Andrews University Announcement

On Sabbath, April 15, all of our churches in North America will receive an offering for the support of Andrews University. This special attention is provided and warranted by the fact that our Lake Union center for higher education is also designated as a General Conference institution.

Andrews University serves the world. We should be grateful for this global base of support, and in view of resulting special benefits for the Lake Union, assume an even more liberal attitude ourselves.

In the Lake Union we are interested in a balanced educational plan which includes kindergarten through grade 16, and graduate school to follow. Through the recent reorganization in all of our conferences of the K-12 system, we believe those early years will be improved and better supported.

However, this must not be done without adequate support for the final years where our people prepare in a professional and technical way to serve their Lord and their fellowmen.

In a special way, please remember Andrews University on Sabbath, April 15.

COVER

"As [the student] goes on from truth to truth, obtaining clearer and brighter views of the wonderful laws of science and of nature, he becomes enraptured with the amazing exhibitions of God's love to man. He sees with intelligent eyes the perfection, knowledge, and wisdom of God . . ."—Testimonies for the Church, vol. 4, p. 414. As a lab instructor, Fely Ann Martin, a graduate student in biology at Andrews University, helps students see the inner workings of God's creation. THE HEART OF THE LAKE UNION

The Lord's Handmaiden

by Ernie Wendth

Versie Meisner learned at an early age the meaning of giving and sharing from a mother who felt this was what life was all about.

Born in Pauling, Ohio, and raised by very strict Methodist parents, Mrs. Meisner, a member of the Farmington Church, has been an Adventist for 54 of her 84 years.

She married when she was 18, raised four children and put them through church school.

For 10 years she took in "boys from the courts" to give them love and to help provide funds for her own children's education. She still takes care of elderly women in her home as she has for the past 35 years.

This "girl who never threw away a crust of bread" recycles many items for future use. She takes old unusable clothing and makes attractive area rugs which she sells for $20 each. She also makes and sells quilts.

All the funds earned from her many projects are used to buy food to put in baskets which are given to families in unfortunate circumstances.

When asked how she finds so many people to give the baskets to, she replied, "The Lord sends them." She says He never fails to send her at least one or two families a week.

The baskets are filled with enough food for one week and include some food for the soul. A copy of Steps to Christ and several books and pamphlets for children are included. Mrs. Meisner's special prayer is that the Lord will send her families with children.

Last Thanksgiving she provided 30 baskets at a total cost of $860—nearly all of these funds were from the sale of quilts.

In addition to making quilts and rugs, Mrs. Meisner cleans out abandoned houses and gives the furniture away.

She gets many requests from local hospitals for the colorful scrapbooks which she has been making for children's wards for many years.

This little woman, with a smile that lights up her face, is looking forward to her home in heaven while spreading a little bit of heaven around her here on earth.

Ernie Wendth is communication director of the Michigan Conference of Seventh-day Adventists.

Tezeta Gabriel

Jim Fox

Andrews University Biennial Offering—

Not Just a Gift

by Marilyn Thomsen

When the prison door swung shut on Tezeta Gabriel she might have wondered if she would ever get to Andrews University.

Tezeta wasn't a criminal. A native of Ethiopia, she had been working in Norway after graduating from Middle East College in order to save money to come to Andrews for graduate study.

Friends and the promise of higher wages attracted her to the Netherlands. But things didn't work out too well. In a legal tangle over getting a work permit she wound up in jail and was threatened with deportation.

Unlike Paul and Silas, Tezeta didn't sing in jail. She mended her coat pocket. Calmly. "I know what it means to trust in the Lord after that experience," she says, looking back over the course of events.

She knew she was innocent of deliberate wrongdoing, and maintained hope that things would work out for her to come to America.

Fourteen hours later Tezeta was released. The next day local newspapers took up an indignant cry over her treatment. Later she went back to Norway where she continued to work, save, and hope to get a student visa to the United States.

