A Victorious Year

It is hard to believe that another year has slipped by. Where did it go? Truly, time flies! When we approached the decade of the eighties a few months ago, we did so with high expectations. There was the hope that things would take a turn for the better.

Our nation, which had been stunned by the unlawful seizure of almost three score of its citizens by Iran, hoped that by now all of them would have been released. Yet 52 are still being held hostage.

We had also hoped that 1980 would see a reversal in inflation, a significant lowering of interest rates, a decline in the numbers of unemployed, a solution to the fuel crisis, and a strengthening of the economy. It is no secret that these goals have not been achieved.

Yet, in the words of Fanny J. Crosby's poem, 1980 has been "a year of precious blessings, and glorious victories won" throughout the Lake Union Conference territory. Even though our area is one of the hardest hit economically because of the decline of the auto industry, each of our conferences have experienced gains in tithe income. Because of the faithfulness of God's people, the work of soul winning has not diminished. We anxiously await the fourth quarter membership report.

I know that the gains which have been made did not come without a fierce struggle. The enemy of souls saw to it that God's workmen were assailed by strong opposition on every hand. Some of you have experienced doubts, frustrations, and tears. The following quotation from an anonymous author reminds us, however, that:

"There are no victories without conflicts, no rainbows without a cloud and a storm."

As we stand on the threshold of 1981 with renewed determination to conquer in the name of our Lord, I wish to challenge each of you with a statement taken from The Ministry of Healing, by Ellen G. White, p. 485. "No other victory we can gain will be so precious as the victory over self." [Emphasis supplied.]

If, in the midst of all the noteworthy success we were privileged to enjoy in 1980, we did not gain the victory over self, then the year in the truest sense was a failure. My earnest appeal is that we resolve that not too many days of 1981 will slip by, without a determined effort to gain the most important victory of all.

Let us be encouraged by this closing sentence from the pen of inspiration as recorded in Testimonies for the Church, vol. 5, p. 231: "Through the grace of Christ, by courage, by faith, by watchfulness, we may gain the victory."

After Many Days

by Rhoda Wills

Cathy, Adam and Keith Lockwitz

Lydie, Mark, Markie and Marla Regazzi

If you have a non-Christian friend you would like to lead to Christ, Mark and Lydie Regazzi have some advice for you.

Be patient. Ten years passed before Keith and Cathy Lockwitz's baptism, marking in a special way the anniversary of a friendship which began on somewhat less than friendly terms.

For two years beginning in 1970 Lydie was Cathy's eighth-grade home economics teacher. The two of them did not get along well. Lydie puzzled over ways to motivate Cathy to do her assignments, mostly without success. One day Cathy even told Lydie bluntly, "I won't do the project!"

"When I looked into that angry little face," Lydie says, "I had no way of knowing that Cathy would become as precious as a daughter to Mark and me."

Be nonjudgmental. After Cathy's father verbally attacked Lydie, she understood more of the terrifying struggles in Cathy's home, and a channel of communication opened between Lydie and Cathy. When Lydie and Mark invited Cathy home for weekend visits, she asked if she might call them "Mom and Dad." The Regazzi's children accepted her joyously, also.

Be generous. Cathy attended Sabbath School and church with the Regazzi family twice that first year. When she was hospitalized at Ann Arbor for spinal surgery, Mark and Lydie visited her several times before she was released to a foster home. At Cathy's request, the Regazzis sought permission to take her into their home, but their request was denied.

Be persistent. Mark and Lydie agreed with Cathy that friends do not give up on one another. During the next six years, the Regazzis moved to Alabama, to Mississippi, and then to Ohio before moving back to Michigan. Daily letters and frequent phone calls kept the friendship strong. Because of Mark's ordination service, the Regazzis were unable to attend Cathy's wedding in 1977, but Lydie made the five bridesmaids' dresses as her love gift to the bride.

Be responsive. In 1979 Mark and Lydie returned to Berrien Springs and got settled in their own house. Cathy, Keith and baby son, Adam, were their first weekend guests for a joyful reunion.

Because Cathy and Keith were experiencing difficult times with inflation and adjustments that many families face, Mark and Lydie hesitated to introduce religious issues that might divide rather than unify this young home. Yet the Regazzis longed to share the peace and stability only Jesus can bring.

