Three words in the American vocabulary are synonymous in their contextual relationship to July 4. The three words are independence, freedom and liberty. Beyond that basic understanding and a fuller appreciation for what the words really connote, there is room for thoughtful contemplation.

By way of definition, independence is a state or quality of being independent. To be independent is to think and act for oneself apart from the opinions and conduct of others. From this primitive starting point, depending upon whether one's attitude is moral or amoral, the human fruitage will be good or ill. The seeds of independence will yield either responsible citizenship or anarchy.

We are clearly at that point in time described by the Revelator when he, "saw four angels standing on the four corners of the earth, holding the four winds of the earth, that the wind should not blow on the earth, nor on the sea, nor on any tree." Revelation 7:1. The purpose for this additional manifestation of power from above is to restrain the forces of evil and advantage the forces of good for the purpose of finishing God's work in the earth. Jesus said, "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." Matthew 24:14. It is only through the truth of that Gospel that genuine freedom may be found.

In the controversy between truth and error, Christ and Satan both advance their cause through human influences. Inherent in the very nature of independence is the freedom to choose either good or ill. From this choice, no living soul is excluded, and each independent decision is of eternal consequence.

In making the decision to follow the Lord and serve Him, each individual so inclined becomes a child of God. Others, by choice or default, join forces with Satan. In either case the choice made will engender attitudes that will either advance or impede the cause espoused.

It is especially significant that the child of God no longer interprets his independence as placing himself apart from the opinions or conduct of others, or as an island to himself, but rather under the obligation to share and lift and help those around him. In that relationship, as with the apostle Paul, freedom finds him again in bondage, this time to Christ. The paradox deepens still more as he comes to understand the obligations of liberty. Liberty, under the constitution, to worship according to the dictates of conscience, under the mandate of Heaven, also implies the obligation to share the reason and purpose for that worship. To fail here is to fall short of the true meaning of liberty.

THE HEART OF THE LAKE UNION

Elma's Victory

by J. K. Wilson

Elma Pierce, 27, can never blot out July 23, 1968, from her memory. Each time she relives the horrible events of that evening when she was 16, she also reflects on God's goodness and how He guided her to join the Seventh-day Adventist Church.

On a hot, humid evening Elma left her work-study job and waited for a bus.

Suddenly Elma heard a loud screech. A speeding car was hurtling itself across her path. The car hit a newspaper stand next to a drugstore, and smashed into two cars at the intersection.

Elma's blood froze! The car was heading straight for her! The car was traveling 70 miles per hour when it struck her.

These events took about 10 seconds—to Elma it seemed an eternity. When the car finally stopped, its two occupants had careened through the front of a store.

Elma's stomach hurt a lot, so she pushed herself off the hood of the car.

An excited group of spectators gathered around the scene of the accident. Elma heard someone say, "She is dead." Another spectator shouted, "Her foot is off!"

Not only was Elma's foot missing, but all of her bones, from the waist down, were either broken or crushed.

Elma spent a total of two years in hospitals. During that time, both legs were amputated. A great amount of tissue damage resulted from the falling glass of the store window. At one point, Elma was placed in 100 pounds of granulated sugar to promote healing of her skin.

Elma endured endless surgeries (skin grafting, hip revisions, etcetera) and received more than 40 pints of blood.

But in spite of the accident, Elma was not bitter. She felt God had a real purpose for her, and thanked Him often for sparing her life that July evening.

The summer after the accident Elma graduated from high school. She was still a hospital patient, so her fellow students held a special day in her honor. The students raised more than $1,700 for Elma's expenses on that day.

Although pale and weak, Elma attended both the senior prom and graduation exercises. Elma was given a standing ovation during the graduation exercises; this so completely unnerved her that she had to be taken home. At this time, she weighed only 48 pounds and was physically unable to undergo emotional stresses.

Several doctors and specialists gave various diagnoses about Elma's future. One told her she would die. In fact she was on the critical list for 18 months. Some doctors said she could never walk again. As for bearing children, that was a total impossibility. But these doctors didn't know God had other plans for His child.

A few months after she was released from the hospital, Gus Pierce entered her life. Gus was a co-worker of Elma's brother.

Gus Pierce was special and Elma knew it immediately. He was kind, attentive and a gentleman. He treated her the way she wanted to be treated, much differently than other people treated her.

