The Detroit Renaissance Center is a focal point of that great city. Renaissance means rebirth, revival, or renewal. Renewal is a word often associated with urban areas, and the Lake Union Better Living Centers seek the renewal of the spirit as well as the body as they help inner-city residents. A story about the Better Living Centers begins on page 4. A special offering will be taken for inner-city work on June 27. Photo by Dick Dower.

A new spirit is felt everywhere in Illinois; a spirit of evangelism is spreading. New members greet you in nearly every church. The conference is on the move.

When you read this article the membership of the Illinois Conference will have reached the 9,000-member mark. From the southern tip of Illinois, to the most northern church, from east to west, souls are being won for the Lord.

Church growth is the number-one priority of every pastor, teacher, literature evangelist, office secretary, departmental director and layman.

To date, at the end of May, more than 300 people have come into the church through baptism and profession of faith in 1981.

Because of impact evangelism running rampant through the conference, the need for church homes to house the growing number of members is becoming critical. In answer to this need a new program for Illinois laymen was voted at the May 17 conference business meeting.

Several brethren from the Georgia-Cumberland Business and Professional Association, a laymen's organization which has built 35 churches in the Georgia-Cumberland Conference in the past 10 years, presented the concepts of this program. The delegates enthusiastically adopted the program for Illinois. And 60 signed up as charter members.

These members will give $50 per quarter to a fund used to finance church buildings in needy areas. The church will repay the loans to the association on a lease/purchase agreement over a long term. This will allow new congregations to enjoy church homes while they are small in membership and growing.

In this way, the capital available will be ever growing. When the churches are paid off, they are deeded to the conference.

The Georgia-Cumberland Association presently has assets of $1,700,000, and liabilities of approximately $1,200,000. Thus a net liquid fund of $500,000 is available for church building.

Please pray for these aggressive laymen in Illinois as they launch a new concept of forwarding the Gospel in this conference. If you would like more information on the Business and Professional Association of the Illinois Conference, please contact the Illinois Conference office.

SHERMAN E. Wight benefited in various ways from canvassing in the early 1890's. Scion of the large Wight clan in the Gouverneur area of New York, Sherman attended Battle Creek College from 1889 to 1895.

How was he to pay expenses? How could he fitly represent abroad what he thought the college stood for? Probably best by colporteur.

Sherman's diaries picture rather well his never-forgotten summers. That of 1889 was spent in New York around Kingston and Newburgh. When necessary, N. Z. Town abetted Sherman and his comrades, planning, encouraging, and instructing.

And all the time Sherman sparked the four or five students who sold with him, for he was definitely squad leader. He sold Bible Readings for the Home, then just hot off the press.

Each weekend, when possible, the boys came in to their $2-a-week-room headquarters. They loved their Friday and Sunday swimming frolics. They covered their territories afoot, except when delivering books at the season's end.

Some typical entries read: "Canvassed back in the woods. Crossed the tunnel. Came back to Kingston. Took dinner in a grocery."

"Went to Rosendale afoot. Took 7 orders. Was to a Mister Rutters in the evening. They played on the banjo."

Probably the most memorable order made by Sherman came on August 23: "I went to Rhinecliff to canvass Levi P. Morton, our Vice President [of the United States]. He took the work, then I shook hands with him and departed."

His diary suggests he sold about 111 books that summer. On September 23 he was back in Battle Creek.

During the summer of 1890 he sold in Missouri. Here both George A. King and N. Z. Town helped keep the morale high as they visited around Troy, Hudson and Chatham.

On Sabbath and Sunday,

August 9 and 10: "We were all in our room. Doty and I went out walking. In the evening a man sold small articles on the street. Wrote letters. I straightened up accounts with the boys."

On the 14th Sherman gladly sold a Bible Readings for the Home to some Shakers, but on the 17th he was dismayed to make "38 canvasses, and only take 1 order."

The weekends were usually long and unexciting. Thus on August 24: "We were in our room, did not do much of anything but talk and write. We had a debate in the evening."

A week later they were convinced it was necessary to go swimming: "Was in Chatham in our room. Was very cold. The boys wore overcoats to go swimming." That summer they inserted an advertisement in the Chatham paper for Bible Readings for the Home—probably to strengthen their deliveries. By September 8 Sherman was back in Battle Creek again. Yet he sold more than 95 books that summer.

