Sending a child to church school often requires parents to sacrifice, but when one parent is not an Adventist there are additional problems. Mrs. Wilma Cowan of Glendale, Oregon, related her experience of being "young in the truth" when her only daughter was ready for school.

"I wanted to do the Lord's will," she said, "but my unconverted husband felt he could not bear the shame of having his child in church school." Finally, he said the girl could attend as long as he didn't have to pay the expenses. "When we obey the Lord, He will make a way," was Mrs. Cowan's response.

"After several weeks of not knowing where the money would come from," she continued, "a strange lady knocked on my door and asked whether I would be interested in earning some money."

The work offered was smocking little dresses for an exclusive shop for children's clothes, and although Mrs. Cowan had done very little fancy work and felt she was not very good at handwork, she dared not say No after asking the Lord to help her. "There was no apparent reason why the woman who knocked on my door should have thought I would want to do this work. My husband worked for the government, and we lived in a nice enough home.

"The Lord not only sent me work, but He gave me the ability to learn quickly. I was able to keep my daughter in church school that way year after year; and while I worked for the owner of the children's clothing shop, the business prospered."

Mrs. Cowan never owed the school a penny, and her husband was very much impressed. Today, he is a faithful Adventist also.

Later, Mrs. Cowan was a dean of girls and taught French until she retired. Arthritis is a problem for her now, but she has taken up her needle again and is preparing smocked dresses for the Voice of Prophecy's Showcase Gift Shop in Glendale, California. Proceeds from the shop benefit the V.O.P. radiobroadcast and Bible school ministry.

Helping her with the current project is Hazel Verhaeghe, who was formerly a Catholic but became an Adventist because a Methodist acquaintance sent her the Voice of Prophecy Bible correspondence course.

DISTRICT PRESIDENT RESOLUTION MAY CAUSE SCHISM IN L.C.M.S.

One resolution adopted at the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod's 51st regular convention has far-reaching affects on the church's stability. It calls on district presidents, who cannot in conscience abide by regulations concerning ordination, to resign. Directed specifically at eight district presidents who have ordained uncertified graduates of Seminex, in violation of Synod bylaws, the resolution provides for their mandatory removal in lieu of their resignation. Should a schism develop it could involve 586,000 members under the jurisdiction of the eight presidents, or more than a fifth of the entire church membership. Right now, the 1,120 delegates seem resigned to the fact that some kind of split is inevitable.

"NO ONE SEEMS TO CARE" MOST COMMON BURDEN

After personally visiting 16,000 homes in four states Sister Juliana Savoy has developed some basic impressions of people. "People are good. They suffer a great deal and need support in their suffering. The church has not been a great help to them. Sometimes it has hurt them. Many are turned off by the church." One-to-one contact, she feels, is the most effective way of bringing reconciliation to people. That no one really seems to care is the most common burden of people.

FOUR CHURCH-RELATED COLLEGES TO MERGE IN LONDON

Four church-related colleges in southwest London will merge into one institute of higher education. Under the agreement Southlands College, which is Methodist, the Dibby Stuart College, which is Roman Catholic, the Friebel Institute, which is nondenominational, and the Whitelands College, which is Church of England, will become the Reohampton Institute of Higher Education. The arrangement will allow the four colleges to use collectively their academic resources of staffing and buildings, while each college will be free to maintain and develop the community life particularly associated with it.

PENNSYLVANIA OK'S $31 MILLION FOR PAROCHIAL SCHOOLS

Just two months after the U.S. Supreme Court ruled several Pennsylvania nonpublic school aid laws unconstitutional, the state Senate passed another one. This new package of bills provides $31 million in aid for parochial and private school students for the 1975-76 school year. The Supreme Court struck down all Pennsylvania aid to nonpublic schools, except textbook loans. One of the new bills provides increased allocation for textbooks, from $15 to $20 per pupil. Auxiliary services such as guidance, counseling and testing, services for exceptional children, remedial, speech and hearing services are also provided.

