Back to the Basics

F. R. Stephen
Director
Department of Education

In educational circles today a great deal of discussion is being centered on competency standards and the teaching of the basics, generally referred to as reading, writing and mathematics.

One reason for this is that we are being bombarded with evidence which reveals that large segments of our society cannot read, make change at the store or do little more than sign their own names.

People are concerned with the type of textbooks being used, course content being taught, discipline, morality and humaneness. It is not enough to seek solutions for life's problems from newspaper columnists, popular magazines or even from the great philosophers of our generation. Neither can the solution be found in individualized teaching, open classrooms, contract learning, non-graded schools or other varied approaches to learning situations.

What then is basic and where can the answers be found? In the Christian school, staffed by Christian teachers, where the Scriptures are given first priority and where character training is recognized as the single most important facet of education.

"The great work of parents and teachers is character building,—seeking to restore the image of Christ in those placed under their care."—Counsels to Parents, Teachers, and Students, p. 61.

"Used as a textbook in our schools, [the Bible] will be found far more effective than any other book in guiding wisely in the affairs of this life, as well as in aiding the soul to climb the ladder that reaches to heaven."—Counsels to Parents, Teachers, and Students, p. 448.

Where will your children be enrolled when school opens this fall?

Olive Cady Pitchen

1909–1977

by Mildred Summerton
Principal
Wisconsin Academy

Olive was a very special person to those of us who knew her as a personal friend and colleague.

Through the many years of her service as a teacher and food service director, it was her marvelous concern and interest in her teen-age students that made Olive special. Rarely has one life been bound up with so many young men and women. The inspiration for good living through this contact was a forceful impact for turning countless students to dedicate their lives to the God whom Olive served so willingly and so happily!

Through the years at Cedar Lake Academy Olive was known as "Mom" to these students. This same rich relationship continued at Mount Vernon Academy and most recently at Wisconsin Academy.

We admired this woman for her enthusiastic commitment to making meals that appealed to the teen-agers as much as home cooking does. Who but Olive has ever held a record for institutional cooking that no one ever complained about. Who but Olive would take time to find out about special likes of individual students and then would cater to those desires! Who but Olive could move through a cafeteria dining room filled with more than 200 students and maintain a discipline that would be the envy of any parent. Who but Olive in her busy schedule of preparing three meals a day for these students could find time for individual counseling with so many. Who but Olive could make so many young men and young women feel that they were so special to her. Who but Olive would trudge through the snow on a freezing January morning at five o'clock to make certain that breakfast was all that it should be to those students whom she loved. Who but Olive would take time to call a fellow staff member and say, "Come eat at the cafeteria, we are having pizza tonight!"

Olive basked in a warm outpouring of affection from her students that few people have matched. Many times we witnessed a teen-ager walk up to Olive and sling his arm around her and hug her because he loved her. No, Olive never had children of her own, but she was far richer and has shared in more affection and love than many a mother.

Student groups that visited other campuses returned to "Mom" Pitchen and announced that they were so glad to be back to her good cooking! After one of these trips student Bob Chilson threw his arms around her and said, "Mom, it is so wonderful to be 'home' again and back to your good food!" A radiant smile crossed "Mom's" face. These easy warm relationships made it wonderfully simple for Olive to turn the hearts of young people to God.

For those of us as colleagues who needed encouragement, who needed tears dried—we too knew how special she was! How reluctantly we gave her up when she found it necessary to leave us to take care of her aging parents. Yet, Olive would have found joy in no other way than to care for those bound close to her by the ties of family relationship.

Olive was special because she cared deeply about people. Her enthusiastic Christian life was contagious to those of us who worked with her.

Few women qualify for the description given in the Scriptures of a great woman, but how beautifully Olive fit these words:

"When she speaks, her words are wise, and kindness is the rule for everything she says. She watches carefully all that goes on throughout her household, and is never lazy. Her [students] stand and bless her; so does her husband. He praises her. . . Charm can be deceptive and beauty doesn't last, but a woman who fears and reverences God shall be greatly praised." Proverbs 31:26-30, The Living Bible.

