Andrews and Your Wings of the Morning

*Joseph G. Smoot
President
Andrews University*

CHARLES A. Lindbergh is buried on a remote part of a Pacific island. On a simple, flat stone slab marking his grave are the words, "If I take the wings of the morning. . ."

Lindy took the wings of the morning and proved that something never before achieved was possible. He had to know in order to plan. Endurance tested his resolve. It took courage, confidence and faith to fly alone.

Those ingredients still make good wings. And Andrews University can help you to take the "wings of the morning" for your flight into life. But you alone can act on your determination to learn so that you can soar in service for God and man. Won't you consider Andrews University in your life plan?

THE HEART OF THE LAKE UNION

Experience Andrews

Reading, writing and endless studying. . . Each is essential for academic success, but some people believe the purpose of a college education ends here.

It doesn't. While much of a student's time is spent taking courses to achieve a specific career goal, an education is gained in numerous other ways as well.

College is an experience. And what a person experiences is often just as valuable, if not more so, than information read, taken down as class notes or stored in the memory.

That's why at Andrews University, "involvement" is a word that is not taken lightly. In the whirlwind of campus life, a lot more than textbooks and term papers get special attention.

Just as important as a commitment to intellectual development is a person's personal achievement. And in the world beyond a college campus, employers favor flexible people with a broad background in addition to specialized skills.

With the many schools and programs Andrews offers, diversity is no less apparent in its population. Students and faculty represent more than 80 countries of the world. And this unique international flavor gives the Andrews student the opportunity to think more broadly about different cultures and their social values than his own country's physical boundaries usually afford.

With one faculty member for every 14 students, special attention and lasting friendships with teachers, work supervisors, administrators and staff are a way of life at Andrews. It is not uncommon to catch a glimpse of teachers chatting with their students after class in a hallway, offering prayers of encouragement in class, or discussing current issues or personal goals and aspirations with students over a meal in the cafeteria.

Even more rewarding can be the opportunity to join student groups organized to meet a variety of extra-curricular interests. Enjoy the fellowship of hobby and craft societies from stamp collecting to Chinese cooking. Play your favorite sport and participate in on-campus championships. Be a member of a college bowl team or achieve your gymnastic dreams by joining the Andrews Gymnics.

You may want to start a community outreach program or become part of one by visiting the elderly, those in prison, or underprivileged children.

Be a part of the fellowship of a class beach vespers on the shore of Lake Michigan or a pizza feed in a faculty member's home. Take your favorite friend to a student banquet or help create a program for your own department's assembly period.

Additional activities help to extend your book knowledge and give you the excitement of stepping out on your own. Many students choose to serve as student missionaries or domestic task force workers for a year during college. And travel-study tours to Europe and other countries around the world give students the option of fulfilling course requirements in areas such as art, music, English and history in an outdoor classroom.

At Andrews, Christian fellowship generates a lot of campus activity. Friday vesper services, chapel services and casual student gatherings highlight the campus calendar each week. And sometimes there is no closer bond between friends than when they experience spiritual refreshment together.

These plus an unlimited potpourri of other activities are also part of a college degree. Part of the college experience.

When you're considering college, come to Andrews. Because it's the friendships and those little extras you'll remember long after final exams.

Programs for Your Future

by Becky Frost

THE direction in which education starts a man will determine his future life." What Plato wrote in The Republic during the fourth century B.C. is still alive today.

And at Andrews University, where a higher

Becky Frost, feature writer for Andrews University's public relations department, is the author of the articles on pages 3 through 7 of this issue of the Herald.

standard is the only standard, students come from all over the world to invest in an education that will promote a career to keep up with the job market's demands for the future.

Today, big business is out in front like never before. Many of the jobs available to college graduates are oriented to this vital area.

Designed to provide students with basic business skills and a wide background of knowledge in the overall field, the School of Business at Andrews encourages students to prepare for positions of responsibility in a wide range of settings in corporations, industries and nonprofit organizations.

Programs in accounting, management, economics, marketing and information science are taught in a special way to help students develop a sound philosophy of ethics for the job world today. Opportunities for cooperative work experiences with local businesses are also available for practical on-the-job training.

And Andrews' business professors bring a broad spectrum of experience to the classroom, having specialized skills of their own in several professional business areas.

Aside from the large attraction to business-related occupations, careers are also abundant in the area of technology.

