The Lifeblood of the Church

*Robert Dale
President

EVANGELISM is the lifeblood of the church. Christ taught the importance of the church being involved in outreach. Paul said, "Preach the word." II Timothy 4:2. And we are told "Then Philip opened his mouth, and began at the same scripture and preached unto him Jesus." Acts 8:35.

It has been my privilege for the past several weeks to experience the thrill and joy of preaching the Word in an evangelistic series in Fort Atkinson, Wisconsin.

We have had the joy of sharing Jesus in the homes of those who are showing an interest in His love and grace in their lives. As I have observed the effect of public evangelism on the church, I see results in three areas: increased spiritual awareness of the members, increased membership in the church, and an increased number of interested people to be contacted by the church.

Whether we are fulfilling the commission of Jesus to "go ye" by personal or public evangelism, may we always express Jesus as the center of our message. It is through His Holy Spirit that the motivating power for the church to do evangelism is felt. It is He who fills the hearts of the hearers, bringing them to conversion. By Him the church will experience this greater spiritual awareness, greater membership and greater outreach potential.

May the Lord bless each one as He fulfills the commission of Jesus and is motivated to do personal evangelism. What the world needs is Jesus. What each of us needs is to accept Jesus in our hearts to motivate us to go and tell the world of His love.

THE HEART OF THE LAKE UNION

No Ordinary Couple

by Jeffrey K. Wilson

OLEN and Mildred Shelton live in a comfortable, remodeled home on three acres at the edge of West Frankfort, Illinois. Olen is head elder and Mildred is Sabbath School superintendent of their 84-member church. But this is no ordinary couple. They have achieved success in the most important job on earth. In an age when raising a family is low on the priority list behind job promotion, career climbing and status seeking, Olen and Mildred Shelton raised 12 children.

Three boys and nine girls were born into their humble home: Dennis of Quincy, Illinois; Gloria Hack of Niles, Michigan; Faye Horricks of Canada; Doris Jean Shelton of Berrien Springs, Michigan; Steve of Berrien Center, Michigan; Sue Herford of Munising, Michigan; Pat McClintock of Clear Lake, Wisconsin; Ellen Hewlett of Madison, Tennessee; Olenda Wilson of Berrien Springs; Janice Kantor of Nunica, Michigan; Marilyn Thomas of West Frankfort, and Jeff of West Frankfort.

And these 12 children were all sent to Seventh-day Adventist academies, all of them married Seventh-day Adventists, and all of them are faithful, active church members.

But Olen does not own an oil well. He deals in used tires. It is hard physical labor that makes hands and faces dirty and brings in barely enough money to meet the necessities of life. But Christian education has always been at the top of the priority list in the Shelton home.

"We were determined," says Olen, "to have each of our children in church school. We wanted them to learn of God there, associate with other Christian young people, and marry in the faith. There were no other young people of like faith in our small town."

"It wasn't an easy decision," Mildred adds, "sending them so far from home when they were so young. But we determined we would rather 'lose' them for a while here, than to lose them for eternity."

The Sheltons taught their children to work at an early age. "They had to, for us to survive," Olen contends. "But we felt it was a good learning experience for them. When they went away to the academy, they already knew how to work, and putting in long hours there to pay their school bills was simply a part of their life-style.

"The boys and girls often went out with me on the truck to pick up used tires. They were kept busy in our business and with chores at home. They didn't have time to run up town and get in with the wrong crowd. Mother and I have felt this helped hold them in the church."

It was not all work in the Shelton home. Their hobby of horses was a family affair. One horse, Thunder, has won more than 200 trophies. "It was good, clean fun the whole family could enjoy together," says Olen.

The eldest son, Dennis, is a church school teacher in Quincy. A former missionary to Indonesia, Dennis says his family was close knit. "A family that prays together, stays together," he remarked. "But we did more than have worship. We worked together and we played together. Some of my most pleasant memories are of working with my dad. I want to be like my dad and that means being a dedicated Christian."