Because of You . . .

by David L. Gray, Correspondent

"Because we care about you—we offer the finest natural foods. . . . Our kitchen is always visible for your inspection. Your food is prepared and served with love."

"That," says Cindy Hadley, registered dietician and director of The New Earth Vegetarian Restaurant and Shop, "is why we are here. When someone comes in that door, it is only for one reason, and that is in some way to become acquainted with us (Seventh-day Adventists)."

More than 60 years ago, Ellen G. White said, "The Lord has a message for our cities. . . . Hygienic restaurants are to be established, . . . and by them the message of temperance is to be proclaimed. . . . Those who come to our restaurants should be supplied with reading matter. Their attention should be called to our literature on temperance and dietetic reform, and leaflets treating on the lessons of Christ should also be given them."—Testimonies, vol. 7, pp. 115, 116.

But operating a restaurant is not easy, and when Elder Stoy Proctor, former health services director for the Illinois Conference, and Frank Hazelwood, former director of the Wayout-Inn, along with many others, began to dream of operating a restaurant according to what Mrs.

White had guided, they didn't know who to turn to or where to start.

Previous to formulating the plans for a vegetarian restaurant, a natural food store had been in operation at the Wayout-Inn for quite a while. But the realization of a restaurant seemed to be much more difficult. There was ample room for a small restaurant, but major remodeling would have to be done, a staff would have to be found, and lots of expensive kitchen equipment purchased.

Then Peter Vukshich and his wife, Bronka, attended the North Shore Church in Chicago to inquire about vegetarianism and Seventh-day Adventists. The Vukshiches met Hazelwood who told them about the Wayout-Inn and shared with them the dream of a remodeled building to house the store and restaurant. Discovering that Vukshich was a registered architect and his wife an interior designer, he exclaimed, "Oh, we've been praying for you."

And so it went. There were hundreds of answers to prayer, miracle after miracle to complete the work, and much labor donated. (See Lake Union Herald, September 7, 1976.)

Thus the dream of a Seventh-day Adventist vegetarian restaurant began to be realized in January of 1976 when a building permit was obtained to begin remodeling the two store fronts. Since that time, hours and hours of labor have been put in. Electricians, plumbers, carpenters, masonry men and a cabinet maker were all provided. Some were paid, some donated time, but all had a part in making The New Earth what it is today.

Once the work was under way it became apparent that a staff would be needed very soon. However, the staff could not be just ordinary people. It had to be people who knew something about restaurants, healthful living and vegetarian cooking, business, and most of all they had to be people who loved the Lord, who wanted to work for Him under difficult and perhaps tense situations.

Having recently become acquainted with Seventh-day Adventists, Cindy Hadley, who at that time was working for the Chicago Board of Health as a public health nutritionist, met Elder Proctor and he began telling her of the plans for the new restaurant. Gradually after much prayer and then sensing a deep commitment that this was the work which God had prepared for her to do, Cindy accepted the invitation of the board to serve as director.

"That first day of work, September 1, 1976, was really something," says

Cindy. "First Elder Proctor, his wife, Leilani, and I sat down and planned the menu. Because we were both familiar with that particular aspect of a restaurant and we knew what we wanted to serve, that is where we began." Looking back now, Cindy says, "Perhaps it wasn't the best way to begin, but it was a beginning.

"Fruits, nuts, grains and vegetables became the basis of our recipes. Getting back to the basics of our original diet and stressing the practical aspects of our health message was the philosophy which we felt should be stressed," says Cindy.

And so the menu reads: "Fresh fruits and vegetables are featured. We bake whole grain breads and desserts. All sauces, soups, mayonnaise, salad dressings, gravies, etc., are made by us for their nutritional excellence. Our recipes are cholesterol free because they contain no animal products. Skim milk and yogurt are available individually on the menu. Our recipes contain NO white flour, white sugar, artificially colored or flavored foods."

