A Birthday and a Paradox

COVER

Nations can choose their birthdays.

The United States of America could have chosen as its date of birth March 1, 1781, the day on which the Articles of Confederation—our first governing document—went into effect.

Or September 17, 1787, the date of the signing of the federal Constitution.

Or—just as logically—April 30, 1789, the day George Washington was sworn in as the first President of the United States.

But instead our Founding Fathers chose July 4, 1776, the day of the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

That choice speaks clearly of the priorities.

It is clear that we as a nation honor far more than constitutions or presidents the “truths” which the Declaration of Independence so eloquently holds to be self-evident: “That all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights; that among these are Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness; . . .”

“Governments are instituted among men,” said the Declaration of Independence to “secure these rights.” So government is simply a means to a greater end—the achievement and protection of the unalienable rights of its citizens.

When the framers of the Constitution turned to the challenge of writing this document for our new nation, they naturally became preoccupied with means or instruments by which the new government would function. As they completed the work, however, they became aware that the charter they had so carefully written was incomplete.

They had taken for granted some basic values which needed to be made explicit before the document could be fully acceptable.

Thus, the first 10 amendments to the Constitution were adopted. Here was set forth a “bill of rights,” rights which the federal government was not to abridge, rights which were viewed as fundamental in a free society.

The first amendment guaranteed freedom of speech and press and the free exercise of religion.

And so the rights of the individual religious conscience were assured. But were they?

Ask Debra Nieves of Chicago who recently lost her job at the Belmont National Bank because her conscience dictated that she could not work on the Sabbath.

Or ask Larry Stark, father of four, who is a test driver for Chrysler Corporation. His job is now threatened because his conscience will not allow him to continue his membership in a labor union.

Or ask hundreds more who in America have not experienced the rights to exercise their religious conscience.

A paradox? Yes, but not surprising, really.

A study of prophecy—especially Revelation 13 and the closing chapters of The Great Controversy—leave no doubt that just before Christ returns to the earth that a great paradox will exist—a paradox between the rights guaranteed by the federal Constitution and the opposing enforcement of civil authority.

July 4, 1978. Our nation’s 202nd birthday. A day to remember and celebrate independence—our freedom to exercise our religious convictions.

But also a day on which we must prayerfully meditate. Then look up—not to the darkening sky filled with cascading rainbows of exploding color—but in praise to our soon-coming Saviour, for “our redemption draweth nigh.”

Clockwise from left: Jim Barley was a member of the Big Ten Champion basketball team in 1954; He celebrated the regional championship at Scottsburg High School in April 1978, and was baptized by Elder Dan Wandersleben on April 15.

THE HEART OF THE LAKE UNION

Love Wins the Coach

by Cliff Hoffman

Anybody who lives in Indiana knows what "Hoosier mania" means. In the spring of each year while the state high school basketball tournament is being played, there just isn't anything more important than high school basketball. In Indiana any school, no matter how small, has a chance to become state champ.

For the last 21 years Jim Barley has been in the center of it all. During this time he has been a high school basketball coach, and a very successful one—he has compiled a record of 275 wins and 148 losses.

His teams have won nine holiday tourney championships, one county championship, three conference championships, four sectional and two regional championships. Jim's 1969 team was undefeated during the regular season and was ranked fifth in the state by the Associated Press.

Jim became interested in basketball before he entered high school in Marion, Indiana. While playing basketball at the Marion High School he was the first player in Marion and Grant County to score 1,000 points. In 1952, his senior year in high school, he was named a member of the Indiana All-Star Team. He then went on to Indiana University where he played for three years. He was a member of I.U.'s 1954 Big Ten Champion Basketball Team.

But Coach Barley's home was different from the those of the other coaches in the state. His wife, Mary, was a faithful member of the Scottsburg Seventh-day Adventist Church. On April 15, 1978, Mary saw her coach husband baptized and become a member of the Adventist Church.

How did this take place? Mary says she had little to do with it. She said she tried to live what she believed and she stood firm for those principles. Mary gives much of the credit to a fellow church member, Clarence Fahle, who patiently gave many Bible studies to Jim.

But something else happened to warm Jim's heart to the church. Mary spent last fall and winter teaching in Beirut, Lebanon. While she was gone, two of Mary's fellow church members, Violet Davis and Joyce Zollman, demonstrated real Christian love for Jim.

