Expanding the Health Care Ministry

Irwin Hansen
Executive Vice President
GLAHS

The Great Lakes Adventist Health Services, Inc., (GLAHS) was established by the Lake Union Conference as a corporate vehicle to assist the church in its mission by expanding the health work within the Lake Union.

In accordance with this goal, GLAHS recently entered into a management agreement with the 40-bed, Tri-County Community Hospital in Edmore, Michigan, located near Cedar Lake Academy.

Why does the church invest its resources in other health-care institutions? One principle inherent within the theology of the Seventh-day Adventist Church seems to supply sufficient rationale for involvement.

Exemplified in part by Christ's care and concern for the sick, God's love continues to find expression today through the active health ministry of the church. Christian service directed by prayer speaks for God in a powerful way. The unique health message supported by Seventh-day Adventists sows seeds of faith; and I believe church-sponsored hospitals are a resource whose potential is only beginning to be tapped.

By utilizing every approach available to bring others to Christ and the message entrusted to the church, I see this new hospital as one more step toward reaching everyone within the Lake Union.

The Meaning of Courage

by Glenn Hill

Just as school began this year Carole Vance received word that she had cancer again. She had noticed pain and discomfort in her back in recent weeks, but thought it was something a routine check-up would solve. However, the test results could not be denied.

A natural reaction may have been secrecy, but Carole sought the prayers of her South Bend Church family regarding the matter. The pastor and church elders were called. They prayed, and the anointing oil was placed upon her head. Her case was committed to the Lord.

After that service there was a deep conviction shared by everyone present that Carole is safe in His care. We cannot predict exactly what God has in store for any of us, but "We know that all things work together for good to them that love God." Romans 8:28.

With amazing cheerfulness Carole continued to teach her pupils in grades four to six at South Bend Junior Academy. But recently she had to resign because of the amount of time treatments necessitate. However, her smile and courage continue to testify to her faith in God. Your prayers are requested in her behalf.

EUROPEAN TOUR PLANNED FOR 1979

A month-long European tour will be conducted next year by Andrews' School of Graduate Studies, according to Dr. Bernard M. Lall, professor of educational administration.

The tour, to be directed by Dr. Lall, will visit such places as London, Paris, Collonges, Geneva, the Waldensian Valleys, Pisa, Florence, Rome, Pompeii, Venice, Bogenhofen, Darmstadt, Frankfurt and parts of Yugoslavia, from July 9 to August 9.

All Seventh-day Adventist educators, board members, graduate and undergraduate students and members of the Andrews University Alumni Association are welcome to apply.

Academic credit is available on both undergraduate and graduate levels. Participants will have the opportunity to examine the curriculum and materials of instruction used in European education.

The fee of $1,800 covers air fare, room and board, tuition for four credits, supplies, land transportation and health and accident insurance.

A deposit of $500 is sufficient to reserve a seat, says Dr. Lall, with the balance payable by March 30, 1979.

George Barr Suhrie shows part of his Bible collection to visitors in the library's Heritage Room. At Mr. Suhrie's right is a six-volume copy of the world's largest Bible.

HISTORIC BIBLE COLLECTION GIVEN TO ANDREWS

The historic George Barr Suhrie Bible collection has been put on display in the Heritage Room of the James White Library, according to Louise Dederen, curator of the Heritage Room.

The collection, donated to Andrews by Mr. Suhrie last winter, is composed of more than 250 items, mostly very old and rare editions of the Bible. But also included are ancient manuscripts in Hebrew and Armenian dating to the 12th century, a cuneiform tablet from the time of Abraham, a manuscript from the Koran, prayer books and breviaries.

The display includes a large number of Reformation Bibles, most of which were brought to the United States from Europe in the years following World War II.

A facsimile of the Gutenberg Bible, almost as rare as the real thing, and a Latin Bible printed in Germany in 1480, less than 30 years after the invention of movable type, are prominently featured.

Old as they are, however, many of Mr. Suhrie's Bibles are in English.

"The English Bible is unquestionably the most potent influence ever unleashed on the world," he says, pointing out that a Bible was virtually the only literature the Pilgrims brought with them to the New World.

Indeed, one of the key elements of the Suhrie collection is a small section of pages from the very first press run of the King James Version in 1611.