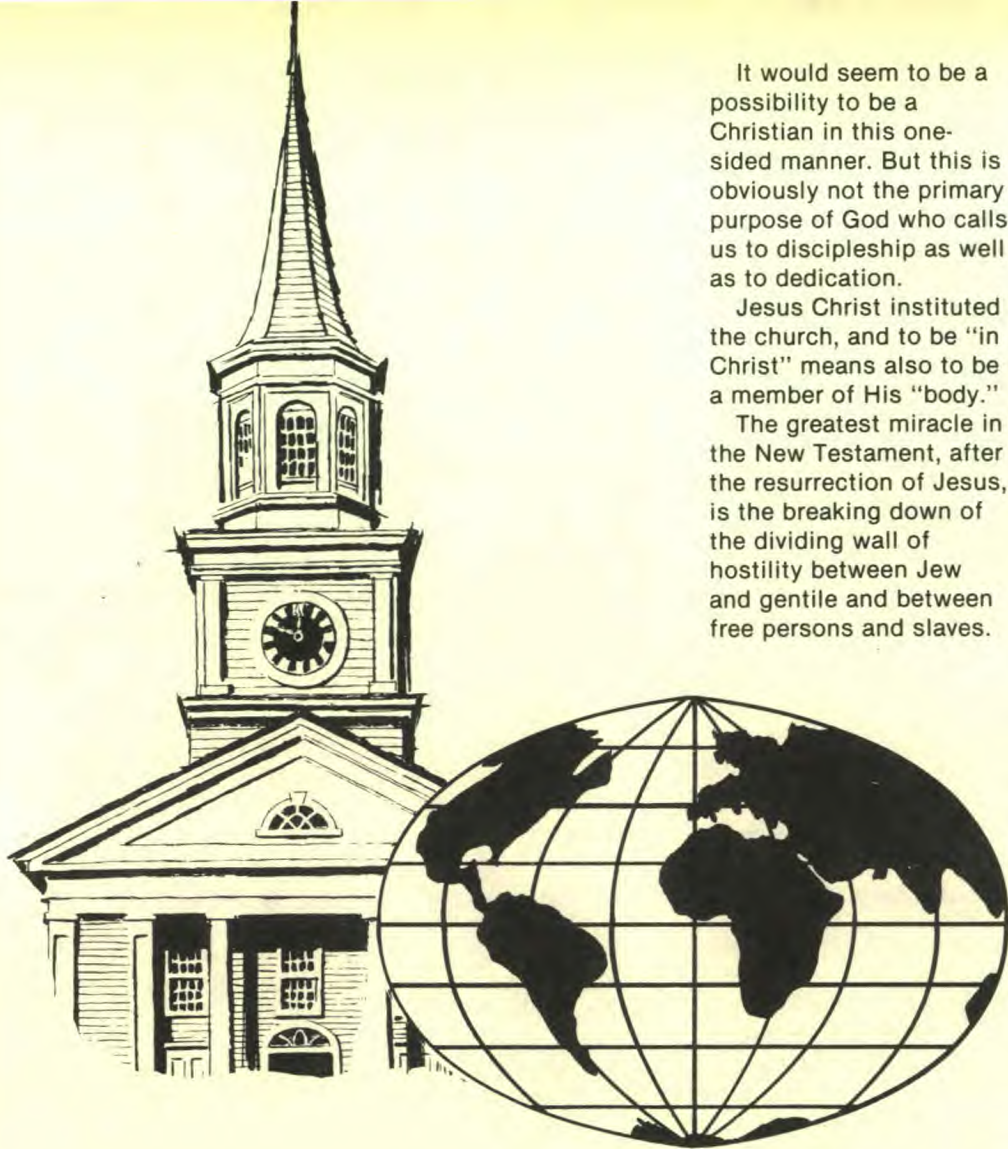

They recognized the need for patience, but they did not want to misconstrue that for action. Lydie remembers with regret that she waited too long to invite a neighbor in Mississippi to study the Bible. The Regazzi's next move canceled the opportunity. Neither Mark nor Lydie wanted that to happen again.

Praying for God's direction, the Regazzis decided to ask Keith and Cathy that day if they would like to study the Bible with them. Keith and Cathy accepted enthusiastically, and in the weeks that followed they enjoyed especially the Revelation studies.

One evening during their study, Mark observed that he wished he could have grown up in the Adventist Church, referring to his own conversion at age 19. Cathy replied that she had often wished that, too. Then looking at her little son she added, "I want Adam to have that privilege."

In many instances the result of Christian witnessing can never be known in this life. Stephen, of New Testament times, died not knowing the effect of his witness to a young man named Saul. So Mark and Lydie feel a special blessing in the baptism of their friends, Cathy and Keith—even after 10 years.

Rhoda Wills is supervising instructor in education and instructor of English at Andrews Academy, Berrien Springs, Michigan. This story was written during the Christian Writers Workshop, July 7 to 10, 1980, in Berrien Springs.

It would seem to be a possibility to be a Christian in this one-sided manner. But this is obviously not the primary purpose of God who calls us to discipleship as well as to dedication.

Jesus Christ instituted the church, and to be "in Christ" means also to be a member of His "body."

The greatest miracle in the New Testament, after the resurrection of Jesus, is the breaking down of the dividing wall of hostility between Jew and gentile and between free persons and slaves.

functions, meaning, and nature of the church which are answered in these lessons. What a wonderful opportunity they give us to come to a deeper understanding of the church that means so much to us.

Pick up the quarterly as you read this, and glance at the table of contents on page 5. Note the wide range of concerns—all related to the church—it deals with.

Perhaps you will be impressed to make this a quarter-long occasion to delve into the mystery that is the church more deeply than you have done before.

If you are a typical Adventist you have devoted a great deal of money to the support of the church and its mission. This is an opportunity for you to allow your mind and your heart to follow your means.

I would like to suggest that you approach these lessons with three basic kinds of questions in mind: subjective questions regarding the personal meaning of the church to you, questions relating to the functions or work of the church, and questions regarding the nature of the church.

I think most of us tend to be both self-consciously individualistic and subjective in our religious experience. These two dimensions of experience are related.

Would our experience be enriched by more emphasis on corporate and objective worship? Not of course as a substitute for private devotions, but as a broadening and strengthening of our religious consciousness.

The Church: Servant to the World

by R. L. Staples

I cannot recall a series of Sabbath School lessons dedicated to "the church," and I was delighted to learn that this was to be the focus of the lessons this quarter.

R. L. Staples is an associate professor in the department of mission, the Theological Seminary, Andrews University.

There may be some who say, "Is not Christianity essentially a personal relationship with God?"

"Is it not enough for me to concentrate on Jesus Christ who is the author and perfection of my salvation? The church seems to me to be one more earthly entanglement which gets in the way of true spirituality."

In so doing they are gathered into a united community of faith. This is one dimension of the miracle which is the church (I Peter 2:9, 10).

This is only one of the answers to the question: "Why the church?" given in the lessons this quarter. And, if you are like most of us, you have dozens of other questions and concerns about the structure,

Contemplation on the church naturally brings both the corporate dimensions of Christianity and the objective worship of God into view. We become aware that we are members of the "body of Christ."

"For we being many are one . . . body: for we are all partakers of that one bread." I Corinthians 10:17. Perhaps we need to ask whether we maximize our fellowship in the community of faith, or are we lonely Christians?

Do we celebrate frequently and joyously the presence of Christ who is in our midst? Have we learned to share the meaning of our salvation with one another?

Do we allow the riches of our experience to flow out to those in need of encouragement? And are we humble and secure enough in our feeling of acceptance to open our hearts to the blessings others can bring to us in times of need?

Do we adequately identify with the Adventist Church, and do we wholeheartedly accept the responsibility of its divine mandate?