They prepared many hot meals for him. They invited him to their homes for Thanksgiving and Christmas to enjoy the holidays with their families. They visited him during a confinement in the hospital and maintained telephone communication with him to encourage him during Mary's absence.

Since becoming a Seventh-day Adventist Jim has had to retire from the coaching profession. Jim and Mary have already moved to the country where he can enjoy many things that country living offers—gardening, fishing, biking, hiking and running. He plans to take a very active part in the church and he will continue his regular classroom activities at school.

Jim is a many-talented person and using these talents in God's service could result in some exciting things for the Scottsburg Church.

The coach told his boys many times that it takes teamwork to win ball games. As Mary, Clarence Fahle, Violet Davis and Joyce Zollman can testify, it takes real teamwork to win a person for Christ.

Waiting for the Celebration

by Marilyn Thomsen

Afternoons were lazy that summer in France. During the mornings we struggled through 22 different kinds of verb conjugations, mispronounced a sizeable portion of our vocabulary, and tried valiantly to decipher the biography of Victor Hugo in French.

But when afternoon came, we were free. Oh, we were supposed to do homework of course, and we were quite faithful about it. But there was plenty of time left over for fun.

This particular afternoon was one of the warm, sunny ones that made the French-Swiss border country such a delightful place to be in July. From the walkway between the administration building and the new boys' dorm we could look down the mountainside and see Geneva with its famous Jet d'Eau fanning out like a sail over Lake Lemman. I hadn't been at Collonges two weeks yet, but I'd already come to love the city John Calvin reformed.

School life had been normal that morning. Bastille Day, the French national holiday, was still two weeks away, and recreation night wasn't until Thursday.

To the 30 Americans in school, though, it wasn't just another day. Whether we were in Collonges or Cucamonga, it was still the Fourth of July.

Ever since I could remember, Independence Day had been special. In a way it was my favorite holiday, though it hadn't always been so. I first remember celebrating it when I was about three. The continual "bang!" of the fireworks scared me so badly that my grandmother had to carry me back to the car, bury my head in her lap and cover both my ears.

By the time I was seven, the big thing about Independence Day was the sparklers we lit. At 12 the Fourth of July was a picnic, and at 14 it was sitting on a blanket in the park watching the aerial display. (I still covered my ears, but I'd learned to enjoy the fountains of colored light.)

Now I was 19, newly engaged, and farther away from home by myself than I'd ever been before. I missed my fiance, Calvin, who was 6,000 miles away, and was experiencing culture shock and a sense of wonderment at the new surroundings.

I was sitting on the steps of the dorm when a group of my fellow patriots packed themselves into a waiting car.

Instantly I was alerted to the action. "Where are you going?" I asked one of them.

"Geneva. They're having a Fourth of July festival for all the Americans there. There'll be fireworks over the lake tonight, too." Linda sounded excited.

"Hey, I want to go!" I hated to miss anything out of the ordinary.

"This car's already full. Maybe you can find a ride with someone else." She slammed the door and the car sped off.

The brief conversation left my mind spinning and my heart yearning for the city. How could I get to Geneva? And even if I could, how could I get back before the dorm closed? I had heard that you could go anywhere you wished during the daytime, but that the doors shut tight at 10 P.M. If you couldn't get in and were out all night you were thrown out of school.

In retrospect I think the story was apocryphal or at least garbled (the others made it back all right), but it made me think twice nonetheless.

The afternoon dragged on. I went to the library in search of the newest international edition of Time magazine. I wrote a letter to Calvin. I didn't go to Geneva.

As darkness fell slowly and the twilight settled over the lake below, I hiked to one of the highest spots on campus, sat down and waited for the fireworks to begin.

Stars began to appear in the canopy overhead. I waited as long as I could before dorm closing time. Finally I could wait no longer.

Disappointed, I made my way down the path to the girls' dorm and climbed the three flights of stairs to my room.

And then, to my delight (and frustration!) a blaze of pink lit up the sky. I raced to the window and peered outside. The sparkle filtered through the trees which blocked the view.

My roommate, Janice, and I ran upstairs to the highest room in the dorm and pounded on the door. "Hello Marie. Can we come in?"

Marie opened the door. "The fireworks have started! We can't see well enough from our room."

Janice rolled up the shade and we leaned out the window as far as we dared. The trees were still in the way but our imaginations filled in the missing details.

The patriot in me was excited. Though I was far from my homeland, the Fourth of July had come to me.

