Offer unto God
Thanksgiving

Thanksgiving OR Thanksgiving

COVER

"For the seed shall be prosperous; the vine shall give her fruit, and the ground shall give her increase, and the heavens shall give their dew; and I will cause the remnant of this people to possess all these things." Zechariah 8:12.

"Offer unto God Thanksgiving, . . ."
Psalm 50:14.

In a few days Americans will celebrate another Thanksgiving Day. It is a day set apart by presidential proclamation for expressing thanks to God for His bountiful blessings to us as individuals and as a nation.

If we choose to, most of us could complain about inflation, soaring interest rates, energy shortages, increasing unemployment, and the difficulty of trying to make ends meet. Still, we must admit that compared to most other nations, our blessings far outweigh our disadvantages.

Let us thank God that we are not involved in a war in which our youth shed their blood on the battlefield or in which our cities are devastated by air attack. Let us thank our Heavenly Father that this nation is not ravished by famine or other natural disasters. Should we not also be thankful that we live in a country where individual citizens can go to the polls and decide who their national and local leaders will be?

In a Thanksgiving proclamation issued on November 4, 1963, just 18 days before his assassination, President John Fitzgerald Kennedy made the following appeal to the American nation. He urged: "As we express our gratitude, we must never forget that the highest appreciation is not to utter words but to live by them."

The former president states a profound truth in these words. A truth that has been historically believed and taught by many others before him. President Kennedy recognized that thanksgiving should be accompanied by thanksgiving.

If we are truly thankful to God for his numerous blessings, then let us do more than say so. Let us live like it.

While on earth our Lord was disappointed by the hypocrisy of the professed people of God. In Matthew 15:8 He charged: "This people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth, and honoreth me with their lips; but their heart is far from me."

Ellen G. White, in Patriarchs and Prophets, page 188, said, "we should acknowledge God's goodness, not only by expressing our gratitude in words, but, like Jacob, by gifts and offerings to His cause."

All of the above mentioned sources seem to be expressing the same thought, "Actions speak louder than words."

You and I have the opportunity to make the coming holiday more meaningful than ever before. Which shall it be—thanksgiving or thanksgiving?

Pathfinders Honored for Heroism

Mary Ann Waggoner

Brian Waggoner

by Cliff Hoffman

BEDFORD (Indiana) Mayor John Williams issued a proclamation declaring September 27, 1980, as Mary Ann and Brian Waggoner Day. Mary Ann, 15, and Brian, 12, are members of the Bedford Stonecutters Pathfinder Club.

Why were these Pathfinders honored with a special day? Marion Brazzell, club director, told the story of how these two children had saved a drowning man.

Mrs. Brazzell said several members of the local church, including some of the 30 members of the Pathfinder Club and their guests, had taken a field trip on August 14, 1980, to Louisville, Kentucky, to visit the Louisville Zoo.

After leaving the zoo, some of the group returned to Bedford, while others went to the Judd Wilcox farm for a picnic and a swim in a lake on the farm.

One of the guests, 20-year-old Carl Rydenbark of Bloomfield, jumped from a boat into lake water which was 10-to-15 feet deep. He went under the water several times, apparently unable to swim. Mary Ann realized he was in trouble. She swam to Carl and held his head above water. Her brother, Brian, who was playing with a life preserver, saw what was happening, swam to his sister, and they managed to place the life preserver under Carl. Then they swam back to shallow water with Carl, saving his life.

On Pathfinder Day at the church, Mrs. Brazzell presented good-conduct awards to Mary Ann and Brian, not only for their act of heroism, but for their positive attitude throughout the year.

Mrs. Brazzell reported that the Pathfinders had been working on swimming and life-saving techniques from August 1 to 3.

A local newspaper reported the mayor's decision to declare a day in honor of the two Pathfinders, and featured photographs of the children.

There are many such youth in Pathfinder clubs throughout the world. Church members may rightfully feel proud of them, and thankful for such an organization which trains for service to others.

Reclaiming Thanksgiving

by Kit Watts

THANKSGIVING is a genuine American holiday. While most cultures have had a fall harvest festival for centuries, the first American Thanksgiving is close enough that we hear its footfalls in history.

After all, there are still a few houses standing along the Massachusetts coast where the voices of Pilgrims rang. Documents and diaries survive the period when 100 people left a tiny wooden ship at anchor and began to colonize the wilderness of the New World.

The chances that they would live long enough to do this were slim, and grew slimmer. Weakened by the near-starvation diet of rations left from the voyage, 47 died during the first winter.

The crops that furnished the first Thanksgiving table grew from those graves. The survivors planted corn over the burial mounds to conceal their tragedy.

