Following in the best summertime tradition of watermelon eating, seed-flicking, spitting and wiping is Joey Storey, son of Pastor Joseph Storey of Iron River and Iron Mountain, Michigan. Photos by Jere Wallace.

DR. and Mrs. Raymond Mayor, members of the Pontiac, Michigan, Church, have been involved in soul-winning work and giving Bible studies during the past 20 years. Last year when preparations were being made for the Prophecy Lectures program conducted by Evangelist Jim Cress, they increased their number of Bible studies. Among the people they were studying with were three families who have recently been baptized and joined the church.

Georgette and Nick Fonseca were first. Dr. and Mrs. Mayor began studies with them in the fall of 1979 and continued into 1980. When the preliminary Daniel seminars were conducted, Georgette and Nick were pleased to attend. When the evangelistic meetings began in the Pontiac Church the Mayors invited the FONSECAS to go. At first they were not sure if they could, but when they began, they never stopped going.

During this time the Holy Spirit was leading another family, Jim and Patti Gatward. They had a Christian background, but felt something was not complete in their experience. One day while Patti was visiting her friend Georgette, they began discussing vegetarianism and healthful cooking methods. Patti then learned from Georgette that Seventh-day Adventists believed in healthful living and taught classes on this subject. Patti also noticed a book in the house entitled Daniel and Revelation. She was curious about Bible prophecy, and learned from Georgette that Adventists had a series of lessons on prophecy. Patti had an intense desire to learn more about prophecy but she wasn't sure she should become involved with Seventh-day Adventists. Georgette, who was not yet a member, offered to secure prophecy lessons from Dr. and Mrs. Mayor and shared them with Patti in her own home.

Within a month the Prophecy Lecture series conducted by Evangelist Jim Cress started in the Pontiac Church. As soon as Georgette started attending the meetings, she asked Patti to go. It wasn't long before Patti's husband, Jim, attended also, and before the series was completed Georgette and Nick and Patti and Jim were baptized.

This story is not complete yet. One day Patti was talking to a friend of hers, Pat Bloom. She shared her new interest in spiritual things with Pat, and suddenly there was a lapse in the conversation. Patti was concerned that she would lose this opportunity to share her new-found faith. But the next time she visited Pat in her home, Pat asked about this new spiritual dimension. Almost from the very beginning she expressed a longing for meaning in her life. Patti and Jim made sure that Pat and her husband, Robert, had the opportunity to attend the next series of Prophecy Lectures held in Troy. As a result Pat and Robert have also been baptized.

This story doesn't end here, because each of these couples are now working to bring other friends into the church.

THE HEART OF THE LAKE UNION

Practical Piety

by Donna Willard

Editor's note: Approximately one year ago Hinsdale Sanitarium and Hospital organized a volunteer force of employees to serve on the Sabbath, thus improving care on a day that is typically characterized by reduced staffing.

A phone rings and four volunteers vie for the call. "Yes, I'll be right up. Will I need a wheelchair?" This conversation is repeated again and again each Sabbath morning, and every morning of the week at Hinsdale Hospital.

Volunteers who serve as escorts for discharged patients regularly report to the volunteer room where they are summoned by the nursing staff to run errands or assist patients.

Until recently however, the phone was quiet on Sabbath. Departments other than those involved in direct patient care were either closed or operating with reduced staffing, emphasizing the religious convictions of the hospital. In line with this practice, there were no scheduled volunteer services on the Sabbath. Consequently, employees who were on duty were working under unusually heavy loads. Those scheduled to work often dreaded to see the Sabbath come.

Therefore, the administration began to rethink the hospital's philosophy of patient care. In contrast to its commitment to provide only essential services and emergency surgery on Sabbath was the desire to portray the Sabbath as a special day.

"Sabbath should be recognized as special not because patients cannot get the services they need, but because they can sense God's love at a higher level and with more intensity than on any other day," says Durward Wildman, vice president, personnel. As things were, the day was receiving negative recognition from visitors and patients as well as employees.

These considerations prompted the formation of a volunteer force to work on Sabbath to relieve the regular staff of their heightened responsibilities. Kathryn Sieberman, vice president, and Chaplain Willis Graves worked with Mary Buddington, volunteer director, to organize a group of approximately 35 volunteers. These men and women function just as the more than 350 senior volunteers do during the week. They attend orientation class, log their hours in the volunteer office, and wear the distinctive pink jumpers or red jackets.

Their prime distinction is that they volunteer on Sabbath only, giving approximately four hours per month. Also, the majority of these volunteers are regular employees. Vice presidents, environmental service workers, chaplains, technicians and secretaries are volunteers on Sabbath. Rounding out this group of people are individuals from local Seventh-day Adventist churches who learned of the need and decided to give some of their time to the hospital.