The second set of questions deal with our understanding of the functions of the church: what it does and what it should be doing.

During most of its history the Adventist Church has been intensely involved in proclaiming the Gospel—including its messages of judgment and hope—both at home and abroad.

A sense of eschatological urgency has always been present in the church, and most of us have been active in either the support or direct discharge of various mission duties.

The theme of the work of the church is prominent in these lessons. They provide us with an opportunity to take fresh stock of the corporate work of the "servant" church and of our personal discipleship.

The third kind of question I find helpful relates to the nature of the church. Questions which have to do with "what the church is," logically come before the other kinds of questions we have raised. For what the church is believed to be profoundly influences its members' subjective relationship to it and their understanding of its proper functions.

This question is raised last, however, because this line of thought has not generally been prominent in Adventist thinking. Typically, we have been more concerned with the work of the church and our own relationship to it.

And yet, this third question is probably the single most important concern to keep in mind as we study these lessons.

This question is not intended to raise the matter of church organization and government, even though it is surprising how many churches have identified themselves with reference to organizational structure—Episcopal, Presbyterian, Congregational, et cetera—and how staunchly these positions have been defended.

What I have in mind is the much deeper and more fundamental question of the "being" or "nature" of the church. This line of inquiry is not unrelated to that of the incarnation of our Lord who was both "Son of Man" (the term Jesus commonly employed in identifying Himself—69 times in the Gospels) and "Son of God" (Jesus is frequently referred to as such in the Gospel of John, the Pauline Epistles and the Epistle to the Hebrews).

The early creeds seek to explain this mystery by attributing two natures to Christ and affirming that He was both fully human and fully divine.

In the same fashion the church, which in Protestant thinking has always been identified as the "people of God" rather than the "institution" (or centralized authority structure), is a mystery which combines both the human and the divine in its nature.

It is human because its members are human, it is spiritual because its head is Christ. It is possible to think of the church as an agent commissioned to do many things.

But its nature is not defined by what it does, rather, its nature is witnessed to by its works. The nature of the church—its essence, its being, what it is in itself—was established by Christ when He called it into being.

It was given a spiritual identity commonly described in the New Testament as the "body of Christ." As such, it was commissioned to continue the work of Christ on earth (I John 17:18-22).

In continuity with this understanding of the church, Adventists think even more specifically of the identity of the "Remnant Church" as a called and appointed people of God with a particular spiritual message and task.

If thought is allowed to center about the activity of the church to the neglect of the being of the church, something is lost. In similar manner, if the church concentrates upon itself and its inner life to the exclusion of its witness, it is not being true to itself.

In both cases spiritual weakness and failure in mission may result. These lessons offer us a wonderful opportunity to think of the church as a spiritual community of faith and of our particular life and work on earth in relationship to this spiritual center.

Two major directions may be given to the mission of the church. As we know so well, members are called to go out and communicate the message—the direction is outward.

On the other hand the movement may be in the opposite direction—inward. What experience on earth could be more inspiring than to find a community of faith whose celebration of our Lord, whose mutual sharing, whose expressions of faith and whose consciousness of the divine presence continually attract members into the glow of its fellowship. Both models are Biblical.

These lessons constitute an invitation to growth and to a deepening experience within the corporate "body of Christ." May God bless each one of you—its members—and His church and its work.

The new boys dorm at Indiana Academy takes shape.

INDIANA ACADEMY CHANGES ITS LOOK

For 20 years the Indiana Academy Campus was a familiar scene of lofty trees and familiar buildings. Even at night the water tower hovered over the campus like a sentinel.

Since 1975 changes have begun to alter the skyline. Two minidorms were built for the young men. The old dorm came down and opened up a new view between the farm and the campus.

The new cafeteria, built in 1977, brought the campus further north.

Even further north is the newest boys dorm, across the stream from the two minidorms. The center of the campus is open and spacious with adequate area for future building.

The minidorm concept has been a blessing to Indiana Academy. When the new boys dorm was in the planning stage, the minidorm concept was suggested to provide more of a home atmosphere. The newest dorm has 18 rooms and was constructed with minimum maintenance in mind. A suspension bridge over the creek will enhance the area.

The mansard roof maintains the current contemporary appearance of the campus. The lobby fireplace extends to the second floor apartment for the dean.

ANDREWS ACADEMY NAMES LIBRARY FOR TEACHER

The Andrews Academy library has been named the "Edith C. Davis Instructional Media Center" in honor of a retired English instructor.

"The I.M.C. was named after Miss Davis because of the community's high regard for her as a teacher and because of the emphasis she placed on research and scholarship in her classes," academy principal Richard Orrison said.

Miss Davis taught at the academy for 18 years. Although retired, she still teaches nearly full time. The name Instructional Media Center was chosen rather than library, because it has many other learning materials besides books, Dr. Orrison said.

Taking part in the naming ceremony were Dr. Lawrence T. Geraty, associate professor of archaeology at Andrews University; Dr. Roy Graham, university provost; Ronn M. Harris, 1975 class president; Thomas S. Geraty, visiting professor of education; and Julie Johnsson, 1981 student association president.

STUDENT MISSIONARIES PROVIDE ACTIVE SERVICE

For Andrews students Larry Burton (junior/elementary education) and Lenita Neal (junior/history), mission stories are not fairy tales written to entertain the imaginations of American Seventh-day Adventist congregations. They have experienced their own.

As part of the student missionary program sponsored by Campus Ministries at the university, Larry and Lenita joined forces with many other students from 11 Adventist colleges in North America to prove one thing: Working for the Lord doesn't have to be a privilege that comes with age.

Lenita, currently the assistant student director of the student missionary program at Andrews, taught English at the Adventist language school in Chiba, Japan, from 1978 to 1979. Aside from learning what it was like to hold a job from day to day, being dedicated to a single cause, and learning to accept a foreign culture as an alternative to the way she lives her life, Lenita learned what it was like to depend on God for everything she did.

"I had to become so dependent on my faith in God," she said. "For the first time in my life, I really came to love and guard that vital relationship. It's pretty scary walking into a room of people who can barely speak your language, especially if you can't speak theirs!"