I've watched fireworks from the steps of my apartment and the bank of a river since then, but I'm not sure they've ever meant so much as on the Wednesday night in France when there were a taste of home. And as I remember that day now, I picture myself standing on earth's highest peak, gazing toward the Promised Land. Your people are waiting for the celebration, Lord. When is it going to start?

Sometimes when I'm alone in my room, a flash of glory shines in my window. I rush towards it. I can't see it dimly—through a glass darkly. But it's enough for now.

Four more Independence Days have come and gone and I remain far from Home. But still God calls me to a better country—a heavenly one.

He wants the celebration to begin too.

CONSTANTINE EXHIBITS IN RUMANIA

Gregory J. Constantine, chairman of Andrews University's art department, left for Bucharest, Rumania, on May 30, to exhibit his paintings at the Galleria Rotonda.

The one-man show is the result of an invitation from the Rumanian government.

Mr. Constantine, who is of Rumanian descent, will display paintings of well-known Rumanian and American personalities. Included will be Rumania's President Nicolae Ceausescu, tennis star Ilie Nastase, gymnast Nadia Comaneci and sculptor Constantin Brancusi, along with Americans such as Walter Cronkite, Senator Edward M. Kennedy and Muhammad Ali.

All of the paintings are done in his unique "television" style and are adapted from photographs of the subjects in characteristic poses.

Mr. Constantine's technique involves applying paint directly from the tube onto the canvas in horizontal lines of random length. Greens, blues, reds and other colors may appear anywhere in the painting. The resulting painting shows the subject as it would appear on a television screen.

Since he developed the technique four years ago, Mr. Constantine has done about 80 paintings of television images. He has exhibited them in New York; Chicago; Kansas City, Missouri; South Bend, Indiana, and St. Joseph, Michigan.

The Rumanian exhibition will last two and a half weeks, beginning on June 12.

Later in the summer Mr. Constantine plans to install an 8-by-16-foot mural at the Seventh-day Adventist Radio, Television and Film Center in Newbury Park, California, featuring pioneers in Adventist religious broadcasting.

MISSION INSTITUTE BEGINS

Andrews University's Institute of World Mission got underway on June 12 with a training and orientation session for Seventh-day Adventist families bound for overseas mission service, according to Dr. Werner K. Vyhmeister, associate professor of mission.

The session, which runs until July 22, is designed to acquaint people who are under appointment as missionaries with the realities of mission life and the adjustment to other cultures.

The institute is sponsored by the General Conference and is the official training center for all Adventist missionaries.

Among the 112 persons enrolled in the course are pastors, plant maintenance personnel, teachers, administrators, physicians, dentists, nurses and even a librarian, said Madeline Johnston of the institute.

More than 20 developing nations in several parts of the world will be receiving missionaries from the institute, including Zaire, Zambia, Tanzania, Malawi, Sierre Leone and Ethiopia in Africa.

Countries in South America, the Caribbean, Asia and the Middle East are also on the list of destinations for institute graduates, whose terms of service will range from two to five years.

This summer's session is being taught by Dr. Vyhmeister and Dr. Russell L. Staples, also an associate professor of mission.

ANDREWS ACADEMY STUDENT AWARDS PRESENTED

Several members of Andrews Academy's class of 1978 were singled out for special honors at the class night celebration, June 1.

Recipients of the Principal's Award for consideration, straightforwardness, openness to reason and an excellent spirit were Sharon Lang and Art Munar. Art has just finished a term as president of the academy's student association.

Special recognition for care in meeting school appointments was given to Cynthia Carlsen, Dianna Carlsen, Connie Hamlin, Keith Nieb, Sung Rae Shin and Devin Zimmerman. The six students had compiled an outstanding record of class attendance, said Dr. Richard T. Orrison, principal.

The Thomas A. Umek Memorial Award for demonstrating integrity and inspiration in sports participation went to Roger Vitrano.

Elise Stephan was given the Good Citizenship Award by the Algonquin Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The American Youth Foundation Award was presented to Yvonne Darby and Kevin Clayton.

Judy Van Duinen and Bryan Garrett were cited for special contributions to the school's program. The pair were recognized for their initiative and leadership qualities. Bryan is president of the class.

As a result of his score on the National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test, Ron Stout was recognized as a National Merit Commended Scholar, and was given a scholarship by Andrews University. Keith Parris won recognition as a National Merit Scholarship Program finalist.