Emily Schmidt, a member of the Downers Grove Church, read the call for volunteers in her church bulletin. "I saw this as an unusual opportunity to be of service to others so I signed up for the class. I believe everyone benefits from a Sabbath worship service, and I would hate to miss church every week. However, volunteering is a different kind of experience. I find each valuable in its own way," says Mrs. Schmidt.

What about the Sabbath atmosphere at the hospital? Has it changed? "The Sabbath cannot be a special day if we do not give it time to be special," says Mr. Wildman. "Those of us who volunteer on Sabbath are trying to give to the staff and patients this time which is so important for an appreciation of the day."

Not only do patients and staff benefit from a less rushed schedule, but volunteers gain a blessing by helping others. "I get an inspiration out of NATURE demonstrates that creative forces operate according to definite laws to produce an infinite diversity of forms, animate and inanimate.

Nature is the work of an Architect, a Designer. Structures are not randomly put together. The part that lies next to the other is important.

Did you ever notice that the tendrils of a morning glory twist to the right while its flower bud twists to the left?

Coconut palms are either right or left spiralled with the lefts being predominate. Interestingly, the palms with the left twist produce more coconuts.

The purpose in presenting this photographic essay is to inspire the reader to discover the delight of observing the wealth of imagination of nature's Designer even in the most minute of living things.

The tongue of a butterfly is called the proboscis or sucking tube. It is composed of a special long coiled structure of the maxillae designed for siphoning and tasting liquid food materials.

The fine structure reveals that the tube is formed by interlocking spines and hooks which join to form a conduit. The photograph shows the tongue of a white butterfly which has been "unzipped," revealing the internal channel. The spines normally attach to the opposite side of the channel.

Tiny muscles allow for the coiling and uncoiling of the tongue which enables the butterfly to reach into the nectar in flowers. Fluids flow up the tube passively by capillary flow and actively by the pumping action of the butterfly's abdomen. The tongue therefore serves as an efficient siphon.

Chemical taste receptors on the tongue and feet of butterflies are not only used for food identification, but also for recognition of ideal plants upon which to lay eggs. By this method a Viceroy chooses willows, the Monarch selects milkweeds, and the white butterfly, cabbages or mustards.

The proboscis, or tongue, of a fly is tipped with a pair of oral lobes which adhere to and sense the chemical nature of food materials. Ten pairs of muscles activate the movement of the proboscis. The surface of each lobe is made up of hydraulic pads which make a pattern resembling the tread of an automobile tire. Taste organs are scattered over the surface.

Patterns in Nature

PART II

by Asa C. Thoresen

Many insects have scent glands which produce aromatic chemicals for the purpose of communication. Some are repellants while others call in other individuals of the species, including attracting mates.

In several species of true bugs the chemical scent is exuded on to an ornate patch of channels and pads. These pads facilitate rapid evaporation. The evaporation disc of each species forms a different pattern and each is an artistic design worthy of attention. The photograph is the evaporation disc of a damsel bug.

Everyone who has seen Russian olive leaves has noticed the silver-grey color, particularly of the lower side of the leaf. The silver color is due to parasol-shaped scales which protect the openings of the leaf from excess moisture loss. The pattern and texture are exquisite.

Diatoms are invisible life forms found in freshwater and in the oceans. They are diverse forms taking on all manners of shapes and designs. Diatoms are often initially colonial, held together in long series by intricate joining devices. The diatoms in this photograph are held together by close-fitting dovetails.

When diatoms die they leave silicon skeletons which maintain their original design pattern. Huge accumulations of their skeletons form diatomaceous earth and now make up such formations as the White Cliffs of Dover in England. Because of its siliceous nature and the tiny air spaces between shells, diatomaceous earth makes one of the best insulating materials known to man.

A bird's feather is held together by minute hooks and grooves. The structure is designed to resist the stresses and strains of air currents applied during flight. A single primary feather of a pigeon is made up of at least a million parts.

Fraying of a feather results in the separation of the hooks and grooves. They may be "zipped" together again by the bird's preening process as the feather is drawn through the beak.

Pollen grains are always ornate. This pollen is from the witchhazel flower, a wild shrub which blooms in the autumn. Perhaps you can see a vague resemblance to a cantaloupe with sections of the skin peeled off.

These thin sections are areas of weakness which allow for expansion and contraction in wet and dry conditions. Eventually a tube grows out of one of the thin sections to guide the sperm nucleus to the ovary of the flower where fertilization occurs.

THE Seventh-day Adventist Church employs 80,000 workers to operate 25,000 organizations around the world.

At Andrews University, the importance of training qualified professionals to manage those hospitals, schools, publishing houses and industries is not taken lightly.

With the establishment of a professional School of Business, the university plans to continue educating competent business workers to serve the denomination's growing structure.