COLORADO CATTLE KILLINGS ATTRIBUTED TO DEVIL WORSHIP

More than 40 cattle and a horse have been found slain and mutilated since November in a six-county area in Colorado. Authorities believe they were the victims of witchcraft or devil worship cultists. The animals disappear, to be found later slain, blood drained, various mutilations performed with surgical precision, and no tracks near the remains. Dogs, coyotes, and bears, which usually feed on dead carcasses, refuse to touch the dead animals. Ranchers in the area are offering awards totaling more than $1,000 for evidence in the weird killings.

CHURCHES NEED CURSE BEFORE THEY BLESS

"The church which cannot curse cannot bless," says Dr. William Lazareth. The Lutheran Theological Seminary systematic theology professor said people won't listen to the church's good news because pastors won't first preach bad news. "Satan is alive and well." Lazareth points to wars, hunger, overpopulation, racism, ecological crises, cynicism, secularism, and sexism as signs that this is so. The Lutheran theologian called for an end to a version of Christianity which only comforts people.

RELIGIOUS BOOK SALES UP 66% IN TWO YEARS

At least 36 religious books have sold more than one million copies within the past five years. A new survey claims that 42 percent of American families bought Bibles or other religious books last year. Christian Booksellers Association reported a 66 percent sales jump by its member stores from 1972 to 1974. Retail sales of C.B.A. stores topped $303 million in 1974, and direct mail operations and sales by nonmember book stores "pushed religious book sales well past the half-billion-dollar mark."

CATHOLIC BISHOP HEADS CALIFORNIA'S FARM LABOR BOARD

A Roman Catholic bishop has been named to head the Farm Labor Board which will administer California's newly enacted Agriculture Labor Relations Act. The law provides secret ballot elections for farm workers on union affiliation. Some agri-business leaders are expected to oppose the appointment. The bishop has frequently called for the establishment of a federal labor relations law to include farm workers and is viewed as sympathetic to the farm workers' cause.

CHRISTIANS REASSURED OF FREEDOM OF BELIEF IN SAIGON

Saigon Radio reports over 200 Roman Catholic priests and representatives of other Christian denominations in Saigon have been given renewed assurances of freedom of religion. Clergy met July 10 with representatives of the National Liberation Front and were told that the "long-term" policy of N.F.L. and the provisional revolutionary government of South Vietnam was to "guarantee freedom of belief."

RODNEY

Indiana's Poster Child

by Ruth A. Helzerman

"Mommy, why doesn't Jesus make me well?" Five-year-old Rodney Brown is just beginning to notice that what is normal for him is not a part of the routine of his friends.

Blue-eyed, blonde, curly haired Rodney is the 1975 poster child for the Indiana State Chapter of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, representing hundreds of children in Indiana afflicted with cystic fibrosis and other lung damaging diseases.

What is normal for Rodney as a cystic child is sleeping under a mist tent each night, swallowing a handful of pills before every meal, undergoing physical therapy and inhalation treatments twice daily, and being on a restricted diet.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Brown, members of the Indianapolis Glendale church, first learned of their son's condition when he was 15 months old. While in the hospital with pneumonia, Rodney was given a sweat chloride test for cystic fibrosis. Children with cystic fibrosis usually have salty sweat, but the test is not routinely performed on newborns because they do not perspire.

"My husband was out of town on business and I was stunned when they told me," recounts Mrs. Brown. "Even though I am a nurse, I didn't understand what it meant." In cystic fibrosis a thick, sticky mucous clogs the lungs and airways, creating breathing difficulties, high susceptibility to infection, and lung damage. The mucous may also interfere with digestion by preventing the flow of enzymes from the pancreas into the small intestine, causing malabsorption of food. "Rodney is a moderate cystic—not extremely well or sick—but if he missed a couple treatments, he'd be a sick cystic," his mother adds.

Life for the Browns has changed considerably after Rodney's condition was diagnosed. A formalized daily routine is a must. Morning and evening therapy sessions cannot be missed. Air conditioning and an electronic air filter was installed in their home. Daily cleaning of the necessary specialized equipment with special cleaning solutions and extra medical care are just some of the changes. It is very difficult for the Browns to travel, even on short weekend visits to the grandparents' homes because a whole carload of paraphernalia must be taken with them and set up when they arrive. Rodney's crib, its spring rusted and slats sticky from the mist tent, has been replaced with a new oak bed. "I strip the bedclothes daily, but I never can put on his bedspread because the water from the tent drips constantly. I'd like to carpet the floor, but the water would ruin carpet," Mrs. Brown says.