Recalls eldest daughter, Gloria Ann Hack: "Times were hard and we had to make every minute count. I remember being frustrated at my father when I was with him on the route. We would stop at a junk yard and after the load was on the truck, I would jump in the cab ready to go and then notice Father wasn't coming. While muttering 'Come on, Dad, we've got to go,' I would notice him talking to the workmen or mechanics, sharing a piece of literature and talking to them about the Lord. He was never too busy to witness for God.

"Although he took time out to witness, we always came home with a full load. We learned the value of hard work from our parents," Gloria continued, "and we have tried to pass it on to our children. Our parents' views on Christian education have been passed on also." All of the grandchildren are in Adventist schools.

How powerful is the influence of Christian parents? Gloria recalls the time her sister Pat was urged by fellow academy students to sneak into town to see a movie.

"I was tempted; it would be exciting to see a movie," Pat said. "But I thought of mom and dad at home. What would they think? How disappointed would they be? They have been so good to me, they love me so, I simply couldn't do it. It would hurt them too much."

"It may sound silly," says Gloria, "but even today, at 43, a mother myself, I wouldn't want to do anything that would hurt my precious parents. They love me too much."

How do you raise children to remain faithful to God? It is a three-way proposition, Olen points out. "It takes the home, the church, and the Christian school working together to save our children."

Jeff Wilson is communication director of the Illinois Conference.

SHORTLY after 1800, to meet religious needs in America, covered-wagon circles gave place to tented campgrounds. Open-air meetings made way for bigtop and hardtop auditoriums.

"Lively" religiosity, even jerking and swooning, drinking and racing, gossiping and "loving," appeared occasionally as frontier folks sought to worship. But the country was saved from de-Christianization.

Quite naturally, after 1868, the youthful Seventh-day Adventist denomination was much challenged and benefited by yearly conferencewide camp meetings.

Wherein were they challenged? In camp decorum. They posted regulations, and had all-night lights, curfews and patrolmen. They were challenged to convince the people that camp meeting expenses were worth every penny. And they were challenged to exalt the meetings as "necessary" for the general welfare of the church.

And wherein were they benefited? In increased piety and baptisms. In generating feelings of identity, fellowship and love. In confronting camp congregations with goals: financial, evangelical and educational.

How successful were the Adventists? The historian replies, very successful—the Seventh-day Adventist sense of destiny remains unequalled.

Of course, during a century and more some tremendous changes have occurred in the camps. The former personal emotions so deeply felt and freely expressed seem suppressed.

Transportation is different. Vanished are the railway and inter-urban cars. Banished are the ancient horse teams, buggies, wagons, and corrals, in favor of wide-open spaces on which to park autos, recreational vehicles, and planes.

Draw Near Together

by Emmett K. Vande Vere

Blacktop has been rolled over the once dusty and muddy roads. Grass is more abundant. Camp facilities are well plumbed.

Picturesque "straw tents," set up to offer stuffing for empty bed-ticks, have been outmoded by sponge-rubber mattresses.

"Primitive" unpackaged foods have been replaced by prepackaged "civilized" groceries. Instead of booming human voices, which might vibrate tent poles, there are public address systems to float voices far afield. One will notice, too, the clusters of giddy young people who nowadays huddle outside the auditoriums to "listen" to the programs inside.

Unchanged however are the fears of crippling storms. Unchanged, too, are the sermon titles.

Can you recall the sermon makers? Do you know them, even in a legendary way?

For three long "generations" Adventist camp-goers have heard the best the denomination possessed.

There were giants in the earth: George I. Butler, Merritt E. Cornell, Eugene Farnsworth, S. N. Haskell, Alonzo T. Jones, Sands H. Lane, J. N. Loughborough, J. H. Waggoner, Ellen G. White, James White. The preaching of these people lasts.

Take Sands Lane for instance. His preaching drew adherents into the Adventist faith even after 50 years. At a camp meeting, a large Sabbath School audience heard three generations from southern Michigan so testify. He had persuaded the grandmother many silent years ago. Lane limped to the pulpit, but not in it!

The second "generation" preached in the heat of the day. Some who did were William H. Anderson, Milian L. Andreasen, Alonzo Baker, O. O. Bernstein, Arthur G. Daniells, F. C. Gilbert, Frederick Griggs, Carlyle B. Haynes, H. Camden Lacey, F. D. Nichol, W. W. Prescott, W. A. Spicer.