When Gus and Elma were married, 3,000 people attended the wedding of the girl doctors said would never walk again.

Elma and Gus—like all couples—have had their share of good and bad experiences. Many times they prayed, asking God how to solve their problems.

When a daughter, Lolita, was born to the couple, she brought a lot of joy and helped make their home circle complete.

Yet something was still missing!

In mid-1978, Gus was delivering mail. He discovered an orange and yellow brochure that had fallen out of his mailbox. He had always been interested in Bible prophecy, so the brochure attracted his interest. The folder described the Jim Cress Prophecy Lectures which would begin at the North Shore Church in North Chicago.

The Pierces lived on the far south side of Chicago, but they drove to every meeting, never missing one. They were excited about the fascinating Bible truth that they were learning.

Near the completion of the Cress lectures, Gus, holding Elma in his arms in the baptismal font, was baptized by S. W. Cottrell, pastor of North Shore Church. Little Lolita stood in the wings and watched the baptism of her parents.

Christ Jesus, who through a chain of incredible events led the Pierces to join the Seventh-day Adventist Church, is now the most important Person in their lives. They feel they can never thank Him enough for leading them to the family of God.

Since their baptism in late 1978, both Gus and Elma have become active members of North Shore. Their fellow members pray that God will continue to bless them with an abundance of new converts to help finish the work and go home with the Lord.

WHAT EVERY DRIVER MUST KNOW

S. JOHN 13, 14

 14 Simon Peter therefore beckoned to him, that he should say who it should be of whom he spake.
 15 He thus lying on Jesus' breast saith unto him, Lord, who is it?

Independence?

by Jane Allen

As the Fourth of July approaches—that traditional time of year when Americans celebrate their freedom, liberty, rights and independence—I'm reminded of an assignment I gave to my freshmen composition students at Central Michigan University last winter.

The assignment was to make an abstract idea concrete. It was not an unusual assignment and I got the usual run of themes on ideas such as love, happiness, loyalty and freedom, most of which fell short of saying anything concrete.

Two papers dealt with the idea of independence, and I thought it interesting that each of the writers, whom I'll call Abbie and Risa, came up with exactly opposite ideas of what constitutes independence.

To Abbie, independence meant having all the money she could possibly spend, driving around a beach town in a hot car with all the windows down so that the wind blew through her hair like a hurricane, or just lying on the sand with no more care than how much suntan lotion she had left.

Independence, she said, meant only the responsibilities she wished to accept, only the deadlines she set for herself, only the rules (and, of course, there would be none) that she made for herself.

Risa, on the other hand, said that independence couldn't be separated from growing, maturity, and of all things, rules!

Independence, according to her, comes with growing up, but not everybody who grows up becomes independent. It is maturing, it is learning the whys and wherefores of the rules of life, natural or man-made, and making responsible choices within that framework.

The point in Risa's paper was that independence involves responsibility.

The way in which these two students performed in the course demonstrates their respective ideas even further. Although they both began the semester at about the same level of writing, Abbie rarely applied the "rules of writing" (I guess there are such things) to her work.

She continued writing in the same way she had since eighth grade, and in our frequent conferences she would tell me, "It's the way I talk!" And that seemed valid reason for not changing, despite the fact that the reader of her papers was not always sure what Abbie was talking about.

Risa, though she didn't receive an A or even an A- in the course, learned to use the rules and techniques in her work. By the end of the semester she had developed into a rather independent writer, able to say what she wanted to say in an effective way, and without frequent conferences with the teacher.

There came a time in the semester when she no longer needed my direct supervision because she had learned the value of the rules that were available to help her. She benefited from accepting the responsibilities expected of a person who wants to write clearly.

"Independence . . . comes with growing up, but not everybody who grows up becomes independent."

It would be almost impossible to bring Abbie's and Risa's papers together and find a common meeting of ideas. I suppose some readers might respond favorably to Abbie's definition—independence without responsibility; others will find that Risa is closer to their own definition—independence with responsibility.

I have to side with Risa. The first definition seems to me to be immature and selfish, with little regard for anybody but the writer herself, while the second involves an acceptance of responsibility for rules and consideration for others.