The College of Technology at Andrews has seven main departments: engineering, engineering technology, occupational education, industrial education, architecture, aviation, and soon, information and computer science.

The engineering curriculum is offered in conjunction with Walla Walla College in Washington. In a program accredited by the Engineer's Council for Professional Development, the first two years are taken on the Andrews campus and the last two on the West Coast.

Engineering technology is offered totally on the Andrews campus on both the associate and bachelor's levels. The concentration is skills-oriented and separate from engineering. Eight specialties are taught in the program.

Courses for more than 20 different types of occupational education certificates are structured to cover the essentials for career readiness. Training ranges from nine months to two years to complete.

As skilled craftsmen themselves, instructors in the industrial education department are eager to bring their own unique contributions to their respective trades. The program prepares its majors to teach as well as to work in industry.

Architecture is a growing department in Andrews' College of Technology, stressing a practical approach of combining attractiveness, usefulness and safety when considering a design. Both two- and four-year degree programs are available. More and more architecture students at Andrews are taking a fifth-year in conjunction with the Lawrence Institute of Technology in Detroit to complete their studies.

Aviation courses are provided at the Andrews Airpark, the center for the largest mission aviation program of any denomination in the world. Students may choose a flight or maintenance option in their schedules, as well as train for airport management.

Eight written examinations for Federal Aviation Administration licenses are issued at the airpark, which holds one of the highest performance rates of flight schools in the Midwest.

A new information and computer science department will become operative on July 1, 1981, according to William Davidson, dean of the College of Technology.

The program will offer degrees in computer science, industrial technology and information systems, engineering technology in computer technology, industrial and engineering technology, as well as a Master of Science in information science.

Information science is an applied, practical, business-oriented program while computer science is more theoretical, mathematical, and geared toward "pure" computer studies.

Also offered will be a one-quarter certificate in data entry and a two-quarter certificate in computer operation as an addition to the college's occupational education program.

And liberal arts majors who decide to pass up careers in technology in light of their own interests have the opportunity to take elective courses such as photography, construction, upholstery, and auto maintenance to round out their programs.

The College of Arts and Sciences also challenges students with exceptional courses designed to meet individual needs in a chosen field.

The field of communication has a number of employment areas in demand for the 80s, and the communication department at Andrews is offering more career options than ever before. Major programs in broadcasting, journalism, and public relations provide opportunities to become proficient in concentrated areas beyond the general communication curriculum.

Annual student productions sponsored by the department highlight skills acquired in interpretation and public speaking classes. And Andrews' 50,000-watt fine-arts radio station, WAUS, allows students first-hand experience in a broadcast studio.

The communicative disorders department leads to certification in audiology and speech pathology. Those taking this major work in a practical training environment with patients of Andrews' speech and hearing clinic.

Andrews has an extensive education program which trains teachers in many specialty areas. The Reading Center promotes community involvement and on-the-job training for education students. People of all ages come to the clinic to improve their reading skills.

The English program at Andrews is designed to provide the classical education in English literature. Focus is an aesthetic appreciation, intellectual power, flexibility of expression and advanced writing skills. But according to Joseph Warren, professor in the department, many specialized professional organizations and graduate schools are eager to accept English majors on the basis of their analytical skills. Graduates may teach the English language, literature, English as a second language, or enter the popular employment areas of journalism, law, public relations, or public administration.

The English Language Institute based in the department offers an intensive English language study program to aid students whose native tongue is not English—an important consideration for Andrews' international population. The department also offers special mini-courses and a writing lab to help students brush up on their research and writing skills.

Hundreds of other career choices are represented in the arts curriculum, and the sciences cover a wide variety of disciplines, as well.

The modern science complex houses an impressive array of up-to-date equipment to aid in study such as the scanning electron microscope and several computers. Students of biology, physics, chemistry, mathematics and other areas leave Andrews to serve as teachers, research specialists and leaders in the fields of industry and medicine.

Among colleges and universities across the nation, Andrews ranks 25th in the percentage of male graduates going to medical school.

In addition, 91 percent of all nursing students pass their state boards on the first testing, a record envied by many nursing schools. Specialized training for nurses is provided by major medical centers as well as local health-care agencies.

Andrews' School of Graduate Studies offers Master of Arts and Master of Arts in Teaching degrees, as well as a fifth-year diploma in some fields. Doctoral degrees are also awarded in eight areas.