Alonzo Baker began his religious liberty talks the moment he sprang from his chair at the rear of the rostrum. Camden Lacey ably explained the dark day of 1780 and the falling of the stars in 1833.

The third "generation" may still be heard (and thousands of fellow heralds): Roger Bothwell, C. D. Brooks, E. E. Cleveland, Rolland Lenhoff, Robert H. Pierson, J. J. Millet, H.M.S. Richards Sr. and Jr., George Vandeman, Morris Venden, Smuts Van Rooyen, J. Hudson Zachary.

Hudson Zachary leads all South East Asia into evangelism. Rolland Lenhoff preaches just as purposefully in Europe.

What then shall we say? "Assemble yourselves and come; draw near together, ye that are escaped of the nations." (Isaiah 45:20 KJV.)

WORK OPPORTUNITIES AROUND AT WISCONSIN

Wisconsin Academy's industries are booming and have room for more student workers than are now enrolled.

A typical month's earnings in industry for 80 hours may be $229.20 for a student. Additional money can be earned by working Sundays.

Summer work is also available. If a student works at least 10 weeks, he will receive a rent rebate during the school year equal to 100 percent of his summer room rent.

Harris Pine Mills is one of several industries at Wisconsin Academy.

Work choices include: Dakota Bake N Serve, Harris Pine Mills and the Wisconsin Academy Farm.

There are limited summer opportunities on campus for those under 16.

'BUNKER HILL' DORM NOW OCCUPIED

The North Dorm, built on the land known by Indiana Adventists as "Bunker Hill," was inhabited by excited young men on February 15. The academy students had been crowded into other residence halls since September.

The new home will house 36 men and has a two-bedroom dean's apartment with attached garage, guest rooms and a large hall for worship and association.

Harold Zacharias, building superintendent, presented the keys to Alan Bohman, principal of Indiana Academy, as another expansion project ended. Many Adventist builders assisted in the project and helped keep the expenses down.

Construction costs, which included ground preparation, building, sewage lift station, furnishings, and landscaping total $399,793.63 to date.

Your giving to the Indiana Advance Two-Percent Plus Plan will provide funds to pay for this dormitory. Your systematic giving is making possible the upgrading of the boarding school as it continues to serve the needs of Indiana youth.

HEARTBEAT DAY AT WISCONSIN ACADEMY

Sunday, February 22, 1981, was a tiring but invigorating experience for the students and 19 adults at Wisconsin Academy.

The day, called "Heartbeat Day," was divided into three separate events, fitness testing, blood work and jumping rope.

The gym had nine stations where strength, endurance and flexibility were tested. Height and weight were recorded, blood pressure taken, and the Harvard Step Test was given.

In this test the students stepped up and down in rhythm for three minutes. Then their recovery pulse was taken to determine cardiovascular capacity.

The next phase consisted of a 600-yard run, a 50-yard run, sit-ups, pull-ups and other physical activities.

Brenda Erb takes the recovery pulse of Clint Shotwell.

Nineteen adults took part in the coronary risk evaluation by having blood work analyzed for levels of cholesterol, triglycerides, glucose, and other areas.

After the fitness stations closed down, the "Jump For Heart" volunteers began an endurance test.

Many of the students and adults felt the total day's activities were well worth all the moans and groans and aching muscles.

GRAND LEDGE STUDENTS BUILD HOUSE

The Grand Ledge Academy construction class students have recently completed building their second house. The project employed six students who not only earned money for tuition, but a full class credit. Gaylon Stevenson, a local builder, supervised the project. The house was sold for $65,000. A third house is being started immediately, according to Harold Oetman, principal.

EYEWITNESS NEWS FEATURES HINSDALE HOSPITAL

HINSDALE—As a result of an article in the Daily Suburban Trib, a suburban Chicago newspaper, WLS-TV Channel 7 in Chicago featured Hinsdale Hospital on their 6 P.M. Eyewitness News program on Tuesday, March 10.

Both stories centered on the hospital's energy-saving waste-heat boiler, which began functioning in January.

Last year Hinsdale Hospital paid $55,000 to have its trash hauled away. Now the hospital burns its trash in a special incinerator and uses that heat to generate steam, which in turn heats the hospital in winter and cools it in summer.