Not many of those are known to exist.

Mr. Suhrie's Bibles were gathered during a period of about 45 years when he lived in northern New Jersey and commuted often into New York to visit other collectors and attend auctions.

He was an executive in the textile industry until his retirement to the mountains of western North Carolina.

Among other events taking place during the library's Week of Celebration was the opening of the Kenneth G. Hance Conference Room in honor of Dr. Hance who lives in St. Joseph, Michigan. He served as an adjunct professor at Andrews for several years, assisting doctoral students with their dissertations.

Dr. Hance has supervised a total of 103 such dissertations during his academic career. About one-fifth of those were at Andrews.

Dan Houghton is the new administrator of the Colonial House of Colby. He comes to Colby from the Lancaster Nursing Home where he served as assistant administrator for the past year. Mr. Houghton is a graduate of Andrews University and has a bachelor's degree in business administration and communication. He and his wife, Karen, have one child, Danny, 2. Karen is a registered nurse.

National Fire Prevention Week on Wednesday, October 11, by Cliff Davis, chief safety-security officer at Battle Creek Sanitarium Hospital.

An imitation bed was set up with an old mattress and blankets near the employee parking lot. Employees were given the opportunity to practice extinguishing the bed fire with carbon dioxide, pressurized water and an all-purpose dry chemical. Methods for smothering a fire without an extinguisher were also explained.

A filmstrip entitled "The ABC's of Fire" was shown in conjunction with the fire demonstrations.

Other items emphasizing fire safety throughout the week included a pamphlet on home fire prevention which was placed in the employee paycheck envelopes, and crossword puzzles and special placemats in the cafeteria.

V.B.S. IN ILLINOIS: VARIETY WAS THE KEY WORD

She was an inexperienced Vacation Bible School leader, recently baptized, unfamiliar with the program, and very nervous even though she had the program well organized.

"As I stood in the church, it was almost time to start and there were only a few children present," reports Mrs. Elvy Bruce of Rock Falls. "But at the last minute children began converging on the church from every direction. I said, 'Thank you, Lord,' threw open the doors and invited the children in! There was a total enrollment of 63 children—56 were from non-Adventist homes."

This story was repeated many times in the Vacation Bible schools held in Illinois during the summer months. A total of 30 schools were held with more than 1,650 boys and girls in attendance.

Two Andrews University students<sup>2</sup> on scholarships, Marie Muerson and Janelle Bradford, worked with Eston Allen, conference Sabbath School director, in directing V.B.S. in several churches last summer.

Schools were held in Canton, Kewanee, Bloomington, Palatine, Carthage and Little Grassy Lake Adventist Camp. The girls directed Vacation Bible schools in small churches where local leadership was not available.

Marie and Janelle and Elder Allen joined forces with the staff at Little Grassy Lake Adventist Camp for a day camp program held there. Children came from Carbondale, a city of 30,000 without an Adventist church.

Ads in the Carbondale newspaper and brochures distributed door-to-door brought 30 children to the camp. The camp's new van provided transportation.

These children paid $20 for the five-day program, which included the regular V.B.S. program in the morning, a lunch at the camp cafeteria, and afternoon camp activities including swimming, canoeing, boating, riding minibikes, baseball and archery.

There were other highlights during the summer. Downers Grove held a "family affair" V.B.S.: While the children enjoyed V.B.S. downstairs, their parents were involved in a Family Life Seminar upstairs, directed by Archa O. Dart, family counselor, writer, and retired General Conference worker.

The program involved 79 children in three divisions and 64 adults. Downers Grove found V.B.S. for adults to be a stimulating program.

In Elgin 108 registered students were transformed from "loud, undisciplined and willful" youth into reverent, obedient, Bible learners before the eight-night program was over. Pastor Don Philpott delivered two van-loads of children nightly to the church for V.B.S.

In the Rock Falls V.B.S., Mary Grubic of Dixon enthusiastically crowded as many as 16 children into her station wagon for the 26-mile round trip each day.

Marie Crawford taught a kindergarten V.B.S. class in Alton.

In Centralia, where 50 children enrolled, many came to know Jesus as a true friend for the first time. The craft leader, Johanna Dantes, traveled from Pico Rivera, California, to help her sister, Rosina Martin, with the evangelistic project. Two children are now attending Sabbath School.