That proved none too easy, either. Tezeta had lived in two war-torn countries, and officials at the American consulate feared that she was really just running away from them and was not serious about attending Andrews.

The former elementary school teacher and girls' dean was serious, though. Serious enough to keep trying. The day before her Norwegian visa would have expired she was granted a student visa to the United States.

This June she will graduate with her master's degree in education. She hopes to go back to teach in Ethiopia.

New Englander Jim Fox, on the other hand, had no trouble getting to Andrews from northeastern Connecticut. But staying here required a little more effort.

Although he had a bachelor's degree in theology, Jim was not sponsored by a conference until his second year at the seminary. So he spent a lot of time on the ski slopes—as an instructor, that is—working 30 hours a week along with taking classes and being student minister at the Three Rivers, Michigan, Church.

Landscaper, auto mechanic, woodchopper, painter—Jim has worn these hats, too, during his seminary years.

But the grass-cutting job had the best fringe benefits. He's engaged to marry one of the kindly tenants who Marilyn Thomsen is staff writer for the public relations department at Andrews University.

Sharing joy, striving for excellence, searching for truth—Andrews University students seek to better their lives, and the lives of those around them.

brought him a cold drink one summer afternoon!

The seminary diploma he will receive in August will read Master of Divinity—not at all what he would have expected to eventually receive when he entered Atlantic Union College in 1970 as a non-Adventist and a chemistry major.

"For the first time in my life I found something I liked better than chemistry," he says. "There is an element of truth in the sciences, but to teach about the truth—that is fulfilling."

He looks forward to working full time for God as a minister in the Wisconsin Conference.

Tezeta and Jim are just two of the more than 700 graduate-level students enrolled at Andrews this year.

For many, getting an education has required perseverance and sacrifice. But they keep their sights on the pot of gold at the end of their personal rainbows.

The rewards they seek may not be purely financial. Of the 1977 graduates whose whereabouts are known, 46 percent are in denominational service, where their jobs range from architect in Berrien Springs to editor-in-chief of the Oriental Watchman Publishing House in India.

These recent graduates have joined the ranks of Andrews alumni engaged in service around the world.

It was to train such workers that Andrews' forerunner, Battle Creek College, was established more than a century ago.

"God has devised our college as an instrumentality for developing workers of whom He will not be ashamed," wrote Ellen White.

And to reach that "higher standard" of excellence to which Battle Creek College was called is still Andrews University's challenge today.

Andrews could not and should not hope to rival public universities in scope and size. But it can offer education of the body, mind and spirit that is valuable because it is different.

"We are always encouraged to analyze literature on the basis of its relationship to the Christian philosophy," says Ken Matthews, a graduate student in English.

Another master's student, Fely Ann Martin, finds a Christian viewpoint underlying her biology classes.

"My primary benefit from Andrews is the unique opportunity it gives me to examine the research and theories and practices in my field from a Biblical point of view," says doctoral student Claude Thomas.

"I'm seeking to develop a practical understanding and some practical application of what Ellen White calls 'the science of redemption,' which simply means learning how to use the principles of the word of God to solve the practical problems of life."

The strength of a university lies not only in worthwhile curricula, a competent faculty and good facilities.

At its heart is a group of well-prepared, inquiring, committed students. For this reason Andrews offers financial help to qualified students from around the world through scholarship and endowment funds.

"It is imperative that scholarship funds be augmented to meet the increasing needs of students in the United States and the world field for financial assistance," says Dr. Joseph G. Smoot, president of Andrews.

"Many of the students could not come to Andrews or continue their studies if funds were not available to assist them. The contribution that many are making as pastors, teachers, evangelists and alumni here at home and overseas is a testimony for the students you have helped in the past."

On April 15 you will have an opportunity to help graduate and seminary students by contributing to the Andrews biennial offering. All the money you give will strengthen scholarship funds whose sole purpose is to provide financial help to graduate-level students.

Please don't consider your contribution as just a gift. Think of it as an investment in the present and future of the church paying the highest dividends—enriched lives, leaders for the church, and citizens for the heavenly kingdom.