The hospital estimates that it will save $75,000 a year in trash removal and energy costs.

Hinsdale Hospital is the first hospital in the Chicago area to be equipped with such a system.

ALUMNI CELEBRATION 1981

"The Power of the Ordinary" is the theme of this year's homecoming celebration to be held on campus May 1 to 3.

Activities include several special presentations, lectures, and workshops, according to Ralph M. Coupland, executive director of the alumni association.

Scheduled for Friday evening is the traditional international flag raising at 6:45 P.M. on the seminary green.

A vesper service follows at 8 P.M. in Pioneer Memorial Church. Featuring a variety of musical selections, the program includes a lamplighter ceremony for student missionaries and overseas workers returning to their service positions.

Sabbath morning at 8:15, alumnus Glenn E. Coe, chief trial attorney for the Division of Criminal Justice in Connecticut, will present "A Case for Persuasion."

The 11 o'clock sermon entitled "Exalt My Horn, O Lord" will be given by Elaine Giddings, professor of communication at the university and recently elected "Alumna of the Year."

At 9:30 A.M. in Pioneer Memorial Church, a special Sabbath School program will be presented by Andrews alumni from the honored silver class of 1956.

Alumnus Warren L. Johns, chief counsel for the general counsel department at the General Conference, speaks for the Lamson Hall alternate church service at 11 A.M. The sermon is entitled, "Go For It."

Several special exhibits and demonstrations will be held on campus Sabbath afternoon from 2 to 4:30. The Siegfried H. Horn Archaeological Museum features "Tell Heshbon: 3,000 Years of Frontier Life," an exhibit of artifacts from the biblical city of Tell Heshbon, Jordan. The program is funded by a grant from the Michigan Council for the Humanities.

Also open will be the university's biological greenhouses, natural history museum and Heritage Room. Special demonstrations with the scanning electron microscope are to be given in the university's science complex.

In addition, the Ellen G. White Vault and Research Center opens its doors for guests during the afternoon. Denominational manuscripts and artifacts will be on display and guided tours are available.

At 3:15 P.M., a symposium will be held at Pioneer Memorial Church. Entitled "Religious Liberty and Human Rights in the Seventh-day Adventist Church," the meeting will consist of a panel discussion. The chairman will be Richard L. Huff, general counsel for Andrews and associate director of the university's Institute of Law.

Panelists will be chosen from the university faculty and guest lawyers attending a weekend conference of the Law Institute to meet simultaneously with the weekend's events.

A salad supper is provided for alumni and friends Sabbath afternoon at 5:30 in the Ruth Murdoch Elementary School Cafetorium.

An inspirational evening vespers service in Pioneer Memorial Church at 8 P.M. focuses on sacred music and meditation. The short program includes three university choral groups and the brass ensemble.

"Inherit the Wind," a dramatic presentation by the Andrews University Players, directed by Luanne Bauer, acting chairman of the communication department at the university, provides Saturday evening's entertainment beginning at 9.

Located at the Andrews Academy, a cast of more than 50 faculty and students participate in the play based on the events of the celebrated Scopes' "Monkey Trial" of 1925. An additional performance will take place on Sunday evening, May 3, at 8 P.M., a benefit performance for the Samoan Mission Project and the All Nations Church.

Sunday morning, an alumni brunch will be held in the Wolverine Room of the Campus Center. The program includes a presentation of honored alumni, remarks from alumni association president Edwin Dass, an alumni business meeting and a report on Andrews progress from Joseph G. Smoot, president.

May 1 through 3 also marks the National Conference of Adventist Attorneys to be held on campus sponsored by the Andrews University Institute of Law and the Alumni Association.

The Conference of Church Pianists, conducted by Morris Taylor, professor of music at the university, features a workshop session on Friday, May 1, from 3 to 5:30 P.M.

Emphasis is on hymn playing, music lists and exhibitions, as well as repertoire for the church pianist. A sacred piano concert highlights Sabbath afternoon at 2 in Pioneer Memorial Church.