Given final approval at an executive meeting of the university's board of trustees on July 8, the School of Business has been carefully drawn up over a period of several years, according to Andrews President Joseph G. Smoot.

The full board of trustees approved the proposal for the school one year ago, on May 7, 1979. Approval by the Seventh-day Adventist Board of Higher Education was granted on June 11 this year.

Named as dean of the new school is Dr. Dale E. Twomley, who has been at Andrews since 1978 as chairman of the business administration department. Dr. Twomley holds a master's degree in business administration from the University of Tennessee and a doctorate from the University of Maryland.

He has held teaching and administrative positions at Columbia Union College, Greater New York Academy and Takoma Academy, and has served as principal of South Lancaster Academy and Shenandoah Valley Academy.

The School of Business will serve as the fifth school within the structure of the university. Andrews is also comprised of the College of Arts and Sciences, the College of Technology, the School of Graduate Studies and the Seventh-day Adventist Theological Seminary.

The purpose in re-structuring the business administration department into a distinct school is not one relating to curricula.

"This is not a big organizational move that will require a great deal of expense and overhead," emphasizes Dr. Twomley. "Basically, the course offerings we have now will continue. The reasons for establishing the school are to develop a separate identity, gain professional accreditation, and increase the visibility of business training offered at Andrews."

Professional accreditation has been found to be of special benefit to Andrews students from nearly 90 countries and enables the university to keep segments of the academic program under continual review and in-depth study, according to President Smoot.

The accreditation of the business unit by the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business (AACSB) would be another step in the university's planned effort of securing national recognition for selected programs of study.

Graduates of AACSB accredited programs are recognized as having a preferred position in being recruited by employers, as well as in being accepted for advanced degrees in business administration. In the United States today, fewer than 25 percent of business degrees granted are recognized by AACSB accreditation.

The new School of Business will feature several specializations sued to today's job market. Beginning this fall, a Bachelor of Business Administration degree (B.B.A.) will be offered, with majors available in accounting, economics, information science, marketing and management.

Also offered will be the Master of Business Administration degree, with specializations in general management and hospital administration.

A concerted effort will be made to develop specific classes to equip Andrews graduates to enter denominational service. Courses in management work on the conference and trust service levels are now being planned.

Several church administrators in the Lake Union are currently enrolled in the M.B.A. program at the university. Since courses have been scheduled during the late afternoon and evening, full-time workers are able to maintain their positions while pursuing a degree.

Harvey Kilsby, assistant treasurer for data processing in the Lake Union Conference, has been taking courses toward an M.B.A. at Andrews for the past year and a half.

"The need for business specialists within the church is definitely on the rise," he says. "Many people have the misconception that credentials for the ministry qualify an individual for any position in the church. This is just not true any more. In the Lake Union, for example, every treasurer has been trained with a business degree."

The master's program in business administration at Andrews has been structured so that even those without an undergraduate degree in business can fit into the curriculum. Nancy Perez, who holds a bachelor's degree in behavioral science from Atlantic Union College, recently decided to earn an M.B.A. through Andrews' new School of Business.

"I'm really excited about entering the program," she says. "I think it's great that Andrews has added a School of Business. That lends a lot of prestige to holding a business degree from the university."

Looking forward to completing her training in seven quarters, Nancy plans to specialize in accounting, eventually becoming a certified public accountant.

Pam Trubey, who received an associate of science degree in accounting from the university last June, also plans to continue her education in this field.

"The associate of science degree was the perfect thing for me," she says. "I will be getting married August 17, and plan to continue my schooling. But knowing that I actually have a degree now, rather than just two years of college, makes me feel I have accomplished something. And it will help when I apply for a job."

Tom Mejeur, who completed a four-year undergraduate degree in business at the university this summer, also expresses appreciation for the fact that Andrews' program is easily tailored to the individual.

"Andrews is large enough to provide all the facilities you need to get a comprehensive education, but small enough to allow you to work out a personalized program," he says. "My particular area of interest is hospital administration. In my sophomore year, I proposed the idea of professional experience in this area."

"After planning with Dr. Twomley, in consultation with Great Lakes Adventist Health Services and Dr. Larry Mahlum, Andrews' director of cooperative education and placement, I was able to spend a quarter as a temporary assistant to the administrator at Tri-County Community Hospital in Edmore, Michigan."

And Andrews' placement office also provided the opportunity for Tom to be assured of a job, six months before graduation. Taking a lead from the placement office last winter, he applied for a position as a materials manager trainee at Kettering Medical Center. His business degree from Andrews with a concentration in management was just the thing they were looking for.

"Many people at Andrews have been very helpful to me," Tom says. "Dr. Twomley, Dr. Mahlum, and others."