A Salute to Secretaries

by Beverly B. Hessel

Since the late 1800's secretaries have played an important role in the Seventh-day Adventist organization.

Did you know that among conference workers secretaries now comprise the second largest group, second only to ministers? And did you know that in 1978 secretaries rank second in the list of workers needed in all phases of denominational employment here in the North American Division?

In view of this it is altogether proper that during one week each year we pay tribute to this special segment of our working force.

National Secretaries Week was originated in 1952 by the National Secretaries Association (International), in cooperation with the U.S. Department of Commerce. Since that time the last full week of April has been set aside for the observance of Secretaries Week, and Wednesday of that week is highlighted as Secretaries Day.

This special week brings recognition to all secretaries and informs the public of the secretary's contribution to various aspects of community growth. It also serves to remind secretaries of the responsibilities they have to their profession.

Continuing education and professional development for secretaries are being encouraged within the Seventh-day Adventist Church as well as without. Each May several Seventh-day Adventist secretaries take the two-day Certified Professional Secretary examination in order to qualify for the coveted C.P.S. certificate.

A representative of this elite group is Ardythe Hovland of the Battle Creek Sanitarium Hospital, Battle Creek, Michigan. Because the examination was previously administered only on Friday and Saturday, no Seventh-day Adventists could participate.

Consequently Mrs. Hovland had to wait several years, until 1973, before a new ruling was passed allowing sabbatarians to take the test on Thursday and Friday. She received her C.P.S. award in 1974 while serving as an office coordinator for Iowa State University, Ames, Iowa.

In 1976 Mrs. Hovland was chosen Secretary of the Year for the Ames Chapter of the National Secretaries Association. In this connection she had several opportunities to witness for her faith both in person and on radio.

She says, "I am reminded of the text which says, 'The Lord will not withhold any good thing.' It pays to wait and let the Lord work out His plan in our lives."

It is hoped that many more Seventh-day Adventist secretaries will make preparation for distinguishing themselves by receiving this award.

The denomination needs trained young people to enter the secretarial profession now. In addition, a projection of full-time equivalent needs indicates that the demand for this type of worker will grow substantially during the next few years.

It must be mentioned also that the business knowledge and technical skills that are necessary for this career will prove helpful to the worker in her personal life as well.

And so once again we salute you, Seventh-day Adventist secretaries in the Lake Union, and pray that God will use you in a special way for the finishing of His work.

Beverly Hessel is the secretarial and office consultant for the Lake Union Conference.

CONFERENCE ON WOMEN '78 SCHEDULED APRIL 12 TO 16

"Decisions: Keys to a Woman's Development" is the theme of the second conference on women to be held at Andrews University April 12 to 16.

The conference, which includes films, a banquet and guest speakers, will spotlight the role of women in society.

This year's conference emphasizes how men and women can cooperate in their roles and function for mutual enhancement and understanding. Men are welcome to participate.

Coordinating the four-day conference are Donna Habenicht, assistant professor of educational psychology, and Dr. Mercedes Dyer, professor of counselor education.

"There are many different ways in which a woman can find fulfillment in life. We must not stereotype our own personal future. At the conference we will try to look at many different lifestyles for women," said Dr. Habenicht.

Reservations should be made by Monday, April 10. The fee is $15 on a noncredit basis; $25 for couples, noncredit, and $50 with one unit of graduate or undergraduate credit.

For those wishing to attend the banquet only, the cost is $3.50. Call (616) 471-3286 for reservations and more information.

GLAHS REORGANIZES

When the Great Lakes Adventist Health Services corporation (GLAHS) was formed in March 1977, L. Earl Laurence was appointed as its first president. Mr. Laurence directed the early organization and establishment of GLAHS.

In September 1977 he accepted a position with the National Institutes of Health as the executive director of the National Institute of Arthritis, Metabolism and Digestive Diseases.