The Pilgrims were not the only ones to suffer loss of life during the winter of 1621. The Indian population was decimated by an epidemic which left only 5,000 out of an estimated 95,000 who had inhabited the coast.

Needless to say, both red and white survivors were grateful indeed for a summer reprieve and a fall harvest.

Out of these stark circumstances arose Governor William Bradford's invitation for Chief Massasoit to join the Pilgrims in a special celebration.

It was special in many ways. For one, the Pilgrims were not inclined to holidays. (They had already disregarded Christmas and Easter, believing them tainted by pagan origins.) Now they wanted to feast and have games and show gratefulness for life itself.

Thanks to Squanto, who had showed them how to plant corn fields, they had a small harvest. They were at peace with their Indian neighbors. Wild game could be had in nearby woods. It was a simple beginning to a great tradition.

Chief Massasoit responded enthusiastically to the invitation. He arrived with 90 warriors and five deer! The guests outnumbered the hosts by two to one.

An even more astounding insight into this gathering is that men outnumbered women by thirty to one. Only five Pilgrim matrons were still alive. With the help of a handful of young girls, they cooked for three days for this throng of 150.

Kit Watts is periodicals librarian at Andrews University. She has had articles published in the Adventist Review, Insight, These Times, and Liberty magazines.

During the next 250 years Americans enlarged the Thanksgiving tradition. From the Pilgrim's era forward a religious spirit always pervaded the occasions. It was not unusual for praise and prayers to rise to God in New England churches before the fragrance of pies and the laughter of children filled village streets or isolated farms with festivity.

Sometimes a national or state event would call forth the formal proclamation of a day of thanks. But for the most part, local communities developed their own customs. And so the day took on color and significance because of happenings in people's lives.

In a most unlikely time—the midst of the Civil War—Thanksgiving became a national holiday. Though the war had torn the nation asunder, President Lincoln reminded Americans that they had enjoyed "blessings of fruitful fields and healthful skies."

For the first time, schools, government offices and businesses closed everywhere at the same time. The outcome of the war was not much clearer in 1863 than the outcome of the Pilgrim adventure had been in 1621.

While Thanksgiving was set aside to mark Divine providences of the immediate past, in reality the day was also a kind of statement of faith. Words and prayers said at these times can only be guessed at. But the sentiment may have been, "If we have come this far through all that, we believe Providence can take us further still."

In our industrial, technological age, Thanksgiving has undergone secularization. Most of us have little to do with the reality of harvest.

The supermarket in November offers about the same fare as it did last April, and it is generous. Others plant the fields of which we eat. Others build the houses we inhabit. Our holiday does not well up out of our own life experiences.

Thanksgiving in our time is rather an escape from life, a time to forget our harried days. For a salaried person it is a privilege, one of a few days each year he can stay home without losing money vital to the electric bill or the car payment.

In a factory setting the holiday amounts to a mathematical headache which adds stress to the workload for several days in advance. Everyone is pushed harder so that production will not fall behind during the three-day week.

For business people, Thanksgiving is—if possible—dollar oriented; it's a time for sales, for Pilgrim-and-Indian advertising motifs, and longer hours than ever.

For sports and entertainment fans Thanksgiving Day is televised parades, and hours and hours of first downs, muddy tackles and star quarterbacks.

Even among devout Christians (and Adventists are not excepted), churches remain vacant. The only prayers said are hurried ones before the mashed potatoes chill.

Perhaps the footfalls of history have become faint on the ear, receding into the distance. Perhaps Divine providence seems a quaint notion outmoded by our technological independence.

Perhaps time, like a glacier, pushes us irretrievably forward, slowly grinding the boulders of our national and spiritual heritage to dust.

But I would venture the challenge that we recover for ourselves, our families and our churches, a true spirit of thanks-giving. Rather than letting Thanksgiving be subverted by outside forces, let us summon some strength and conviction to make it a day of memory and joy.

In the tide of food preparation and the temptation of televised diversions, could we actually take 30 minutes to swap family stories?

At dinner we might propose to our guests that each one share two important events from his life from the past year and how this has changed or affected him.

Perhaps we could take the whole initiative as host and hostess and say a personal blessing over each person eating with us, or place a note of thanks at each individual's plate.

Perhaps the energies of young children could be channeled for an hour (with props and promptings) toward reenacting scenes from a Pilgrim Thanksgiving or other memorable occasions from Bible or national history.

Perhaps there is a place of local history the group could visit. Bundling up for a trudge in the woods might be a time to see how nature has readied herself for winter.

Perhaps there are games to play where young and old interrelate rather than separate.

And could not some among us join with or initiate community Thanksgiving services?

What of our abundance can we consciously give and share to set this time apart as a day when we are thankful, a day when we are free?

Let us allow Thanksgiving this year to overtake us with a sense of awareness.