What have people's reactions been to this all-natural food? "Fantastic," says Cindy, "except perhaps by some who expected to be able to get a veggieburger or stakelet sandwich." In fact she says, "Our whole wheat spaghetti and cashew cheese is one of our best sellers. Also popular is our beanburger platter."

Located in one of the most exciting areas of Chicago, The New Earth quickly built up a regular clientele. Young, ages 20 to 35, they are students, newly successful career people, professionals, artists, craftsmen, as well as hundreds of other people who make up the local area.

"When the restaurant opened around the first of April we were wondering if people would come in," says Cindy, "but many of the local people around the area of the restaurant were very anxious for us to open. For weeks, some for even more than a year, had been walking by watching the progress of the construction and asking, 'When is it going to open?' 'When is it going to open?'"

At first open only for dinner, the restaurant is now open for lunch as well, serving their complete line of sandwiches, soups, salads, desserts and drinks. Running a restaurant takes practice and skill, and at first the staff was inexperienced and not prepared for the many surprises and situations which would arise.

Ben Chilson, director of food service at the Hinsdale Sanitarium and Hospital, who designed the kitchen, built it into a very compact area in one of the store front windows. It was imperative that everything be in its place, and that everyone working in the kitchen know where and how to put things away.

Because the menu was designed before the restaurant was in operation, at first it seemed to be too much, and the restaurant was always running out of food those first few days. Soon, however, they realized that it was not necessary to make each entree every day. One entree could be made daily and then frozen until needed. Many other time-saving tips were learned. Very quickly the mechanics of running the restaurant became perfected, and each day more and more emphasis was put on the restaurant's mission.

Surrounded with the influence of a Christian staff of cooks, waiters, stockroom helpers, store clerks and volunteers, Cindy feels that, hopefully, those who eat there are met with a warm love and concern for them as people. On each of the attractively set tables a copy of the booklet, "Because of You," is placed for the customer's enjoyment.

Because so many of the customers come in alone it is very easy for the waiters to begin a conversation with them. "Conversation is very easy," says Cindy. "Even our name, The New Earth, is a means of witnessing. And of course people are forever asking why we are closed on Friday and Saturday." Free literature is provided and various books on health and Christian living are available in our store.

"We are not interested in making people Seventh-day Adventists; the Lord will do that. We're there to do what the Lord has put us there to do; sow seeds, prepare the soil . . . and part of that is the health message."

Owned and operated as a nonprofit corporation, The New Earth is run by a board of directors made up of Adventist laymen from throughout the Chicagoland area. It is their goal to expand the program even more.

The New Earth already promises to be a training center for others in learning the restaurant work. There are several on the staff who intend to make the restaurant work their life work and establish healthful restaurants in other locations.

Cooking classes will also be a part of the program, and many customers have already expressed an interest in this. Where and when these classes will begin is still not decided, but very soon we expect an answer to that need also, says Cindy.

There are hundreds of other things that need to be worked on. Advertising, generating a greater public awareness of the restaurant's existence, developing interests which have already begun, and attaining better skills and staff are just some of them. Yet, the Lord has provided so abundantly.

"Every day we begin with prayer," says Cindy, and she asks that you remember them in your prayers as well.

"We would love to have you visit with us, and see how the Lord has blessed us."

Located at 3339-41 North Halsted Street in Chicago, The New Earth is open Sunday, 2 to 8 P.M., and Monday through Thursday, 11 A.M. to 2 P.M. for lunch, and 5 to 8 P.M. for dinner.

Not Even a Ball-Point Pen

MISSIONS EXTENSION

by Kenneth H. Wood, Editor, Review and Herald

Church members are of two basic kinds—impulse givers and systematic givers. Impulse givers love the Lord and give generously when they hear a touching mission appeal (if they have money in their wallet or purse). Systematic givers give as a matter of principle, even if they are not especially moved; they set aside a percentage of their income, in addition to tithe, and draw upon it for the numerous offerings received in church and Sabbath School throughout the year. God loves both kinds of givers, for how could the church move ahead in its efforts to carry the gospel to the whole world without the support of God's faithful people!

