments around the world. Graduates from these and the other schools which make up the University, now total 18,000. Of this number, nearly 5,000 have entered mission service. These are the kind of young people for whom Loma Linda University and the Seventh-day Adventist Church have become known today.

Think, for example, of the 150 young men and women currently enrolled in Loma Linda University, who have taken a year out from their studies to serve as student missionaries. And ask yourself if this is not a sight worth all the sacrifice, and then couple this sight with that of the hundreds of other young people who leave Loma Linda University to become valuable members of their communities, focal points of Christian witness.

As Adventists, we can each be proud of the way God is using this university. But the sacrifice of those early years is again necessary to help prepare students for meeting the Christian challenges of tomorrow. You alone, as a member of God's remnant church, have the privilege and responsibility to help light the world with love through the work of Loma Linda University.

When the Loma Linda University offering is taken in your church on Sabbath, April 19, remember the spirit of sacrifice that brought Loma Linda University into existence. And remember, too, that only that same spirit can enable it to complete the work it has begun.

Ellen G. White spoke at the dedication services for Loma Linda Sanitarium. Held on April 15, 1906, the program also featured S. N. Haskell, W. C. White, and J. A. Burden, the agent who purchased the 76 acres now containing Loma Linda University.

This is the first Loma Linda Hospital constructed in 1913.

Top, People packed into the Inn to take part in the activities. Above, The Chicago Yugoslavian Church sent their orchestra to play at the celebration.

The first anniversary of the Wayout Inn at 3339-41 North Halsted Street in Chicago was celebrated on January 24 to 26.

Although the streets were covered with ice and snow and driving conditions were hazardous (two hundred accidents per hour) over five hundred persons attended the activities on Friday and Saturday night.

Philip Payne, a student from Andrews University, had the "Forever Yours Trio" come and sing for the Friday evening program. The trio consists of Martin Butler, Joanne Butler, and Nancy Mauro. They are from Andrews University also. They sang several inspiring songs from their album "Thank You, Jesus."

On Saturday evening a broad selection of music was presented by 17 churches in the Chicagoland area. The music ranged from instrumental solos, string ensembles, youth groups, quartets, and readings to congregational singing.

An anniversary cake, cookies, punch, and a hot drink were served for refreshments.

William Fillmore, Sr., the store manager said, "Approximately $1,000 worth of health foods were sold during the food sale on Saturday night and Sunday."

The Wayout Inn is directed by Bud Calvert who is always interested in dedicated Christian talent for the Inn.

There are several other persons who tend the store, witness to visitors, and do general work on a voluntary basis.

Treasurer Kurt Frey would like to point out that the Wayout Inn is a laymen's project sponsored by individual contributions and help from the Chicagoland churches.

The Wayout Inn has been in existence for three years now. It was moved from 2310 West Foster to 3339-41 North Halsted Street in Chicago a year ago.

The staff at the Wayout Inn have a special burden for the different kinds of people living in that area. We would appreciate your prayers and support in the coming year.

Adelpgian Academy— The Way It Was

by Ernie Wendth

Editor's note: A recent story in the Holly Herald-Advertiser reported on a recent visit of two Michigan sisters who attended Adelpgian Academy in its second year of operation. The following is edited and condensed from that article.

Today Adelphia Academy has modern facilities and 236 students.

Two sisters who attended Adelphia Academy the second year the school was open visited Holly recently and reminisced about their school days.

Ethel and Iva Dean were born and raised in White Lake Township where they walked to a country school and later took a horse and buggy to school at nearby Highland.

For two years, the sisters were taught at home by their brother Leroy, who had attended college in Nashville, Tennessee.

The farm that became Adelphia Academy was purchased in 1904 and school began in January of 1905. The boys built the "Black Chapel" (so called because it was covered with tarpaper) just behind the east section of the present administration building. Classes were held on the main floor and the boys had a makeshift dormitory on the upper floor. The girls and faculty lived in the farmhouse which stood approximately where the west end of the administration building now stands.

"We girls had little stoves in our second-floor rooms and carried up the wood to burn in them," says Iva.

The sisters don't recall just how many students there were at the time but say "it was just one big family," and that everyone ate at two big tables in the farmhouse dining room.

All girls assisted with the cooking, cleaning, and laundry duties. From her second year until she graduated, Iva did most of the baking—bread, pies, cakes, and cookies.

Professor and Mrs. Lamson and the professor's sister, Mary Lamson, were the founders and teachers of the new school.

Being two years older than Iva, Ethel was ahead of her in school, so after one year at the academy, she was able to teach school.

"I taught the Adventist church school at Ithaca for two years," Ethel remembers, "then I came back to the academy and graduated with Iva in 1909."

Iva remembers that one summer she earned money for her tuition by picking and selling huckleberries from her father's marsh. She would strap a bushel basket over her shoulder and shake the berries into it. A fanning mill (used for cleaning grain) would take out the dirt and leaves and she would pick out the green berries.

"I got five or six cents a quart," Iva tells, "but I earned $150, and that was enough to buy a few clothes and pay my tuition—it was $13 a month then."