If our days are too crowded, let us plan a simple time.

If our days are lonely, let us plan a feast.

If we have ever been blessed, let us find a way to say so! History is on our side.

The Blessings of the Family

by Ruth Murdoch

THE family tie is the closest, the most tender and sacred, of any on earth. It was designed to be a blessing to mankind. And it is a blessing wherever the marriage covenant is entered into intelligently, in the fear of God, and with due consideration for its responsibilities."—The Ministry of Healing, pp. 356, 357.

For most of us the idea of the family includes three sets of relationships: First, our parental home, the family in which we grew up; then our own marriage with the blessings shared by husband, wife and children, and last, the homes established by our children.

Each family circle provides blessings and experiences that enrich our lives and sweeten our memories. Many recollections center about my childhood home in Montana but a few incidents stand out in bold relief.

When I was about six years old my family was living in an isolated homestead in the northern part of the state. The nearest post office was 20 miles away and there was no Seventh-day Adventist church within 150 miles. The little home Sabbath School was all we had.

One Friday evening 20 minutes before sundown, another Adventist family drove unexpectedly into our front yard. They had traveled by horse and buggy more than 30 miles to spend Sabbath with us.

Great was their astonishment to find all five of us children bathed, combed and dressed in clean clothes while mother, in a crisp apron, was putting supper on a white table cloth.

We had worship together, and everyone enjoyed the supper, especially the fresh-baked cinnamon rolls.

The passing years have taught us the blessing of having a mother who exemplified in her own life the principles she taught her children.

From her we learned practical lessons of neatness, order, respect for the Sabbath, the importance of Christian education, and unselfish service to the community.

How can words describe the blessing of a father who loved his family supremely, helped us to accept the little hurts and disappointments and to face life with determination and confidence.

I can still hear him singing, "Blest be the sorrow kind, the storm that drives us nearer home." And when I had failed miserably in something important to me he would say, "Papa understands! You will do better next time."

Sometimes when children are growing up together they are not certain that having brothers and sisters is an unmixed blessing.

There is often rivalry among siblings, competition and a struggle for recognition, but if the family circle is threatened from outside, the brothers and sisters usually present a united front.

Then in later years the pleasure of shared memories, mutual interests and personal concern for each other ripens to provide a rich blessing indeed.

Probably the most vital and enduring of all human relationships is that which develops between a man and a woman in a long and lasting marriage. It is the basis of all that is best in life—the source of true happiness.

This is the reason Christ used the marriage relationship to illustrate His love for His church.

There's a bliss beyond all that the minstrel has told,
When two, that are link'd
in one heavenly tie
With heart never changing, and brow never cold
Love on thro' all ills, and love on till they die."

—Thomas Moore

Love between husband and wife is undoubtedly the supreme blessing of the family. Home should be all that the word implies—a place where the affections are cultivated rather than repressed. It should be a place where love, sympathy, and true courtesy are daily expressed.

Children born into such a home are given a foundation of security and trust on which to build a personality and character that will be a blessing to society in this life and a basis for companionship with Christ in the life to come. Surely the love and laughter of children must be counted among the blessings of the family.

But the children grow up too soon and go out to establish homes of their own. Then the table is set for two again and the parents must find their happiness in each other's company, and in friendships or service to neighbors and community.

However, there is yet another family blessing without which the circle is hardly complete. Grandpa and grandma show with pride the pictures of the grandchildren, and as one said, "Now we enjoy all the thrill without the responsibility and care."

Longfellow aptly described the blessings of the family when he wrote:

Talk not of wasted affection,
affection never was wasted,
If it enrich not the heart of another,
its waters, returning
Back to their springs, like the rain shall fill them
full of refreshment;
That which the fountain
sends forth returns again to the fountain.

"I'm so glad I'm a part of the family of God," for it is in union with Christ's family on earth that all the richest blessings of heaven are ours.

PARENTS ADVISORY COUNCIL

The 1980's reflect an Andrews program rapidly expanding and striving to meet the criteria for a higher standard. The skill and insight of many people is necessary for this endeavor. Andrews now actively seeks wider counsel to reach some of the decisions concerning the operation of the university.

According to Margaret Kroncke, freshman education director at the university, the Parents Advisory Council is one group providing such a resource—a better understanding of the effectiveness of educational activities and student life on campus. The council has met quarterly for almost a year.

Parents perceive views that could be helpful to the university through their children and other students. The validity of such views, and the practical way they might be analyzed to develop better approaches to university policies and practices, is tested in these advisory meetings.

"We want our children to be useful to society after they graduate," said Dr. Joseph Battenburg, one of the council members. "The council puts a focus on the university's needs and helps students overcome some of the barriers in getting the education they want. This kind of external input promotes a higher level of accountability for the university."