Along with their willingness to work with the students individually, teachers in Andrews' business program bring to the classroom a wide spectrum of experience.

Andrews has sent faculty to such institutions as Northwestern University, Arizona State University, the University of Oregon, and the University of Michigan, fostering professional development among the teaching staff.

For the first year in the School of Business, 14 teachers will be instructing, with eight holding doctoral degrees. Others are scheduled for study leave, to complete doctorates within the next few years.

A strong emphasis in business training has been characteristic of Andrews for years, exemplified by graduates in administrative positions all over the world. The university has offered programs in accounting and business for more than four decades.

The department of business administration was organized in 1953, with the Master of Business Administration degree added in 1964. Now, the administration is developing plans for a new facility to house the recently voted School of Business.

"As the only Seventh-day Adventist institution of higher education authorized by the Board of Higher Education to offer graduate work in business administration, it is incumbent on Andrews University to provide the highest quality of education possible in this area," says Dr. Twomley.

Through the new School of Business, Andrews is doing just that.

PLANS BEING MADE FOR NEW SCHOOL YEAR

Registration for the 1980-81 school year is September 23 and 24, and, according to Norman Roy, associate director of admissions, it still is not too late to apply and be accepted for the fall quarter.

Freshman orientation begins September 21, and Mr. Roy said all freshmen who have not taken the ACT test should plan to arrive before noon on that day.

During registration, a set of instructions will be given to students to help them find the various departments and registration stations. These guidelines will help registration go more smoothly by reducing confusion and allowing students to avoid registration stations that do not pertain to them.

Areas that affect nearly all students are financial aid, housing and student labor. Esther Hare, Andrews' financial aid officer, said all students interested in receiving financial aid must complete a Financial Aid Form (F.A.F.). This is used to assess each student's needs before determining aid awards.

Allan Norman coordinates student labor and housing. Students interested in on-campus work and university housing should apply directly to his office.

Application for entrance to the university's academic program should be made to the director of admissions. If you have questions about admissions, call (616) 471-3303. The financial aid office number is 471-3334. Applicants with questions on housing or labor may call 471-3570.

CAMPUS HIGHLIGHTS

● Edith Schaeffer, author of more than 10 books on Christianity and the family, will present a program on the Christian home and fellowship, Tuesday, September 9.

Admission to the event, which will begin at 7:30 P.M. in the Andrews Academy Auditorium, will cost $3 in advance and $3.50 at the door. Mrs. Schaeffer's lecture is being sponsored by the 1980 Family Life Workshop. Arrangements are being made by Andrews University's Lifelong Learning service.

● Dr. N. Gordon Thomas, professor of history at Pacific Union College in Angwin, California, taught in Andrews' history department during the summer quarter. He directed a four-week course on the history of the Seventh-day Adventist Church, a required course for students who plan to be credentialed as teachers in the denomination's educational system.

● WAUS-FM, Andrews' public radio station, received a special award from the Kalamazoo County Red Cross in recognition of the station's extensive news coverage and public service in the weeks following the May 13 tornado that devastated downtown Kalamazoo. In addition, the Michigan Employment Security Commission has given its "Outstanding Public Service" award to the station for its "outstanding record of public service in support of Michigan's unemployed workers."

● Dr. Wilson Trickett, professor of business administration, has announced his resignation from teaching and managerial responsibilities with the university. Dr. Trickett said, "I decided to retire to devote full time to my personal activities." He has been executive vice president of Berrien Enterprises, a subsidiary business corporation of the university, for about eight years and has taught in the business administration department since 1953.

EARLY PARENTHOOD WORKSHOP OFFERED AT ANDREWS

Assisting parents with the very earliest skills in being a parent will be the subject of a workshop to be conducted September 7 to 9, 1980, by the Andrews University nursing department.

Since the nurse is the professional person most closely associated with parents during the critical period from conception through age 36 months, the workshop will focus on the role of the nurse in assisting parents during that crucial time.

The workshop will be directed by Aldyth Roberts, R.N., Ph.D., whose specialty is family life.

Guest speakers will be Kay Kuzma, well-known lecturer and author from Loma Linda, California, and John Florin, local mortician and director of Bereavement Resources Center.

Physicians, social workers, home economists, hospital administrators, ministers and others who relate to parents during the early months of parenthood are encouraged to attend. Parents and lay persons are also welcome.

Continuing education units are available. For information and reservations, call or write Lifelong Learning, Andrews University, Berrien Springs, MI 49104; phone (616) 471-3286.

SNYDER AWARDED MEMBERSHIP IN A.C.H.A.

Charles Snyder

HINSDALE—Charles Snyder, Hinsdale Hospital vice president, was awarded membership in the American College of Hospital Administrators (A.C.H.A.) at convocation ceremonies in Montreal, Canada, on July 27.