In 1891 Sherman led his canvassers into Missouri a second time, now to sell books and other publications for the Kelloggs of Battle Creek, but they did not do as well as they had with the gospel books.

Hence in 1892 Sherman went back to New York to colporteur, and to triumphantly visit among his relatives when the work was done. In 1893 he had become enough of a math major so he could work for the college under the direction of Professor J. H. Haughey, chiefly doing student teaching.

But in 1894 he made really good wages at Kennedy's Tent Shop—and there he met Clara Hayes of Pottsville, Michigan. Between the two of them they arranged a June wedding!

The indications were that by 1895 Sherman was an aggressive young man, persuasive, able, tough handed, financially reliable, on his way to leadership in the conferences.

"A man's wisdom maketh his face to shine, and the hardness of his face is changed"! Ecclesiastes 8:1, American Revised Version.

Centers of Hope

by Horace L. Jones

THE Seventh-day Adventist Church has had no difficulty locating its roots.

From its very inception, as a people called of God to proclaim to the world a final message of warning and eternal hope, the church has not only heralded God's salvation, but has also moved into a work of missions in behalf of the underprivileged around the world.

Today, the inner-city programs are included among the many services offered by the Adventist Church to help combat the problems that plague people in the cities.

To help relieve the plight of many families in Chicago, Detroit, and Indianapolis, the Lake Union Conference has established four Better Living Centers. The services offered vary, but each center provides an open door of escape to scores of people who have fallen prey to the vicious attacks of the ills found in large cities.

It does not take long for dedicated workers to discover that many people there are searching for survival of body and soul.

During these days of unparalleled physical and mental stress because of the instability of the nation's economy, the rising crime rate, the continuous signs of man's inhumanity to man, and the moral breakdown of our communities, the Better Living Centers are beacons of hope and centers of refuge for thousands.

From the Indianapolis Better Living Center comes an exciting story of the center's response to the needs of a husband, wife, and their five children, who applied for help.

Along with supplying the family with food and clothing, the center also included a spiritual blessing by introducing them to the Bible Says Bible study lessons.

Before long this family began to adhere to the teachings on tithing, diet, and the seventh-day Sabbath as they endeavored to follow the Word of God. At the present time they are attending an evangelistic crusade and it is hoped they will soon be baptized members of the church.

This is just one example of a favorable response from the 3,500 individuals who visited the Indianapolis center for service during the year.

Horace Jones is director of the inner city, lay activities and Sabbath School departments for the Lake Union Conference.

The Chicago Westside Better Living Center has always conducted a strong youth program. It has promoted field trips; training classes on crime prevention, alcohol and drug abuse; crafts, and family life.

Each summer the government has supplied 50 Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) workers for the center's program. Since 1975, 35 baptisms have resulted directly from the Chicago Westside Better Living Center's outreach program.

From the Chicago Spanish Better Living Center comes the news of 2,081 people applying at the center for assistance during 1980.

One hundred seventy-nine families were visited as a result of the services offered, and from the center's outreach program, 42 people are now attending Sabbath services. Thirteen of this number have already joined various churches through baptism.

If you were to visit the Better Living Center in Detroit, you would receive a cordial reception from the dedicated personnel there. The center now offers services in health care, nutritional programs, drug and alcohol counseling, smoking clinics, and food and clothing distribution. The center plans to conduct tutoring classes in English and Spanish.

The dental program is another service offered at the Detroit center. During 1980, nearly 800 patients were treated. Dental services include routine examinations, fillings, extractions, root canals, crowns, and dentures. The program has been a beneficial service to the community.