Mrs. Kroncke identified three primary objectives for the council: reviewing policies and programs, initiating helpful proposals, and serving as a body of consultants to the president and the officers of the university. Their counsel is given directly to the president by the liaison officer, Mrs. Kroncke, and the members of the group are his advisors, collectively.

The council encourages parents with creative suggestions or concerns about policy, programs or curriculum to refer questions to one of the following committee members: Charles Woods, chairman, Berrien Springs, (616) 471-2390; Margaret Kroncke, university liaison officer, (616) 471-3470; Reginald Barnes, Chicago, (312) 846-2661; Joseph Battenburg, South Lyon, Michigan, (313) 354-2829; Glenna Cantrell, Berrien Springs, (616) 473-6108; William Hamberger, Berrien Springs, (616) 471-7035; Cedric Ward, Berrien Springs, (616) 471-9028; Gerald Hile, Middlebury, Indiana, (219) 825-9205; Jasmine Jacob, Berrien Springs, (616) 471-7460; Kurt Koerting, Downers Grove, Illinois, (312) 968-1907; Betty Koudele, Dowagiac, Michigan, (616) 782-5424; Alice Rasmussen, Milton, Wisconsin, (608) 868-3298; and Richard Thackham, Fenton, Michigan, (313) 629-8348.

The next meeting of the council will be held on January 18, 1981.

L.P.N. COURSE NOW OFFERED

The College of Technology now offers an L.P.N. (Licensed Practical Nursing) program jointly sponsored with Hinsdale Hospital, according to Stephen Young, director of occupational education at the university.

The 12-month program is based on approximately 2,000 hours of practicum training, says Mr. Young. All instruction is received off-campus in connection with the hospital.

"Job opportunities for L.P.N.'s are good all over the country," he said. "They are often the hospital personnel in the closest contact with the patients they help. It is exciting work."

Reasons for the joint program reflect this need. In addition, the merger offers students standardized credit from an accredited university.

These students reap the benefits that all Andrews students receive at the time of registration. In addition, this training can be used as a base for further education in the field.

"We have 36 students currently enrolled in this program," said Mr. Young. "That proves that there is a need for this type of educational opportunity in our present curriculum."

If you are interested in entering the L.P.N. program, apply immediately to the College of Technology or Stephen Young, Director of Occupational Education,

His topic was "The Church in the Contemporary World—Challenge and Response."

BLANTON SPEAKS AT NAFSA CONVENTION

R. Kenneth Blanton, Andrews' faculty advisor for foreign students, presented an in-depth study report at the Region V National Association for Foreign Student Affairs convention in Detroit, November 6 and 7. His report was a follow-up of a presentation given at the national NAFSA convention last May. ### FAMILY PRACTICE RESIDENCY PROGRAM UPDATE

HINSDALE—During the last decade there has been a national shift toward family-centered health care. In keeping with this trend and Hinsdale Sanitarium and Hospital's commitment to health-care education, a three-year family practice residency program for graduate physicians was started at the hospital in 1975. Today, 24 residents are enrolled and 15 have completed the program.

Under the direction of 10 teaching chiefs and other members of the Hinsdale Hospital medical staff who contribute to their clinical experience, the residents see patients at the Hinsdale Family Medicine Center, adjacent to the hospital.

Approximately 5,300 families are registered at this ambulatory-care center which includes 12 examination rooms, two minor operating rooms, doctors' offices and conference rooms.

The Hinsdale Family Medicine Center provides residents with responsibilities similar to those they will meet when they set up their own practices. This gives the residents an appreciation of how the family physician actually serves the community.

Present duties and locations of alumni range from four who are fulfilling military service commitments in Oklahoma, Missouri, California, and Germany, to a physician practicing in Guam and one on the faculty of the family practice residency program.

Wayne Friestad, M.D., a former resident, is one of three new faculty members, along with Drs. Barbara Slee and Jan Grouse.

New teaching chiefs are Drs. Judith Operchal, radiology; Herndon Harding, psychiatry; and Warren Parmelee, emergency medicine.

The Family Practice Residency Program holds a three-year accreditation (the maximum length allowed) from the Liaison Committee on Graduate Medical Education, American Medical Association.

1980 CAMPOREE AT PECATONICA FOREST

The 1980 Illinois Pathfinder Camporee attracted 300 youth and counselors from clubs all over the state to the Pecatonica Forest Preserve West of Rockford, from September 19 to 21.

Aside from a rainstorm Friday night that soaked many Pathfinders' tents, and a tornado warning Saturday night, the weather was ideal for the camporee. Sunny weather Sabbath dried wet sleeping bags, tents and Pathfinders.

One of the big attractions at the camporee was the pump drinking fountain.