Most students kept their board bill down by bringing canned goods and other food from home.

Ethel taught school for another year after her graduation from Adelphia. Both girls went on to Hinsdale Sanitarium and Hospital, Hinsdale, Illinois, a suburb of Chicago, to take nurses training.

Paying all her way by working, Iva did sewing, mending, and cooking, in addition to her classwork.

"My father wanted me to be a teacher, but I was always taking care of someone who was sick, and my teachers at the academy encouraged me to take the nurses training," Iva recalls.

She graduated in 1913, took her state boards in Michigan early in 1914, and continued to work at Hinsdale.

The paths of the sisters parted in 1914.

After graduation from Hinsdale, Ethel continued her education at Emmanuel Missionary College, now Andrews University, at Berrien Springs. She completed the twelfth grade and took some college work, then in 1917, she decided to go to California. While working in a private hospital in Berkeley, she met her husband, Nicolas Tabor. They were married in 1919.

Later the Tabors moved to a 60-acre ranch on Holland Island off the California coast where Ethel continues to make her home. At 86 she still tends her own home and garden.

Iva, too, met her husband while nursing. She and Ralph Alkire were married at the Dean family home in White Lake Township in July of 1915, and returned to their work in Hinsdale. In March of 1918, the Alkires moved from the Chicago area to Ralph's home near Bear Lake, Michigan (about 25 miles from Manistee), where they bought an 80-acre farm. Iva continued nursing until she was past 70—the last seven years commuting to Manistee to work the night shift at Mercy Hospital. She is now 84 and continues to live at Bear Lake.

The sisters were able to have this visit with each other and other relatives when Ethel's daughter from North Carolina brought her mother to Michigan on a return trip from California.

"Help people out of illness into wellness."

When someone cares, he wants to help. When he sees the suffering, the ignorance, the indifference that chains so many, he wants to play a part in making things better. But to do that, he needs skills, specialized skills.

That's what Joyce Combes discovered while working in The Gate clinic in Washington, D.C. She found that her greatest need was to know "how to influence people, how to motivate them for their own restorative good."

Joyce is now at Loma Linda University, "learning how to help people out of illness into wellness."

sculptured by Gilbert Neil Amelio

The Rockford Church will present what promises to be one of the most dramatic and unique presentations of "The Face of Christ" on April 12, at 8 p.m., in the Rockford Church, located at 325 N. Alpine.

The nationally renowned artist, Gilbert Neil Amelio, with 300 pounds of clay will present his famous "Face of Christ" through the media of sculpture, drama, and music. In some 50 minutes the sculptor presents to his audience a study in the history of art as he portrays the features of Christ in three separate periods (Byzantine Art, Italian Renaissance, and the Passion of Christ).

The "Face of Christ" is nondenominational and suitable for audiences in the adult-adolescent age group. Gilbert N. Amelio traces in clay man's changing concept of Christ through the ages and presents a startling and dramatically realistic portrayal of the life of Christ from birth to death to resurrection. The noted sculptor and retired chief of protocol for the U.S. Air Force Academy conceived the idea of the "Face of Christ" in 1961 when he dedicated his hands to Christ to "Push Clay for Christ." He has presented it over 1,000 times; it has been televised on CBS and has won acclaim from New York to California.

PARNASSUS TO BE PUBLISHED SPRING QUARTER

Parnassus, the hill of creative muse in Venice, is the name given to a book containing some of the creativity of A.U. students in writing.

This year's edition will be compiled and published during the spring quarter by an editorial council sponsored by the English Club. All A.U. students are eligible to submit poetry or prose for the volume.

Robert Kingman, chairman of the A.U. department of physics, stands beside the eight-inch telescope housed in the A.U. observatory. He will offer a course in astronomy during the spring quarter.

PHYSICS DEPARTMENT OFFERS ASTRONOMY CLASS

The A.U. physics department will conduct an astronomy class this quarter for the first time in 15 years.

The class will be designed for liberal arts students of any major, said Robert Kingman, class instructor and department chairman. The only prerequisite is basic algebra. Community residents may enroll as special students.

When weather permits, the class will use the university's observatory, which houses an eight-inch telescope.

Kingman will devote some of the class periods to discussing how Seventh-day Adventists, who believe in special creation, relate to other theories on the origin of the universe.

Kingman holds a Ph.D. and a master of science degree from the University of Arizona. His master's thesis title was: On the Spatial Distribution of Clusters of Galaxies.

MUSIC DEPARTMENT PRESENTS FESTIVAL OF HYMNS

Over 150 students and faculty from the university music department participated in a festival of hymns Friday, March 7, the World Day of Prayer.

The festival was held at the Pioneer Memorial Church as a vesper program and was, according to Dr. Morris Taylor, director of the program, A.U.'s contribution to the World Prayer Day.

The purpose of the festival, said Taylor, was to "call the attention of the congregation to the deep meaning of the hymn text as a corporate prayer to God."

Passages from Scripture illuminated themes of the hymns which climaxed with Malotte's arrangement of "The Lord's Prayer," performed by the University Chorale and Orchestra under the direction of James Hanson.