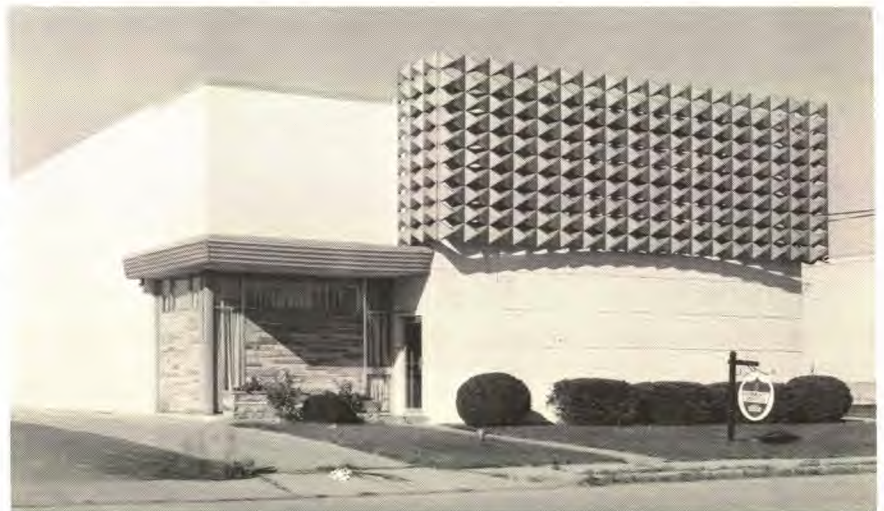

Recently an optician has offered a service of low-cost eye wear. With the assistance of a licensed optometrist, eye examinations and treatment can now be provided.

It is hoped that the centers will continue to develop into complexes for offering help to all people, revealing the love of God in every act of service. As a result of the many programs made available, people will be introduced to the message of salvation.

Funds from the inner-city offering taken in your church on Sabbath, June 13, will benefit the Better Living Centers in the Lake Union.

UNITED YOUTH CONGRESS

In His Hands

by Jere Wallack

DETROIT. The Renaissance City. The host city for black Adventist youth from across North America who met May 13 to 16, 1981, for a United Youth Congress.

It was a perfect setting.

According to Conrad Gill, youth director for the Lake Region Conference and the congress coordinator, "the purpose for the congress was to specifically assist young people who live in an urban setting to have a better perspective of their church—to plan their life and career from a spiritual perspective. Our plan was to involve the youth in community witnessing and to make the congress a learning as well as spiritual experience."

Community Involvement

Adventist Youth Better Living Teams from the Motor City and Nashville chose a housing project and spent each evening of the week preceding the congress in street witnessing.

Detroit Mayor Coleman Young had declared May 10 to 16 Crime Prevention Week. The youth used their mobile theater to dramatize the harmful effects of alcohol and drugs and the relation of alcohol and drugs to crime.

The Detroit City Council, the city police department and the crime commission cooperated with the Adventist youth who were "trying to make a positive impact on the city."

The activities of the youth congress actually began a Sabbath earlier as the Motor City Youth Federation held a weekend rally with special witnessing emphasis given to this target area.

As a result, more than 200 Detroit young people attended the nightly Better Living dramas.

Three choirs gave concerts in Detroit's Washington Mall during the congress. The mobile theater was used to dramatize the harmful effects of drugs. Lake Region Conference Youth Director Conrad Gill coordinated the congress.*

Learning

Not only did the Adventist youth learn through participation and community involvement activities, but many workshops were held during the congress. These workshops, led by highly skilled facilitators, covered a wide variety of practical questions faced by minority youth who live in an urban environment.

Spiritual

The United Youth Congress concluded with a strong spiritual appeal and a Sabbath filled with inspirational activities. Henry Monroe Wright, assistant professor of religion of Oakwood College, preached on Friday night and Sabbath morning. His subject was "In His Hands," the theme of the congress.

The Sabbath was filled with outstanding music presentations by groups from throughout the United States. Three of these choirs gave a special concert during the afternoon on Washington Mall in the heart of Detroit.

Sabbath afternoon and evening also featured the national finals of the Bible Bowl and the Better Living Oration Contest.

The Central States team from Omaha, Nebraska, won the championship of the Bible Bowl.

Kip Hazell, senior honor student at Chicago Shiloh Academy, was the national winner of the oration contest. He was awarded a $1,700 scholarship to Oakwood College for next year where his course of study will be premedicine.

The congress was attended by more than 700 official delegates representing every portion of the United States and Canada. On Sabbath the congregation numbered in excess of 6,500.

Elder Gill's feelings about the weekend were an expression of the youth who had attended. He said, "I was overwhelmed at the reaction of the young people. They appreciated deeply the effort that had been put forth to inform and educate them in a constructive way about their future. It was an exhilarating weekend."