Besides purchasing the compressor which pumps a mist of fine droplets into the tent under which Rodney sleeps; the aerosol mask, which sprays antibiotics into his lungs, and a therapy table; there is the continuing expense of distilled water, purchased in five-gallon bottles, special cleaning solutions for the tent, parking fees at the hospital, and "other expenses and incidentals that all add up so fast."

Opposite page, Rodney works very hard to belong to the memory verse club at the Indianapolis Glendale church and joyfully repeats his verse to his Sabbath school teacher each week. Daily mist inhalation treatments help keep his lungs clear of the deadly mucous deposits.

Below, Rodney has a morning and evening treatment on the postural drainage table doing "pitty-pats" to loosen the deposits of mucous.

Like other cystic fibrosis children, Rodney's appetite is enormous. Two eggs, toast, cereal, and two glasses of milk are a normal breakfast. His basic diet is high protein, low fat, high carbohydrate. Regardless of religious beliefs, cystic fibrosis patients are not allowed any pork products in their diet. Enzymes are used to predigest the food and double vitamins are given daily since only about half of the food nutrition is utilized. Large appetite, poor weight gain, poor growth are characteristics of the disease. "Rodney won't touch anything fruit flavored. His medicines were all fruit flavored and sweet when he was a baby and I think he remembers. His favorite food was creamed spinach. I bought it by the case," his mother says. "Rodney understands that certain foods will make him sick, that they are 'no-nos.' He now decides whether he wants a tummy ache, and usually says, 'No!'"

Cystic fibrosis is an inherited disease. Parents of cystic fibrosis children do not have the disease but are carriers. Rodney is a special child, but the Browns try not to play favorites. In fact they feel their 1-year-old adopted daughter Lynette probably gets off with fewer spankings.

"One reason we adopted Lynette is because more than one child in a family can inherit cystic fibrosis. She was just 5 days old when we brought her home. Can you imagine our fears when she developed respiratory problems? But she is okay now," says Mrs. Brown.

The two children have a wonderful relationship, and Rodney is very protective of his little sister. Sissy (her nickname) wants to lie beside her brother on the postural drainage table and have her daddy clap her on the chest as he does Rodney.

What lies ahead for Rodney is uncertain. Once considered a rare disease, cystic fibrosis is now recognized as being responsible for much of the chronic lung disease found in American Caucasian children and ranks as the second highest killing disease, after cancer, in children. It occurs once in every 1,600 live births. The projected life span of a cystic child is now 18 years of age. "There is a lot of research going on, but the treatment has remained pretty standard. No animal sweats as humans do, so none can be used in experiments or for research purposes. I suppose, in a way, our children are part of an experiment," Rodney's parents say.

Until recently, Mrs. Brown worked evenings in a nursing home in Indianapolis. "My last two employers were very understanding. I told them, 'I'll come to work if I'm sick, but if Rodney isn't well, then I won't be in.'" Now she devotes much of her time to the cystic fibrosis parents' group headed by her husband Harold. They take calls from other mothers, organize door-to-door campaigns, hold monthly meetings, and organized a statewide picnic for parents and cystic children in July.

Rodney's term as poster child lasts from March 1, 1975 to February 28, 1976. His duties are having his picture taken with celebrities for fund raising, traveling across the state appearing at parks and benefits. He has been interviewed on WTTV, Channel 4, had his picture taken with the Indiana Loves tennis team, and with Mrs. Otis Bowen, wife of Indiana's governor, who is this year's honorary state chairwoman for cystic fibrosis. Articles about Rodney have appeared in nearly all of the major papers in Indiana.

The Browns are also active in the Glendale church where Mrs. Brown is an assistant cradle roll leader and Mr. Brown is a deacon and also sings in the male choir. Rodney is one of the most enthusiastic members of the kindergarten class where he delights in reciting his memory verse to "Miss Ruth," his department leader, each week. He has earned special awards for his memory work for the past several quarters.