Larry, in Guam last year as an assistant pastor and youth leader, is the student director of the student missionary program on campus. From an early age, he was convinced that Christ's second coming was imminent and that he wanted to be involved in missionary service.

"Loneliness was a problem for me until I learned to trust God with everything. Our friendship grew when I realized how much I needed Him."

Larry and Lenita work together to coordinate student missionary screenings and activities during the year. One of their main projects comes to life this spring—a seminar for all prospective S.M.'s going to serve in foreign language schools.

Mini courses related to teaching English as a second language will be the main emphasis, with practical suggestions given by S.M.'s who have "been there."

But the class that Lenita and Larry are most looking forward to putting together gives pointers on how to teach a Bible class. "We want the Andrews' S.M.'s to be prepared to tackle the questions their students or co-workers will have about the Gospel of Jesus Christ," Larry said.

According to Chester Damron, Campus Ministries director at the university, Andrews sent 21 of the more than 202 S.M.'s assigned this year to 30 countries from North American colleges.

In the program's history of 21 years (1959-1980), a national figure of 2,050 S.M.'s have been sent to serve throughout the world field. Andrews University has sent more than 267 during the same 21-year period.

Types of work being done by these young people are varied beyond the typical English and Bible instruction. Many have used their skills and talents to teach courses in math, science, physical education and nutrition.

Others have filled the role of nurse, dietitian, librarian, dean, builder or maintenance worker—to name a few. And these workers have gone to 73 different countries since the first S.M. went out in 1959.

Task Force is the domestic version of the S.M. program, serving all parts of North America. It, too, solicits students from Adventist colleges across the continent. Students volunteer for positions as assistant pastors, deans or teachers.

According to Campus Ministries statistics, more than 60 students volunteered to work from 1980 to 1981 from American colleges.

"The volunteer program of student missionaries and Task Force is the freshest breath of air blown through the Adventist Church in my generation," Elder Damron said. "It utilizes the young people of this church and teaches them to take responsibility for the Lord's work when they have the energy to do it. One year of this type of work can often be a broader personal experience than a year of academic study."

Some of the most exciting experiences of S.M.'s occur after the trip home. Larry and Lenita organize special programs and presentations involving all returning S.M.'s to be given at dorm worships and during mission reports in local churches. Programs often include personal mission experiences, as well as music and slide presentations.

Screening is always a difficult process, according to this S.M. team. But only one individual out of the 130 that Elder Damron has sent in his six years of service at the university has come home disappointed.

Students should normally have a college foundation of one to two years and an average GPA of 2.25. Service should be the primary motivation of each candidate.

Those chosen are enrolled in special classes to prepare them for their future work. A basic course in the philosophy of missions, programs in Christian witnessing and introductions to textbooks are given. Students usually enjoy the task of researching their assigned country even more.

Would they go again? Many students have reported that they would, even though it means a year of separation from family and friends.

As for Larry and Lenita, the answer is more than positive. With a twinkle in his eye, Larry exclaimed, "The tropics are great!"

CAMPUS HIGHLIGHTS

- The university bookstore gave special Christmas presents to several Cuban refugee families on December 4, 1980. According to Faye Chamberlain, bookstore manager, 23 English Bibles were presented to the group of Cubans now living in the Berrien Springs area. "Many of them left their homeland with few possessions," Mrs. Chamberlain said. If you have extra Bibles to donate, contact Mrs. Chamberlain at the bookstore.

- Dr. Fonda Chaffee, chairman of the home economics department at the university, was elected to a one-year term as president of the 300-member Seventh-day Adventist Dietetic Association at the association's annual meeting this fall. The meeting was held in conjunction with the national meeting of the American Dietetic Association in Atlanta, Georgia. Dr. Chaffee also served as the Adventist organization's president from 1960 to 1961.

NEW BOOK BY GEETA LALL DEALS WITH CHILD TRAINING

Dr. Geeta R. Lall, associate professor of early childhood and special education at Andrews, has just released a book entitled Who Shall Teach Our Little Ones? With so many mothers working outside the home and the care of children left to supervisors of day-care centers or to teachers, the question of child training is becoming a major contemporary issue. Dr. Lall answers questions parents may have regarding the age at which a child should begin formal schooling, what parents can do to educate their children in the home, and how the church might be responsible for part of a child's education.

ADVENTIST HEALTH SYSTEM NORTH: NOW A REALITY!

CHICAGO—Adventist Health System North (A.H.S.N.) is a result of an effective merger between Great Lakes Adventist Health Services (GLAHS) and Northeast Adventist Health Services (NEAHS), thus making the fourth Adventist Health System corporation in the United States.

The others are Adventist Health System Sunbelt, Adventist Health System West, and Adventist Health System Eastern and Middle America.

In January 1980 a steering committee was formed to analyze the merger possibility and to facilitate the development of a specific merger proposal.

The steering committee included representatives from GLAHS, NEAHS, the officers of the Atlantic Union and Lake Union conferences, and representatives from the participating institutions, with consulting assistance from Amherst Associates, Inc., Amherst, Massachusetts, and Chicago, Illinois.

The steering committee report as compiled by Amherst Associates, Inc., indicated that the most important issue, other than the cost savings, is survivability.

The newly formed corporation will bring about an improvement in each institution's ability to react to its environment. Therefore, A.H.S.N. will add significantly to the ability of the Seventh-day Adventist Church to fulfill its mission by bringing Adventist health care to a wider population.

Irwin C. Hansen, former president of GLAHS and now president of A.H.S.N., has indicated that "management skills developed by A.H.S.N. will allow an addition in the future for new facilities and entry into areas not now served." Some regional representation will be maintained.

The corporate staff of GLAHS, along with the addition of a vice president who has been administratively involved in one of the Northeast's hospitals, will be incorporated into Adventist Health System North. The corporate headquarters will remain in Hinsdale, Illinois, at 15 Salt Creek Lane.