As we think about celebrating Independence Day this year, I'd like to suggest that we are actually celebrating the responsibilities that make our freedom possible.

When the founders of our country finally declared independence from England, they saw that, among other things, this country had grown up, matured to the place where it could govern itself. Once independence was declared, the leaders of the country set about to prepare laws to govern themselves.

The purpose of the laws of government was to establish order and protection for the mutual benefit of the individual as well as the country as a whole. This meant responsibility on the part of citizens to see that everyone enjoyed the promised freedom.

One characteristic of our laws is that they make us responsible to something, to one another, to ourselves. That's not only a social ideal, it is a Christian ideal too: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." As the laws of the country are heeded, its citizens enjoy the benefits of this Land of the Free.

The comparison of obedience to the laws of God seem almost too obvious. When the laws of God are obeyed, the Christian enjoys certain privileges, including spiritual love, freedom and liberty.

Jesus said, "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love . . ." John 15:10.

He also said, in John 8:32, "And ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." In 11 Corinthians, Paul says that "where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty."

When an individual makes the mature decision to live the Christian life, there are certain responsibilities that are accepted with that decision. It is an independent choice which immediately requires a responsibility toward someone and something. That is Jesus Christ and His law.

As Risa pointed out, individual independence requires accepting responsibility in the rules of life.

In a free country, independence calls for responsibility to the laws of the land, and to be a free and independent Christian requires a responsibility to the Master.

It seems that in the celebration of Independence Day on July 4 we will actually be celebrating the responsibilities which make our national freedoms possible.

It might be a good time, too, to celebrate the responsibilities that promise each of us spiritual freedom as well.

W. J. Wilkinson, a longtime resident of the Hazelton-Juddville district, was interviewed by Lester Rilea, youth director of the Michigan Conference.

The weekend of March 30 and 31, 1979, brought together eight Lake Union academies in celebration of the Academy Youth for Better Living (AYBL) program, and a special feature—a commemoration service in recognition of the 100th anniversary of the Advent Youth Society.

The host school this year was Adelpian Academy.

World youth leader John Hancock spoke of the significance of what Luther Warren and Harry Fenner started 100 years ago in the Juddville-Hazelton district.

From that small youth society the number has grown to more than 22,000 youth societies around the world.

Sabbath afternoon the group journeyed to the historic Juddville Church.

What a thrill it was for many of the Lake Union members, academy youth, administrators of the Michigan Conference, and the youth directors of each conference to be present at this commemoration service. Members of the group committed themselves to plead for the Holy Spirit so that as they left that honored place they would leave with a new devotion, a new dedication, a new heart.

Later that afternoon at Adelpian Academy the AYBL Speak-Out Rally was held. All the first place orations from the schools represented were given.

The Cum Laude trophy went to Grand Ledge Academy. The trophy represents the activities that the students have been involved in for temperance programs in their own school, other schools, and work done in the community.

We congratulate and thank all the academies for a job well done.

DAY-CARE CENTER OPENS

Andrews University's social work department opened its migrant day-care center on June 14 in Berrien Springs.

Breakfast, lunch and an afternoon snack are provided free to all children under the age of 18. Breakfast supplies are purchased at local markets and a hot lunch is brought each day from the university's food service.

The center, located in the Mars Avenue Elementary School, primarily cares for children up to five years of age, according to Dr. Reger C. Smith, chairman of the social work department.

A variety of play activities and opportunities for language development are offered at the center, which will operate through August 3.

STUDENT MISSIONARIES WILL PRESENT PROGRAMS

As autumn quarter begins in September, 28 student missionaries just completing a year of service overseas will be returning to Andrews University, says Chester H. Damron of campus ministries.

"Each one is eager to share some exciting, sad and sometimes embarrassing experiences for Friday night youth programs or Sabbath services," Elder Damron says.

If you are interested in inviting a group of student missionaries to come and share their personal experiences at your church, contact campus ministries at (616) 471-3211.

GENERAL CONFERENCE MAKES AWARDS

Earl Tomlin's paper, "Employee Benefit Plans: Group Insurance and Pension," won the second prize, $75.

Third prize of $50 went to Cordelia Andrews, who wrote, "Insurance Against Economic Risks (A Teaching Unit for High School)."