Kampuchean Report

by R. B. Grady

Pastor Bob Parrish, SAWS director, Kampuchea, and Pastor R. I. Gainer, the former treasurer of Southeast Asia Union Mission, inspect the damage in the former Seventh-day Adventist Church, Phnom Penh.

Downtown Phnom Penh, Kampuchea, is still a lovely city.

ON a recent return trip to Phnom Penh, Kampuchea, I noticed that the people there looked fairly healthy and happy. War and revolution have, however, taken their toll in this country, formerly known as Cambodia.

The former Adventist language school is now being used by the government as a place to develop movies. Visitors are not permitted to enter. The Seventh-day Adventist Church in Phnom Penh is in shambles.

R. B. Grady is Sabbath School director for the Far Eastern Division.

The first Adventist workers to return to Kampuchea were Bob and Linda Parrish, who supervise the Seventh-day Adventist World Services (SAWS) work there. They are currently living in one room in the Monoram Hotel where all westerners are required to stay.

SAWS has supplied Phnom Penh with five dump trucks, two tractors, a crawler and thirty spray units. The latter were to be used to control the flies and bugs which are attracted to the garbage which piles up in the streets.

From SAWS in the Australasian Division several dentists and some dental equipment have been provided for Phnom Penh. SAWS has also supplied clothing. The Khmer government accepted a proposal for SAWS to bring in 125 tons of clothing during a 12-month period.

The General Conference has responded to a request for optometrists: This month an optometrist leaves the United States for a year's service in Kampuchea.

He will take equipment and hundreds of pairs of used eye glasses. Many people who wore glasses destroyed them to avoid persecution, because the eye glasses were a sign of prosperity or education.

For 1½ years volunteer relief teams, including 200 to 300 doctors and nurses, have been assisting with the emergency program in Kampuchea.

According to Don Roth, General Conference associate secretary for the Far Eastern Division, personnel sent to Kampuchea now are in the Special Service program. That is, they stay for a year at a time instead of two or three months like most of the volunteer workers.

Within this framework, dentists, doctors and optometrists will continue to take their skills to help the people of Kampuchea, and the SAWS feeding program will also continue.

Workers in the area are confident that the seeds of truth sown in Kampuchea some years ago will yet grow, and some day bring an abundant harvest.

Editor's note: Far Eastern Division projects which will benefit directly from the 13th Sabbath Offering to be taken on June 27 are: a girls' dormitory at Mt. Klabat College in East Indonesia, a new college campus for the central Philippines, and village chapels in newly entered areas of the Philippines.

ANDREWS BOARD REELECTS PRESIDENT SMOOT

Andrews University President Joseph G. Smoot was reelected to a second five-year term by the university board of trustees during their May meeting. Also reelected as officers of the university were Max C. Torkelsen and Robert H. Carter as chairman and vice-chairman of the corporation.

Dr. Smoot was first elected president of the university in April 1976, and took office the following June. He succeeded former president Richard Hammill.

The trustees chose Merlene A. Ogden as dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. Dr. Ogden was previously associate dean of the college. She will replace Dwain Ford, current dean, who will return to teaching in the chemistry department next year.

Dr. Ogden is also professor of English and serves as director of the university's honors program. She has been on the Andrews faculty since 1955.

Robert G. Pierson was chosen associate dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, filling the position to be vacated by Dr. Ogden.

Dr. Pierson is associate professor and chairman of the geography department. He joined the faculty in 1968.

Marley H. Soper will assume the position of acting director of the James White Library as the current director, Mary Jane Mitchell, retires.

Mr. Soper is associate professor and chairman of the Department of Library Science. He is also circulation librarian.

The trustees created the Center for Continuing Ministerial Education within the Theological Seminary. Appointed director is Raoul Dederen, who was also made assistant dean of the seminary. He is professor and chairman of the Department of Theology and Christian Philosophy.

Named as associate director of development and trust officer is Wesley Flory. He comes from Flint, Michigan, where he has been vice president for Michigan National Bank in the trust management department.

James Nash, currently the principal of Rio Lindo Adventist Academy, was named vice principal of Andrews Academy.

During the past five years, Andrews has made continued progress. In 1980 the School of Business was opened, enlarging Andrews to its present five schools.

A major construction and campus development campaign called the Andrews University Capital Fund 1985 program has been part of Dr. Smoot's master plan for the university during the past five years.