MID AMERICAN CHANGES NAME AND MOVES

ADVENTIST LIVING CENTERS—The Mid American Health Services Board of Trustees recently voted to change the name of the corporation to Adventist Living Centers.

The name change reflects the fact that the Adventist Health System member organization will soon be operating and managing nursing homes outside the Lake Union Conference territory.

With the merger between Northeast Adventist Health Services and Great Lakes Adventist Health Services, Adventist Living Centers will be involved in the operation and management of four Seventh-day Adventist nursing homes in the Atlantic Union Conference.

These facilities are located in Canaan, Connecticut; Livingston, New York; Pawtucket, Rhode Island, and West Paris, Maine. A fifth facility, located in Schenectady, New York, is being purchased by Adventist Living Centers.

"Since Mid American is becoming involved in an area outside the Midwest, it was thought that changing our corporate name to one without a regional connotation was desirable," commented Adventist Living Centers' president, Gary C. Whitworth. He added, "For some time we have also wanted to identify the denomination in the corporate name."

In addition to the name change, the offices of Adventist Living Centers moved to 15 Salt Creek Lane, Hinsdale, Illinois, from Marshfield, Wisconsin, on January 1, 1981.

The move was made to facilitate management of the additional nursing homes in the Northeast.

A Midwest regional office has been established in Marshfield, Wisconsin, to oversee Adventist Living Centers' nursing homes and any others acquired in the Midwest.

William R. Niehoff has been named regional administrator. He has served as administrator of the largest nursing home, River Pines Community Health Center in Stevens Point, Wisconsin, since 1976. Stephen K. Baustian has been named regional finance director.

NEWS NOTE

● Adventist Living Centers has signed an agreement to purchase the Silver Haven Nursing Home of Schenectady, New York. The 86-bed skilled nursing facility will come under denominational operation upon receipt of a license from the State of New York to operate the facility. This license will probably be granted in the summer of 1981. With the acquisition of this facility, Adventist Living Centers will own, lease, or manage 13 nursing homes with a total of 1,780 beds. Adventist Living Centers also operates three 60-unit apartment complexes for the elderly and handicapped.

NEVER TOO LATE TO LOVE

Signifying that one is never too old to fall in love, Letha Simmons, 75, and James Bratley, 80, were recently married by Pastor Charles Bush in Villa Pines Nursing Center. The ceremony took place in the dining room with more than 150 friends and relatives as witnesses. Following a noisy ride through town, a reception was held at Villa Pines. Letha and James are residing at Villa Pines in a room decorated especially for the newlyweds, according to Gary C. Whitworth, president, Adventist Living Centers.

Janet Tangren gave lessons in vegetarian food preparation at the recent cooking school in Stevens Point, Wisconsin.

COOKING SCHOOL ATTRACTS 52 IN STEVENS POINT

ADVENTIST LIVING CENTERS—The Stevens Point, Wisconsin, Church and Mid American's Family Health Clinic recently conducted a vegetarian cooking school titled "The Vegetarian Alternative" in a local junior high school.

The program, enthusiastically attended by 52 people from the community, included lectures by John Reaves, M.P.H., health educator for the Family Health Clinic, and coordinator of the cooking school.

It also included filmstrips from the prevention series of Loma Linda University in Loma Linda, California.

Emphasis was placed on balanced, tasty meatless entrees and breakfasts. One evening low-calorie cooking was emphasized.

Demonstrations of selected recipes were presented by Janet Tangren, a member of the Stevens Point Church. Mrs. Tangren is completing work at the University of Wisconsin for a degree in home economics.

The participants were given recipes, and samples for tasting, each evening.

A vegetarian meal was served at the completion of the course.

TRI-COUNTY ALCOHOLISM UNIT APPROVED BY J.C.A.H.

EDMORE, MICHIGAN—Tri-County Community Hospital's Alcoholism Treatment Unit (A.T.U.) was recently awarded a full one-year accreditation from the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals (J.C.A.H.).

Accreditation by the commission promises patients admitted to the A.T.U. an immediate benefit, reimbursement by third-party payers such as Blue Cross.

Tri-County Community Hospital opened its A.T.U. in February 1980. Since that time the patient load has gradually increased. At present the 10-bed inpatient unit is often filled to capacity.

The only such rehabilitation program within a 60-mile radius of Edmore, the residential treatment unit combines the advantages of low-cost care with the availability of acute-care medical resources.

The 28-day program includes lectures, group therapy, counseling, exercise classes, and family encounters. High staff-to-patient ratio is an added plus of the inpatient program.

According to Dan Richardson, program director, J.C.A.H. accreditation distinguishes Tri-County's A.T.U. as a facility that delivers high-quality care.

Accreditation by the J.C.A.H., an independent, not-for-profit organization for voluntary accreditation, means that a facility is in compliance with optimal standards of performance. J.C.A.H. approval also indicates a continuing effort by the hospital to provide better care and services.

CHAPLAIN ATTENDS MENTAL HEALTH INSTITUTE

BATTLE CREEK—Larry Yeagley, chaplain of Battle Creek Sanitarium Hospital, attended the three days of meetings of the 25th Annual Institute On Mental Health which was held October 5 to 8 in Worthington, Ohio. "Pastors and psychiatrists should work together as a team to aid in the recovery of persons suffering from mental illnesses," is what the 31 ministers and teachers who attended were told by George T. Harding Jr., M.D. Dr. Harding is medical director of Harding Hospital, a 120-bed comprehensive psychiatric center located in Worthington. The institute on mental health seeks to create a dialogue between pastors and psychiatrists that will further understanding of mental health and psychiatric treatment, according to John Korb, public relations assistant at Harding Hospital. The 1981 institute will deal with adolescent conflicts and how to help resolve them. Elder Yeagley, center, and Charles Wittschiebe, right, talk with Dr. Harding during a break at the institute.

COULD I HAVE MY CHECK BACK?

Door-to-door work had been especially slow for Hinsdale Ingatherer John Ross on an autumn evening several weeks ago.

John prayed as he walked, "I know this is your work, Lord, but prove it to me again. I'll go up to this house, but I'm not going to solicit them for money."