A.C.H.A. is an international professional society for men and women whose careers are in hospital and health services administration. The college develops and promotes educational standards for hospital administrators and confers fellowships in hospital administration on those who have done, or are doing, noteworthy service in that field.

As a member, Mr. Snyder receives permanent A.C.H.A. status attained only after thorough review of his credentials and after his successful completion of the board of governor's written and oral examinations. Membership status is an indication of the affiliate's knowledge, participation and capacity for competence.

T.C.C.H. SPONSORS ALCOHOLISM REHABILITATION ALUMNI BRUNCH

EDMORE, MICHIGAN—Eight alumni of the Tri-County Community Hospital Alcoholism Rehabilitation Services were present for the first alumni brunch on Sunday, June 22, 1980. Two former residents were presented plaques and medallions for their achievement of three months' sobriety.

Vern Davis of Insight, Inc., the featured speaker at the brunch, emphasized the contrast between the life of the practicing alcoholic and the recovering alcoholic, and the importance of gratitude in life.

The alumni spoke of the changes in their own lives and their appreciation for the treatment program at Tri-County Community Hospital. Their sincerity is shown by the fact that several of those currently in treatment were referred by others who had received treatment at Tri-County Community Hospital.

The Alcoholism Rehabilitation Services unit has treated more than 68 persons since opening on February 18, 1980, helping many to return to normal, productive lives.

The enthusiasm of staff and alumni at the brunch indicates that it will become an important part of the program. The next alumni meeting is planned for September 21, 1980.

MID AMERICAN IMPROVES FINANCIAL STATUS

MID AMERICAN—Mid American Health Services, the long-term care division of Great Lakes Adventist Health Services, has experienced a dramatic turnaround in its financial performance in the past year and a half.

Mid American, which presently operates eight nursing homes and three apartment complexes for the elderly and handicapped, came under denominational control in January 1, 1975. During the first four years of denominational operation, 1975 to 1978, the company sustained cumulative losses of $728,018.

However, in 1979 this trend was reversed and the organization had net income of $496,525 (unaudited). This indicates that, cumulatively, Mid American is now "in the black" since coming under church management.

BURR RIDGE RECEIVES $10,000 DONATION

Carla Butcher, a member of the Burr Ridge Church, was asked by Hinsdale Sanitarium and Hospital to provide home care for a terminally ill patient.

She asked the patient's husband to consider making a donation to the church building fund rather than pay her a wage. Though not an Adventist, the patient was familiar with the Adventist Church and had been a volunteer at Hinsdale Hospital.

For three months Carla provided daily care for the woman and support for the husband. During this time, church members at the weekly prayer meeting prayed for the family.

Having planned a vacation far in advance, Carla had to arrange for someone to take her place for a while. Before she left, the patient's husband spoke with her.

"What would you think if I gave you a check for $5,000?"

"Well, that would be wonderful," she replied.

"What would you think if I gave you a check for $10,000?"

Carla was presented with a check for $10,000 from the family trust fund as a donation to the Burr Ridge Church building fund.

Since the woman's death, Carla has maintained contact with the husband, and the prayer meeting group continues to pray for him.

BRILLE STUDENT BAPTIZED

Loren Irwin, nearly blind, has received spiritual insight from cassette tapes and phonograph records supplied by the Christian Record Braille Foundation. After several months of study, Loren was baptized by Elder Wayne Pleasants and joined the Danville Church on July 19, 1980.

THE SOWERS AND THE REAPERS

The baptism of Gilberto and Odilia Guzman by Pastor Cesar Funes was a result of laymen cooperation. About three years ago, Joel Lopez of the Spanish South Church started witnessing at work to Gilberto. He gave the family Bible studies, but later gave the Guzman's name to the Spanish West Suburban Church where Mike Quinones had the privilege of seeing them decide for Christ. Brother and Sister Guzman have been conducting meetings for young people in their community and instructing them in Bible teachings using a series of the 20th Century Bible course in Spanish given to them by Mr. Lopez. Today they are rejoicing in the Lord and are very active in witnessing to their friends.

HINSDALE NEWS NOTES

● Cindy Hadley of the Health Education Center and Shari Chamberlain, Bible instructor, conducted two natural-food workshops on June 22 and 29 at the Hinsdale Church. Twenty people learned the art of whole-grain baking, and 25 came to see demonstrations on making natural cheeses from cashews, garbanzos, soybeans and yogurt.

● Walter Payton, running-back for the Chicago Bears, spoke to the Hinsdale Church Saturday night, June 28, about his experiences as a Christian sportsman.

● Ten couples participated in the third Marriage Enrichment Seminar held in Hinsdale by Larry and Joyce Milliken. Maurice and Blythe Hoppe assisted them.