Lowell Bock, president of the Lake Union Conference, assumed the responsibility as interim president of GLAHS, leading out in the planning for the future of the health care corporation in the Lake Union.

On February 9, 1978, the GLAHS board appointed Elder Bock as president of GLAHS, and Irwin C. Hansen as executive vice president.

Mr. Hansen, who is currently the president of Hinsdale Hospital, will continue to serve as the chief executive officer of Hinsdale Hospital, as well as operational executive vice president of GLAHS, where he will direct all operational aspects of the subsidiary institutions, Battle Creek Sanitarium Hospital, Hinsdale Hospital and Mid-American Health Services, Inc.

Joel Hass will continue to serve as vice president and secretary of GLAHS.

Lawrence Schalk will serve as vice president and treasurer.

In addition to these officers of the corporation, the board voted to ask Roy Wightman to serve as vice president for health ministries. Mr. Wightman is currently vice president for health education and rehabilitation at Hinsdale Hospital.

Vernon Small, president of Battle Creek Sanitarium Hospital, and Gary Whitworth, president of Mid-American Health Services, Inc., were named to vice presidential positions with GLAHS. Both Mr. Small and Mr. Whitworth will continue to serve as presidents of their respective organizations.

Several goals of GLAHS, which aim toward expansion of all aspects of medical/health work of the Seventh-day Adventist Church in the Lake Union, include: establishing hospitals in rural areas; establishing several nursing homes to supplement those already in Wisconsin; attracting health professionals into the four-state area, and strengthening the health education and health ministries of the church through the development of expanding health education outreach.

The board also voted to establish a professional medical/dental management division of GLAHS, which would be responsible for the management of GLAHS clinics such as the new Family Health Center in Athens, Michigan, and the GLAHS Family Health Center at Andrews University. This division would also sell services to physicians and dentists who are currently practicing in the Lake Union.

Encompassing the four-state area of Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Wisconsin, GLAHS is one of several Seventh-day Adventist corporations in the United States designed to provide coordination of health care that will lead to improved services and lower costs in Adventist medical institutions in the Lake Union.

GLAHS has organized itself around a small centralized staff, utilizing management of its subsidiary organizations—Battle Creek Sanitarium Hospital in Michigan, Hinsdale Hospital in Illinois and Mid-American Health Services, Inc. in Wisconsin—to deal with problems and lend assistance wherever necessary.

GLAHS believes that coordination of management functions of these existing institutions is superior to centralization; therefore, day-to-day operational decisions are made on the local level.

The corporate view of GLAHS is to expand and attract more qualified professionals in all aspects of health-care delivery, to expand the Adventist health ministries into all areas of the Lake Union, and offer the institutions improved services and lower costs.

5-DAY PLAN CONDUCTED AT PRAIRIE DU CHIEN

MID-AMERICAN—Richard Haas, chaplain of the Prairie Convalescent Center, assisted by Dr. R. Schuch of Prairie du Chien's Farrell Clinic, recently conducted a Five-Day Plan to Stop Smoking at the local memorial hospital.

The program was co-sponsored by the Prairie Convalescent Center and the local Seventh-day Adventist Church.

Forty-eight people participated in the clinic, meeting each evening for a session with Dr. Schuch and Chaplain Haas. Lectures, audiovisual presentations and group participation sessions are a part of the Five-Day Plan.

There were many favorable comments about the program from those who participated.

"This Five-Day Plan makes a lot of sense to me. The program is well done," said one participant.

Another person said: "This is the best program of its kind that I've ever seen. I like the positive concept of 'I choose not to smoke.'"

JOYCE COMBES COMES TO PREVENTIVE CARE

BATTLE CREEK—On February 1 Joyce Combes became the assistant director of preventive care at Battle Creek Sanitarium Hospital.

Formerly Miss Combes was director of Detroit's Better Living Center which is comprised of a medical-dental clinic and a community service and health education ministry.

Miss Combes received a B.S. degree in nursing from Columbia Union College in 1973, and a Master of Public Health from Loma Linda University in 1976.