John was acquainted with the family that lived in the house he was approaching. He had worked for them in the past. One of the children greeted him at the door, and John was invited in. He handed the man the brochure and sat down to visit.

After 15 or 20 minutes, John was ready to leave. As he got up, the man said, "Wait a minute, I want to give you a donation.

"If I were to give you a dollar, how would it be split up?" he asked. John explained what happened to the Ingathering dollar, and was surprised and pleased to see the man write out a check for $100.

John didn't feel it appropriate to get up and leave right then, so he tarried a few moments longer. The man spoke of the serious times that we live in. In the conversation that followed, John told them of the nearness of Jesus' coming and God's love for mankind. John also spoke of Jesus' love for people as manifested by His healing acts.

At that point the man quietly asked, "Could I have my check back?" John said, "Certainly you may," thinking that the man had decided he couldn't give that much money.

A new check was being written. John could see that the first number was a five and assumed the new check would be for $50. To his delight, the check was not for $50,

24 BAPTIZED AT ROCKFORD

2 PERSONS RECEIVE COMMUNITY SERVICES AWARDS

"Everything came up roses" on Sabbath, November 22, at the 11 o'clock community services award presentation at the Rockford Church.

Tribute was paid to Victor Ekwall, a Lions' Club member who has delivered more than 15,000 roses during the past six years, with the proceeds going to the Center for the Blind.

Bertha Whitmore presents congratulations from the Early American Optimist Club to Victor Ekwall.

Tribute was also paid to Louise Swanson, the "Rockford Rose Lady." Though an invalid, she has given roses at every feasible occasion for many years. Rockford is called the church of the roses. There was a bouquet of roses for the altar each week, and each visitor received a rose.

Many of the 400 people who attended the service related the ways that roses had touched their lives. One woman maintained that a gift of roses after major surgery had completely eliminated her pain.

DANIEL SEMINARS PREPARE THE WAY FOR EVANGELISM IN CICERO

A new type of evangelism for the Cicero Church produced good results last fall.

Pastor Randall Murphy conducted three Daniel seminars for eight weeks to prepare the way for a series of evangelistic meetings. The seminars were held in a bank building in Tipton, Indiana; a public library in Atlanta, Indiana, and the Noblesville Church basement.

The average attendance was: 14 at Tipton, 18 in Atlanta, and 26 in Noblesville. Participants made these statements: "We had no idea that Christ and his ministry was the central theme of Daniel." "We are so surprised that the Old Testament, especially the book of Daniel, has so much to say about the end of time."

Beginning with Daniel 12, Pastor Murphy guided the participants through the prophecies and messages of Daniel. The evangelistic meetings began on Friday night of the week the seminars ended, and were held in the Noblesville Church with Elder Ed Brown, of Portland, Oregon, as speaker.

Twenty of the Daniel Seminar non-Adventist participants have been attending the meetings regularly.

OLD IDEAS REVIVED IN CICERO SABBATH SCHOOL

Some aspects of the Sabbath School program have been revived at the Cicero Church with the direction of Norman and Janet Clear, superintendents. The previous week's lesson review is tied in with the weekly lesson, memory verses are memorized, and the children's departments are included in the 13th Sabbath program.

On Sabbath, September 27, the 13th Sabbath program was presented by the kindergarten division with Mary Palmailro directing. The children sang two songs, one partially in sign language.

The earliten division displayed visual aids on character development, and the goals and activities of the department were explained by their leader, Jim Thompson.

Members have expressed appreciation for the revival of these aspects which have been missing for a few years from the Sabbath School program.

MARION PRIMARY CLASS CHEERS SENIOR CITIZENS

The Primary Class of the Marion Church recently enjoyed a Sabbath afternoon visit at the University Nursing Center in Upland, Indiana. The children sang several songs with the help of Barbara Good, pianist. After the singing, teacher Darlene Turner assisted the children in the distribution of literature to the nursing-home patients. The children have been invited to return again soon. They are planning many more trips like this one in the near future. Participating in the visit were, from left, April Bragg, Janell Mullenix, Joette Kinman, Richard Schell, Kelly Turner, Freddie Turner, Gerald Mullenix, Merthel Mullenix, Lois Brinker, and pianist, Barbara Good.

PATHFINDER LEADERS LEARN SO THEY CAN TEACH

On the weekend of September 26 to 28, 20 Pathfinder staff members assembled at Timber Ridge Camp to learn some Adventist youth honors which they, in turn, could teach to their Pathfinders at home.

Each staff member had a choice of three different classes: Christian Citizenship, Fossils, and Shells.

One Sabbath afternoon, the fossils class traveled to an area south of Terre Haute where they discovered several fossil specimens. One of the projects for the Christian Citizenship class was to interview a national, state, or local official. The class visited the sheriff of Owen County.

Instructors at the workshop were Mary Perkins, Timber Ridge nature director, who taught Shells; Elwin Shull, vice principal of Indiana Academy, Fossils, and Cliff Hoffman, conference youth director, Christian Citizenship.

On Sunday morning, Charles Case, Lake Union youth director, held a special workshop on making nature more meaningful to Pathfinders. He also directed some initiative games which involved the Pathfinder leaders in activities in a noncompetitive atmosphere.

In place of competition the groups worked together to accomplish a certain task. The group had time for feedback to express what these activities meant to them.

The concensus was that when we work to help others accomplish something, it brings a great deal of satisfaction to us as individuals. Participants agreed that it was a very profitable experience for everyone.

WOLFF FAMILY GROWS BY TWO

Merrill and Frankie Wolff, members of the Cicero Church, recently adopted two Costa Rican children, Kathleen Magali, 3, and Catherine Fabiola, 2. Church friends of theirs, Chuck and Ramona Trubey, had adopted a Costa Rican girl, and they helped the Wolffs contact the mission and adoption agency in Costa Rica. The Wolffs also have three sons. Mrs. Wolff, center, helps her new daughters open presents at a shower given them by the church.