Professors in the school spend an enormous amount of time preparing individuals to develop talent and grow as professionals. Many of the studies students pursue are in conjunction with research already done or being done by their professors.

At the Seventh-day Adventist Theological Seminary, students from all corners of the world join together to train for active service in the denomination's ministry.

As the fifth area of the academic environment on campus, the seminary offers master's degrees in divinity and theology in addition to Doctor of Ministry and a Doctor of Theology degrees.

Thousands of years later, Plato's words still ring on the college campus. Excellence must be the motivating factor in an institution that reaches beyond the ordinary into the extraordinary. And at Andrews University, excellence can be the central part of your future.

Operation Employment

by Becky Frost

NO one should be shortchanged on a good education because it seems unaffordable. Ask Joe Grider.

As director of Andrews' new off-campus work program, Joe spends his office hours job-hunting for students and their spouses who cannot find employment to defray college expenses.

And as a student at the university's Theological Seminary, he can vouch for the importance of having steady pay coming in.

Since the program's inception in November 1980, more than 300 job openings have been discovered in the local business area. At least half of those positions have since been filled by an Andrews student or student spouse.

Mr. Grider sees the service as a boost for local businesses as well as the university and its students. "When I can offer to advertise job openings free of charge and find these employers some responsible help, Andrews cannot help but make a favorable impression on the surrounding community."

Posted on one of the main bulletin boards of the Campus Center is a listing of all job information. Reports of openings, requirements, experience, who to see, and wages offered are continually being replaced as jobs are filled. By using the board, students can avoid needless screening time and go directly to each employer.

"Since we began this effort last fall," beams Mr. Grider, "the average pay per hour for the students who are hired is well above minimum wage."

But Joe's Job Exchange is a very small part of something bigger going on to provide work programs for students on the Andrews campus.

According to Student Labor and Housing director Alan Norman, more than 2,200 students earn close to three million dollars from the university annually. In addition to the convenience that an on-campus job offers, the Andrews work program also promotes several opportunities for personal development.

"National figures prove what I have had the privilege to observe on campus," says Mr. Norman. "The benefit of working in addition to studying aids students in effective time management and commitment to responsibility."

Specialized skills are also a plus for students as they graduate. Seventy different departments on campus offer a wide variety of areas to add the "plus" of experience to academic requirements. Students may choose from clerical, custodial, financial, industrial, as well as outdoor or indoor employment positions.

An additional special project to expand on-campus jobs was initiated last year that particularly benefits individual departments. The program expands the labor force to accommodate extra research and provide clerical help. And the plan provides close to a quarter of a million dollars worth of additional work funds.

Perhaps just as important as securing jobs for students on campus is showing appreciation for an enormous amount of inter-campus work done well. Mr. Norman enjoys giving a Student Employee of the Year award to let students know that their contributions to Andrews outside of the classroom are equally important.

"When it comes to student labor at Andrews," smiles Mr. Norman, "we're just people helping people." Isn't that right, Joe?

Elder Bradford went on to say that "all evangelistic endeavor should be based in the local church. LUSI sees that the congregation is a place where the Lord's work all comes together.

"LUSI is being looked at as a possible model—a prototype for the North American Division," said Elder Bradford.

Elder Bradford's enthusiasm for the LUSI Concept was apparent when he said, "Every church ought one day to become a soul-winning institute. Ellen White said in Christian Service that every church ought to be a training school."

Commenting on the place the LUSI concept plays in finishing God's work, Elder Bradford said, "It's on-the-job training that's needed. And assignment. That's one of my big principles," said Elder Bradford, "the first being small companies, the second being assignment. That's what LUSI is doing.

"Remember, evangelism is caught, rather than taught."

Update:

Lake Union Soul-Winning Institute

by Jere Wallack

THE Lake Union Soul-Winning Institute (LUSI) is now two years old. Its achievements, with the leadership of Director Mark Finley and his staff, clearly indicate the blessings of God.

Through the present quarter, 140 students have attended and more than 100 have finished the full two-quarter curriculum. The students have included about 30 percent seminary students and 70 percent laity.

A total of 1,000 non-Adventists have attended health seminars sponsored by the institute, and an additional 600 have attended Daniel Seminars. These classes have been held in 20 communities in Chicagoland.