Galesburg held the largest V.B.S. in their history—71 children enrolled.

Diana and Sheri Johnsen live next door to the Alton Church. They have attended V.B.S. for several years, and have also begun attending church school and want to be baptized.

Another V.B.S. attendee, Tony, invited his mother to attend V.B.S. She came and is interested in attending Sabbath School and church.

Alton also added an interesting ingredient: A small cooking class was conducted. The children mixed the ingredients, cooked the food and ate the finished product.

In Danville three children are attending Sabbath School regularly because of V.B.S. Eight-year-old Shelly Whittington visited throughout her mobile home park inviting her friends to come with her to V.B.S. The children wanted to come, but in every case parents said, "No."

A very discouraged Shelly cried as she told her father about her lack of success. Mr. Whittington reminded her that Jesus is a miracle worker and suggested they pray about it.

After prayer Shelly went to sleep, but her father got on his knees again. "Please, God," he said, "reward the faith of my little girl."

The next day Mr. Whittington contacted two families on his C.B. radio; they sent four children to the V.B.S. and 13 of Shelly's friends' parents changed their minds.

So a little girl with a big smile and a big answer to prayer brought 17 friends to God's house for Vacation Bible School.

Although Vacation Bible School is over with the summer's passing, its influence and results go on as the children attend neighborhood Bible clubs, Pathfinder clubs, Bible story hours, church schools and Sabbath School services.

BROADVIEW BENEFIT SCHEDULED FOR NOVEMBER 18

Fantastic savings, fun, food and fellowship are planned during the Second Annual Christmas Gift Auction, Saturday night, November 18. The event, which begins at 6:30, will be held in the Broadview Academy gym.

This auction of high-quality gift merchandise including stereos, tools, watches and toys, benefits the student association.

For "horsetraders," there will be a special Tijuana Boulevard constructed with colorful booths, where individuals can dicker for many small items. To add to the fun, there will be refreshments, door prizes and entertainment.

All proceeds are for this year's student association projects. Students are working to raise more than $10,000 to purchase electronic teaching aids and basketball equipment for the school.

Association members are also planning a work-a-thon to raise money. Pledge cards have been sent to friends of the school.

Individuals wishing to pledge in the name of a specific student may do so by sending a contribution to the Student Association, Broadview Academy, La Fox, IL 60147.

MARANATHA COMPLETES CHURCH

The new church building project at Decatur was completed in a record three weeks by Maranatha.

The recent rail strike threatened delay of the roof decking. Then Maranatha found a truck at Walla Walla College—the decking, milled in Idaho, was loaded and delivered to Decatur.

The truck arrived at 8 o'clock Sunday morning, October 8, and by dark the roof was on!

Opening services were held on Sabbath, October 21.

3 PEOPLE JOIN CHURCH AS A RESULT OF NEW LIFE CRUSADE

On Sabbath, October 7, the Gary Glen Park Church witnessed a child dedication service and a baptismal service. Four families were represented at the child dedication and three people joined the Gary Glen Park Church by baptism or profession of faith.

The baptism was held after the New Life Crusade recently conducted by Elder Lester Carney, ministerial secretary of the Indiana Conference.

Delores Clune joined the church by profession of faith. Mrs. Clune, who was influenced largely through the ministry of the Voice of Prophecy, testified, "The Lord has led me to this church; there is no question in my mind." She and the pastor are now giving Bible studies to one of her daughters who lives in the Gary area.

Gary Cook, who had his first contact with Seventh-day Adventists through the ministry of It Is Written, commented, "I have checked out the teachings of this church very thoroughly and I could not find one flaw."

Chris Locken, son of the Lake Union Literature Evangelist of the Year, Joseph Locken, expressed his appreciation for Christian parents and teachers.

To follow up the interest developed by the recent series of meetings, the pastor is conducting evening Bible classes in strategic areas of the district. A series of baptismal services will also be conducted this fall for the other 12 persons that made decisions to join the churches in the district.

FOND MEMORIES ARE MADE AT CAMP VALKYRIE

Summer camp at Lake Region Camp Valkyrie produced lasting memories in the minds of the boys and girls who attended. From the first day of arrival when campers were introduced to their counselors, there was a constant hum of excitement.