Rodney's daddy sums up the family philosophy when he says, "Even though there isn't an easy answer to Rodney's question as to why Jesus doesn't heal him, it is a great comfort in our family to know and to trust in a God who has a special relationship with children."

KOREAN CHURCH PURCHASED IN CHICAGO

The Korean members purchased a church property, 4850 North Sawyer Avenue, Chicago, located in the central part of the Chicago Korean community, at a price of $106,000. The church building has a beautiful carpeted sanctuary with a seating capacity of 400, educational facilities, three office rooms, seven classrooms, and basement space.

On Sabbath morning, May 3, 1975, nearly 400 Korean members, friends, guests, and children gathered at the newly purchased church in north Chicago. The Korean ladies and children were dressed in their traditional native costumes which signified their high esteem and thankfulness for the happy occasion. Elder and Mrs. John L. Hayward, conference president; Elder and Mrs. Bernard L. Cook, conference treasurer; and John Baker, assistant treasurer, attended the morning services and the fellowship luncheon in Korean style after the morning service. Elder Hayward presented a special message for the happy occasion. His sermon was interpreted by Charles Moon, pastor of the Korean church.

On January 1, 1972, the Korean church was organized with a charter membership of 98 at the chapel of the Brookfield Methodist church. The present membership is 126. They have two baptisms scheduled this year in August and December. The Korean church opened a language school for Asiatic immigrants, teaching English and U.S. citizen courses in day and night classes. About 200 Koreans who are residing in the north Chicago area enrolled in classes. The Korean members are earnestly looking for opportunities of outreach to their own countrymen for the sake of Christ.

Elder John Hayward was the speaker for the eleven o'clock service at the first service in the newly purchased Korean church. Elder Charles Moon interpreted into Korean.

Dr. Gilbert Kim, Sabbath school superintendent, awards the Sabbath school teacher whose class has the highest attendance and lesson study record.

24 PERSONS JOIN CHURCH

As a result of their personal decisions to follow Christ, 24 individuals have been baptized into the Seventh-day Adventist church in the South Bend area during recent weeks.

Many of the baptisms were the outcome of the It Is Written Crusade held April 12 to May 10, by Elder William L. Woodruff, conference ministerial secretary. Other baptisms were the result of Week of Prayer decisions made at the South Bend Junior Academy, and still others were the result of the faithful prayers and encouragement of friends, relatives, and pastors.

MILWAUKEE SHARON HONORS SENIOR CITIZENS

On May 10, 1975, the Senior Citizens Guild of Milwaukee Sharon church sponsored senior citizens day. Introductory remarks were made by Walter Baskerville who organized the guild and guided it from its infancy.

The program got underway with addresses by two noted guest speakers: Edward Detwiler who developed the efficient transportation service for the elderly and the handicapped, and former pastor Eric S. Dillett of Inkster, Michigan. Dillett brought words of comfort, hope, and encouragement to the senior citizens and to all present.

The program continued with Eva Reed's rendition of the poem "If Jesus Came to Your House." Mary Lee Chatman also delivered a poem. The youth choir and the gospel choir provided several selections. Other participants were Mrs. Francis Pryor, who gave a vocal number; Diedra Thomas, who played the accordion; and E. A. Jarreau, who played the musical saw.

The highlight of the program was the honoring of two of the oldest senior citizens. Anna Ratliff, 98, was given a lovely white shawl for her long years of Christian devotion. Edward Jones, 94, was presented a beautiful plaque which commemorated his long years of service to God and man.

The serving of dinner added to the appreciation of the day. Closing remarks by the pastor, Franklin S. Hill, left a warm glow in everyone's heart.

This well-planned program was directed by Christine Baskerville and her co-chairman, Mattie Johnson, along with their program committee. Sharon church thanks all who helped to make this program one to be remembered.

URBANDALE PATHFINDERS

Urbandale Pathfinders' 2,500-mile dream trip came true the first week of June. During two years of construction on the new Urbandale church building the Pathfinders did not function as an organization. But many of the young people assisted in the building program and a grateful pastor and congregation wanted to do something special for them.