PARENTS ATTEND I.J.A. READING PARTY

Parents experienced nostalgic memories on the morning of September 23 as they attended school with their fifth- and sixth-graders at Indianapolis Junior Academy, according to Bonnie Planck, teacher. During the "Reading Party," each parent helped a few students read. The parents became better acquainted with the other students in their children's room, and with each other. This was a "first-hand" parent-teacher conference and both parents and students were still commenting days later on how much they enjoyed it. Before the party students made invitations and practiced the correct way to introduce their parents to other parents as well as to their friends. Carol Johnson, front left, assists son, Chip, and John Turner in reading, while Nancy Humprey helps son, Nick, and his cousin, Mike Oakes.

BARBARA ZOOK BAPTIZED IN GLENDALE

Barbara Zook sang "He could Have Called 10,000 Angels" just before her baptism in the Glendale Church. Talking with her after church, Bonnie Planck, communication secretary, remarked that Barbara's love and appreciation for her Savior's sacrifice were evident. Elder Harry Passion, left, stated that many people, including her son, Neal, had prayed and studied with Barbara.

CONSTRUCTION BEGINS IN HUNTINGBURG

Grading of the lot and construction of the foundation for the new Huntingburg Church were begun on Monday, September 29. Otis Rupright and some laymen from Lafayette, Indiana, are responsible for putting up the outer shell of the church.

Huntingburg members are grateful and happy to know that soon there will be a pleasant facility in which to worship, and that there will be a lighthouse for the Lord in this county where there was previously no Adventist work.

The group is presently meeting in the home of Richard Helzerman, and has grown in attendance from six to twenty-six in the past year.

Members are presently giving fourteen Bible studies each week and conducting a visitation program in the community.

This building program is a faith venture on the part of the Huntingburg members, and is possible through Mr. Rupright's gift of the completed outer shell of the building, and the interest of the conference committee and the Indiana Advance offering.

BREAKFAST WITH FINESSE SERVED AT I.J.A.

After the boys in grades five and six studied the book, Man In Demand and the girls studied Christian Charm, the class invited their parents to breakfast at the Indianapolis Junior Academy to demonstrate their newly acquired manners.

After a blueberry crepe breakfast, the students presented "how to" and "how not to" skits.

In one skit, Jon Williams' friends thought school was a bore and no one liked them. In their conversation it was also evident that they practiced bad eating habits and didn't exercise.

In another humorous portrayal, each participant talked about a different subject, at the same time, which resulted in a conversation that sounded as if a radio dial were being moved from one station to another.

The students had made invitations, set the tables, decorated, practiced, and prepared the food. They were excited as their families and pastor joined them at the breakfast and for the program.

SUCCESSFUL HEALTH FAIR HELD IN CASTLETON

A pioneer health-screening fair was held at Castleton Square Mall, in Indianapolis, October 26 to 29.

Patty Marsh, wife of the dean of boys at Indiana Academy, called the mall manager to schedule a date for the students to have a gymnastic and temperance program at the mall. The manager was at first reluctant to cooperate, but finally agreed to listen to the plans.

Mrs. Marsh and community services director Cathryn Kuzmaul were working together on this project. They had special prayer before leaving to visit the mall manager.

After they talked about the temperance program with the manager, he asked them, "Would you be interested in organizing a health fair for Castleton Square?" The two women were surprised, but agreed to take on the project.

Students from Indiana Academy had a temperance booth, the community services had a nutrition booth with sugarless dessert and sprouted wheat burger samples. The health-screening van checked blood pressures, and Loma Linda was represented with foods on display.

The fair had two areas: health screening and education. A total of 24 community organizations such as the American Red Cross, the Lung Association, the Society to Prevent Blindness, the Chiropractic Association, and Hemophilia of Indiana, Inc., participated in the fair. The mall manager was impressed.

The Indianapolis Glendale, Noblesville and Cicero churches combined efforts to man the booths and registration tables. At the fair 78 people requested nutrition classes, and many wanted to attend a Five-Day Plan to Stop Smoking. The Indianapolis Glendale Church will be host for both programs.

A doctor and student from Indiana University stopped at the health-screening van for a blood-pressure check. They commented favorably about the van ministry. The student, who is a doctor from another country, praised the Adventist hospital in her homeland.

A doctor of cardiac medicine from Indiana University who was setting up a booth began talking to Mrs. Kuzmaul about his war against smoking. He had organized a company to fight against tobacco by printing bumper stickers, T-shirts, buttons, and other items with anti-smoking slogans. He began to lecture her about the dangers of tobacco. Then he inquired, "Now, who are you?"

She told him her name and added, "I am a Seventh-day Adventist." In surprise he replied: "Oh, you know all about this then. You people have a splendid cessation program. I have worked with your organization's clinics, and you are doing a great work."

Local television channels 4, 8 and 13 interviewed and photographed participants and events.

Another health-screening fair is planned for 1981.

COMMUNITY SERVICES CENTER OPENS AT BAY CITY

A neat packet containing a program; the brochure, "A Quick Look at Seventh-day Adventists"; a community services report of work done in Michigan; a copy of The Desire of Ages, and a sheet about the new center was given to each of the visitors at the opening of the Adventist community services building at Bay City, December 10.

The $86,000 building preempted a church building program. "Much prayer was put into whether the community services building should be undertaken before replacing the church," community services director, Mrs. Oliver Doll, said. "The Lord seemed to lead us to begin the center."

Work on the structure began just before camp meeting in 1980 and was completed in December. The building contains a lecture room with kitchen area for demonstrations, a private interviewing room, a dressing room, a clothing room and a work area. A full basement is used for storage.

Contributions for the project came largely from church members who pledged $10,000. The balance of funds were taken from the church building fund.

Attending the opening ceremony was Mayor Anne R. Hachtel; Arthur Covell, Michigan lay activities director; representatives of the local Social Service Department and American Red Cross; local businessmen, and other guests.

Bay City members attribute the success of the Ingathering program in their area largely to the opening of their new building, Mrs. Doll said.