Some time ago I received the following letter from a member of a college faculty in Africa: "In almost every mail I receive letters from young people who are eager to come to our school to get a Christian education, but they have no money (our scholarship, which includes tuition, room, and board, amounts to $80 for the whole school year). They are so poor that some of them cannot afford to buy a new ball-point pen. . . . The boys sleep 22 in a room so small that there is no place for a table or closets. They keep their suitcases under their beds. The boys eat standing up because our 'dining room' is a kind of shed with tables but no room for chairs. There are no bathrooms in the dormitories. Up until last fall the boys washed themselves outdoors at a tap. The 'toilets' were farther down, behind a bush. . . . We hope to enlarge the boys' dormitory and install a regular bathroom. And, if it is the Lord's will, perhaps we also can have a dining room and kitchen."

When I read this letter I felt terribly uncomfortable. I thought of the fine buildings and rich appointments I had seen on the campuses of some denominational institutions in affluent countries, and I asked myself why there should be such a wide disparity between facilities in one part of the world and in another? Why should students in some countries not have enough money even to buy a ball-point pen while students in other countries have money not only for necessities but for luxuries?

My mind went to scenes I had witnessed in other lands—homeless people living on the sidewalks of big cities; hungry children holding out bony hands, begging me to share my lunch with them; church congregations meeting outdoors because they had no money with which to build or buy a church; physicians and nurses working long hours under primitive conditions to bring hope and healing to the sick.

As these scenes passed before me, I picked up a letter that had just come from a church member in North America. The letter said: "I am two-thirds blind, wear a hearing aid, have arthritis of the spine, and my right leg is partially paralyzed. But God has blessed me financially, so I have just withdrawn $23,000 from the bank to put into the Lord's work. . . . I favor foreign missions. . . . I am seeking advice and direction. . . . I want to be a good steward of what money God has entrusted to me. Please let me hear from you soon."

Giving comes naturally to anyone who possesses the spirit of Christ. Christ gave Himself "that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life" (John 3:16), and all who follow Jesus will want the entire world to know the good news of the gospel. They will witness verbally and they will give of their means so that others may know "the old, old story" of Jesus and His love.

And by participating in helping to fulfill the Gospel Commission, Christians accomplish at least three things—they are blessed personally by their efforts, they bring blessings to others, and they bring closer the day when Jesus will return, as He promised. "By giving the gospel to the world it is in our power to hasten our Lord's return. We are not only to look for but to hasten the coming of the day of God."—The Desire of Ages, p. 633.

Today, out of a world population of about four billion, probably not more than half have heard the gospel. Only 20 percent of the population is Christian, and this percentage soon may sink to about 15 percent.

Seventh-day Adventists are the most widespread Protestant missionary organization in the world, working in about 87 percent of the world's nations. Yet we are harvesting only about one out of 50 of those who call themselves Adventists when religious censuses are taken in Africa and Latin America. Ninety percent of our converts come from a Christian background; we are only now beginning to reach out to non-Christians. Seventy percent of Adventists live where only 30 percent of the world's population lives.

Some areas of the world have been closed to Adventist work for years, other countries have been recently closed, while still others are perilously close to closing. At the same time there are countries that have suddenly become receptive to the gospel and where the work is progressing beyond our wildest dreams. There yet remain 28 countries to enter (as of 1975 G.C. session), and vast areas of entered countries to be reached.

Those who have given to the Missions Extension Offering and then gone to work in the mission field have learned firsthand the importance of such offerings. When a mission committee meets to decide on the area in their territory in which to use the offering to begin new work and which worker to send there, the missionary has a new appreciation of how dollars translate into souls for the kingdom.

This year, when the Missions Extension Offering is received on Sabbath, September 10, lift your eyes to the total world, for whom Christ died. See the fields, ripe for the harvest. And whether you are an impulse giver or a systematic giver, won't you join me in trying to do more for Christ and missions this year than ever before?

person, what would you expect from a free Christian?

More of the fruit of the Spirit, of course:

"...love, joy, peace..." (Gal. 5:22).

And isn't that the way it ought to be?