The annual "Country Center" sponsored by the physical education department begins at 1

P.M. on Sunday, May 3. The event features the 10-, 4 2/10- and 1 1/2-mile runs. A registration fee will be collected at Johnson Gymnasium on campus between 11 A.M. and 12:30 P.M. for those running in the event.

13 BAPTIZED IN ALTON

On February 14, a successful series of meetings was concluded in Alton with the third baptism of the series. But the miracles started before the meetings began.

Prayerfully, plans had been made by the church for an evangelistic series. Only one building had been located of sufficient size to hold a congregation. It is the Little Theater where music programs and plays are presented. There are very few days when it is not in use.

When Evangelist Edwin G. Brown called with the only date he had available for the meetings, Pastor Bill Stewart called the Little Theater to see if the date could be arranged. And miracle number one happened—that was the only date open at the Little Theater.

Another miracle was the unusually good weather. Not one day was missed because of bad weather.

On opening night 275 non-Adventists attended. The attendance was good through the four-week series, with about 125 non-Adventists present most nights.

The first baptism was conducted on January 31 at the church. Eight persons joined the family of God. Pairry Lawrence has only one leg. Yet she saw this as no hindrance to making a decision for Jesus Christ. As she came up from the baptistry, she said over and over, "Praise the Lord, thank you, Jesus." Her husband, R. B. Lawrence, has been preaching to the Baptist people for about 30 years, so he is no stranger to the Word.

A second baptism of four persons was witnessed on the following sabbath, and one more person was baptized on February 14. Altogether, 13 new members have been added to the church family. But this is only the beginning of glorious events.

Even before her baptism, Gloria Holmes was witnessing to her family and friends. Just after baptism, she spent a prayerful two hours in Bible study with her previous pastor, telling him of the beauty of the Sabbath message. Several of her family and friends are now attending church services.

We believe that it will be through the faithfulness of members such as Mrs. Holmes that this work will be finished and we can go home.

The last person, but not the least, to be baptized as a result of the Alton meetings was Mary Bonnell, here show with Pastor Stewart.

RENNIE BURNS CELEBRATES 98 YEARS

Rennie Burns celebrated her 98th birthday March 1, 1981, according to Sally DiCicco, communication secretary. She has been an Adventist for 56 years. In 1925 she attended a series of tent meetings in Chicago and was baptized in Lake Michigan. She became a member of the South Side Church in Chicago, and later moved to Harvey. The Harvey Church merged with the Chicago Heights Church and is now known as the South Suburban Church in Flossmoor. Mrs. Burns lives with her daughter, Rose Hence, in Oak Lawn.

CONNSVILLE NEWS NOTES

- Elder Carl Johnson is giving on-the-job training to the laymen of the Connersville Church. It is a 12-week program in which the participants go with the pastor in his witnessing program. After each of these visits the trainees return to the church for a reporting and discussion session.

- A "church pals" program was started early this year, according to Lucretia Claggett, communication secretary. The church members have exchanged names. Members are to keep in touch with their church pals through visits, cards and phone calls. The church will be notified by the pal of any sick person so that they can have special prayer. The children are also included in the church pal program.

COMPANY GROWS IN WARSAW

Warsaw, Indiana, the county seat of Kosciusko County is now receiving the light of the Gospel.

The light began to shine in 1978 when a literature evangelist, Don McCullough, discovered that there were several Seventh-day Adventists living in the area. He contacted one of them, Loren Worley, and these two men made plans to have a branch Sabbath School.

All Adventists in the area were urged to attend and bring their friends. At first the attendance was small but the little group continued meeting faithfully every week.

About a year later Bill and Betty Poe were baptized and gave their support to the Warsaw project. In the summer of 1980 the believers took another bold step in faith and organized into a company.

Meeting in the Steelworkers Union Hall at 3:30 P.M. every Sabbath, the Warsaw Company began searching for property or a suitable building to serve as a church.

One ideal location which had been priced beyond the means of the small group was now available at a much lower price. The sellers were willing to sell 10 acres located just off U.S. Highway 30. Then the Warsaw Company was faced with raising $16,000 after the conference had contributed its share.

To date, $15,000 has been raised, and the members are eagerly looking forward to building a church this summer.