Summer camp '78 offered the usual camp experiences. There is always the thrill of that first plunge into the swimming pool and the instructions for non-swimmers from water safety director Columbus Johnson.

Swimming produces hungry campers and mealtime is welcome. Camp cook Alberta Drew and her staff worked faithfully preparing well-balanced and tasty meals.

Being in the outdoors enjoying the sunshine and fresh air, far from the hustle of everyday annoyances of city life, allows children to reflect. The afternoon "reflections" period gave the camper and staff a time to pause and recall the wonders of our Creator's hands.

LAFAYETTE CHURCH BUILDS A SANCTUARY

The Lafayette Church is in the process of adding a new sanctuary and other rooms on to its present school facility. The members are pleased that the new structure has been enclosed before the onset of cold winter weather.

Hot, dry days allowed each camper to enjoy the daily activities to the fullest. Craft activities directed by Nancy Lindo gave all the campers the chance to use their hands creatively.

Campcraft and archery developed skills for the outdoor adventuresome types. David Parker and Keith Jenkins were instructors for these activities. Renee Logan spent many hours with the campers who signed up for the nature class.

Clarissa Berrien was in charge of gymnastics. Drama and rocketry were two new activities introduced this summer.

Drama workshops appealed to a large number of campers. Each Friday evening the drama class presented a play depicting the effects of wrong choices and evil influences upon the life of the Christian. Anita Barnett was the drama instructor.

Rocketry gave campers the chance to build and launch a rocket. What a thrill it was to see a youngster meticulously building his rocket and, guided by Donnell Smith and James Program Director Purette Bethea organized hayrides, hikes, canoe outings, fairs, foot and sack races, softball games, campfires and corn roasts.

The Highland Avenue Cobras Pathfinder Club had a special day in their church on September 23, 1978. Director Mack Rodgers and the Pathfinders were in charge of Sabbath School and divine worship.

The following persons participated in the Sabbath School program: Mack Rodgers, superintendent; Florence Rodgers, secretary; Mari Banks, scripture reading; Maurice Callahan, prayer; Kenneth Nash, special music, and Lois Bailey and Bareket Mariam of Ethiopia, mission report.

During the lay activities period, a report was given of the missionary work in which the Pathfinders have been involved.

Prior to the hour of worship the Pathfinders marched into the sanctuary. They relieved the local elders and deacons of their usual responsibilities. Musicians for the day were Regina Carpenter, pianist, and Florence Rodgers, organist. Robert Douglas, pastor, gave closing remarks and the benediction.

The Frost Church observed its 75th anniversary recently.

FROST CHURCH OBSERVES 75TH ANNIVERSARY

The Frost Adventist Church observed its 75th anniversary recently with special all-day services.

Among the special guests attending were Elders Charles Keymer and James Hayward of the conference office, and former pastors Norman Yeager and Cecil Pomeroy. Elder Pomeroy grew up in the area and attended the church as a boy.

At the turn of the century two "book agents," A. S. Evans and James Thorpe, canvassed the area of Frost Corners. They met Amos Hallock who showed an interest, in part, because he had Adventist relatives.

In March 1903 these colporteurs started Bible studies which were followed by two series of meetings presented by other workers.

Then on August 2 the West Michigan Conference president, A. C. Haughey, baptized six persons who became the nucleus of the new church, including Mr. Hallock and his wife.

Five additional people soon joined the group. Mary Chapin Larsen, who now resides in Wisconsin, was one of these original members.

The local public school building was used by Adventists for Sabbath services, and today this remodeled building is the home of worship for the church.

In 1910 however, the congregation felt the need for their own building. A church was purchased in the town of Gowen, about 20 miles southwest of Frost.

It was dismantled, with each board carefully marked, and reassembled just east of the present church building. Here Adventists worshiped for 53 years until the members decided they needed larger quarters.

They were unable to find anything suitable until the opportunity came to purchase the old school house. The congregation took possession and transformed the building into an attractive place of worship.

A school program was established even before the congregation had the first church building. A small structure nearby served this purpose until the first church edifice was built. Then school was held in one section of the large room, and the other section was used for church services.

Many instances of faithfulness on the part of the congregation were mentioned in the anniversary day service. Typical of these was the willingness of Frances and Ida Savage to serve for many years in various church offices: as elder, church clerk and Sabbath School teacher.