A basic group of 31 (with 14 others joining at various points) drove straight from Battle Creek to the Okefenokee swamp area in south Georgia where they canoed for parts of three days in the alligator patrolled waters of the swamp and the Swanee River. Camping was in primitive areas to accent nature and to conserve funds.

A highlight of the trip was the Sabbath spent at Camp Kulaqua, the youth camp of the Florida conference. Their nature center includes a small zoo of live animals while the nature trail through cypress trees ends at a jungle-type treehouse complex accessible only by a rope bridge. The trip was climaxed by a night swim under flood lights in the 72 degree spring-fed pool with crystal clear water. The pool is fed by the same springs that serve the Silver Springs area. The Pathfinders also spent one afternoon at Silver Springs on the glass bottomed boats, jungle cruise, and the serpentarium with live demonstrations at milking rattlesnakes and putting alligators to sleep.

In spite of some rain, insect pests, and a few cuts and bruises, the Pathfinders felt the trip was a high success. They thank the Lord for eight days of fun and excitement and their new insights into nature and God's presence there. Two scorpions brought back as souvenirs reminded of Satan's presence in nature also.

Work-bees and car washes, food sales at Pathfinder Fair, and a Stanley party made the trip available at less than $30 a person.

Irene Briggs

A member of the First Flint church was recently honored by her community. Mrs. Blake (Irene) Briggs grew up in the First Flint church and through the years has been active in its Sabbath school and youth departments. She has also worked with young people professionally as she has been a school teacher and principal for many years. The following story on her retirement was written as a feature by Carol J. Windsor of the Flint Daily Journal. It has been adapted for use in the Lake Union Herald.

Irene Briggs, principal of Briggs Elementary school, a school named for her, is retiring after 46 years as a teacher and principal. She has spent 45 of those years at Briggs, formerly Buick Elementary.

She has been principal of Briggs since the existing building was built 25 years ago. "They've never had a chance to try anyone else," she said.

In her early teaching days, she had to build the furnace fire for the room. "It would explode and I'd have to take the children upstairs. Even the flag would be black," she said.

She taught 20 years in what she laughingly calls a "temporary" building. It was the forerunner of the present Briggs building, which was built in 1950.

"There was a closeness before," she said. She described the old crock drinking fountains that would freeze in the winter and oiled floors that parents would complain about.

In earlier days, 48 to 50 children were in each classroom. "You had to go sideways up the aisles," she said.

Students had more colds. "Those by the furnace roasted and those farthest away froze," she said.

There was more parent involvement then, she said. Children have more problems to face now and less security than in the past, she continued.

Mrs. Briggs will miss her children and it's pretty obvious that they'll miss her. She receives notes from some. One said: "I probably will never see you again, but I hope I do see you again because I love you very much like you were my mother."

She said she plans to spend retirement doing the things she hasn't been able to do for 46 years. She devotes much time to church work and is Sabbath School superintendent at the First Flint church.

To her students she's a peacemaker, friend, mother, and disciplinarian.

Of her students, she says, "They're sweet, aren't they? You know they mean it." You know she means it, too.

VASSAR STUDENTS EXCHANGE TAPES WITH OVERSEAS STUDENTS

"Overseas places and far away people" is more than a phrase to students of the Vassar church school according to Keith Ellsworth, principal. That is because of a tape exchange program originated last school year, he reported in a letter to the conference office.

Through the tape exchange program "we have visited many lands and have heard the voices of their people,"

Theresa Hight, a fifth grader, is pointing out the country and listening to a tape from Lebanon. Beside her are other tapes of other places.

Bernice Freeman, an eighth grader, is looking at students' papers from Japan, where a Michigan missionary, Karen Edger, had her students in grades three through six write their names in English and Japanese.

Ellsworth added. "They in turn have listened to reports of our activities as we have tried to show that Christian witnessing can be done anywhere and everywhere."

Six tapes were sent last year to Adventist friends or mission schools in selected overseas areas. Students from England, Japan, Lebanon, and Taiwan responded with reports of their own activities.