The most recent development is a new residence hall which will house 192 men. It is in the final stages of construction and will be ready for occupancy in the fall.

A Division of Continuing and Extension Education was recently organized. The university maintains affiliations and offers extension courses and degree programs in all parts of the world on the undergraduate as well as the graduate levels.

HINSDALE HOSPITAL BEGINS ARTHRITIS PROGRAM

HINSDALE—The impact of arthritis as a major health problem is substantial. Not only does arthritis cripple more people than any other disease, it has no respect for age or sex; it can devastate an infant as readily as a 75-year-old grandmother, and strikes twice as many women as men.

The disease affects more than 31.6 million Americans to a degree requiring medical care.

Hinsdale Sanitarium and Hospital is doing something about arthritis, thanks to a therapy program still in its formative stages. The arthritis program became possible when Albert Iammartino, M.D., and Stephen Kozlowski, M.D., rheumatologists, joined the hospital's medical staff last July.

The hospital sent Dr. Kozlowski to Rancho Los Amigos Hospital, Downey, California, to examine their therapy program.

This therapy program is based on the philosophy of not just treating pain in the arthritis patients, but returning the patient to useful function.

"Our aim is to get the person back to the maximum function possible," explains Harry Royal, rehabilitation coordinator.

"This means that if through therapy a patient is again able to fix her husband dinner, then that's one more thing we'll help her do," he continued. "Perhaps she used to work full time as well. If we can get her to the point where she works one or two days a week and that's all she can do, we've reached her maximum function."

The four-week inpatient program involves a team headed by the rheumatologists, including physical and occupational therapists, the inpatient health educator, dietitians, orthopedists, psychiatrists and psychologists, and nurses.

One of the facilities that makes Hinsdale Hospital a primary referral center for physical therapy is the 25-by-18 foot pool used for initial therapy. The therapy pool is one of three in the entire Chicago area.

Therapy begins with "active" exercises, those without resistance to the joints being treated. Patients exercise in the pool where there is the least amount of resistance and later exercise outside the pool.

As his condition improves, the patient progresses to "resistive" exercises, adding weights or manual resistance to the normal range-of-motion exercise.

Another part of the program is the use of adaptive equipment. Some splints are used to provide support to an arm or leg, others actually correct the position of a limb.

Though the program is just beginning, Mr. Royal sees a lot of promise for the future. "We expect the program to be going full steam by July or August. Considering the rarity of this type of program and the number of arthritic patients in the Chicago area, the potential for growth is tremendous."

CHILDREN DEDICATED IN DEKALB

Seven children were presented to the Lord in a service of dedication at DeKalb on April 18, according to Charlie Swanson, communication secretary. Their parents asked God's blessing and guidance, not only for the children, but for themselves as well. During the dedication, Pastor Andy McRae reminded the parents that the children had only been loaned to them by God to care for, train, and to mold to resemble Jesus. He challenged the parents to provide the influence of a Christian home. Pastor McRae also challenged the congregation to assist the parents in rearing their children for God. ## CAN WE AFFORD NOT TO?

Camp meeting has been an annual high point in the life of the Seventh-day Adventist family of believers in Indiana since 1870.

Among those whose habit it is to attend, there is a rising sense of expectancy each year as the date approaches. The sweetness of the fellowship is only exceeded by what we imagine Heaven will be for the redeemed of all ages.

God's blessing has been sought for the plans which have been made for camp meeting.

A new boys' dormitory will add 18 air-conditioned rooms. A new sewage system for the camp meeting area will greatly improve living conditions.

An outstanding schedule of speakers will be used of God to bless His people. General Conference speakers will include: G. Ralph Thompson, secretary of the General Conference, June 12 and 13; S. F. Monnier, associate director of the lay activities department, June 13 to 20; Roger Coon, associate secretary of the Ellen G. White Estate, June 13 to 20, and Richard O'Ffill, director of Seventh-day Adventist World Services (SAWS), June 12 to 14.

Other featured speakers are: Dan Mathews, director of Faith For Today, June 12 and 13; N. J. Matiko and Brad and Olive Braley of the Voice of Prophecy, June 16; Royce Williams of It Is Written TV program, June 20; Kay Kuzma of Loma Linda University, June 13 to 20; Patti Marsh, nutrition instructor at Indiana Academy, June 13 to 20;

Emilio Knechtle, June 17 to 20; Roy Graham, provost of Andrews University, June 14 and 15, and Lon Cummings, returned missionary from Central America, June 20.