Andrews University also presented scholarships to Cynthia Carlsen, Bevin Clayton, Sharon Dalton, Kris Denton, Anita Klimes, Donald McAlexander, Alfred Minisee, Eric Shepperd, Sung Rae Shin, Judy Van Duinen, Roger Vitrano and Devin Zimmerman.

The University of Michigan Regents-Alumni Scholar Award went to Anita Klimes.

The senior cited for achieving the highest academic standing in the class was Devin Zimmerman.

'THE NICEST PEOPLE IN THE WORLD'

MID-AMERICAN—On May 15, Bethel Convalescent Center volunteers were honored at a luncheon. Guest speaker for the event was Gloria Bocanner, volunteer coordinator for Wood County, Wisconsin.

"Volunteers are the nicest people in the world," Mrs. Bocanner told the group. "They never ask 'How much will I get?' only 'What can I give?'"

The volunteer program was organized at Bethel Convalescent Center in 1958 with six charter volunteers. During the last 20 years the number of volunteers has increased tenfold. Erma Giese, one of the original six volunteers, is still associated with the program at Bethel and was honored at the luncheon.

Special plaques were presented to Tony and Goldie Taupalik who, during a 20-year period, have spent a total of 8,766 hours at Bethel. Not included in this total are the times they have taken residents fishing or invited them to their home.

Tony and Goldie spend every Sunday afternoon at Bethel visiting the residents, providing music and serving refreshments.

Services provided by the volunteers include birthday parties, sing-alongs, craft classes, religious services, visiting with residents, and accompanying them on field trips and other outings.

RESIDENTS ROLL IN DOLLARS FOR HEART FUND

Three Mid-American nursing homes, Bethel Convalescent Center, Lancaster Nursing Home and River Pines Community Health Center, joined approximately 900 other facilities across the United States in conducting Rock 'n' Roll Jamborees to raise funds for the American Heart Association.

Although guidelines for conducting the jamborees were furnished by the Wisconsin Association of Nursing Homes, each facility planned and organized its own event.

Leading the 60 participating homes in Wisconsin, Bethel Convalescent Center's 80 residents raised more than $2,000. Sponsored by local merchants, friends and employees, residents rocked a total of 47 hours and rolled 131 miles in their wheelchairs.

Some residents participated in an outdoor walk-a-thon and as a group, logged 117 miles.

Ninth- and tenth-grade students from Bethel Junior Academy and members of the Indian Hill Pathfinder Club were among those who volunteered to solicit pledges from local sponsors.

Lancaster radio station WGLR broadcast from Lancaster Nursing Home during its Rock 'n' Roll Jamboree.

Spot announcements by the radio station gave a brief biography about each of the 30 residents who volunteered to rock or roll. Following each announcement, friends and relatives of the resident featured were invited to sponsor him.

Taking pledges on a direct telephone line installed specifically for the event, were honorary co-chairmen of the jamboree, Bud Jensen and Tom McCarville, former heart-surgery patients. Lancaster's goal of $500 was nearly tripled. They raised more than $1,200.

"I do not think I could be happier if the money were my own," commented Ethel Heibel, River Pines Resident Council vice chairman, when a final total of more than $1,700 was announced—more than three times the average $500 raised by participating nursing homes throughout the United States.

Students from the University of Wisconsin/Stevens Point volunteered to solicit sponsors from local merchants. Service clubs and many River Pines employees also sponsored residents.

One local merchant offered to sponsor a resident who was a former classmate. Although the resident had not originally planned to participate, she decided to rise to the challenge presented by her friend, and she was happy she had a part in making the jamboree a success.

Success of the Rock 'n' Roll Jamboree cannot be measured only in terms of funds raised to aid in the fight against America's number one killer, heart disease. Through participation in the jamboree, residents have realized they can be a vital part of a community program.

CARE TO GO CAMPING?

The first two camp-outs of the Illini Outdoor Club have taken place during good weather, and there has been a good turnout.

The May camp-out at Moraine View State Park near Normal was directed by Tom Bull, club president. After Sabbath School and church a potluck dinner was enjoyed by everyone. Many of the campers went for a long afternoon hike, and the evening was spent around the campfire visiting, cooking supper and ending the Sabbath with a short vesper service.

The next camp-out will be held July 14 to 16 at Indiana Dunes State Park. You are invited for the whole weekend, but if that is not possible, come and enjoy the Sabbath with us.

For information about the camp-outs, call Pauline Bull, (312) 852-7489.