Another young family, the Ed Demarees, have moved from Fort Wayne to support this project. Five more families are being prepared for baptism. There are now about 20 to 30 people in attendance each Sabbath.

During the past several months, Ida Carson of Benton Harbor, Michigan, has covered Kosciusko County with Steps to Christ stuffed with Bible study request cards.

The work of this woman and her associates has resulted in 50 Bible study requests from that one source alone. The pastor, a literature evangelist, and Lew Norwood of Indiana Home Health Education Services are each spending one day a week trying to follow up 60 requests from the area for Bible studies.

NEWS NOTES

● An achievement banquet was held at the Ramada Inn in Fairview Heights, Illinois, to award the diligence of the Ingathering achievers and to promote Christian education. This event, sponsored by the Reid Memorial Church in East St. Louis, Illinois, was directed by Mildred Kirk and Mamie Davis. Representing the Lake Region Conference were R. C. Brown Sr., secretary/treasurer, and Reginald Barnes, education director.

● A candlelight service was held at the Calvin Center Church on March 14 for the induction of 15 new members in the Pathfinder Club, according to Laura Rasch, communication secretary. The lighting of the candle represented the spirit of Pathfinders. This is the spirit of adventure, fun, learning, comradery, awareness, reverence, and service to God and man. The new members pledged to keep the light of Jesus shining by having daily prayer and personal study, being temperate, honest, courteous, obedient, reverent, cheerful, and willing to share their faith. They vowed to be faithful Pathfinders and were declared acceptable members of the Bobcat Club of the Lake Region Conference by their leaders, Robert and Ruby Minisee. Nancy Lindo offered the prayer of consecration.

● The Chicago Straford Memorial Church recently held a youth day, according to Crystal R. Drake, associate correspondent for the Lake Region. Using the theme "Life, Love and Happiness," Marcus Harris, assistant pastor, and Tyrone Barnes and Ollie Smith, recent Oakwood College graduates, each took one topic from the theme and presented it in message to the youth. The weekend was well attended and the youth took an active part in every service. The church choir sang for each service. Preparations for the next youth day include the introduction of the newly formed youth choir.

● "If you want joy, real joy, wonderful joy, let Jesus come into your heart," were the words in the theme song used during the spirit-filled Week of Prayer held March 15 through 21 at Bethel Church in East Chicago, Indiana. The services were conducted by John Grier, pastor. Georgia Coleman and Willie Frazier were guest soloists for the week. Geraldine Clark, Adventist youth leader, presented Michael Duncan with a trophy for his speech on better living at the closing service, according to Magdalene McNair, communication secretary.

FRIENDSHIP CIRCLE MAKES PRESENTATION TO PETERSON SCHOOL

Recently the Friendship Circle Club of the City Temple Church in Detroit presented to the Frank L. Peterson School in Inkster, Michigan, a check for $1,500 to be used as the school board deems necessary.

The presentation was made by Helen Reid, recording secretary of the Friendship Circle, and was received by Alvin Barnes, principal.

Throughout the years the club has contributed thousands of dollars to the school.

The Friendship Circle Club was organized on March 1, 1949, and consisted of 14 charter members who united to pursue missionary endeavors and to serve as Christ served. Two of the original members, Ernestine Elliott and Carrie Foster, are still active in the club.

Besides giving generously to Peterson School and their local church, the group pays tuition for students needing financial assistance, assists with rent for people unable to pay, sponsors young people to summer camp, distributes numerous food baskets to the needy, and helps to train boys and girls to follow in the footsteps of Jesus.

Once a year the club gives a tea to help promote the work that they are doing. On October 19, 1980, the club presented their 27th Annual Tea.

practice each day, as well as a full range of camping activities.

A highlight of the music camp will be Friday, July 17, when campers will be bussed to Grand Ledge camp meeting for several performances during the weekend.

Other camps, besides the traditional ones, include: aquatics, horsemanship, backpacking, horsepacking, and mini-bike trail camps.

Children ages 10 to 12 may attend any, or all, of the three dates reserved for them, Elder Rilea said. (See the camp schedule on page 5 in this issue.)

Information for all camps has already been sent to the churches and schools. There will be bus service available from Andrews University, through Lansing, and north on U.S. 27.