Her duties now include developing and coordinating inpatient health education programs, assisting in public screening and other health education programs, and giving lectures to public groups on the subjects of nutrition, fitness and other related health education topics. She will also assume the responsibilities of the department director, Wayne Griffith, in his absence.

ROCKFORD OBSERVES 100TH ANNIVERSARY

Nostalgia filled the air as the members of the Rockford Church assembled on Sabbath morning, February 18, to reminisce about 100 years of meeting together in Rockford to adore and praise their Maker.

The first Seventh-day Adventist meetings took place 100 years ago in members homes and later in a room above a glove factory.

The first Seventh-day Adventist church was built in Rockford on Myott Street in 1923, largely with funds donated by the Price family who owned the glove factory where the members had been meeting. The present church building was constructed in 1964.

Ernest Lloyd, formerly editor of Our Little Friend for 25 years, and his family played an important part in the founding of the Rockford Church.

For two years while the church was without a pastor, Elder Lloyd's father, William, acted as head elder and speaker.

During this time he devoted all of his efforts and means to getting the book Bible Readings for the Home into the hands of the people in the Rockford area.

John Hayward, conference president, was the guest speaker for the anniversary worship service.

Congressman John B. Anderson (R-Ill.) was also present as an honored guest, and was given a copy of The Desire of Ages and a record album by Rockford's singing group, the Vesper Voices.

Special music for Sabbath School and church was provided by the Vesper Voices, and the history of the church was read by Irving Davidson.

Charlie Swanson of Chana presented an afternoon vesper program entitled "Take Time to Wonder"—a series of breathtaking nature slides.

A singing group from Andrews University, Higher Ground, directed by Allen Clark, presented special music in the afternoon.

The Rockford Seventh-day Adventist Church.

The Vesper Voices provided much of the special music for the day.

John Hayward, conference president, was guest speaker for the 100th anniversary celebration.

In the evening the 100th birthday party was held for the church, organized by Dick Karp, lay activities leader.

Complete with balloons and a huge birthday cake with 100 candles, the festivities were enjoyed by everyone. Jeanette Bridefor and Hattie Jaeger, members of the Rockford Church for 62 years, blew out the candles with a bellows.

A special message from Elder Lloyd, who resides in Deer Park, California, was read. In his message he said:

"Let me urge every youth in the church to be faithful to the teachings, to cultivate the best of physical habits, and to find a place in our worldwide work, in the medical, educational and publishing areas of service. God bless you, everyone, and keep us all faithful to the end, the glorious end."

Irving Davidson had highlighted the history of the church earlier in the day with the thought, "Today, we look backward with thankfulness to God and to our pioneers for the faithful work they have done in founding the church."

The members of the Rockford Church wish to continue to serve Him and their fellowmen even more faithfully until Jesus comes again—and we look forward to the time when we can go home with Him.

During the Sabbath School program they were interviewed by Roberta Crabtree, and told about their exciting work among the Mesquito Indians.

In the afternoon a slide program with narration and artifacts from Nicaragua revealed more of their mission life.

Working on a volunteer basis, the Oetmans not only maintained a mission to help spread the Gospel but provided a medical clinic at the mission, and a mobile medical clinic that traveled through the brush country on the western side of Nicaragua.

Delivering babies and suturing gashes from machete wounds were everyday chores of the nurses in the medical clinic.

Drilling an 80-foot well by hand during a dry spell was one of Harvey's tasks during their stay.

CHILDREN'S HEARTS FOR F.F.T.

"Train up a child in the way he should go" is significant to many phases of the Christian life, including giving. This is the philosophy of Valerie Crabtree, teacher in the Cicero Elementary School. In her first- and second-grade class she promotes giving for Faith for Today. Each child is given a heart to put on the bulletin board for Jesus for each dollar he brings for the Faith for Today offering. A total of $24 was given by the children in this project.