Paul Beal, director of the Elgin Black Hawks, double checks his club to see that they are ready for inspection.

A favorite pastime at the camporee was canoeing on the Pecatonica River.

NEWS NOTES

● A "Fun, Run, Walk" was held Sunday, September 21, by the Elkhart Church for any member who wanted to take part. The charted course was 1.1 miles. Some ran, some walked. Also there was an obstacle course, tug of war, and a jump-rope-a-thon. At the end Scripture passages and quotes from The Ministry of Healing were read, and prayer was offered. Placement ribbons were given for winners and losers. Participants commented that it had been very beneficial, physically and spiritually. A fellowship dinner closed the program.

● On Sabbath, September 27, the junior Sabbath School members were in charge of the adult Sabbath School. Pastor Don Troyer, visiting from Tennessee, had the worship service.

● On Sunday, September 21, 1980, the Evansville Pathfinders took part in a 20-mile bike hike in preparation for a 50-mile hike next spring, according to Sunny Weedman, communication secretary. Richard Johnson, club director, and Mike Higgenbotham, a counselor, organized the bike hike. Bill Adkins drove a bus to pick up club members who did not ride the full distance. Two out of the group who completed the bike hike, Michael Coleman and Jonathan Weedman, were 10-year-olds.

● "And what did God make on the second day?" inquired Ann Jaramio, leader of the Cicero Vacation Bible School, as she proceeded to blow up a balloon to demonstrate the use of air that God made. "A balloon," quipped a small wide-eyed youngster on the front row. About 90 children enjoyed the Bible study on creation, the refreshments, the play time and the crafts that were offered free to them at the two-week V.B.S. A free bus ride to the Cicero Church School was a highlight of the day for many of the children. Nearly 100 percent of the parents attended the final Thursday night program.

● Tear up your credit cards, have a systematic saving plan, and give generously to the Lord, were some of the hints that Jerry Lastine gave to the Cicero Church during the four-week financial seminar presented during August and September at the Wednesday night prayer meetings, according to Ramona Trubey, communication secretary. "God's people should be good financial business people," said Elder Lastine, stewardship secretary for the Indiana Conference. "Being financially sound is a part of Christian living and should be implemented early in the life with the training of the children," he stated.

SCHOOL GOING STRONG IN PAOLI

The Paoli Church School began its eighth year on August 25 with 13 students in seven grades, and Marge Allen as the teacher.

Assisting in the lower grades again this year is Marge's mother, Lucille Allen.

Last year Mrs. Allen left her home in Casper, Wyoming, and came to help her daughter "get settled" in Paoli. However, being a retired school teacher, she recognized the school's need of another teacher and stayed the whole year, teaching grades one through four. Of her work in Paoli she said, "I'm just doing my missionary duty."

Mrs. Allen taught for several years in church schools and public schools in Wyoming, as well as in special schools for the deaf and mentally impaired.

She is 65 years old and has already retired from teaching twice. She feels that the joy of watching her students grow is sufficient payment for her efforts.

Paoli church members are fortunate to have two dedicated teachers in their school.

ORGAN DONATED TO HUNTINGBURG CHURCH

The Huntingburg Church now has an organ to enhance its Sabbath services.

Church member Carolyn Moore was visiting her neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Gress of Ireland, Indiana, and told them that her church group was looking for a good used piano to purchase.

Mrs. Gress said she didn't have a piano for sale, but that she would be happy to give the Adventist Church her organ.

The Gresses are members of Ireland St. Mary's Parrish where their daughter served as church organist. When their church purchased a new organ, this one was given to their daughter in appreciation for her services.

Their daughter has since married and moved away, leaving the organ unused.

Carolyn and her daughter-in-law Marcia Moore are stripping and restaining the cabinet to match other church furniture. Mark Adams, an Adventist organ technician who works for the Kimball Organ Division in Jasper, has volunteered to clean and restore the interior mechanism.

SUMMER RECREATION AT CAPITOL CITY

The young people of the Capitol City (Indianapolis) Church enjoyed a full summer of recreational activities, including softball, hiking, tumbling, and camping.

Joseph Robinson, general manager of the newly formed Adventist Youth Sporting League (A.Y.S.L.), gave the youth an opportunity to enhance their skills with the A.Y.S.L. softball team.

The team had 32 members, ages 7 to 14, and a coaching staff of seven. They matched their talents with other teams in the city and concluded the season with five wins and one loss.

The A.Y.S.L. plans to continue with winter sports. Plans are being made to expand the program to the federation level.

The Capitol City Pathfinders, directed by Jean Holcombe, took a 20-mile bike ride. Thirty-one Pathfinders rode the distance for fun and physical exercise. The ride was taken over the Eagle Creek Bike Trail, where the young people could visit the grounds of the Indianapolis Museum of Art.