During the cold winter months, Mrs. Savage walked to the nearby church each Sabbath to build a fire in its stove—using wood which the Savages had provided.

George Hallock (son of charter member Amos Hallock) and Agnes Williams were honored as the oldest members. Recognized for having the longest continuous membership were Gladys Ingalls and Leland Savage.

Mention was also made of the "wisdom, patience and leadership of the pastors who served the Frost congregation."

MANISTEE NEWSPAPER FEATURES ROBERT COLLAR

The talents of a traveling evangelist who plays several unusual instruments and "who preaches from the Bible" were reported in the Manistee daily News-Advocate. The seven-column wide story featuring Robert Collar included two pictures: One showing Elder Collar playing the saw (above), and the other showing him playing the theremin, an electronic instrument which is played by moving the hand closer and farther away from the instrument without actually touching it. One former Adventist has rejoined the church and Pastor Leonard Andrews is working with several people who have expressed an interest in baptism. (Photo courtesy of the Manistee News-Advocate.)

INSTRUCTION AND INSPIRATION ARE THEME OF FEDERATION MEETINGS

The annual spring and fall meetings of the Michigan Conference Community Services Centers (C.S.C.) are geared for instruction and inspiration. Guest speakers serve both of these needs, but much of the inspiration comes as experiences are shared by center workers.

The fall meetings during September featured Ella May Stoneburner of the General Conference department of health. In her eight appearances throughout the state she pointed out the need and value of presenting health education of various types through local community service centers.

After Miss Stoneburner's talk numerous local experiences were shared. Here are a few of them.

A young Moslem couple of Marquette became interested in Adventism after attending cooking classes sponsored by the local C.S.C. Bible studies followed and earlier this year the couple joined the church.

A friend of the Coloma center reported that there was a young mother who needed help. She was worshipping with a congregation which was temporarily using the Adventist church for Sunday services. Because of this the C.S.C. leader was reluctant to visit the woman. But she did and found a need for food and clothing as well as love and understanding. The interest expressed by the center's worker brought a warm feeling to the heart of the mother and this developed into an interest in Bible studies. Today the young woman is a member of the local Adventist congregation.

At Tawas City, overseas boxes of clothing were transported to the pick-up center at Au Sable in a U-Haul truck, paid for by Mennonites, a retired Methodist minister and a Catholic priest. Nonmembers helped load the truck.

Three members of the Petoskey C.S.C. were guests at the local Kiwanis Club meeting at which a vegetarian meal was served. Claris Robinson, president of the Northern Federation, presented a slide program showing the work of the church in times of disaster and local day-by-day needs. As a result of the program the local center has been flooded with clothing donated by participants at the meeting.

BIBLE CAMPS: SPIRITUAL GROWTH AND FRIENDSHIP

The first of nine Bible camps for the youth of Michigan was held at Sagola early in October. This was the fourth year in which such a camp has been conducted specifically for the Upper Peninsula District.

According to Lester Rilea, director of youth activities for the conference, these camps have a twofold purpose—spiritual growth and fellowship. "Several young people have definitely had their faith strengthened because of these camps," Elder Rilea said.

He cited the experience of one young man who attended the first Bible Camp at Sagola and left with a renewed conviction of the direction his life should take. He immediately broke off his relationship with a girl who belonged to another church. Then he attended Andrews University and has now established a Christian home with an Adventist girl he met at Andrews.

Bible camp was held at the Camp Sagola Lodge in the Upper Peninsula.

Because of the smaller number of young people in this northern section of the conference, students from grades seven and up were encouraged to attend.

Thirty-one students attended the camp for the opening Thursday evening meeting. Included were five non-Adventist youth seeking a spiritual atmosphere and companionship. Some were present because their parents were attending the Melashenko evangelistic series in Marquette and looking forward to baptism.

Throughout the session, emphasis was placed on the study of Ellen G. White's book, The Impending Conflict.

The study was directed by Randy Russell, a teacher from Cedar Lake Academy, who presented the basic thoughts of selected chapters and then assigned small groups to study the section more carefully and report their findings for open discussion.

Ample time was also given for recreation and fellowship. Several ministers from within the district took time from their programs to join the activities. Paul Howell, district leader; Jim Hopkins; David Lovenguth, and Jim Story were on hand to assist and give support to the program.