Jeremy Pate, the 15-month-old son of Pastor Don Pate of Sault Ste. Marie, drops coins into the jar for the future church school.

THAT THE COFFERS MAY BE FULL

Members of the Sault Ste. Marie Church are following the counsel of the Spirit of Prophecy and hope to build a school soon.

This determination to have a place to educate their children for God has been a primary concern of the members for some time, and they have devised a plan to "jar" their dreams into reality.

To keep the building project before the members, the Sault Ste. Marie Church uses a large glass jar.

The jar idea was conceived to follow the precedent set by Joash and Jehoiada in the Old Testament story of the temple restoration (2 Chronicles 24:4-14). Now every Sabbath the members plan to bring their offerings for the jar.

In addition to major gifts and allotments that are budgeted through the tithe envelopes, the members bring loose change to fill the jar. Some families have dedicated quarters and dimes, other loose change or small bills they receive during the week.

Small children beam as they drop their money into the jar, and as it fills it is a constant reminder for the members to work so that they can see their dreams fulfilled.

A total of more than $6,000 has already been raised through other means, and the people of Sault Ste. Marie pray for blessings that will help them build their school.

STORYBOOK FROM CITY DUMP SPARKS INTEREST

Years ago a very young girl made a visit to a city dump with an uncle who was a "collector."

There she found a children's storybook whose cover and a few of the stories were missing. Nevertheless she took the book home and it became one of her treasures to be read and reread.

The little girl grew up and became a mother. One day neighbors gave her some storybooks their children had outgrown.

As she read them to her children she happily discovered many of the same stories she had read as a girl in her own coverless book. She was happy to discover that the book's title was Uncle Arthur's Bedtime Stories.

Recently this young woman told her story to Nina and Jesse Hall, literature evangelists of Mio.

Her parents, she told them, had not been religious. Once in a while as a child she rode to Sunday School with some neighbors, but she traces her love for Jesus and her conversion to the influence of the lovely stories she found in that little torn book from the city dump.

She is sending her son to the local Adventist church school, and she now owns several other Adventist books. She and her husband have been reading Testimonies for the Church and she is very interested in Mrs. White. She is also seeking books on vegetarian cooking.

The end of this story is not yet known, but God works in "mysterious ways"—even to using the city dump—"his wonders to perform."

LITERATURE LEFT IN LAUNDROMAT LEADS TO BAPTISM

On a recent Sabbath morning Vivian Montie was baptized by Pastor Stuart Harrison and welcomed into the fellowship of the Oakwood Church in Melvindale.

Months before Mrs. Montie had picked up some books which appealed to her in a laundromat, and she sent in a card requesting further information, not knowing that the materials were published by the Adventist Church.

Shortly after this she moved to the Detroit area and the interest card was passed on to Pat Bruce, a literature evangelist serving the Detroit area.

Mr. Bruce visited Mrs. Montie and presented her with additional literature.

In the meantime Mrs. Montie's personal physician, Dr. Ruth Drapiza, who is a member of the Oakwood Church, had been counseling Mrs. Montie about a family problem as well as providing medical care.

"Dr. Ruth" invited Mrs. Montie to the "It Is Written" seminar held in Dearborn, Michigan, last fall.

As a result of this seminar, Mrs. Montie's interest in Adventist beliefs was intensified, and she accepted a further invitation from the doctor to attend follow-up studies by Pastor Harrison at the Oakwood Church.

She also participated in home studies, and her baptism was a culmination of the working of God's Holy Spirit through the ministry of His servants, and a testimony to the effectiveness and power of personal witness.

'MINNIE REMEMBERS'

A new color film calling attention to the needs of elderly people is now available from the conference department of health services.

"Minnie Remembers" is a short film—only five minutes in length—which is recommended for discussion programs, family life education, community services center workers and youth groups.

It is a good film to use in preparation for visits to homes for the elderly. Seeing the film before a visit can give a better understanding of older people.

The film brings to each viewer the touching truth of the fundamental human need for physical and emotional affirmation.