The development of tumbling skills has been a project of the church for some time. This summer the Starlite Tumbling Team, directed by Linda Kay Taylor, received billboard recognition as they gave three performances at one of Indiana's largest shopping malls.

The team members are 4 to 14 years old, and have performed at camp meeting, summer camps, basketball games, and federation recreational programs.

The summer ended with a three-day camping trip to McCormick Creek State Park. Sixty-five members of the Pathfinder Club, along with members of other church organizations, communed with nature and fellowshiped together.

Capitol City is thankful for the dedicated leadership for these activities. Each of the summer recreational programs, along with Vacation Bible School and the Little Lambs Choir, was a stepping stone to the goal of the church to develop the minds, bodies, and souls of its young people.

This is the first scholarship fund to be set up at A.U.C. specifically for black students.

The fund is to be directed by the college scholarship committee and invested carefully so that it will yield a maximum return.

Of the income, up to half is to be used each year for scholarships for worthy students.

The rest of the annual income will be turned back into the endowment fund to keep pace with inflation and insure that the fund continues in the years ahead.

Suggested guidelines for the scholarship fund stipulate that the recipient must be: Afro-American (Black) or West Indian Negro; a Seventh-day Adventist in good standing; of good reputation, as attested to by former teachers or employers; able to give evidence of good scholarship, and able to prove financial need.

It is felt that Dr. Burrell has many friends who may contribute to this fund for the advancement of the Lord's work.

SISTERS GIVE SCHOLARSHIP FUNDS TO OAKWOOD COLLEGE

C. B. Rock, president of Oakwood College and former pastor of the City Temple Church, was in Detroit recently to accept $1,000 in scholarship funds from the daughters of the late Edna C. Taylor.

The sisters contributed the funds in remembrance of their mother, who had been a student at Oakwood before it became a college.

A plaque bearing her name and the names of her daughters—Virginia Price, June Fullwood, Jacquelyn Harris, Gloria Fisher, and Joyce Jones—will be displayed in the Eva B. Dykes library on the campus.

At an early age, Mrs. Taylor joined the Adventist church after a colporteur sold books to her father, Robert S. Carter, in Atlanta, Georgia.

The family later moved to Detroit, where Mr. Carter, a builder, drew the plans for and helped construct the Hartford Avenue Church, now City Temple. Mr. Carter was first elder at Hartford for several years during the early 1900's.

Accepting the funds, Elder Rock commented, "I commend all of you for this fine presentation. I sincerely hope that others who have roots at Oakwood will remember the college with similar gifts for scholarships or development. In behalf of those students who will benefit by this gift, I thank you."

CHURCH GROWS IN JEFFERSONVILLE

The Harrison Avenue Church in Jeffersonville, Indiana, has experienced a 60-percent growth in membership and attendance, due in part to the erection of a new church home.

There were only three members in the Sabbath School when the former pastor, Morris Wren, arrived.

The membership growth was given a large boost when Ben Higgins, of the Christ Gospel Tabernacle, joined the church. His daughter and son were baptized after a summer crusade.

Mr. Higgins had been a minister of the Christ Gospel Tabernacle for more than 20 years. The Harrison Avenue members are hopeful that other members of his congregation will soon follow his example.

Because of city planning and urban renewal, the Jeffersonville congregation had been without a church home for several years. After meeting in halls and city buildings, the members decided to build a church.

R. C. Brown, executive secretary of the Lake Region Conference, gave notice of building requirements and acted as chief liaison for the project.

This small congregation took to the task of raising funds and contacting former members. A heavy share of the actual construction work was handled by the members. Sister Anna Logan, baptized by Elder Flagg when the church was organized, donated a new piano and choir pews.

Visitors marvel at the beauty of the new edifice. The city planner and assistant to the mayor, Earl Summers, exclaimed, "This church is indeed a tribute to the community and a place of beauty in the city of Jeffersonville."

C. D. Joseph, president of the Lake Region Conference, was the speaker at the opening services when members of the community were invited to visit the church. "To God be the glory, great things He hath done!"

● A Sabbath School training session was held for teachers recently at Camp Au Sable. The theme, "To Make Him Known," accented a threefold purpose: to win, to train and to hold. Clyde Groomer, conference Sabbath School director, coordinated the program. Speakers at the training session included Charles Brooks from the General Conference Sabbath School department, and Roy Naden of Andrews University. Elder Naden introduced a new study outline for the book "Counsels on Sabbath School Work." His special emphasis was for the teacher, but the outline is also designed for other Sabbath School officers.

NEW SCHOOL PURCHASED AT GRAND RAPIDS

Grand Rapids Junior Academy is now housed in adequate headquarters in a choice neighborhood, according to Pastor Paul M. Matacio.