Elder Finley, with the assistance of LUSI students and area pastors, has also conducted five series of evangelistic meetings in the Chicago area. As a direct result, the Burbank Church was born and is now thriving with 97 members.

On April 21, 1981, Charles Bradford, General Conference vice president for North America, was chairman of a committee appointed to evaluate the Lake Union Soul-Winning Institute.

While at the institute, Elder Bradford expressed his personal evaluation regarding the institute.

"A LUSI concept is bringing together ministers, church officers and lay persons," said Elder Bradford. "That is what Ellen White speaks about when she says the work will never be finished until they join hands.

"LUSI provides for that joining of hands in a common task," Elder Bradford continued. "Here are lay persons, ministers of experience, seminarians and church officers in the same classes, giving Bible studies together, holding public evangelistic meetings together. I see this as almost a prophetic fulfillment."

Mildred Summerton received congratulations from Dr. Maurice McGlasson, president of North Central Association, when Wisconsin Academy received accreditation.

WISCONSIN ACADEMY RECEIVES NORTH CENTRAL ACCREDITATION

Wisconsin Academy was recently accredited by the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools.

The North Central Association is the largest of the six regional accrediting associations in the United States. It serves schools, colleges, and universities in the 19 states in the central third of the nation.

Mildred Summerton, principal, attended the North Central Association Annual meeting in March in Chicago. She was with Wisconsin State Representative Dr. Glenda Landon for the breakfast where the announcement of newly accredited schools was made.

The school is already accredited with the Board of Regents of the General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists.

Both accrediting bodies help schools meet standards for quality education. Accreditation indicates that a school is under a continuing program of evaluation.

Schools report annually on the extent to which they are meeting the N.C.A. standards as suggested by the Board of Regents.

The standards of the North Central Association are in keeping with the high standards which Wisconsin Academy holds for Christian education. Accreditation by both the North Central Association and the Board of Regents denotes the school's ability and willingness to meet and sustain the quality expressed in the philosophy and objectives of the school.

The N.C.A. examination team made the following summary statement in their report:

"Finally, we were unanimous in our feeling that you have a solid institution of high quality. So many of the things you do—dealing with values education, providing work experiences, measuring both the quality and quantity of questionable commercial media exposure, making available recreational and fine arts activities of inestimable quality—are most admirable, and we applaud you for those."

How grateful we are for the program of Christian education which is planned for Adventist youth.

Bolingbrook Medical Center's first patient came at 10:15 A.M. on opening day, February 23. Treated for an injured shoulder, Nicholas Lioce, is assisted here with his sling by Chris Menchavez, R.N.

B.M.C. OPEN HOUSE

BOLINGBROOK—More than 1,000 residents of communities in the Bolingbrook Medical Center

(B.M.C.) service area visited the new facility during Open House on Sunday, March 22.

Located in Bolingbrook, Illinois, B.M.C. is an emergency/ambulatory care facility affiliated with Hinsdale Sanitarium and Hospital.

Visitors who filled the lobby and main entrance during the afternoon were offered giveaway items, free health screenings, refreshments, and an opportunity to win either an exercycle or one of four free health education courses.

Following the tours, visitors were invited to participate in the free health screenings, obtain information on Lamaze childbirth classes, or watch demonstrations on bread making and the use of the B.M.C. blood bank.

Participants who completed the screenings reviewed the results with a counselor who referred them to a physician if it was necessary.

Donald Hanson, president of Hinsdale Hospital, was in charge of the formal program and ribbon cutting.

Also present at the ribbon cutting were Jack Levine, president of the Medical Facilities Advisory Committee; Anne-Marie Szostak, Bolingbrook Junior Miss; Charles Snyder, vice president of Hinsdale Hospital and project coordinator for Bolingbrook Medical Center; Irwin Hansen, president of Adventist Health System North; Tom Gilbane, construction manager, Gilbane Construction Company; and James Hobin, village trustee.

Evidenced by the open house turnout, support by the community for the Bolingbrook Medical Center has been consistent since the plan was developed in the fall of 1976.

To thank them for their support, members of the Medical Facilities Advisory Committee and the Bolingbrook Village Board of Trustees were honored at a pre-open house dinner and tour on Sunday, March 15.

Bolingbrook Medical Center opened its doors for the first time on Monday, February 23, and as of April 21, more than 1,400 patients had been treated by the emergency room staff.