COME TO LITTLE GRASSY

The lake from which Little Grassy Lake Adventist Camp borrows its name is an important part of all camp life. Morning worship services and evening campfire programs are held on its shores, swimming and diving classes are available, canoes and motorboats glide over its surface, and beautiful red and orange sunrises reflect off its surface each day. Come this summer to camp and be a part of the lake. Send your application today to the Youth Department, Box 89, Brookfield, IL 60513.

EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS HELD IN GALESBURG

Following the recent evangelistic campaign held by new conference evangelist Elder Dan Schiffbauer in the Galesburg Church, three people were baptized on May 8. Shown with William Kromminga, pastor, and Dan Schiffbauer, evangelist, are Star Beller, Harold Regula and Ruth DeWitt.

Sharon Anderson won the grand prize.

HINSDALE GIRL WINS AMATEUR HOUR GRAND PRIZE

Sharon Anderson of Hinsdale, a junior at Broadview Academy, won the grand prize during the Amateur Hour held on Saturday evening, April 8, during this year's alumni weekend. Miss Anderson played a flute solo entitled "Concertino."

Elder William Fitch, former Bible teacher and pastor at Broadview, and now at Platte Valley Academy in Nebraska, was guest speaker for the weekend.

Girls from the academy Motet sang "Blue Hawaii" as the theme for the Amateur Hour.

After the Sabbath morning sermon, the annual alumni potluck was held in the gymnasium.

Other activities during the weekend were a musical presentation by the Otsego Singers of Michigan and an alumni-versus-seniors basketball game.

NEW MEMBERS IN DECATUR

Several baptisms have taken place in the Decatur Church recently.

On February 25 Elnora Johnson was baptized. On March 4 Emma Cullumber, who had been a member of the Adventist Church many years ago, was accepted into membership on profession of faith. Six young people joined the Decatur Church on May 6: Misty Arnold, Danny Bledsaw, David Bolduc, Mike Dalton, Ricky Kramer and LaDonna Lourash.

STRESS IS TOPIC OF SEMINAR

"The Stress of Relationships" was the topic for the fourth Full Life Seminar held at the Hinsdale Church, March 31 and April 1.

More than 100 people registered for the two-day seminar which was designed to help participants deal with stress and stressful relationships through Christian principles.

Featured speakers for the seminar included Dr. Ruth Murdoch, professor of educational psychology at Andrews University; Dr. Elden Chalmers, professor of pastoral care and nurture at Andrews University, and Esther Chalmers, a lecturer on family relationships.

Participants were given a self-evaluating questionnaire at the seminar to help them discover how stress affects their relationships with others.

There was a panel discussion on topics asked in the group sessions and throughout the seminar.

Those who participated in the panel discussion in addition to the speakers were Dr. Charles Anderson, chief of the department of psychiatry; Dr. Walter Thompson, general surgeon, and Martin Feldbush, chaplain, all of Hinsdale Sanitarium and Hospital.

A vegetarian meal was served on Sabbath, April 1, to the participants, and children's programs were provided throughout the day.

Many favorable comments were received from the more than 80 non-Adventists who attended.

One person said: "This was my first seminar. I was very pleased with the warmth and caring of all the people involved in the seminar, not just the speakers."

Another said, "It's my first experience to attend such sessions, and so I have learned a lot of things that I have not read or heard before."

The seminar, sponsored by both the Hinsdale Church and Hinsdale Sanitarium and Hospital, was a series in a continuing effort to offer practical Christian solutions to everyday life.

A follow-up of the seminar is being conducted Wednesday evenings.

John Hernandez, a sophomore, is one of the students who has stayed at Broadview Academy this summer to work for the Academy Gardens Corporation.

GARDENING COMES TO BROADVIEW

A new project has begun at Broadview Academy. Due to the growing concern about the high cost of education and the need for more work opportunities—especially for young people under 16—the Academy Gardens Corporation came into being this spring.

With the leadership of several Adventist laymen, the corporation hopes to eventually furnish work for as many as 30 to 40 students. Nine students have already been hired; six of them work 40 hours per week.

Directed by Mark Engelhart and Don Thiry, who are both experienced in operating truck farms or in farm management, the corporation has leased 40 acres from Broadview for cultivation.

The first step in the project was to build a small greenhouse where seedlings and other plants were started before setting them out this spring.

A small stand will also be operated this summer on the northwest corner of the academy on Keslinger Road, just a few feet beyond the main entrance.