According to Dr. Trickett, the Risk and Management Services have also given a $250 scholarship for a business administration student which is matched by the university to make a total of $500.

"The continued interest and financial support of Charles O. Frederick, president of the General Conference Risk and Management Services, and his staff is a significant source of encouragement to both faculty and students of Andrews University," says Dr. Trickett.

'HEARTBEAT' CONDUCTED IN STEVENS POINT

MID AMERICAN—In late April, "Heartbeat," a cardiac-screening program, was held in Stevens Point, Wisconsin. It was co-sponsored by the Better Living Center and the Wisconsin Heart Association.

Forty-eight individuals participated in the program, the first of this type to be held in Central Wisconsin.

On May 8 the participants and their families heard Don Casebolt, M.D., medical director of the Better Living Center, and Wes Olfert, health educator, explain the meaning of the results of the tests the participants had taken.

These tests included a blood test to check total cholesterol and high density lipoprotein, height, weight, blood pressure, and a thorough life-style questionnaire.

Because of interest generated through the "Heartbeat" program, the participants have requested information on how to decrease the risks of heart disease.

In response to interest shown, the Better Living Center will soon be conducting a four-week seminar entitled, "Dietary Control of Heart Disease."

NEWS NOTES

- A class in vegetarian cooking instructed by June Jacobson and Liz Tugman, was held recently at the North Shore Church in Chicago. Newly baptized members and their friends attended the classes from April 8 to 10 at the Rubin Gymnasium.

- A book fair, an international food fair and a talent and variety show were held on April 15 at the North Shore Church in Chicago. A large group of people attended.

ILLINI OUTDOOR CLUB NEWS

Members of the Illini Outdoor Club are not deterred by a little bad weather.

The April camp-out began in cold rain and a little snow fell early Sabbath morning. By midmorning the weather cleared for the rest of the day.

Sabbath School and church as well as the potluck dinner were held in the comfort of the Dillon's trailer. This is proof that campers can be close friends.

A long hike along the beach was enjoyed by everyone in the bright sun and stiff wind coming off the lake. The surf was such as is seldom seen on Lake Michigan.

Evening vespers were interrupted by a friendly raccoon. We soon learned that they prefer white bread and cookies to whole-wheat bread.

The May camp-out at Rock Cut State Park was perfect in every respect. A large segment of the Adventist Metropolitan Chorale stopped by between concerts in Elgin and Beloit. Tuxedos and long dresses may have looked a little out of place in a campground, but the visit was enjoyed by everyone.

Spring flowers were abundant and added greatly to the enjoyment and study of God's great creative power.

The next camp-out will be at Marshal County Park north of Peoria, July 13 to 15.

Everyone who enjoys the outdoors is invited to join the group. If you cannot spend the whole weekend, we invite you to bring a couple of dishes for the potluck dinner and spend the Sabbath with the campers. Interesting programs are planned for the weekend.

30 PEOPLE ATTEND 5-DAY PLAN

Elder Edwin Swan presents a certificate to Clara Solmon, 84, the oldest person to stop smoking in the group of 30 who enrolled for the Five-Day Plan to Stop Smoking held recently at Bloomington. Dr. Curt Tannahill, who teaches at Indiana State University, had tried to stop smoking the week before and failed. His wife had been trying to get him to stop for years. He said that he thought it was providential that he heard about the Five-Day Plan. He attended and succeeded—his wife was a happy person when he received his certificate at graduation.

DECISIONS MADE AT END OF MEETINGS

Three decisions for baptism resulted from the 10-day evangelistic series held in Danville by conference evangelist Dan Schiffbauer, right, and local pastor Wayne Pleasants, left. Cheryl Berck, center, was baptized on the last night of the series, May 27. Her husband is also preparing for baptism. She has studied the Adventist faith for nine years.

CAROLYN BARTLETT DIES AFTER ACCIDENT

Carolyn Bartlett, wife of David Bartlett who has been principal of the Lafayette Pleasantview Seventh-day Adventist Elementary School for the past five years, died Tuesday, June 5, 1979, in Lafayette's St. Elizabeth Medical Center.

She was thrown from a motorcycle she was riding with her husband after it collided with a car on U.S. 52, one mile north of West Lafayette, on Monday afternoon, June 4.

David suffered minor injuries.