● ACT '80, a group of young people working for the youth of Hinsdale Church, plan youth vespers, church and a prayer meeting called "New Beginnings." The team, comprised of Craig Blackerby, Sherrie Brown and Don Dahl, is directed by Jeff Cinquemani, youth pastor. They run a day camp on Tuesdays and Wednesdays from 8 A.M. until 4:30 P.M. and have planned a bike rally, a pancake feast and a weekend camp-out at Devil's Lake, Wisconsin.

DE KALB MEMBERS WORSHIP AT SHABBONA LAKE

On Sabbath, May 31, the members of the De Kalb Church met at Shabbona Lake State Recreational Area to enjoy a Sabbath in nature.

After a general song service for all ages, and opening prayer, the Sabbath School divisions scattered out over the sloping hillside to study the week's lesson.

Debbie Dewey, accompanied by her husband, Kevin, on the guitar, sang "My Cathedral" for special music.

After the sermon by Pastor Andy McRae, the congregation shared a potluck picnic dinner.

Ellen White once wrote that "On the holy rest day, above all other days, we should study the messages that God has written for us in nature. . . . As we come close to the heart of nature, Christ makes His presence real to us, and speaks to our heart of His peace and love."—Christ's Object Lessons, p. 26.

In the afternoon, many members followed this counsel by participating in a nature hike through the woods and fields bordering Shabbona Lake.

IT IS WRITTEN NOW ON WFIE

It Is Written, the full-message telecast of the Seventh-day Adventist Church, is now aired on WFIE-TV, Channel 14, in Evansville, each Sunday at 7:30 A.M., beginning July 27.

On September 28, It Is Written launches "Prayer Alert," a new prayer ministry. Speaker George Vandeman invites all viewers to watch and participate in this venture.

It Is Written can also be seen on cable television in many parts of Indiana and Kentucky on WTBS-Atlanta, Channel 17, at 6:30 A.M. each Sunday.

EXCITING DEVELOPMENTS IN SPANISH EAST CHICAGO

God has blessed the Spanish Church of East Chicago in many ways. With the support of the Indiana Conference a church building has been secured, improvements have been made in the property, several evangelistic campaigns have been held, and the enthusiasm of the congregation is growing.

On Sabbath, June 7, another group of people were baptized by church pastor Dr. Victor Schulz. With this baptism, a total of 22 people have joined the church since last November.

This makes a growth percentage of exactly 33 percent in the last half year. Only three years ago there was only a small group of believers where today there is an enthusiastic congregation of about 100.

The Spanish Church of East Chicago was chosen because of its rapid growth as one of the 320 churches in the United States to be studied in a survey to discover the common characteristics of churches having rapid and continuous growth.

A large group attended the Wells Community Hospital Five-Day Plan sponsored by the Rockford Church.

ROCKFORD CHURCH HOLDS 5-DAY PLAN AT LOCAL HOSPITAL

A Five-Day Plan to Stop Smoking was held in Bluffton, June 22 through June 26, co-sponsored by the Rockford Seventh-day Adventist Church and Wells Community Hospital.

Paul Bender, administrator of the hospital, was enthusiastic about the program and donated the conference room at the hospital to be used for the nightly sessions.

Judy Henley, R.N., emergency room supervisor at the hospital, is a member of the Rockford Church and was coordinator of the Five-Day Plan. Elwin Shull, vice-principal of the Indiana Academy, and local pastor Rick Blythe, conducted the program.

Local doctors participated, talking about smoking and its effect on the body. There were also personal testimonies from people who had given up smoking through this plan.

Twenty-four persons were successful in giving up smoking. Some who did not attend the program have decided to quit as a result of contact with people who attended.

A follow-up session was held on June 30, and several people related their experiences in quitting smoking. Some have also stopped drinking coffee and cola drinks.

The classes were free of charge, but the participants gave $155 in donations.

More follow-up work and another clinic in Bluffton are planned for the future.

HOSPITAL ON WHEELS

The Lake Region Conference recently purchased a Community Services Medical Van to be used throughout the five-state area during evangelistic campaigns, health fairs, camp meeting and other community-oriented programs.

More than $16,000 was donated by Hinsdale Hospital and Sanitarium in equipment and medication for the van.

Allen Wightman and Karen Hoover spearheaded the task of making the vehicle emergency ready. The van is now fully equipped from aspirin to defibrillator and ready to serve those in need.

During the recent Lake Region Camp Meeting, this "hospital on wheels" was put to the test. Seven emergency runs were made to the local hospitals; five were for heart attack victims.

The medical staff treated burns, broken fingers, dislocated arms, cuts, temperatures and insect bites.

The first life-threatening crisis occurred just three days after camp meeting began.