Among the vegetables which will be available for sale are broccoli, carrots, corn, cucumbers, lettuce, melons, onions, peppers, radishes, squash and tomatoes. Not only will vegetables be sold at the stand, but many vegetables will be available for people to pick.

Arthur Nelson, principal, said, "I am very excited about this program. It fulfills two needs. First it gives employment for students under 16 years of age, and second, it gives students an opportunity to gain some agricultural experience."

18 PEOPLE CHOOSE A NEW LIFE

Eighteen people became members of the family of God by baptism or profession of faith at the Richmond Church on Sabbath, May 20.

Evangelist Lester Carney, ministerial secretary of the Indiana Conference, began the New Life Crusade meetings on April 21 and continued until May 14.

Four nights of informal, intensive review of the doctrinal subjects followed. Elder Don Dronen of the Richmond Church assisted throughout the series.

Special music programs were provided by the Blessed Hope Singers of Marion, Indiana; the New Communion Singers of Indianapolis; the Keynotes from Indiana Academy, and local members and friends. Barbara Fisher was in charge of the music and directed the congregational singing.

A special feature enjoyed by everyone were the Bible lands travelogue films and narrations by Evangelist Carney. He had taken the pictures, and enlarged copies with brief descriptions were given to each person who attended. Other films presented were "The Power of the Resurrection" and "The Miracle of Pitcairn."

TRASH-A-THON FOR FAITH FOR TODAY

The students of Pleasantview Elementary School, West Lafayette, Indiana, participated in a novel project to reach their goal for Faith for Today. Sixty percent of the students volunteered to donate four hours on a Sunday morning to pick up trash along the country roads near the school. Students acquiring five or more sponsors were treated to a picnic.

Following the baptismal service and Evangelist Carney's sermon entitled "Prescription for Perfection" a fellowship dinner was enjoyed at a local park.

Another baptism will be held May 27 and it is hoped that there will soon be a total of 30 baptisms.

ROGER BOTHWELL FEATURED AT YOUTH MEETINGS

Roger Bothwell

"An outstanding youth speaker," is the way Lester Rilea, conference youth director, describes his guest for the youth and teen programs at this year's camp meeting.

Roger Bothwell, a pastor from Des Moines, Iowa, is a graduate of Andrews University, a former missionary to the Adventist college in Uganda, and the former pastor of the Georgia-Cumberland Academy Church.

He will present a series of talks to the youth at their regular evening meetings and in the morning to the teens.

Another feature of the camp-meeting program for the youth will be the appearance of the Andrews University Gymnics from the opening meeting on Thursday, July 20, through Wednesday, July 26.

The Gymnics will give a special demonstration on Sunday after the evening meeting for everyone. They will also conduct health emphases programs for the youth, be in charge of the youth Sabbath School on July 22 and meet other appointments as their program allows.

BROWNSBURG NEWS

On May 13 four young people were baptized in the Brownsburg Church's new baptistry which was installed last fall. Fourteen new members have joined the church during the past year.

Carpeting was installed in the basement, Sabbath School rooms and the balcony, a new public-address system was purchased and the kitchen has been remodeled.

Each week the district pastor, Carroll Lawson, conducts a training class for church members to learn how to give Bible studies. These members also receive on-the-job training because they accompany Elder Lawson when he gives a study.

A new parking lot is being developed on the property adjacent to the church on the east to provide adequate parking for everyone.

SHILOH ACADEMY ACCREDITED BY N.C.A.

We are pleased to announce that

After being introduced to delegates at the recent constituency meeting, Duane Barnett, new principal of Adelpian Academy, discusses education needs with Elder Kenneth Hutchins, conference educational superintendent.

DUANE BARNETT IS NAMED PRINCIPAL FOR ADELPHIAN ACADEMY

Duane Barnett, a former Michigan educational worker and currently finishing six years service as principal of Cedar Brook Academy, Rehoboth, Massachusetts, has accepted the position of principal of Adelpian Academy.

Elder Barnett takes the place of Erich Bekowies who has asked to be relieved of the duties of principal.

Elder Barnett has been in educational work for the last 17 years; he began his teaching career at Grand Ledge Elementary School where he served four years. Then he taught two years at the Jackson school before moving to Lincoln, Nebraska. After five years with the church school there he became principal at Cedar Brook.