From 1974 to 1977 she taught church school for grades one through four in Lafayette. Nine months ago, a son, Alan Edward, was born.

Carolyn was born in Nebraska and was raised in Yuma, Arizona. She attended Pacific Union College and received bachelor's and master's degrees. She and David were married in Angwin, California.

At the time of her death Carolyn was serving as the treasurer of the Lafayette Church.

The Bartletts were in the process of packing to move to their new home in the Washington Conference where David is to teach in the Chehalis S.D.A. Elementary School.

BIG SUMMER SCHEDULED AT TIMBER RIDGE CAMP

Even though your child may not be preregistered you can still bring him to Timber Ridge Camp. There may not be as great a selection of classes as there were at the time of preregistration, but we will be delighted to have him at camp.

A fine staff has been arranged for this year. Special guest Josephine Cunningham Edwards, a native of Indiana, former missionary, and one of our denominations outstanding storytellers and authors, will be the pastor for Teen Camp, July 8 to 15.

The dates for Tween Camp are July 15 to 22 and Junior Camp, July 22 to 29. Family Camp is July 29 through August 5.

See you there!

INDIANAPOLIS CHAPEL WEST FINDS NEW HOME

Northward ho! This was the cry from the members of the Indianapolis Chapel West Church as they migrated from Mendenhall Road to their new location at Highway 67 and Lynhurst Drive.

They are meeting in the Church of the Nazarene at that location.

Visitor's Day brought 22 new people to the Chapel West Church. The special program was a dramatization of the second coming of Christ.

Wilma Givans portrayed Christ's return very vividly with a chalk drawing which included a retinue of angels and the Holy City.

Members enjoy getting together and look forward to spending a great deal of time with the church family in addition to the time spent in church services.

The monthly fellowship dinner will even be carried over to camp meeting where they will meet on the lawn of Indiana Academy.

The winter months have been made pleasant by pizza and bean suppers, a film, a talent show and other socials. The members have also rented a skating rink once a month and enjoyed friendly association with members of sister churches in the area.

NEWS NOTES

• Sabbath, May 5, was a special day at the Detroit Center Church. Not only were the members able to partake of the Lord's Supper but also witnessed the ordination of two local elders, Willie King Sr. and Richard Pinder. Elder J. P. Lewis encouraged them to be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus and to make full proof of their ministry. He further encouraged them to keep their lives in harmony with the will of God.

• The Park Avenue lay activities department recently distributed approximately 500 handbills announcing a blood-pressure testing program that was held at the church. More than 50 persons from the community responded to this health outreach program. The program was instituted by Alvire Burton, assistant lay activities leader, and Sonetta Washington, lay activities leader. The lay activities department is already planning literature distribution and other outreach programs in the community.

GROWING FAITH AT RAMAH SCHOOL

In September 1977 the prayers of the members of Reid Memorial Church in East St. Louis, Illinois, were truly answered with the opening of a church school.

The Ramah school opened with one teacher, Doris Smith, and 25 students in grades one through eight.

God blessed the efforts and Doris Smith is the principal at Ramah School.

dedication put forth with the graduation of two students, Devious Moore and Jackie Reeves, both honor students.

Ramah presented its first annual spring concert and closed the year in the black.

The school opened its doors this year with 26 students in grades one through ten, and one additional teacher, Bonnie Reeves.

Mrs. Reeves resigned a job as a child behavioral administrator for the state of Illinois because she was determined to have as many of her five children in church school as possible.

Recently the Ramah-lites Church School Choir presented their second spring concert. Their singing was a testimony of the good work being done in East St. Louis.

Because of the faith of many of the members, Reginald Barnes, conference director of education, presented a plaque inscribed: "To the Reid Memorial Church, in special recognition for their dedication to Christian education."

The establishment of the Ramah School was a positive step for the church and its young people.

NEWS NOTES

• Nearly all the members of the Reed City Church participated recently in giving their church "a thorough house cleaning" right down to the cupboards and the dishes stored there. Church members feel it is "very important to have God's house clean and neat" for proper worship.

• Several personal contacts for Christian witnessing are developing from the operations of the health food center of the Battle Creek Tabernacle. Gary Papendick, manager, reports that funds have been set aside for utilizing the ministry of the Signs of the Times magazine for distribution to interested patrons.