The morning devotionals will be given by some of the pastors who have come to Indiana recently. The theme of their services will be "Beholding Jesus."

A special program has been planned for each youth department. John Thurber will be the evening speaker for the youth. Elder Thurber is the new youth director for the Mid-America Union.

Ask yourself these questions: "Can I afford to miss the spiritual feast that has been prepared?"

"Do not the demands of this urgent hour in the history of our rapidly crumbling world require that I avail myself of every spiritual asset available to me?"

May God help each reader to find the right answers to these questions.

Maurice, 23, is married to the former Carol Lynn Bailey. Baptized in October of 1978, Maurice had a strong desire to prepare others for the kingdom of God. He and Carol felt the Holy Spirit was leading them to the literature ministry and they accepted the challenge.

Maurice states that "success as a literature evangelist is the union of divine power and human effort."

He quotes from Colporteur Ministry, page 106, "Those who achieve the greatest results are those who rely most implicitly upon the Almighty Arm."

BAPTISMS CONTINUE AT TWIN CITIES CHURCH

Three more people have been baptized at the Twin Cities Church as a result of the intensive witnessing program, according to James Micheff, pastor. The outreach ministry includes use of the Encounter and Amazing Facts Bible study programs, the Breath of Life tape series, and the Pass It On phone ministry. "Our prayer is that the Holy Spirit will work through our members, as well as the programs we use, to win many more souls for the kingdom," Pastor Micheff said. COMMUNITY CENTER OPENS AT OTSEGO

A ribbon-cutting ceremony marked the official opening of the community services center in Otsego on March 30.

Renovation of the house has been underway since members purchased it in 1976. Community service workers continued their work during the remodeling project.

The $30,000 project included a new roof, aluminum siding, shoring up the porches and replacing some of the windows. Partitions were knocked out, the kitchen was updated, paneling added, and carpeting laid.

The first floor of the house has a living room, and a spacious dining area and kitchen, which makes it convenient for holding classes. Two other rooms double as Sabbath School class rooms and offices.

On the second floor, community services workers do their work in three rooms, with another room used as an office. There is also a "loan closet" of hospital equipment.

The house is called the Shepherd House after an Adventist family and their three children who lived there for many years.

One son, Lyle, became a doctor and church elder. A daughter, Edith, served as conference Sabbath School secretary for many years. The other son, Reid, retained his membership at Otsego although he lived in California.

Mayor Kenneth Bleeker, who officiated at the ribbon-cutting ceremony, commended the members for having purchased and "refurbished the house in such good repair."

He wished the members well and said he was "happy to know that there is such a service in the community," and "that it will serve a good purpose for the people in the area."

Patricia Salisbury has been director of the center since 1975, conducting work at her home until 1976, when the Shepherd House was bought.

PATHFINDERS AND MOTHERS HONORED ON MAY 9

During the Green Bay Investiture service on May 9, recognition was given to all the mothers present. Mothers of Pathfinder club members were presented with orchid corsages. Dale Ziegele, youth director of the conference, was host for the service in which 27 Pathfinders and church school students took part. Shown here from left, are Pathfinder unit captains Janie Tremblay, Donna Armstrong, Bradley and Brendan Hornick, and Ed Bruntz.

PREACH SEMINAR IN MILWAUKEE

Seventy-seven ministers and church workers from many denominations gathered in Milwaukee on May 11, 1981, to hear Dr. George Rice of Andrews University expound on the "Structure of the Gospels."

Dr. Ed Turner of Andrews University explained the "Practice of Crisis Counseling."

William Quigley, associate secretary of the General Conference ministerial association, directed the seminar, and Ernest Wheeler, Wisconsin Conference lay activities director, welcomed the guests.

"The purpose of the seminar," said Elder Quigley, "is to reach out in fellowship to our brethren in other churches."

Ministry magazine is sent on a complimentary basis to several hundred thousand ministers of all faiths in North America. Those who receive it in Southeast Wisconsin were invited to this seminar.

A vegetarian dinner prepared by the women of the Milwaukee Central Seventh-day Adventist Church was a part of the all-day program.