Call or write the department of health services to reserve "Minnie Remembers" to show to your own group.

In a recent communique from the General Conference department of lay activities, attention was given to Michigan's success in the World Service Crusade.

They noted that Michigan had again raised more than any other local conference and gave tribute to the late W. M. Buckman and his loyal members in the conference.

This is the second time in history that Michigan has passed the $400,000 mark in Ingathering. In 1974 the conference exceeded the goal by $14.66. In the campaign just completed the total amount raised was $401,371.94.

Michigan Adventists can be proud of this achievement and look forward to continuing success in the future.

Conference officials also expressed appreciation for the efforts of Jean Dickerson, secretary to Elder Buckman, who kept the department functioning during the part of the campaign when Elder Buckman was hospitalized.

Sherry Hurt, a junior from Berrien Springs, left; Milford Barron, and Rick Gillett, a senior from Battle Creek, talk about careers.

CAREER DAY HELD AT ADELPHIAN ACADEMY

A retired General Motors executive, Milford Barron of Grand Blanc, the man largely responsible for Adelpian Academy's new student industry, was the keynote speaker for the academy's Career Day, 1978.

Milford Barron told the students there is no substitute for work, whatever career one may choose, and that success is being happy in what you are doing.

"The answer to cancer may be in this room," Mr. Barron said, urging the youth to set high goals for themselves.

He pointed out that no obstacle is too great, citing such unpromising beginnings and physical handicaps as those of Thomas Edison and Helen Keller.

Prior to his retirement in 1974, Mr. Barron was the executive in charge of Logistics, Procurement and Production Control of the General Motors Corporation.

Even before his retirement he was working on inventions that have benefited skin grafting and open heart surgery. He is presently perfecting a device that will greatly aid cornea transplants.

Mr. Barron was instrumental in arranging for the packaging operation at the mill that is now providing work for academy students and Holly eighth-graders.

Arrangements for the packaging operation were made after mill manager, James Metzger, had been introduced to Mr. Barron by Dick Smith, Fenton Church member and father of two academy boys.

Career Day, 1978 brought to Adelpian students an introduction to a wide variety of careers, ranging from being an architect or artist to pilot or park ranger.

Other categories included medicine, education, construction, business, communication and the ministry.

Thirty men and women from as many careers presented an overview of their professions during several class periods throughout the day. Several Holly business and professional people participated, and some came from as far away as Battle Creek and Berrien Springs.

NEWS NOTE

• On Sabbath, December 17, a district meeting was held in the Kenosha Church. The Racine and Raymond churches also participated in this program. An inspirational musical program presented by the Racine Choir, the Raymond men's quartet and women's trio were appreciated by everyone. A fellowship dinner was held afterward in the church.

How to turn cold hard cash into warmth and love.

Give to the Andrews University Seminary and Graduate School Scholarship Fund, April 15, 1978.

Your money will be turned into knowledge and training that will bring warmth and love to people all over the world.

You see, Andrews University is made up of students from every union in North America and every division around the world, gathered together to study for service in Adventist Missions and here at home. From vast medical complexes to one room school houses. They are ready to serve.

But without your assistance, many dedicated men and women, due to financial need, would be unable to continue their education.

When you give, you'll get a return on your money no bank or stock can claim: you'll be bringing to our troubled world sorely needed missionaries, ministers, managers, nurses, mechanics, architects, engineers, teachers and other needed skills.

And on this earth, that's about as warm and human a thing cold hard cash can do.

ADVENTISTS SUGGEST CHANGE IN WELFARE REFORM ACT

Seventh-day Adventist church

officials are concerned about one section of the Welfare Reform Act now before Congress. Under the proposed bill, a person must be willing to take any job available as a condition for receiving welfare. It includes no provision for those who turn down a job for religious reasons. The denomination's religious liberty department has been working with sponsors of the bill to include in the legislative history of the bill some indication that the work requirement provision is not intended to conflict with religious freedoms.