• May 12 was homecoming day for the Shelby and Fremont churches. Jim Danforth was the guest speaker for the occasion. He served the churches more than 25 years ago and is the "10th pastor back" for the two churches.

• L. G. Foll, a former pastor in Michigan, and more recently helping out in the Shelby-Fremont area, has retired with his wife to their "old hometown" area in southern Illinois.

• At a special mother's day program of the Orion-Oxford Church six women presented the Lord's Prayer in six different languages. One of the women was 100 years old.

• Melody Sparks of the Grand Haven Church was graduated June 10 with a degree in physical therapy from Loma Linda University.

YOUTH DEPARTMENT ANNOUNCES CAMP MEETING SPEAKERS

Directors of the senior youth program for camp meeting have broadened this year's scope of activities, Don Williams Jr. of the conference youth department says.

In addition to guest speakers Roy Naden and Warren Ashworth of Andrews University, and Desmond Hills of the General Conference youth department, officials have planned two seminars of special interest to the Adventist youth of Michigan.

Don and Sue Murray, directors of Adventist Engaged Encounters of Berrien Springs (Andrews University), will conduct a six-day seminar on dating and premarriage. This will be held each afternoon in the chapel from 4 to 5, Sunday through Friday.

Another seminar will explore youth and religion. This will be hosted by the staff of the senior youth department at 10 each morning, Sunday through Friday in the youth pavilion.

Resource persons will be there to discuss various aspects of the subject. These presentations will be of particular interest to youth and parents of youth as well as young married couples who wish to develop a healthy home atmosphere.

BREAD MAKING LEADS TO TOTAL HEALTH

Teaching bread making is one way an Adventist couple are helping others to find total health.

Earl and Dottie Allen, who recently moved from Dallas to Novi, Michigan, have started "Breakmake" sessions in the Detroit area.

"Breadmake" is a two-hour, one-session workshop to introduce their "Total Health" program, which is a full eight-evening presentation for the community.

On eight consecutive Monday evenings "Total Health" sessions were recently successfully held in the Farmington Church.

"There are no diets involved in 'Total Health.' However," Mrs. Allen states, "I lost 20 pounds and never regained an ounce" after following the habit-modification suggested and reinforced by the program.

For the bread-making sessions, the Allens furnish all ingredients needed, even individual aprons. Participants work in teams of two, mixing, measuring and kneading the dough. While the bread "rests" the Allens answer questions from the participants.

During the bread-making session a running discussion is held which aids individuals to modify some of their negative habits. "We do this with a positive approach, reinforcing the whys and the hows, all leading to total health," Mrs. Allen said.

Representatives from Pillsbury Flour Company have recently made contact with the Allens to demonstrate bread-making to their sales people in seven major cities. There is also talk about a possible fall promotion in selected cities for the public.

The conference department of health services is including a lecture on bread-making at this year's Grand Ledge camp meeting.

HEALTH EDUCATION SEMINAR HELD IN MUNISING

The Munising Church recently sponsored a health education seminar directed by Dr. Donald Fahrback and David Lovenguth, local pastor. The community was invited to have blood pressure, blood cholesterol and triglycerides checked free through the Alger County Health Department before the series of Sunday-evening programs.

Each evening there were presentations including the spiritual side of health, films, up-to-date scientific data and food demonstrations.

Church members were encouraged to stay home except for those who participated. One hundred and nine people registered for the seminar and up to 100 were in attendance each night.

According to those in charge, "The health message is really the way to attract people to Jesus." Many participants have expressed their appreciation and hope the church has another seminar soon.

CEDAR LAKE CHURCH OBSERVES CENTENNIAL

C. H. Lauda

The second in a series of events marking the 100th anniversary of the Cedar Lake Church was a special service on Sabbath, May 19.

Before the sermon by Pastor Norman Kinney,

Floy Pangman, centennial coordinator, introduced and paid tribute to several families who have held membership at Cedar Lake for many years.

The Jay Smalley family have been at Cedar Lake for 78 years; the Monte Buck family, 74 years; George Avery family, 77 years, and the John Sherwin family for 59 years.

Several other families present have continuous membership for more than 30 years. Recognition of their faithful service to the church and community was expressed.

The final program in this series will be an all-day celebration on July 14, 1979. The church was organized in July 1879.