The Occupational Education program of Andrews University aims at meeting "a definite need for students who wish to go into skilled trades," says Stephen Young, director. "He may or may not wish to continue his formal education to attain an associate or full four-year degree," Young adds.

As to the expense of taking occupational education training, Young points out that while state and federal funds are available, he recommends part-time employment on a basis of pay as you go, learn while you earn. Check it out. You'll probably be pleasantly surprised at the wisdom of Young's advice.

A School of Technology bulletin says that "most programs are one year in length." This means one school year or three quarters.

The number of areas of training at Andrews are impressive, but further expansion is on the horizon—staff development, facilities, cooperative (work-study) education—according to Larry Mahlum, assistant to College of Technology dean, William W. Davidson.

Most popular of the training areas have been carpentry, auto mechanics, printing, computer technology and clerical, Young disclosed.

But look at other areas of training available:

Agriculture, aviation, cosmetology (beauty culture), diesel mechanics, electric wiring, masonry, plumbing, quantity food preparation, radiator repair, refrigeration and air conditioning, salesmanship, sign lettering and design, upholstering and welding.

What are your talents and interests? Take advantage of them.

The school recognizes its responsibility to you:

Each person "should be provided an equal opportunity to develop those talents with which he was created," Davidson says.

What are the rewards of improving and adding to your skills?

Ellen White said:

"He who regards work as mere drudgery, and settles down to it with self-complacent ignorance, making no effort to improve, will find it indeed a burden. But those who recognize science in the humblest work will see in it nobility and beauty, and will take pleasure in performing it with faithfulness and efficiency."—Education, p. 222.

"In the common walks of life there is many a toiler patiently treading the round of his daily tasks, unconscious of latent powers that, roused to action, would place him among the world's great leaders."—Education, p. 85.

Why not:

Throw off the unnecessary burden. Be a leader in the finishing of God's work.

Perhaps take light to a dark area.

And increase your income potential. Help make 1978 a glorious Adventist Education Year. Make it your education year. Act now.

Kha Ai Na

VIETNAMESE NURSE IN O.R.

BATTLE CREEK—After taking one year of special nursing classes for Vietnamese refugees, Kha Ai Na began working as an operating room assistant in August of 1976 at Battle Creek Sanitarium Hospital. Her main duties include assisting surgeons and scrubbing.

Na flew to America in May of 1975 with several American doctors who left Vietnam because of political upset. Esther Oldham and Vernon Small, also associated with the hospital, left Vietnam about the same time. Na lived in the Chinese city of Cholon, Vietnam, with her parents and four siblings. Her dad is a businessman and her mother is a homemaker. Na explained that she has not seen her parents in 2½ years because the Communist government will not let anyone in the country.

Na has wanted to be a nurse since high school. She spent three college years in Vietnam and finished her nursing courses at Pacific Union College in Angwin, California. Now at age 27, she is waiting for the results of her state board exams for the nursing profession. She is a prospective registered nurse at the present time, after transferring through several schools to complete nursing requirements.

Na enjoys operating room work and wants to remain there. She is often in the intensive care unit. She stated that she would like to study anesthesia during her nursing career.

Concerning the people at Battle Creek Sanitarium Hospital, Na stated, "My first impression was that they were so friendly and helpful to me—more so than I planned on." She said that the facilities seemed so modernized compared to other hospitals she has been in. "I prefer a smaller hospital like this one; I would get lost in a bigger one!"

When reflecting upon her homeland, Na smiled and said, "I miss Vietnamese food—I just cannot get used to the variety you have here."

Na's brother, Chris Hu, is also employed at the san in central service. They have one other relative in America—an uncle in Los Angeles.

CITIZENS SUPPORT AFFILIATE HOSPITAL

HINSDALE—The public was given an opportunity on July 28 to comment on Hinsdale Hospital's application for a certificate of need to build a 120-bed affiliate hospital in the Romeoville/Bolingbrook area. The response from citizens, public officials, businessmen, local civic and social organizations and others in the area was overwhelmingly positive.