A camper from the Detroit area suffered a heart attack. At the van, she was administered intravenous fluids, her blood pressure was monitored and oxygen was given.

While receiving treatment, the patient was transported to a Niles hospital where she was admitted to the intensive care unit. She later wrote a note of gratitude for receiving such quick and efficient care.

Excellent medical help was available: Richard C. Brown Jr. and Addison Prince, physicians; Mildred Todd, Juanita Johnson and Willie Reese, nurses; Dora Brown, respiratory therapist, and Ruth Willis.

With this new piece of equipment it is now possible to witness for Christ in another way, meeting the physical needs of people.

HARMONIZING FOR CHRIST

Five young men, ranging in age from 11 to 15, spent so much of their time together harmonizing that Karen Palmer, Adventist youth leader at the East St. Louis Church, encouraged them to form a singing group, the Christian Brothers. From left, they are Harold Moore, Shelem Flemons, Doug Combs, Stanton Flemons and Courtney Moore. Besides being members of the East St. Louis Reid Memorial Youth Choir and taking an active interest in the many functions of the church, the young men also sing in the senior choir. This summer they plan to witness in an evangelistic effort in the North Atlantic Conference, according to Jayne Byrd, communication secretary.

THE 1980 CAMP MEETING STORY

At an ordination service two men were dedicated to the ministry, Thursday evening, July 17, at the beginning of the 112th camp meeting at Grand Ledge.

Raul Gonzalez, pastor of the Lansing Spanish Church, and Gary Randolph, newly elected superintendent in the conference department of education, became ordained ministers after a sermon by Robert H. Carter, Lake Union Conference president.

Meeting places were filled nearly to capacity each evening, and workshops were well attended, as people from around Michigan and the world gathered to listen while more than a score of guest speakers presented an assortment of subjects.

"I have never seen a year when we had a better variety of choice speakers than this year," President Charles Keymer commented. "The Spirit of the Lord has been here in a mighty way."

A representative from the location office on the grounds estimated that approximately 6,400 people stayed on the grounds during the 10-day session.

"More people have been here this year than for several years," he said.

A large percentage of the more than 20,000 members in Michigan visited the camp either on the weekend or throughout the week.

A storm that struck the campgrounds on Sunday, July 20, leveled six conference tents and badly ripped one of the large tents, but overall damage was light.

The annual blood drive conducted each year by the American Red Cross attracted a young mother whose children came along to be sure the nurse did it properly.

The disaster relief van, open for inspection during the week, proved a popular place for community service workers to gather.

The food tent was a popular place to try samples offered by several food companies.

Mr. and Mrs. Mike Williams of Lansing taught a class in signing for the deaf in the Child Evangelism workshops.

Gary Randolph, left, newly elected education superintendent, welcomed Alvin Astrup as one of his associates in the department. Mr. Astrup was formerly principal of Battle Creek Academy.

Pastor Joe Storey of Iron Mountain did the layout work on the daily newspaper for "Camp City."

Pastor Morris Venden, evening speaker at camp meeting, enjoyed relaxing with Michigan acquaintances.

Future members of the church, Katie Pauls, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ron Pauls, and Sean Sinnett, son of Dr. and Mrs. Dale Sinnett, began digging at the building site of the new Richland Center Church.

GROUND-BREAKING SERVICE AT RICHLAND CENTER

Ground-breaking for the new Richland Center, Wisconsin, Church and School was held June 19, 1980.

Participating in the service were Robert Dale, conference president; LaVerne Hardy, Richland Center mayor, Edith Dicks and Beulah Cowling, charter members; Fred Sinnett, elder and builder, and Ted Green, pastor.

Building plans specify a sanctuary to seat 150, a large foyer and two classrooms on the upper level. The lower level will include a large all-purpose room, kitchen, community service room and two classrooms.

The building site includes five acres adjacent to Highway 80, 1½ miles south of Richland Center.

AUNT IRENE CELEBRATES 80 YEARS

Irene Ziesmer-Wenzel celebrated her 80th birthday on July 4. Aunt Irene, as she is known to most local members, has attended the Lena Church for 23 years. Relatives from Michigan and California joined local family and friends during a Sabbath evening vespers, July 5, planned as a surprise birthday party for Aunt Irene.

21 INVESTED IN OCONTO DISTRICT

seminars to improve life-style risk factors and clinics such as stop smoking, weight control and stress management, cooking schools and exercise classes.

Adventists in the Illinois Conference were asked to participate in Health Fair '80 by the National Health Screening Council for Volunteer Organizations (NHSCVO) who knew of the health work done by Adventists.

Hinsdale Hospital was initially contacted by NHSCVO to coordinate the health fairs. Gerard D. McLane, D.H.Sc., director of the hospital's health education department, is coordinator of the follow-up seminars.