COMMUNITY SERVICES: SEEKING THE LOST

A new dimension has been added to the Madison Community Services program this year. As the excitement of packing and distributing holiday boxes faded, a desire for broader service filled the hearts of the group. Interest was focused on three services: to clothe, to feed, and to give the Gospel.

The list of holiday recipients was considered and it was felt that their spiritual needs had been neglected. Two missionary-minded members volunteered to visit the people to offer further service in the way of food, clothing, friendship, religious literature, and Bible studies.

Anne Franke, community services leader, and Margaret Bordson have spent several hours in this rewarding work. They have made many friends, distributed clothing, left literature and secured requests for Bible studies. And they have given Bible studies.

Mrs. Franke and Mrs. Bordson enjoy the contacts they have made. They have helped lonely people feel comforted and have helped others to make physical adjustments to better their lives. The entire community services group is benefiting from their encouraging reports.

The other members pray for these two who are "on the front lines." They also sew and pack articles of clothing. Each member of the group finds a way to be supportive.

A recent group project has been the development of phone visitation. There may not be time to visit a shut-in, but a phone call lets the person know he is not forgotten.

A different person calls the shut-in each day of the week with a cheerful message.

May the Lord help each community services group to reach the joy of service and not tire until Jesus comes.

World Church News

NORTH AMERICAN MISSIONS OFFERING SCHEDULED FOR JUNE 20

The spiritual needs of some 40 million U.S. residents whose mother tongue is a language other than English will come into sharp focus on June 20.

Public meetings, the production of evangelistic tools, and reading materials designed to attract these ethnic groups will be the prime reason for giving to the North American Missions Offering scheduled that day.

At the present time, 40,000 Seventh-day Adventists are attending non-English-speaking churches in the United States and Canada, and the figure is growing. The language groups the denomination hopes to help from the offering total 27.

It now takes $445,000 to fund the specific objectives spelled out by planning committees on all levels of the church structure. It is urgent that the offering be a big one. Some of the specific projects to benefit from the offering include a $25,000 electronic coding device that it is written would use to reach television viewers who have impaired hearing.

Cassette recorders for North American Indians are also needed. The information they receive from listening to tapes will include doctrinal, health, and cooking topics. This project will cost $25,000.

Television time purchased in the large cities for the purpose of producing and airing programs such as the Portuguese program in Canada, and the Yugoslavian program viewed in New York City and Toronto will cost $50,000.

To print literature in the Urdu, Rumanian, Vietnamese, Ukrainian, Indonesian, and Estonian languages will require $20,000.

Preparing and printing short tracts and small books for distribution within the large Jewish population centers in North America will require $25,000.

The goal of the North American Missions Committee is not only to reach all those in this country whose mother tongue is a language other than English but to successfully win them to Christ.

This giant task will take both money and materials. Please respond generously on June 20.

V.O.P. RADIO SPOTS FEATURE FATHER'S DAY

"Show fathers that they're loved" is the central theme of a series of 12 short radio messages being sent to the 8,700 radio stations in the United States and Canada.

The 30-second public service radio spots were funded by the General Conference and produced by John Robertson at the Voice of Prophecy. They will be aired by stations during June, especially near Father's Day, June 21.

The spot messages feature a variety of true-to-life situations that encourage people to "call your father, write to him, tell him he's appreciated!" The announcements also suggest the Christian virtues of family life.

H.M.S. Richards Jr., director-speaker of the Voice of Prophecy, gives two reasons why the Adventist Church is distributing messages about Father's Day.

"First," he says, "we believe the family unit is important. It's the keystone of society. Second, our radio spots are designed especially to 'nudge man toward God.' Emphasizing the importance of fathers helps to direct people's minds toward the Heavenly Father."

The Father's Day radio spots are the first in a projected series of messages under the title of "Seasonings." Each set will focus on a major national holiday. The next release will deal with values raised by the Thanksgiving holiday.

WORTHINGTON INTRODUCES NEW PRODUCT

Allan R. Buller, executive vice president of Worthington Foods, recently announced that the company will be introducing a line of canned vegetarian soups to its market this year. Among the new soups to be introduced will be a nonmeat-chicken noodle and a nonmeat-beef vegetable soup. The addition of soups to the company's product line will increase to 55 the number of different products produced and marketed by Worthington Foods.