Bolingbrook Medical Center is designed to allow expansion to a full-service hospital, pending state approval. An adjacent professional office building is scheduled for completion this summer, making office space available for 18 to 20 physicians.

SWEETHEART BANQUET AT ROCKFORD

The traditional Sweetheart Banquet sponsored by the social committee of the Rockford Church was held Saturday evening, February 28, according to Joyce Friestad, communication secretary. The theme of this year's banquet was "We Love Having You Home"—a salute not only to the ex-hostages, but to everyone held in bondage. Brad and Dee McIntyre were guest singers in a concert for the evening. In a setting of Chinese decorations, tasty food was served by the men of the church. Dick Karp is chairman of the committee, assisted by Gerry Gulke, Wilfredo DelRio, John Thompson, Jim McCorkle and Dan Dodd. Pat Karp, Jean Schroeder and Jim McCorkle, above, decorated the tables. Special invitations were sent to community and church leaders to attend the banquet.

Geno and Alexandra Giacomelli were recently baptized in Bolingbrook.

BAPTISMS AT BOLINGBROOK

Geno and Alexandra Giacomelli now have a radiance and peace which they had never before experienced. Geno was baptized in the Bolingbrook Church last December and Alexandra followed him on January 31, 1981. Their year-old son was dedicated on the same Sabbath that his father was baptized.

Three years ago Geno began searching for a better way of life. He felt the Holy Spirit was showing him his need of a closer walk with his Saviour.

Then they moved to Bolingbrook. Geno's need for a more healthful life-style led him to begin jogging. Providentially, his route took him past a vacant lot containing a large sign which read, "Future Home of the Seventh-day Adventist Church." He noted with increasing interest the rapid progress of construction after the footings were dug in July of 1979.

The It Is Written telecast each Sunday morning began to be a regular part of the Giacomelli's Sunday schedule. He was convinced that Pastor Vandeman spoke Bible truth. He wrote to the broadcast and asked for literature which was offered.

As his convictions grew, he found it was not difficult to give up his habits of drinking and smoking. He and his wife even became vegetarians.

Bolingbrook members Al and Ruth Maehre began visiting the Giacomellis and giving them Bible studies. They eagerly read The Great Controversy and soon were convinced that Adventists were truly following Jesus.

When the Sabbath question came up it did not take them long to accept the fact that keeping the Sabbath was a beautiful way to show their love for Jesus.

Geno works for General Motors. He began to pray about keeping the Sabbath. He did not have to worry for long. It seemed that God worked things out for him. The opportunity to work 9 or 10 hours daily and have Sabbath off was given him.

They were both baptized by Bolingbrook pastor, Burton Wright.

On November 29, 1980, at the Bolingbrook Church, Buster (Charles) Roberts Jr. was baptized by his grandfather, Charles Miller Sr.

Elder Miller is a retired pastor from Mississippi, now busy doing evangelism. He made the trip to Bolingbrook especially for the happy occasion.

Dr. Aussner served as a missionary in Jerusalem and Beirut. He baptized the Bloomington pastor, George Terrian, while in Jerusalem.

● On Sabbath, April 18, eight children were dedicated to the Lord in the Richmond, Indiana, Church by Elder Carl Johnson with the elders of the church assisting, according to Helen E. Greulich, communication secretary. Dedicated were Samuel, Christian, Seth and Lori Klingman, children of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Klingman; George Hodge, son of Gary and Beverly Hodge; Todd and Daniel Burk, and Nicole Pennington, children of Mr. and Mrs. George Pennington.

4 BAPTIZED AFTER METROPOLIS SERIES

Evangelist Dan Schiffbauer reports five decisions for Christ and 76 other interested persons as a result of evangelistic meetings held in Metropolis in March. One young man who accepted Jesus as his Saviour died of leukemia before he could be baptized. A former member, reluctant to attend the meetings, had a dream about the end of the world during the first week. The dream made such an impression on him that he arose from his bed and prayed for forgiveness. He and his family attended the remaining meetings, and he assisted with ushering. Church members received physical healing and spiritual revival during the series. Pastor David Braun is teaching a Tuesday-evening Bible study class as a follow-up to the series. With Evangelist Schiffbauer, left, and Pastor Braun, right, are new Metropolis members James Gibson, Anna Marie Lawrence, Zelda M. Elam and Julie Gibson (in front).