Citizens voiced their support based on the greater accessibility to a health-care institution. A direct benefit of the new hospital would be the reduced travel time of 20 to 30 minutes to the nearest hospital. Other reasons for support included more jobs in the area, and the advantages of a center for medical-related training that the community does not have at present.

Some citizens voiced concern about the increased costs for hospitalization should a new hospital be built. Irwin Hansen, Hinsdale Hospital administrator, testified, "We want to provide a level of health care appropriate to the community and at the lowest possible cost to the patient."

One Bolingbrook citizen summed up the comments of many area residents when he said, "I can't think of another hospital that I'd rather see build a hospital here."

The Region IX Health Systems Agency hearing, held at the Romeoville High School, is one step in the project review process. On the basis of a recommendation by this agency, the Illinois State Planning Agency must decide before November 12, 1977, 120 days after the application for a certificate was accepted by the state, if Hinsdale Hospital will receive the certificate of need. Without a certificate, a medical facility is not usually licensed and the hospital will not construct the planned facility.

The new hospital would be a 120-bed facility costing approximately $17.2 million. A civic advisory group comprised of Bolingbrook and Romeoville officials, area citizens, physicians and local business representatives has been working with hospital officials in accessing health facility needs and in developing a plan of action to meet these needs. The planned completion date for this hospital is 1982.

SDA 54 gives a silent witness to others of Seventh-day Adventists.

THE SILENT WITNESS

SDA 1, SDA 13, SDA 151, SDA 307 . . .

This year hundreds of Adventists in Illinois witnessed for their faith as the letters SDA on their license plates reminded people that they were Seventh-day Adventists.

Once again it is time to renew your license plates, and this year we are able to again offer these special plates to Adventists with the letters SDA on them.

Hundreds of people have commented on this interesting and innovative way of witnessing to others of your faith. Unfortunately many were unaware of this offer last year, and so were either too late or neglected to order these special plates.

As soon as you receive your renewal application blank in the mail, send your application, along with your check made payable to the Secretary of State, to the Illinois Conference, Box 89, Brookfield, Illinois 60513. All checks and money orders, along with the applications, should be at the conference office not later than September 15.

DO NOT SEND YOUR APPLICATION OR CHECK TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE'S OFFICE. All applications will be mailed together from the conference office to Springfield. However, you will receive your plates directly from Springfield in the mail.

SECOND SERIES OF SPANISH MEETINGS

The second series of Spanish evangelistic meetings began July 9 at the Lake Shore High School auditorium at the Corner of Irving Park Road and Ashland Avenue in Chicago. Efrain Murillo, evangelist, assisted by John Robinson, pastor of the Spanish North Church, is conducting the campaign. A new Spanish church is being planned because of the great number of people who have taken their stand for Christ.

MUNCIE COMMUNITY SERVICES CENTER AT WORK

Look at these pictures and you will see typical workers of a typical community services center. Or will you? In our community services work, youth are involved as well as men. Community services workers can be men and women of all ages as there is work that everyone can do, from visiting the clients to delivering food baskets and conducting Five-Day Plans to Stop Smoking. Whatever your talent or interest, it can be used in one of our centers.

Lucy Freeman, the director of the Muncie Center, works many hours serving the community each week. Her husband, John, drives his van picking up needed donations for the center. Last year the little Muncie Center served almost 1,000 persons. Satisfaction? Yes!

Recently the Freemans were featured in a picture story in the Muncie Sunday Star. Mrs. Freeman said, "At 73 I've thought of stepping aside, but what would I do? Twiddle my thumbs? Never!"

Busy making quilt tops are Angela Ice, left, Lucy Freeman and Marie Mills.

Could it be that you are sitting around twiddling your thumbs when you could be doing community services work in your community? Why not put yourself in these pictures in your town? You'll never get rich but we guarantee satisfaction. Our Lord gave us a living example of service. In service there is complete satisfaction.