"As these screenings are held in hospitals, churches, shopping malls, community rooms and auditoriums, they will give Adventists an opportunity to rub shoulders with many individuals and agencies," says Dr. McLane. "Church members who hear about the Health Fair '80 project in their local churches are encouraged to volunteer their time."

Co-sponsoring the campaign with community services and the NHSCVO are WMAQ-TV and Allstate Insurance.

Health fair participants will receive their records by mail a month after the screening. If any findings require prompt attention, the participant will be notified immediately.

A follow-up seminar will be provided November 16 and 19 for all participants in the initial screening. At this seminar, a health professional will explain the blood chemistry profile and the health hazard appraisal, and a general life-style reduction lecture and film will be presented. Church members will be actively involved in the seminars.

Finally, a survey team will contact participants by telephone to assess what changes they have made in their life-styles as a result of Health Fair '80.

volunteering," says Chaplain Graves. "We are providing a needed service to people. This is one of the privileges we have as Christians."

In some contacts there are overtones of a spiritual nature. "You have to direct the conversation," says Mr. Wildman. "Often it is a warm, caring attitude that becomes the best spiritual care. We can show this concern."

"It is important sometimes to just be friends with a patient," says Jackie Feltman, secretary, purchasing, "to take time to listen, to read or take a walk with that person." With more volunteers, time for such activities increases.

The Sabbath philosophy can often be illustrated more aptly in action than in word. When moments count, seeing a need and responding to that need portrays a practical Christianity that speaks for itself. "Our profession of faith may proclaim that theory of religion, but it is our practical piety that holds forth the word of truth."—The Desire of Ages, p. 307.

Milton R. Siepman

SIEPMAN NAMED ASSOCIATE EDUCATION DIRECTOR

Milton Siepman has been named by the Lake Union Conference Executive Committee as the associate director of education for the union.

Born in Rwanda, Central Africa, to missionary parents, Dr. Siepman brings an extensive background in Adventist education to his new post. His most recent position has been as principal of the Berrien Springs Adventist Elementary School since 1978.

Dr. Siepman holds a B.A. degree from Helderberg College, an M.A. from Andrews University and a Ph.D. from the University of Natal in South Africa.

Most of Dr. Siepman's experience has been in Africa where he taught and served as academic dean and later as principal of Bethel College and Solusi College. He was also education, Sabbath School and public relations secretary for the South African Union for two years.

While at Andrews University from 1965 to 1967, he taught at Eau Claire

High School and in the history department at Andrews.

Dr. Siepman's wife, Arlene, works for the Lake Union Home Health Education Service. The Siepman's have two children, Millene, 21, and John, 20, both students at Andrews University.

Dr. Siepman fills the position vacated by Warren Minder who is now the director of education for the Lake Union.

Robert Connor

ROBERT CONNOR INTERVIEWED ON WSBT, SOUTH BEND

On Sunday morning, July 27, Lake Union Conference Evangelist Robert H. Connor was a guest on "Minority Forum," a program featuring community events on WSBT-TV, Channel 22, South Bend, Indiana.

Elder Connor is conducting evangelistic meetings at the Berean Seventh-day Adventist Church, 601 West Colfax Street, South Bend. The meetings are held nightly, except Thursdays, at 7:30 P.M., and they will continue through August 24.

The program not only provided an opportunity for Elder Connor to invite South Bend area residents to the meetings, but it was also a favorable time to comment on the work and beliefs of Seventh-day Adventists.

Program Host Rod Johnson, a former Protestant minister, asked Elder Connor about the organizational structure of the church, the worldwide membership, the church's educational system, and the seventh-day Sabbath.

Appearing on the program with Elder Connor were the Baker Sisters, Karen Alfred and Myrna Hunt, who are providing special music for the crusade. They sang two selections during the television program.

"I asked if they could appear with me," said Elder Connor, "because I wanted the listening audience to become acquainted with the quality of music provided for our meetings. I wanted to make a distinction between the boisterous, charismatic atmosphere some people associate with the word 'evangelism,' and the simple Gospel presented at our meetings."

"As I watched the interview on 'Minority Forum,'" said Lake Union Conference President Robert Carter, "I was grateful that God had provided this opportunity for Elder Connor to witness for our church."

HEALTH FAIR '80 SCHEDULED FOR CHICAGO

Seventh-day Adventist Community Services will play a major role in Health Fair '80, an intensive health promotion campaign, when it begins in Chicago and the surrounding suburbs on October 6.

Following the theme "Every Body Benefits," Health Fair '80 will emphasize personal health by offering screening tests to detect health problems, personal counseling, education and referral to appropriate health-care agencies.

Community services will provide follow-up services and a volunteer force to help staff more than 100 health fairs which will reach from Rockford, Illinois, to northern Indiana.

Follow-up services include