Vassar students on their tapes described their school and its location, introduced students, presented musical numbers, and reported on witnessing activities.

One tape from students of the elementary school for missionary children in the Middle East came by personal messenger, rather than by mail. It told of the interests and activities of the students in that school and was brought by Elder William Edsell. He also told of his work as a youth director in the Afro-Mideast Division and played an African drum. The drum has been used to call people to worship at a church in the country of Zaire. It was made of elephant hide with cowhide strings.

"When he played on that drum in our classroom, we thought even our classroom walls were vibrating," Mr. Ellsworth exclaimed.

The Vassar school would welcome an exchange tape from any school. In this way each could share what is being done in their school and area. Perhaps it would help to make the world seem a little smaller, and the sharing of ideas would be useful to all concerned.

NEWS NOTE

• On June 28, 11 persons were united with Christ by baptism into the Ithaca church as Elder F. P. Baerg conducted his second baptism this year making a total of 16 in 1975. In a short testimony service many different reasons for the decisions were given, one being connected with the church through Vacation Bible School. A fellowship dinner was held after the morning service. A beautiful cake in the form of a Book of Life, in which the names of the new members were written, was the table centerpiece decorated by Mrs. Asher Birmingham.

FORMER TEACHER HONORED

GOOD NEWS VIA GOOD MUSIC

Four laymen from the Raymond district who love the ageless story of salvation spend a major portion of their free time sharing the good news through good music.

The four men who call themselves the Good News Quartet have provided musical worship services in more than 25 churches and three evangelistic series plus many nursing homes in Wisconsin and Illinois.

During a business day they earn their living at vastly different occupations in different cities. Marvin Stanek, a machinist, sings first tenor. Vincent Cinquemani, accountant, is second tenor. Calvin Voss, baritone, spends his day composing advertising pages for a Waukesha newspaper. The quartet's bass, Dale Hilt, is products research manager for Johnson Wax.

On a recent Sabbath they drove over 300 miles to share their harmony and homilies at a church service in Prairie du Chien and MV meeting in Richland Center and vespers at Madison.

In a quiet corner before vespers they prayed, "Lord, we sometimes make mistakes, but take the harmony of our voices to reach hearts with the good news of Thy return."

Following the 30-minute program which included such old favorites as "Steal Away," "Go Tell It on the

The huge milling machine or the high note in the first tenor's score are equally under Marvin Stanek's control.

Mountain," and "Anybody Here that Loves my Jesus?" a member asked, "How long do you practice a number before you use it in public? The timing and intricate harmony was as good as any I've heard. How do you find time to practice?"

Stanek replied, "We may go through a song from 50 to 100 times before we use it in a program."

Each program starts with their musical theme song, "Good News—Chariot's a-Coming." "We labor under the philosophy that many people want to hear more of the standard old favorites," said Voss.

"And, we cater to the smaller churches," continued Hilt. "In places where they frequently have no music before a sermon, we try to give them an entire sermon of song and narration."

Occasionally a collection is taken to help reduce the travel costs, but often they go at their own expense and are always looking for new places to share the Good News through good music.

ANDREWS UNIVERSITY

UNIVERSITY PLAZA OPENS

The University Plaza, located on U.S. 31 across from the Berrien County Youth Fair, opened for business August 11.

The Plaza, owned by Andrews University, includes a grocery market, a Ben Franklin variety store, a card and gift shop, a bakery, and a discount appliance store. All are open for business but the bakery, due to begin operating next month, and the discount room, to open in October.

The grand opening is set for early September, according to Dave Dent, manager of the market and variety store.

The total floor area of the entire building (including warehouses) is 48,000 square feet—the size of the in-bounds area of a football field. A 160-car parking lot covers an additional two acres.

The new market is over four times larger than the old one. It has seven checkstands, aisles 6½ feet wide, completely carpeted floors, a customer service center, and a natural foods section carrying 150 varieties of nuts, grains, flours, and other foods.

The market will also carry a variety of vegetable meat analogues. Animal products will be limited to milk, cheese, and eggs.