URBANDALE CAMPERS COLLECT FOOD

- The Rice Lake Church recently conducted a Five-Day Plan to Stop Smoking with 23 participants, according to Ethel Schutz, communication secretary. The interest generated by this plan has resulted in the tentative scheduling of two more plans, one in Rice Lake in March and one in Cumberland. LENA OBSERVES CENTENNIAL

The Lena, Wisconsin, Church recently experienced a special day of praise and thanksgiving, according to Mrs. Ray Kottke, communication secretary. The occasion was the centennial celebration of the Lena Church.

Historical records indicated that the church was organized in September 1880 with nine charter members. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wise Sr. were instrumental in starting the work of not only the Lena Church, but the other two churches in the district, Pound and Gillett. The Wises often walked on the railroad tracks between the churches to preach the Sabbath sermon. This was a distance of eight miles.

The group from Lena met in the homes of members for the first few years. A deed for property was recorded in 1884. The church that was subsequently built served the area until 1972 when a new church was built and dedicated.

Tarr Valley School before . . .

AN OLD-FASHIONED SCHOOL HOUSE

A year ago there wasn't a church school in Tomah or Sparta, Wisconsin. In fact, there never had been.

Fortunately, that fact didn't stop the members of these 45-member churches from understanding the need for Christian education.

They took seriously the counsel written in Volume 6 of Testimonies for the Church, page 109: "In localities where believers are few, let two or three churches unite in erecting a humble building for a church school. Let all share the expense."

Soon committees from both churches met together and plans were made. The first problem was to find a location. Sparta and Tomah are 20 miles apart. The ideal place would be a half-way point. The only problem was that Fort McCoy, government property, was right in the middle!

After much praying and searching, an old, abandoned, one-room schoolhouse was found right on the edge of Fort McCoy. The owner agreed to rent it.

Everyone was happy to have finally found a place, but then the work began. Plumbing fixtures had to be put in. Painting, insulating and installation of storm windows had to be done. The floor had to be re-laid, a new roof and doors had to be added.

It had been 15 years since school had been held there.

Many hours of volunteer work made the building look once more like a school. Neighbors in the valley said they were happy that the building was being used again, and remarked how nice it looked now that the grass wasn't two feet high.

How thankful the members of these two churches are that God provided this lovely spot for the education of future leaders.

Situated in a valley with several dairy farms nearby, on about one acre of land, Tarr Valley Seventh-day Adventist School is a monument to what determination, hard work, and the realization of the importance of Christian education can accomplish.

CONSCIENCE CLAUSE BECOMES LAW

Seventh-day Adventists with conscientious convictions against joining or financially supporting labor unions can now retain their employment even though a union-shop contract exists.

On December 24, President Carter signed into law the Conscience Clause amending the National Labor Relations Act, allowing this provision.

Any individual who is a member of a church that has historically taught against labor-union membership is now to be accommodated by paying an amount equivalent of dues to a nonunion, nonreligious charity.

The president's signature was the culmination of about 15 years of effort by the Adventist Church's religious liberty department.

Said Jere Wallack, director of religious liberty for the Lake Union, "Special credit must be given to Elders Gordon Engen and Melvin Adams of the General Conference and to Representatives John Erlenborn (R-Ill.) and Don Clausen (R-Calif.) for continually pressing for passage of this new law."

If you have any questions about the benefits of the Conscience Clause in your individual case, please contact your pastor.

TELESEMINAR COUNTDOWN FOR JANUARY

Less than two months now separate us from It Is Written's TELESEMINAR day—Sunday, March 1. This totally new venture will offer you and your friends an appealing and effective method of outreach.

Seven hundred churches are cooperating nationwide. Approximately 25,000 people will be involved. Now is the time to prepare for this once-in-a-lifetime experience.

January provides one final opportunity to further cultivate the interest of people whose names are on the It Is Written list as well as your special non-Adventist friends. Are they viewing the telecast?

This is one way to stimulate interest in TELESEMINAR. Have they been contacted by you personally? Do they know of your sincere interest in their spiritual growth and your desire that they explore the faith?

This month, It Is Written will mail a colorful brochure to each viewer with an invitation to attend TELESEMINAR. It will reach the homes later in the month, with a similar follow-up mailing arriving in early February.

Laymen will also use these brochures with people who are interested. The piece points out the benefits of attending, and contains an outline of the day's program and information on how to register—complete with coupons to fill out and mail in.

Please pray for the success of the TELESEMINAR venture.

CHILDREN'S CLUB SUPPORTS RADIO STATION

During a recent visit to Voice of Prophecy headquarters, Donald W. Christensen, right, business manager of Mountain View College in the Philippines, was presented with a check by H.M.S. Children's Christmas Club raised more than $25,000 for a new antenna at the Adventist World Radio facilities in Guatemala, Central America.

TELECAST ADVANCES TO NEW FIELDS

Would you like to see Breath of Life in your city? Through the efforts of dedicated pastors and laymen throughout this country this wish is becoming a reality in the cities where they live.

Carlos Medley, a layman, arranged to have Breath of Life aired for 13 weeks in South Bend, Indiana.

Chaplain W. Horton placed the Breath of Life telecast on closed-circuit television at the Michigan Reformatory in Ionia, Michigan. Through his leadership 26 persons were baptized in that correctional facility.

Pastor Alphonso McCarthy contacted his local station in Yakima, Washington, and now for the second time he is extending his ministry through the Breath of Life telecast in Yakima and Pasco.

Albert Dudley, another dedicated layman, used his prayerful influence, and now Breath of Life is seen in Springfield, Ohio. Pastor P. J. Jones and Pastor F. R. Nealy took the initiative in their area, and now the telecast is being seen in Florence, South Carolina.

This story is being repeated in other areas of this country and may be a reality in your city. If your city has its own broadcasting facility, it may be possible for you to approach the station and secure either free public service time or an affordable time slot for the broadcast.

If you are interested in this idea, please write to Walter Arties, Breath of Life, P.O. Box 744, Newbury Park, CA 91320, or call (805) 498-3633. We will be happy to provide you with the necessary information.