Jess Nephew, his wife, Ginny, from Au Sable, and Mrs. Paul Howell provided the meals for the group.

One of the spiritual highlights of the Bible Camp program came Sabbath evening. While students were out of the lodge, leaders arranged the tables to form a cross and prepared the room for a candlelight communion service.

When the youth returned they found themselves involved in a "very special occasion." The whole weekend program, Elder Rilea explained, builds toward this experience and a meaningful commitment.

The other Bible camps will be held at Au Sable during the winter months. The one for Andrews Academy was held October 26 and others are scheduled for students from Adelpian, Grand Ledge, Battle Creek and Cedar Lake academies. A special one is also scheduled to accommodate junior academy students within the conference.

TEACHERS DISCUSS CHRIST-CENTERED EDUCATION

Integration of Christ into all activities of Michigan's church schools was the objective of the convention for this year's church school teachers.

One hundred and eighty-five teachers and the staff of the conference office of education were on hand for these special meetings held in the Ruth Murdock Elementary School, Berrien Springs, September 17 to 20. Representatives of the Sabbath School and youth departments were also present.

Guest speakers included Drs. George Akers, Elden Chalmers, L. G. Furst and Elder Carl Coffman of Andrews University; Elders Fred Stephan and Warren Minder of the Lake Union Conference department of education, and Frieda Hoffer, elementary supervisor of the Columbia Union Conference.

In addition to the lectures, group sessions were held where the specific and practical interpretation of Christ-centered education in the everyday activities of the classroom was discussed.

Among the topics scheduled for these group sessions were small school organization, helpful hints for sparking up the teaching of spelling, school newspapers, what to do when students bring pocket calculators to the classroom, and cocurricular activities. Some of the most talked about sessions were the workshop designed to give ideas for learning materials; methods of moral development in the classroom, and a discussion on ways a teacher's spouse can aid in and out of the classroom.

As with most professional conventions, many valuable ideas were discovered as individuals met in small informal groups to discuss topics of similar interest and needs on an unstructured basis.

Some of the teachers in attendance found "talking shop into the wee hours of the morning" very practical. Laurence Lighthall of the St. Johns School reported that the teachers appreciated the concern shown for the youth. He said each teacher returned to his classroom "encouraged, joyful, full of ideas and rededicated to the goal of putting Christ first in Christian education."

IT REALLY HAPPENED

"We will take 30 sets of My Bible Friends, said one Catholic nun as she placed her order at the Catholic Teachers Convention in Milwaukee. That order was worth $2,098.50.

When the day was over Ruth Ann Cinquemani, literature evangelist, had taken orders for more than $3,500 worth of books. This included sets of The Bible Stories, The Bedtime Stories, The Desire of Ages and My Bible Friends.

It all began in August when Ruth Ann received a lead card from a nun. Though this Catholic nun liked the books, she decided to wait until the Catholic Teachers Convention in October to see what other books would be offered there.

She suggested that Mrs. Cinquemani set up a booth at the convention so other Catholic school principals could see the books. Mrs. Cinquemani was directed to the archdiocese of Milwaukee; there she made necessary arrangements for a booth at the convention.

On October 11 Edna Bevens, wife of the assistant publishing director for the Milwaukee area, accompanied Ruth Ann to the area and set up the booth. That night they could hardly sleep. They expected to see something very spectacular as the Lord and His angels fulfilled the purpose for having the booth.

"I'll just sit back and watch a miracle," Ruth Ann thought. It really happened but their wasn't much time to watch. Gary Bevins, the assistant publishing director, and Mrs. Cinquemani were kept busy all day showing books and taking orders.

As October 12, 1978, came to a close they could rejoice in God's promise to impress human hearts with the beauty and wonder of His love as it is revealed in these publications.

COLEMAN STUDENTS SHARE THEIR FAITH

The students at the Coleman Victory School, Coleman, Wisconsin, have a unique way of sharing their faith. They wear T-shirts that have the three angels symbol printed on them.

When asked what the angels mean, the children have been instructed to give the reply that the angels represent God's last message to the world:

The first angel tells that "the hour of God's judgment" is here, the second angel tells that "Babylon is fallen" and the third angel represents the fallen condition in the world.