Lottie Norman

47 YEARS OF DEDICATED SERVICE

Lottie McNeal Norman, born April 21, 1883, in Yazoo City, Mississippi, was reared in Memphis, Tennessee, where she completed her elementary, secondary and normal course work at the LaMoyné Normal Institute, a parochial school.

After completing her course requirements, she taught in the Memphis public school system until she married Howard W. Norman, now deceased.

In 1920 Norman's family moved to Chicago. Although a devout Methodist since childhood, Lottie sensed the need for spiritual growth in God's commandment-keeping church. She had learned about Adventism from her father, a faithful Seventh-day Adventist for many years. She was baptized by Elder Herbert D. Greene and became a member of the Shiloh Church in 1930 where she has held many offices over the years. She is now an honorary deaconess.

Lottie Norman has been active in many capacities of church work, but Ingathering is undoubtedly her speciality. In 1970 she raised $1,022.59. Because of her physical condition she cannot work now.

Although Lottie's health is now declining, she is still a faithful member. Because her church is a vital part of her, she feels a great loss when she is not serving her Redeemer in some capacity of the church.

She wishes to share her favorite

Bible verse with her sisters and brothers in Christ: "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me." Gal. 2:20.

• Two big weekends for Pathfinders and their leaders have been slated for September. These will be the weekends of the two camporees held each year. The first is scheduled for Camp Au Sable on the weekend of September 16 to 18 and the second will be held again at Camp Madron near Buchanan, September 23 to 25. Pathfinders are hoping that "for a change" good weather will prevail at both places.

• The It Is Written telecast seen and heard over Channel 2 in Detroit brings numerous letters of interest. Here is one just received from the telecast's headquarters to show how the use of the mass media reaches into homes and hearts. "God came into my life the morning I heard your telecast for the first time. I never have paused long at a telecast, but this time something happened, and I stopped—spellbound—and listened. Before the message had finished I was on my knees, asking God to come into my life and lift the burden of loneliness from my shoulders. He has brought a happiness to me that I never dreamed could happen."

Charles Keymer

PASTORAL CHANGES MADE TO BENEFIT CHURCHES

Better pastoral care for the churches of Michigan is developing because of a plan devised by Conference President Charles Keymer.

Having served for many years as a pastor, the conference president still remembers how difficult it can be for one man to adequately serve as the spiritual leader for a multiplicity of churches. When he was elected president, Keymer decided that the conference officers would study the readjusting of church assignments as quickly as possible so eventually no minister would have to serve more than two churches.

An analysis of the field at that time showed 18 areas where multiple assignment of churches existed. Today more than two-thirds of these situations have been corrected.

Changes have come about mainly through reassignment of pastoral "loads." In a few cases it was necessary to add a pastor to the conference payroll. Working out these pastoral changes is not always an easy thing to do and often time is needed before details are right for a change. In some instances the necessary changes came about because it was possible to merge two nearby congregations.

"As our church members give understanding and support to the conference in this project," Elder Keymer says, "we believe that this plan will make it possible for each pastor to devote more time to witnessing, training, and giving Bible studies and winning more souls. The goal for the whole conference is that pastors and laymembers will unite to meet the challenge and serve 'together for a finished work.'

Put God First In Giving

ADELPHIAN ACADEMY MAKES USE OF FARMLAND

This summer Adelpian Academy has made an important investment—an investment in her land. Fifty-one and one-half acres of farmland, which in recent years had lain dormant, was prepared for early August planting. "Alfalfa and a small timothy mix was planted," says Fred Wedel, maintenance and grounds manager, "and the seeding should last for about five years." The hay will be harvested each summer.

Leon Spencer, an Adelpian Academy junior, has spent most of his summer driving the tractor preparing the fields. Not having been around farm equipment, nor driven a tractor prior to coming to the academy, Leon said he "really learned a lot this summer, and I had to learn it fast." Leon drives 50 miles one way to report to work and "has not been late one day," says Mr. Wedel. "He is a very dependable worker."