Elder Barnett and his wife, Lila Ann, have four children; two of them are married and two are still at home. Dennis lives in Lincoln, Nebraska, and Delmar is a junior theology student at Atlantic Union College in Massachusetts. DeAnn will be an academy sophomore next fall, and David will enter the sixth grade.

The Barnetts hope to move early in July and are looking forward to seeing old friends and making new ones at camp meeting.

SKYDIVERS JUMP AT WOODLAND SCHOOL

Three skydivers jumped onto the grounds of the Woodland Church School in Coldwater on May 17. One of the men, Don Carpenter, was three-time national skydiving champion and twice world champion. Mr. Carpenter and the other two jumpers belong to the Austin Lake Skydiver's Club in Kalamazoo.

One week before the jump another of the men, Jack Tillitson Sr., visited the school to show the skydiving equipment to the children.

The demonstration jump was planned and organized by Mr. Tillitson for his two children, Jack Jr. and Lynette, and their fellow students who attend the church school.

The skydivers jumped from 5,600 feet, linked up, then rode their parachutes down to the school grounds where students and teachers were waiting.

P.R. BY CANDLELIGHT

Four vegetarian candlelight suppers were recently held for businessmen, community friends and neighbors of the Holland Church.

Between 18 and 35 persons attended each occasion. Among them were three radio announcers, the director of the community services pool and their husbands and wives. Mrs. Jerry Jablonski, wife of the Holland pastor, gave a slide presentation of the local, state and worldwide community services work of the Adventist Church.

As a follow-up, a three-night cooking school and a stop-smoking clinic were scheduled and announced at the dinners.

65TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATED

According to an item in a recent church newsletter, February 15, 1978, was the 65th anniversary of George and Vina Kern's wedding which took place in the logging town of Lake City. George and "his girl," Vina, had been friends since earliest school days and as working adults ended up at a logging camp owned by a Seventh-day Adventist. Vina found work there as a cook.

When the couple decided to marry, the millwright at the camp loaned them his sleigh, and they drove the 20 miles to Lake City for the ceremony and back to their cabin at the camp on the same day. Mr. Kern recalls that the couple were able to live "handsomely" on $9 a week.

In 1925 the Kerns moved to Grand Rapids where Mr. Kerns went to work in a furniture factory. Later they received Bible studies and in 1939 joined the church. They have been faithful members ever since.

GARDEN OF EATIN' NOW OPEN

The Garden of Eatin', a health-food store in Frankenmuth, has been opened by Vassar church members Ray and Sally Borchard. They sell natural foods, which they describe as those having no sugars, no artificial flavorings, no preservatives or additives. They also sell meat substitutes, soybeans, cheeses without salt and rennet, eggless mayonnaise, sugar- and caffeine-free drinks and numerous other food items. Special orders will be taken with delivery promised within a two-week period, the owners say. A feature of the store will be a "recipe trade" with tested recipes being posted for customers to copy. The store is an outgrowth of a supply center the Borchards' had in their home which became too small to meet the demands. The Borchards' store, located on 995 South Main Street, will be open on Sundays from 11 A.M. to 5 P.M.

THERE'S A LITTLE RED SCHOOLHOUSE

Karl Dickerson's heart is with the little red school at Reese. At least this was the theme of a recent article in the Saginaw News which featured the Vassar Church School.

The school is one of the last little, red, brick, one-room schools still open in the area, the paper reported. Mr. Dickerson said he attended "a school like this," and prefers a small school.

A native of Grand Rapids, Mr. Dickerson is in his 10th year of teaching. He has spent 13 years as a student or teacher in either one- or two-room schools.

Seventeen students attended school this past year.

During recess the pupils can romp in a rural setting on nearly an acre of land surrounded by maple trees.

Inside the schoolhouse, which was built about 1879, pictures of America's presidents line the walls. The school still has old-fashioned desks with ink wells.

The schoolhouse has many traditions. One of Mr. Dickerson's current students is Vincent Wilson, 12, whose mother was one of the first graduates of the school.

Mr. Dickerson, who has three children of his own, says he will match his students against any others in academic accomplishment.

"I administered an Iowa Basic Test to 11 of the older children, and eight of them scored above average. That's good," Mr. Dickerson concluded.

REGIONAL MEETINGS SCHEDULED

Two outstanding weekends are planned as regional meetings for the Wisconsin Conference. The first weekend is July 28 to 30 at Wisconsin Academy at Columbus, Wisconsin, and the second, August 3 to 6 at Camp Wahdoon near Chetek, Wisconsin.