The story behind the purchase reminded him that God is still alive and working on Planet Earth, Elder Matacio said.

Located in the northwestern section of town, the 10-acre plot fronts on two streets, Oakley and Fairchild, where Leonard Street crosses.

It has been a public school, but the board of education voted to sell the property and consolidate the students elsewhere.

Three bids were submitted by interested groups, and when they were opened the Adventist bid was not the highest. But the board voted to sell the property to the church for $160,000, a bid $77,000 lower than the highest bid by a nursing home.

The reason for this choice was revealed by one of the board members. He told the group that neighbors near the facility had met and were unanimously in favor of its being sold to Adventists for school purposes.

A second miracle enabled members to sell their old building for $37,000 just at the time when they needed to pay for the newer school, Elder Matacio said.

Possession was granted in August, before the closing on the purchase, so that preparations could be made for the school year. There are 105 students in 10 grades, with 7 faculty members.

NEW COMMUNITY SERVICES CENTER OPENS AT BANGOR

Mayor Edward Waite officially opened the Bangor Community Services Center on September 21 in an official ribbon-cutting ceremony.

The mayor commended the members for their foresight in making provision for the needs of the unfortunate in the community.

Also present for the ceremony was City Manager Royce Downey who spoke to the members and community friends who gathered for the opening.

Land for the center, adjacent to the church, was donated by a local doctor, Joseph E. Cooper, and members have been working to complete the building for several months.

The building is 24-by-36 feet and the basic structure is a converted portable classroom.

Dorothy Piper, director of the new center, has served in that capacity for several years in the community. For many years she conducted the work at her home and in a room in the church.

Winter camp at Au Sable begins December 23.

ANNUAL WINTER CAMP INCLUDES FUN FOR ALL

Plans are nearly completed for the annual Camp Au Sable Winter Camp, December 23 to January 4.

Included in the activities will be tobogganing, cross-country skiing, snowmobile rides, ice skating, sleigh rides, as well as downhill skiing at nearby slopes.

Ceramics classes are also available for a small fee.

Lester Rilea, camp director, stressed the importance of getting applications in early.

"Whether you are planning to come full time, or just for a day or two, we have accommodations," Elder Rilea said, "but it helps us in our planning to know who is coming."

Living units are available for families, as well as college or academy students. Preference in housing is given to full-time, early reservations.

Academy youth will have planned activities and supervised housing, Elder Rilea said, and no young people below academy age will be admitted without a parent.

A $5 deposit reserves a place, and the following rates are payable at registration: adults, $12; full-time students, $9; preschool, $5.

The family rate, after the first four people is: full-time students, $7.50 and preschoolers, $4.50 per day. This includes unmarried children in the same room with their parents.

INTERNATIONAL BAPTISM AT HOLLY

An "international" baptism was held in the Holly Church on September 27 for a brother and sister from Rumania. Pastor Earl Zager baptized Erika and Edward Cetean, students at Adelphian Academy. Erika is a senior and Edward a junior. Erika gave her personal testimony, choosing as her baptismal scripture Psalm 119: 9-16. She then sang "Yes, Lord," accompanying herself at the piano. Edward also gave his testimony, and played a violin solo. Erika and Edward, with their parents, Viorel and Esther Cetean of Lake Orion, arrived in Detroit on March 18 from Slatina, Rumania, to begin a new life in America. Their sponsors, Lucretia and Vasile Tipta of Redford, and their great-aunt and uncle also attended the service.

HOME NUTRITION WORKSHOP HELD AT AU SABLE

A total of 19 representatives from Michigan churches graduated from the 1980 Home Nutrition Instructors Workshop held at Camp Au Sable, September 14 to 18. The Michigan Conference health services and lay activities departments sponsored the workshop. Conducting the class this year were Dr. Patricia Mutch and Viola Lutz of the Andrews University home economics department, and Natalie Weaver of Northville. Mrs. Weaver assists her husband, Dr. Arthur Weaver, in a variety of health classes in the Detroit metropolitan area each year. Graduates of the workshop receive their credentials from the General Conference and must conduct a cooking school each year to maintain their instructor status. After they have completed three community outreach programs, their certification becomes permanent. Pictured are, back row from left, Natalie Weaver, Marjorie Snyder, Mildred Kidder, Margille McCoy, Linda Esche, Ruth DeLorean, Rene Ondersma, Dolly Hocking, Susan Wyatt, Nancy Holtorf, Freda Wenberg, Crys Starlin, Martha Willis, Patricia Mutch, Viola Lutz. ## E. G. WHITE WRITINGS UPHELD BY G.C.