With the move, the market hired 10 new employees, including part-time students, making a total of 40 full and part-time employees at the new market.

All sections of the plaza are operated by the university except the card shop, called the Greeting Gallery, which the university is leasing to Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Perock, previous owners of Shirl's Card and Gift Shop in downtown Berrien Springs.

FLOWERS COLOR CAMPUS

According to Allen Chaffee, a grounds department supervisor, the department uses nearly 40,000 plants to keep the campus in color as long as possible each year. Planting for the first spring flowers is done the previous fall when tulip bulbs are placed in the ground. When the tulips have finished blooming, they are replaced by annuals such as marigolds, pansies, and snapdragons. As the summer annuals fade, they are replaced by mums for the fall season.

The department maintains a greenhouse for growing its plants. In this way, the right number of quality plants can be supplied when they are needed.

THE EXODUS PROBLEM AND ITS RAMIFICATIONS, by Donovan Courville, published by Crest Challenge Books, Box 993, Loma Linda, California 92354.

This two-volume set of books has attained a significant interest on the part of scholars and laymen of non-Adventist conservative Christian groups. All Seventh-day Adventists who have been perplexed over problems whose explanations seem to call for disturbing compromise with inspiration, should be acquainted with the developments brought to light in these volumes. Solutions to numerous problems come into clear focus when archaeology is interpreted by the same premises as those we have long employed in the interpretations of geology as related to Creation and the Flood.

This set, authored by Donovan Courville, Ph.D. (20 years on the staff of Loma Linda University) retails at $9.95. These volumes may now be obtained through your local Adventist Book Center or directly from the publishers.

Dr. Joseph Smoot, vice president for academic affairs, confers an honorary doctorate on a top educator in Brazil, Mrs. Eurides Brito da Silva.

219 STUDENTS GRADUATED

Andrews University graduated 219 students during summer commencement exercises on Sunday, August 10, in Pioneer Memorial church.

It was the second of two graduations held each year at A.U. The first was in June, when 341 students were graduated.

Receiving an honorary doctor of laws degree was Mrs. Eurides Brito da Silva, who has been appointed by the President of Brazil to serve on that nation's top educational body, the Federal Board of Education.

Education, she said, should be open to all. One of the main problems she has faced in Brazil is to provide an education for the 20 percent of Brazil's school age children unable to attend school.

Dr. Joseph Smoot, vice president for academic affairs, officiated in the absence of University President Richard Hammill, who is in Europe on vacation.

After conferring the degrees, Smoot said, "Christian education is different. For one thing, it costs you more. And beyond finances, it costs you more as a person as well. It costs Christian consecration."

As a tribute to A.U.'s international student body, some 80 flags lined the mall in front of the church.

Among the 219 who were graduated, 42 were from the Seminary, 107 from the School of Graduate Studies, and 70 from the College of Arts and Sciences and the College of Technology.

BOOKSTORE TO GET FACELIFT

Students arriving for the fall quarter will find the University Bookstore expanded upstairs to occupy the area being vacated by the University Market.

The expansion will approximately triple the present size of the bookstore. This will make possible wider selection of merchandise and increased services.

The appearance of the service center will be changed both inside and out, although some plans have not been finalized.

"We want to create a warm atmosphere," says Alice Cox, bookstore manager, "with interior remodeling, and attractive new front landscaping."

A new feature of the bookstore will be a typewriter rental service. The paperback book selection will be greatly expanded, and used textbooks will be bought and sold.

Mrs. Cox says an interesting new feature of the expanded bookstore will be the student artwork displayed on the main floor and sold on a consignment basis.

A.U. DIETETICS STUDENT WINS SCHOLARSHIP

Jeanette R. Hyde, a dietetics student at Andrews University, has won a $500 undergraduate scholarship for her senior year from the American Dietetic Association.

The scholarship, based on academic and professional potential, is one of some 20 such awards given annually by the A.D.A. to undergraduates across the nation.

Miss Hyde's extracurricular activities at A.U. have included membership in the Andrews Scholar Club, an elected position as a student senator, and reporting and layout-editing for the campus newspaper, The Student Movement.