"Although church members will be disappointed that there will be no general 10-day camp meeting in Wisconsin in 1978," stated Robert Dale, conference president, "members and friends will have the opportunity to hear spiritual messages from church leaders and to fellowship with members throughout the conference on these weekends."

Speakers the first weekend will include N. R. Dower, General Conference ministerial association secretary; A. V. Pinkney, associate temperance director of the General Conference; Fordyce Detamore, Voice of Prophecy evangelist, and R. H. Carter, Lake Union Conference executive secretary.

One of the additional highlights of the regional meeting held at the academy will be a special performance by the Andrews University Gymnics.

The second weekend will begin Thursday evening, August 3, at Camp Wahdoon, with Elder Dower as the featured speaker. He will also speak Friday and Saturday evening.

The Sabbath morning speaker will be Dr. Roy Graham, professor at Andrews University's Theological Seminary. Elder Carter will also be a featured speaker for this weekend.

An ordination service and an ABC book sale with special camp-meeting prices in effect will take place both weekends.

Limited accommodations are available at both locations, according to Warren Dick, conference treasurer, so reservations need to be sent immediately to the Wisconsin Conference, Box 7310, Madison, WI 53707.

Meals may be purchased for both weekends but must be paid for in advance. Contact the conference office for more information.

Dora Larson

A VERY SPECIAL MOTHER-IN-LAW

Dora Chapin Larson was born July 30, 1892, in Michigan. She attended Emmanuel Missionary College and taught church school at Oakland in 1911. It was here that she became acquainted with Emmett Larson whom she married in 1913. He died in 1946.

The Larsons had six children: Pearl Garrett of Evanston, Illinois; Leona Erdman and Milo Larson of Fort Atkinson, Wisconsin; Inez Sutter of Riverside, California; Claire Whitman of Rodeo, California, and Alice Maslen of Camino, California.

Mrs. Larson lives in a mobile home on her son's farm which is near the Oakland Church where she has been a member for more than 65 years.

More active in church activities in her younger days, failing eyesight has not dimmed her faith in her Lord; and although she can no longer read her Bible, her memory of Bible verses is astounding. She is thankful for the Christian Record Braille records she receives which supply her with the Sabbath School lessons and other sermons.

During the more than 27 years that I have known her, I have found my mother-in-law to have the patience of Job, the faith of Paul, the wisdom and understanding of Solomon and the love of Moses.

My mother-in-law believes in prayer and can be found on her knees daily talking to her Saviour. I know she longs for His return and for that day when she can personally thank Him for His goodness and mercy.

If only a fraction of my mother-in-law's personality and character would rub off on me, how happy I would be.

Awards are given for Miss Teenage America, Miss America, Miss Universe and Miss World, but I have always thought she deserved the title of Mrs. Adventist, U.S.A.

3 CHURCHES FELLOWSHIP IN SHEBOYGAN

The Sheboygan Church was "bulging at the pews" Sabbath, May 13, when the church members played host to the Racine and Raymond churches.

The Gentle Inspiration Singers from the Raymond Church presented the sacred music for the worship hour.

A fellowship dinner was served, and after the evening vespers there was a friendly basketball game between Racine and Sheboygan. Everyone parted with promises of getting together again soon.

New Releases

FLAMES OVER BATTLE CREEK, by Milton Raymond Hook. Review and Herald Publishing Association, Washington, D.C. $3.95.

Battle Creek is a name full of meaning for many Seventh-day Adventists. This book will make it more meaningful still as Adventist history in that city is highlighted by fascinating little bits of information given from the perspective of a man who spent 50 years with the Review and Herald Publishing Association.

KING TUT'S TOMB, by H.M.S. Richards and H.M.S. Richards Jr. Southern Publishing Association, Nashville, Tennessee. $.75.

When 18-year-old King Tutankhamen died in 1324 B.C., his mourners packed nearly 5,000 treasures into his tomb so that he could exist comfortably in the land of the dead. A collection of 55 golden and gem-studded objets d'art from his tomb draw record-breaking crowds as it toured United States museums in 1977 and 1978.

But who was right? King Solomon said, he "shall take nothing of his labour, which he may carry away in his hand." Ecclesiastes 5:15. King Tut said, "I can take it with me." Indeed what is that mystery we call death? In this little book H.M.S. Richards and his son not only relate the story of their visits to King Tut's tomb but also explain what God's Word teaches about death.