MUNCIE CHURCH WELCOMES NEW MEMBERS

The Muncie Church is happy to report two more baptisms during the months of February and March.

First to be baptized was Barbara Ann Carroll, a student at Ball State University. Barbara is currently president of the newly revived Adventist Student Association, a club for Adventist students on the campus of Ball State University.

She is also an avid race walker. This sport enables her to witness to other health-minded students not only at Ball State University but on other college campuses in the United States. Barbara is currently ranked seventh in the nation in this sport and hopes to compete in the nationals to be held in California in the near future.

She joined the church after six months of Bible studies with Pastor Chico Rivera. Barbara is an accounting and finance major and plans to become a licensed Certified Public Accountant.

Baptized on March 20 was Mary Sue Cowan. Mary had studied with literature evangelist Jeff Blumenberg and Pastor Rivera. Mary was the first person to be baptized as a result of the work of Jeff Blumenberg. Jeff's goal is to help the Muncie Church grow. Mary has already started two Bible studies and is bringing her friends and family to prayer meeting and church.

600 STUDENTS ATTEND EDUCATION FAIR

Each year the Indiana Seventh-day Adventist church schools meet for the annual Education Fair. On April 5, 600 students represented 20 schools at Indiana Academy. Relatives and friends drove from all over Indiana to look at the displays and listen to the students' presentations. "Imitating the Pattern" was chosen as the theme for this year's fair, according to Bonnie Planck, Indiana Association of Seventh-day Adventist Educators secretary. Each classroom was invited to display a learning center. Several schools participated in presenting a program of skits, tumbling, and music selections. A mass choir also performed. Awards were presented to students for outstanding temperance posters, short stories and temperance jingles. The purpose of the Education Fair is to emphasize Indiana Seventh-day Adventist Christian education. At the close of the program, students joined in singing "Can the World See Jesus in You?"

'ROOM TO GROW' IN INDIANA

"Dynamic goals rise out of authentic needs," declared G. W. Morgan, conference president, as he asked his departmental staff to speak on personal growth, church growth and conference growth.

Growth seminars have been conducted throughout Indiana on five Sabbath afternoons.

Exciting new ideas on personal goal-setting, plans for expanding the church witnessing program, as well as objectives in the educational K-12 program were presented in the seminars.

Indiana Conference Treasurer Tom Massengill spoke about the tithe and the successful Indiana Advance program.

Individual responses to the Growth Seminar and church-growth plans were also shared. The Wabash Church has "resurrected the Friday evening M.V. meeting," declared Dorothy Huston. "We sing a lot, have prayer, Bible games and a devotional is conducted by a different person each week."

In South Bend, the church is actively involved in a "tender loving care" format. Church teams are conducting Five-Day Plans to Stop Smoking, weight control classes, cooking classes, community services, and a Discovery Seminar on basic doctrines at the Century Center in that city.

Carolyn Schaumburg of the New Albany Church shared her dynamic adventure in Bible reading. Elder Morgan said he memorized Bible verses during his daily walk, and others spoke about witnessing and Encounter Bible reading plans.

The Bedford Church meets Friday evenings for prayer meeting. Marion Church members are experiencing success with the Dukane projector, and Jeffersonville involvement in Bible studies has produced the encouraging attendance at the evangelistic meeting.

"If you love something, give it room enough to grow." Indiana Adventists have been challenged to respond to God's love and to grow in 1981.

SAVING QUARTERS FOR SAVING PEOPLE

Participation in the activities of the church is part of the education that students receive at the Cicero Church School, according to Ramona Trubey, communication secretary for the church. During December and early January, the first- and second-graders filled Voice of Prophecy cards with quarters. During that time $18.15 was brought in by the children to send to the Voice of Prophecy. The radio program has a special meaning to the children now as they realize that they helped to keep the program on the air. Jennifer Inman, Michelle Skoretz, Charles Humphrey and Cindy Oliver are shown with their cards of quarters.

CITY TEMPLE WELCOMES GOOD NEIGHBORS

Margie Smith, lay activities leader of the City Temple Church, in an effort to promote total membership involvement, scheduled a Good Neighbor Day.

Members were asked to invite friends whom they considered to be good neighbors to attend on this date. Special invitations were extended to the neighbors in the community surrounding the church.

Seventy-six visitors were present during Sabbath School and worship. A copy of Steps to Christ and a Good Neighbor Award were presented to each visitor. A tribute entitled "And Who Is My Neighbor?" was delivered by Constance Topps. The lay activities department is looking forward to another Good Neighbor Day in the near future.