Officials at the world office of Seventh-day Adventists made it clear today that the life and work of Ellen G. White are considered to be the confirmation of the gift of prophecy within the 3.5 million-member denomination in spite of recent charges of "literary borrowing" made by her critics. Such claims involving the writing of some 46 books before her death in 1915 are not the first to be made.

An Adventist minister, who later left the church, began criticizing her work as early as 1887. Many of his claims were reviewed in the book Ellen G. White and Her Critics written in 1951 by F. D. Nichol, a respected Adventist clergyman and editor. The latest "copyist" cry has come from Walter Rea, an Adventist pastor in Southern California.

Assertions that she borrowed heavily from other authors in all her writings are without foundation. "Of her enormous literary output—25,000,000 words—only a small fraction can be traced to other authors," said Dr. Robert W. Olson, secretary of the Ellen G. White Estate.

Recent studies by two other Adventist clergymen, Raymond Cottrell and Walter Specht, indicate Mrs. White was an avid reader. This is an astonishing fact when one considers the endless demands made by the church on her time. While her formal schooling may not have achieved academic attainment, as many others have, she compensated by reading widely, Dr. Olson said.

Her son, W. C. White, when referring to The Desire of Ages—her 835-page book on the life of Christ—said she had read from the works of Hanna, Fleetwood, Farrar, and Geikie. As she then read their works, these authors brought back to mind descriptive scenes presented to her before. Though having exceptional literary gifts of her own, she relied on these authorities for the historical and geographical information not revealed to her in vision.

Dr. Olson said, "Though some question the propriety of copying from others, it appears to have been a common practice in the 18th and 19th centuries." Raymond Cottrell, when comparing 30 Bible commentaries while working on the Seventh-day Adventist Commentary from 1953 to 1957, was amazed to find that many of these respected commentators had "copied significant amounts of material from one another without giving credit." In Dr. Olson's judgment, borrowing does not dilute her claims to inspiration, because originality is not a test of one's inspiration.

"The church's confidence in the prophetic leadership of Ellen White is unimpaired by recent allegations of her critics." Dr. Olson says. Adventists fully believe that God spoke through her a century ago when the organizational features of the church were in the beginning stages and that her counsel is as dependable today as it was then. Her writings are so Christ-centered and practical they have led spiritually-minded readers into a deeper Christian experience, he added.

Critics have charged she had selfish motives for writing books and imply she was wealthy. "On the contrary, she died in debt," Dr. Olson says. Instead of accumulating personal wealth, she gave generously to the acute needs of the church and its institutions everywhere.

No, the Seventh-day Adventist Church is not about to disregard Ellen White's books or lessen its convictions regarding her work as a true prophet of God, Dr. Olson concluded.

MINORITY WRITERS WORKSHOP HELD AT ANDREWS

The third Minority Writers Workshop was recently held on the campus of Andrews University.

Biennially minority writers from the North American Division attend the workshop sponsored by the office of human relations and communication department of the General Conference. The 35 writers who attended this year made it the largest ever.

According to a survey taken, the most interesting part of the workshop was the script evaluation panel. The manuscripts evaluated had been submitted before the workshop by each of those in attendance. A panel made up of teachers and editors critiqued the scripts, and during two sessions they made comments and gave suggestions for improvements. An hour of credit from Andrews University was available to those who completed 30 hours of instruction and assignment study time.

The largest group of instructors came from the communication and English departments of Andrews University. Others represented the Review and Herald Publishing Association, Oakwood College, the South Bend Tribune, and the General Conference staff.

At the workshop held in 1978, a Minority Writers Guild was organized. During this last session Dr. Lizette Westney, a professor in the English department of Howard University, was reelected president of the Guild.

Plans are being made for the next Minority Writers Workshop in 1982. In the meantime, if you are interested in writing for publication, join one of the Guild chapters.

STUDENT LEADERS ATTEND ANNUAL SEMINAR

The Annual Secondary Leaders Seminar was held October 2 to 5, 1980, at Camp Au Sable in Michigan with 254 student leaders, faculty, conference and union educational and youth directors participating, according to Charles Case, Lake Union Conference youth director.

Chet Damron, campus chaplain for Andrews University and associate pastor of the Pioneer Memorial Church, was the speaker. Using an actual bunch of grapes on a vine for illustration, Elder Damron charged the youth to be good examples as leaders, because a person is known by his fruit.

The student leaders from the 10 academies in the Lake Union, and Kingsway College in Oshawa, Canada, responded to the challenge presented by Elder Damron. They pledged themselves to return to their campuses and by their lives exemplify Christ to their peers.

Besides the spiritual challenge, the purpose of this seminar, which is sponsored jointly by the Lake Union education and youth departments, is to help the students learn how to operate in their respective offices, according to Warren Minder, Lake Union Conference director of education.

Your prayers are solicited for these youth leaders during the 1980-81 school year.