The idea of the T-shirts originated with the school principal, Richard Swanson.

NELSONS CELEBRATE 50TH ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Henry H. Nelson of the Poy Sippi Church celebrated their 65th wedding anniversary August 6, 1978, with a reception given by their daughter, Mrs. Elbert Tyson, and Mrs. Paul Hamel. Alta Fern Cottrell was a teacher before she married Henry H. Nelson, a dairy farmer. The couple have given many years of service to the church as elder and children's division and community services leader respectively.

SHEBOYGAN DISTRICT NEWS

The Fond du Lac Church members have been active in sharing their faith. The church is also in the process of completing a baptistry. Fond du Lac is studying the feasibility of starting a church school for the next school year. Considering what God has been doing for the church, the members are confident He will open the necessary doors.

In Manitowoc a Five-Day Plan to Stop Smoking and a cooking school were conducted in August. A display booth is being planned for a shopping mall. The space for the booth is being offered free of cost. Gift Bible card enrollments and other witnessing literature will be available.

The Manitowoc Church is leasing a bus to begin a bus ministry. The bus has been painted blue and by the end of this year it will be ready for use.

The Sheboygan congregation is in the process of constructing a new church. The educational wing of the church has been completed with the exception of the kitchen area, and work is now being done to complete the sanctuary. The members have borrowed no money for the cost of construction. They praise the Lord every week for the blessing of being debt free.

DENTAL STUDENTS LEND A HAND

Forty-five students from the Loma Linda University School of Dentistry's class of 1980 donated two weeks of a five-week summer break to help build a church in the southern California community of Vista.

It all started last year when the students formed a missions committee. They contacted the Southeastern California Conference to determine if there was any place where students' construction talents could be used. Conference lay activities director Ken

Livesay found that a Samoan group, which had been meeting at the Vista United Methodist Church, was raising money to build a sanctuary. At a class meeting, a vote was taken and Vista was selected as the upcoming outreach project. Wiggs Wake, an Adventist architect from Ventura, drew up plans for the church including a sanctuary to seat 280, five Sabbath School rooms, a church office and a baptistry.

In June work on the foundation and brick walls was begun.

Sooner than anticipated, the late summer vacation came and students migrated southward to give it all they had. Workdays began at 6 A.M. and ended at 9 P.M.

Considered by local folks a unique way to build a church, the project attracted reporters from several newspapers, and San Diego's KGTY Channel 10 covered it on the evening news.

By the end of the two-week period, the church was nearly completed. Some students and conference-employed carpenters remained to finish up.

Bob Sutton, Ph.D., a faculty sponsor for the class, observes that by doing something meaningful the class has been unified.

$126-MILLION BUDGET APPROVED FOR ADVENTIST CHURCH

Meeting in Annual Council, leaders of the Seventh-day Adventist Church voted a $126-million budget for the denomination for 1979. General Conference Treasurer Kenneth Emmerson says the figure represents a 10-percent increase over this year's budget.

According to the Yearbook of American and Canadian Churches, Adventists have the highest per capita rate of giving among all denominations in North America. "This is the reason we're able to do so much with so few members," explains Elder Emmerson. The three million-member church operates a network of hospitals and schools in addition to its vast evangelistic enterprise.

Among several new outreaches of the church in 1979 is the construction of a short-wave radio station in Liberia. Harold Reiner, associate director of communication for the General Conference, recently returned from a fact-finding trip to the African nation and says construction will begin on the station next year.

"This station will allow Adventist World Radio to increase its gospel coverage in Europe, the Middle East and Africa," according to Elder Reiner. Other A.W.R. facilities are planned for the Far East and Central America.

MORMON CHURCH PLANS EXPANSION OF MISSIONS

Mormon president Spencer Kimball has called for missionary expansion to Africa, China, India and other nations. Mormons have had no formal mission activity in Africa, except in South Africa.

CHURCH AGENCIES AID NICARAGUANS

Church World Service has asked for an additional $250,000 to aid in relief in Nicaragua—10 times the amount it originally requested earlier in September. Funds from the member organizations of the National Council of Churches will be used by Church World Service to cover the cost of food shipments and other aid. Seventh-day Adventist World Service, Inc., has also been involved in sending aid to Nicaragua to help victims of the political disturbances there.