SENIOR CITIZENS ARE REMEMBERED AT CAPITOL CITY

March 28, 1981, was a special day for Goldie Johnson. Mrs. Johnson is the 38th Senior Citizen to be honored by the Capitol City Church since the creation of their Senior Citizen's Committee.

Phyllis Murrell, chairman of the committee, arranges a monthly program which is included in the morning worship service to give special recognition to the senior citizens.

A brief biographical sketch is read, a corsage or boutonniere and a certificate are presented to the special person.

The honored senior citizen is then given the opportunity to share with the church his experience in becoming a Seventh-day Adventist Christian. Many interesting stories have been shared in this manner.

Sick and shut-in members are not forgotten. Special programs are arranged for them also. They are remembered on special occasions with fruit baskets, cards and telephone calls.

During the Christmas season, parties are planned for the senior citizens. Many senior citizens have commented that they are looking forward to their special day.

OWOSSO MEMBERS REACH OUT

Owosso Church members have an outreach plan of evangelism that spans the whole year. Since completion of a Five-Day Plan to Stop Smoking in November, the local hospital has requested that members conduct a Five-Day Plan on a regular basis. Dr. William Knecht headed the most recent one, with 30 people attending. Plans for the future include a natural foods cooking school, a stress-management seminar and a Daniel seminar. These programs will be followed by an evangelistic series, October 3 to November 15, by evangelist Jack Nash. A Dial Life Line has been recently installed to offer recorded messages for better health and happiness, communication secretary Cheryl Elmendorf said. James Hopkins is pastor of the church. Pictured are participants at a recent Five-Day Plan.

PERSONAL MINISTRIES SEMINAR ATTRACTS NEW MEMBERS

The Personal Ministries Seminar held recently at Camp Au Sable attracted many members who have been baptized within the last year. Elder Marion Kidder of Stoneham, Massachusetts, presented material about witnessing at the weekend meetings. Arthur Covell, conference personal ministries director, planned the meetings. About 150 people attended. Pictured are 16 of the new members who came to learn how to share their new-found faith. They are from left, back row: Dave Koleda, Floyd Strandburg, Gordon Moody; middle row: Don Steele, Bob Smith, Rod Conner, Steve Knowlton, Marilyn Hazelett; front row: Stanley and Lauri Ragsdale, Sandi Strandburg, Judy Knowlton, Jo Moody, Pat Bury and Cherri Willis.

30 YEARS OF DEDICATION

The Green Bay cradle roll children recently reversed the Sabbath School routine by singing "Happy Birthday" to their leader, Violet DuChateau.

Since her own children were babies, Violet has directed cradle roll activities almost continuously for nearly 30 years. She has taught a second generation of little children, including her grandchild, Heidi Bruntz.

One of Mrs. DuChateau's long-time assistants is Mrs. Moses Karr, affectionately called "Grandma Karr," who will celebrate her 95th birthday on July 4. She taught in cradle roll until recently and continues to help with record keeping.

The Green Bay Church has been greatly blessed by the continuity in Christian education these two faithful shepherdesses have shown the little lambs of the flock.

BAPTISM IN APPLETON

Melissa Murray, age 10, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Murray of the Appleton Church, was baptized by Pastor Jim Mamanua on March 21. After reading a baptismal book given to her by Pastor Mamanua, Melissa placed a note in the collection plate during the Sabbath service, stating that she desired baptism. Melissa, who seems to wear a continual smile for everyone, is a cheerful and welcome addition to the Appleton Church family.

A special service was recently held for the senior members of the Portage Church.

SENIOR CITIZENS HONORED AT GREEN BAY

When the senior citizens of the Portage Church came to church, Sabbath, February 21, 1981, they did not expect to be called to the front of the sanctuary.

Nor did they expect to see their picture in Monday's edition of the local newspaper. They did not even expect to be given a special gift or to be honored at the fellowship dinner after church. But all this and more happened that day.

On Senior Citizens Day at Portage, Ken Wade, pastor, began the worship service by calling all those over a certain age to the front of the church.

He called the list of names an Honor Roll of those who had worked and sacrificed untiringly to build up the church.

Elder and Mrs. Wade presented each senior citizen with a poem and handkerchief from the church.