Elder C. H. Lauda, Charles Keymer and Don Eckenroth will participate in the services of the day.

Elder Lauda was born at Cedar Lake. His parents, Emil R. Lauda and Maude (Rowland) Lauda, were students of the Cedar Lake Industrial Academy the first year it opened in 1899.

It is hoped that many former members and friends will be able to fellowship at the church on that day. A potluck dinner will be held after the Sabbath morning service.

For information regarding accommodations and meals, write to the Cedar Lake Church, Cedar Lake, MI 48812.

BABY DEDICATION AT HOLLY

On Sabbath, May 19, four babies were dedicated to the Lord by their parents in the new Holly Church, with Elder Earl Zager officiating. They are Janice Joyleen Lemmon, left, daughter of Gregory and Lauri Lemmon; Shallon Denae Bruce, daughter of Pat and Kathy Bruce, and Erin Elizabeth Banks, daughter of John and Pat Banks, all of Holly. Courtney Semenuk, son of Kevin and Lana Semenuk of Plymouth, Indiana, was also dedicated but not available for the photograph.

Elizabeth and Douglas Bruce

ALL THINGS WORK TOGETHER FOR GOOD

Camp meeting was over! The Saturday night meeting with its glorious finale had ended and people were hurrying to tents, campers and cars to get on the way to their homes.

Elizabeth was glad that she had a daughter-in-law with a trusty four-wheel drive truck to take her and her two grandchildren on the four-hour trip home.

Ten days of working with the primary-age children, plus the happiness of sharing the time with Scotty and Angelina, would provide pleasant memories.

Hurrying toward her tent she heard a young friend from her hometown church say, "I'm going home tonight, too."

"Ruth, you must not attempt to go home tonight," exclaimed Elizabeth. "Your car is not in good running condition, and with your five babies [ranging in age from 1 to 5 years] you might have trouble along the way, and here it is almost 10 o'clock. It will take four or five hours to get home even under the best of conditions. Why don't you stay until morning and let some of the other workers follow you home?"

This suggestion fell on deaf ears. Ruth felt she had to go home, and that was final.

Realizing the futility of further discussion, Elizabeth decided she would travel with Ruth and her family.

They finally left about 10:30 P.M.

Just as Ruth was turning out of the campgrounds she gave a startled exclamation, "Oh no, I forgot to get gas!"

"That is nothing to worry about," said Elizabeth, "we will just go down to town and get some."

But all the gas stations were closed. "What shall we do?" queried Ruth.

"Drive on, and we shall soon come to one," confidently replied Elizabeth.

The gas gauge finally registered empty, and when the needle wavered uncertainly below empty Ruth again queried, "What shall we do now?"

"There! See that sign on the highway?" Elizabeth excitedly pointed to a sign which read "Olivet, next exit-gas." "Turn on that exit, Ruth," Elizabeth said, and Ruth did so.

In Olivet there were two service stations—both closed. It seemed that there would be no help at this midnight hour.

"What now?" questioned Ruth. "Do you see that lighted window," said Elizabeth, "the only window in the whole city that has a light streaming from its windows?"

"Yes," said Ruth.

"If the people living in that house will let me into their home I am going to call the police for help," said Elizabeth.

Just as Ruth turned into the street the car gave its last gasp and stopped, right in the middle of an intersection.

Resolutely Elizabeth marched up to the door, knocked, and was greeted by a barking dog. Finally the porch light flashed on and the door was opened by a tall, dignified, elderly gentleman.

Elizabeth explained her situation.

The gentleman, who introduced himself as Douglas Bruce gave her permission to enter his home and Elizabeth called the sheriff, who told her he would send help.

In the meantime Elizabeth, Ruth and Mr. Bruce found out a little more about each other. Mr. Bruce was almost a lifetime resident of the city of Olivet. He had been the city engineer at one time, and was an employee in the city Post Office until his retirement.

Help came in the person of the manager of one of the local service stations, and off into the night went Ruth and Elizabeth. But this is not the end of the story.

Elizabeth and Douglas Bruce were married in the Bellevue Church on March 4, 1979, and now there are two Seventh-day Adventists living in Olivet, Michigan.