Through Wedel's initiation and because a permanent vegetative cover was planted, Adelpian Academy became the recipient of funds from the 1977 Agricultural Conservation Program. According to Vernon L. Dretschmer, chairman of the Michigan State Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee, "Federal cost-share assistance is available to eligible agricultural producers for soil and water conservation practices on farmland." This assistance is available through the Agricultural Conservation Program, which was developed under legislation contained in the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act of 1936. In approving this legislation, Congress recognized the need to protect and conserve one of our most important natural resources, our soil.

USED BIBLE TEXTBOOKS SENT OVERSEAS

Fifteen mail sacks of used Bible textbooks from Michigan's church schools have been mailed to Poona, India, for use by the Southern Asia Division.

The mailing is the result of an S.O.S. which was received last February by Elder Kenneth Hutchins of the conference department of education. The letter brought a written request from Mrs. Marion S. Simmons, a sustentation educational worker. In her first week with the Southern Asia Division a great need was brought to her attention which folk in the "homeland" could help supply.

"It will be several years," Mrs. Simmons wrote, "before this division can get into the new Bible program for grades 1 through 8. Even with funds from abroad they cannot swing this project financially for two or three years. Therefore they are in desperate need of the old Bible books you have discarded."

This request sent Elder Hutchins and his associates into action. A letter to the principals of the 52 church schools in Michigan requested copies of the Bible texts which their students no longer use. As a result these texts were sent to the office where they were made ready for shipment. The fifteen mail sacks of these books are now on the high seas headed for India as textbooks which like Mrs. Simmons were retired but brought back into active service.

SUMMER FELLOWSHIP SERVICES AT CLEARWATER LAKE

Dr. Floyd Bresee of Lincoln, Nebraska, was the speaker for the summer fellowship services at the Clearwater Lake Church in mid-July.

Bresee is pastor of the College View Church and chairman of the department of religion at Union College, Lincoln, Nebraska.

Christ's love expressed at Calvary pays sin's penalty, delivers from sin, and heals sin's wounds. We experience this only as we love Him and look to Him for healing. This was the essence of Dr. Bresee's devotional.

Sponsored by the Clearwater Lake Church young people's department, the fellowship was attended by visitors from 20 towns and seven states.

VIEWS OF SURVIVAL CAMP

Instructors Marshall Merklin and Ken Wade spent two rainy nights in a shelter which they built. Campers learned the art of righting a capsized canoe. Damp but happy "survivors" returned from their long walk out of the wilderness.

interest in events on earth before Christ's return. They seek to know how to relate to such trends as the rise of spiritualism, the occult and the charismatic movement. Norman R. Gulley examines these and other issues. He discusses how to improve family life—so seriously threatened by last-day conditions—and explores the question of a declining belief in biblical inspiration and revelation.

Final Events on Planet Earth is a well-thought-out study of what happens to the earth and God's people before Christ returns for the redeemed. A chapter has been written to coordinate with each week's Sabbath School lesson during the fourth quarter of 1977.

YOU'RE NOT JUST A STATISTIC, by Clark B. McCall. Pacific Press Publishing Association, Mountain View, California. $50.

A hospital chaplain explains the value of each human being in the light of the gospel. He does this by using practical illustrations drawn from his own experience with patients.

WAY OF THE CROSS, by Mary Cecilia Fahrner. Pacific Press Publishing Association, Mountain View, California. $75.

Here is the story of Mary Cecilia Fahrner (fun-loving, yet dedicated) who left her home and large family of brothers and sisters at an early age to join a Franciscan order. Dedicated to her church and to her teaching profession for some fifty years, she decided to study God's Word anew to find a deeper meaning and a clearer direction. Guess where it led her?

Thrills and excitement are not alone for the young in years. They are also for the young in spirit and in outlook—for those who dare to explore. Way of the Cross tells about God's providences in Mary's life and about a unique fulfillment of her childhood dream.

EVER GET DEPRESSED? by Katie Tonn. Pacific Press Publishing Association, Mountain View, California. $50.

Depression affects everyone sometime in life—whether severely or lightly. This little book can help you learn the symptoms of depression and how to deal with them. It is a unique combination of the practical, balanced with the spiritual for emotional comfort.