A new entrance to the camp is being constructed, creating an access from M-72 directly onto camp property. Campers should be aware of this before arriving at Grayling, Elder Rilea said.

The new entrance is about three-tenths of a mile east of the existing road and should be in use before the camping season begins.

REVELATION EXPOSITION DRAWS 2,500 PEOPLE

More than 2,500 people attended the opening night of the five-week Revelation Exposition in Berrien Springs, Michigan, April 11.

Crusade speaker Jack Bohannon praised the Lord for such a good response from the local membership and the general public.

Dr. Bohannon uses three 10-foot screens and 11 projectors to illustrate all of the messages from Genesis to Revelation. Dr.

SUMMER CAMP PROGRAM ANNOUNCED

Au Sable campers who register before May 15 and send in a $5 nonrefundable deposit will receive a free Camp Au Sable T-shirt with their receipt.

Camp director Lester Rilea, said the T-shirts are being offered to encourage campers to register early.

"Planning for the camps is a big job," Elder Rilea said, "and it helps us if we have some idea of how many campers will attend."

One of the special camps, in action for the second year, is the music camp. Last year 30 young people attended.

This year the music camp is available to young musicians in other conferences in the Lake Union territory who qualify and would like to attend.

Camp director will be Nancy Steely, band director from Battle Creek Academy.

Also assisting at the camp will be Patricia Silver, Andrews University band director; James D. Hanson, assistant professor of voice at Andrews University; E. Harold Lickey, professor of music at Andrews University; LeRoy Peterson, assistant professor of music at Andrews University.

The camp is conducted in a natural setting, with four to five hours of choir and instrument

PATHFINDER LEADERS LEARN ADMINISTRATION TECHNIQUES

Pathfinder club administration was the theme of a workshop held at Camp Au Sable, March 20 to 22, directed by Michigan Pathfinder

Director Merrill Fleming.

Dr. Ruth Murdoch of Andrews University presented practical, down-to-earth tips on how to relate to Pathfinders.

Dr. Duane Wacker of Battle Creek dealt with the practical aspects of the Pathfinder program, Carol Esh of Gobles Pinedale Church spoke on club morale, and conference communication director, Glenn Hill, told how Pathfinders can serve the community.

Other aspects of administration touched on at the workshop were: evaluation, the teen mission program, Vacation Bible School and Pathfinders by Vera Groomer, craft seminars, union camporee, Pathfinder fair, teen snow outing, and uniforms.

INVESTMENT AT GILLETT

The 32-member Gillett Church discovered last year that Sabbath School Investment for missions can be measured in countless blessings as well as financial returns.

Church members collected cans and other miscellaneous aluminum materials. A total of 593 pounds were taken to the recycling station and netted $189.76.

A collective church project was to save pennies. This amounted to $34.39.

Individual investment projects were undertaken by members. Decorating cakes, selling produce, giving a percentage of sales, saving change, selling handcrafted clocks, teaching upholstery classes, and pledging $1 for each church visitor were some of the projects undertaken.

The combined offering totaled $1,364.81. Projects for this year are underway, and with confidence in promised blessings, Sabbath School Investment at the Gillett Church will again be successful.

DEATH DOES NOT TAKE A VACATION

Spring is here and with it come plans for travel, vacations, or fix-up projects around the house. A great deal of thought goes into these long awaited projects as people assess their individual situations and plan accordingly.

There is no better time to assess your estate planning needs than now. If an accident would claim the life of you or your spouse, would you have made plans for your family's future as detailed as those for your summer vacation?

Statistics say seven out of every eight people have no wills, and many more have not reviewed their wills recently.

People put off writing a will for a variety of reasons. The most common is financial. But if you can afford a vacation you cannot afford not to write a will. It is not for your protection, but for the protection of your spouse and those you love.

This year when you sit down to make summer plans for the family, make sure a part of those plans include writing your will or reviewing an existing will.

If you need assistance, please write to the Wisconsin Conference Trust Services Department, Box 7310, Madison, WI 53707, or call (608) 241-5235.

Remember this counsel from the pen of Ellen White, "Death will not come one day sooner, brethren, because you have made your will."—Counsels on Stewardship, p. 328.