2,137 PERSONS INVESTED

Young people, their teachers and Pathfinder leaders earned 4,565 honors this past year. This is revealed in a report from Lester Rilea, director of the youth department for the conference. He and Merrill Fleming, Pathfinder director, conducted 61 investiture services from April 4 through May 23. During these services the two youth leaders invested 1,273 in the pre-J.M.V. classes (Busy Bees to Helping Hands), and 835 in the Friend to Guide categories. Recognition was also given to 29 older youth and adults who reached the top status as Master Guides. This made an overall total of 2,137 persons invested. Shown above is Elder Rilea as he invested Larry Lighthall in the Helping Hand class during services at the St. Johns Church.

CAMP MEETING LOCATION CHANGED

The conference executive committee voted on June 12 to change the location of the 1979 camp meeting to Wisconsin Academy.

The dates will remain the same, Thursday, July 26, through Sabbath, August 4.

"It was a disappointment to the committee to find it necessary to vote this change," stated the committee chairman, Robert Dale, president of the Wisconsin Conference.

"Tremendous progress has been made on the new campgrounds at Camp Go-Seek near Westfield, Wisconsin, but the grounds will not be fully ready by camp-meeting time," said Elder Dale. "With the necessary permits which were needed, and the work that needed to be done, we are amazed at the progress on this project."

Every effort is being made by the conference to meet the accommodation needs of those attending the camp meeting. Academy dormitory rooms will be used as well as a campground located 12 miles from the academy.

The slate of speakers is outstanding for the 1979 camp meeting, according to Wesley Jaster, conference secretary.

The early morning hour will feature the Lake Union departmental staff presenting studies on Christ our Righteousness.

During the mid-morning Bible study hour, Elder J. J. Millet, an experienced evangelist, will focus his thoughts on Bible revival.

Sunday morning, July 29, Dr. Samuele Bacchiocchi from Andrews University will speak.

Joel Hass, executive vice president of Great Lakes Adventist Health Services, Inc. (GLAHS), will present studies each afternoon entitled Personal Life Management.

The evening speaker, Richard Barron, is well known to many people in Wisconsin. He spent several years as youth leader for the Lake Union Conference, and is now serving as associate director of the General Conference youth department. His messages are Bible-based appeals.

A tour of Camp Go-Seek will be organized for Friday, August 3, beginning at 3 P.M. A slide presentation showing the development of Camp Go-Seek will be presented Friday evening, July 27.

"It is our prayer that each person will receive a deep spiritual blessing from attending this camp meeting," said Elder Dale.

If you need accommodations or additional information, write to the Wisconsin Conference, P.O. Box 7310, Madison, WI 53707, or call (608) 241-5235.

3 SISTERS BAPTIZED IN SUPERIOR

A baptism held at the Superior Church on May 12, 1979, was conducted by Raymond Plummer, pastor. Barbara, Sarah and Gretchen Roach were prepared for baptism by R. Peter Neri, their school teacher and local elder of the Superior Church.

VICTORY SCHOOL STUDENTS VISIT GREEN BAY

The Coleman Victory Church School in Coleman recently took a class trip to Green Bay. Accompanied by the principal, Richard Swanson, left, and the pastor, Dan Towar, and several parents, the group visited the police station, a dairy plant and a fire station. The highlight of the trip was a visit to the Green Bay TV Channel 2 noon show. The parents in Coleman saw the group on television.

UNCLE CHARLIE, by Richard Utt. Pacific Press Publishing Association, Mountain View, California. $4.50, paper; $6.95, cloth.

Students who attended Pacific Union College in the 20's, 30's and 40's, or the Seventh-day Adventist Theological Seminary in the 50's, will remember Charles Elliott Weniger as an inspiring teacher and mold of human lives. However, the real story here is not so much his academic achievements, which are many, or his contributions to the Adventist ministry, which are profound, but the kind of man he was and the way his life is still reflected in the lives of others.

DINOSAURS, by Ruth Wheeler and Harold G. Coffin. Pacific Press Publishing Association, Mountain View, California. $3.50.

In the days of Noah, men, animals, and trees—many times larger than now exist—were buried and thus preserved as an evidence to later generations that the antediluvians perished by a flood. God designed that the discovery of these things should establish faith in inspired history. This book takes a look at what we have learned about some of those ancient creatures—the dinosaurs.
