Partnership

*Charles D. Joseph
President
Lake Region Conference*

THE Lake Region laity are stirring, though not fully awake. The meaning of soul winning and responsibility is showing up more and more, and this is a meaningful sign of good Christian discipleship. What I see happening is a Rip Van Winkle church stirring dramatically and showing signs of aggressive behavior. Traditionally, the laity have been more the bill payers than anything else. This is a hard saying, but unfortunately, true.

The reroofing of the church, the subsidies for church school, the community service programs, the support of missionaries, evangelists and church bureaucrats are all a part of the laity's support package. Not that this isn't a good thing, because the bills must be paid. But there is much more to be done than just the paying of bills. We can no longer enjoy the luxury of allowing the church professionals to be the sole "workers of the church." While the laity may not receive financial compensation, they are a much more vital part of our church than just supporters of the gigantic business of religion.

Partnership is the word I am looking for. I am aware of the fact that in certain times and places such as colonial New England, the clergy felt tyrannized by the laity. Still, I am convinced that partnership is the unexchangeable position of success for our church. Expansion of the laity's understanding of Christian responsibility is bound to create tensions between lay people and the ministers. These edges must be reconciled.

The role of laity in our church can be broadened and supported without a wave of anticlericalism. It is true that some lay groups are setting themselves up as house-based congregations and study groups, and there will be anti-leadership dynamics in any organization, secular or religious. But informed laity know that there are historical, theological, sacramental and practical reasons for the ordained ministry. There must be the professional ministry, but it cannot succeed without the side-by-side cooperation of the laity. A better educated, more aggressive and increasingly creative laity should not threaten the clergy. We must work together to overcome the problems.

In the meantime, lay people must continue to consolidate their energies and exercise their unfolding responsibilities. And that includes coming to the aid of the overworked, underpaid, misunderstood pastors; searching with them for new levels of awareness, care and unity all together. So far this year, the Lake Region laity have been directly responsible for more than 123 baptisms in lay-operated evangelistic meetings. Their impact on our schools has multiplied in a positive way. To this we say, "to God be the glory," as our partnership grows.

A Job Well Done

by Cliff Hoffman

Dorothy Huston

DOROTHY Huston lives in the small town of New Waverly, Indiana. But her hometown is Wabash and it is there that she began her nursing career as an aide many years ago. Mrs. Huston is an active member of the Wabash Church where she serves as the Sabbath School superintendent.

However, her religion is not confined within the walls of the church. For she believes that religion "sours in the temple, but it runs sweet down the street." She believes that the most powerful witness comes from doing your work as well as you know how to do it.

Since 1976 Mrs. Huston has been administrator of the Camelot Care Center, a facility that serves children with handicaps in Logansport, Indiana. Before going to Logansport, Dorothy had opened the Twin City Nursing Home at Gas City, Indiana, and had served as its administrator. She has also served as director of nurses and assistant administrator of the Vernon Manor Children's Home, Wabash, Indiana, and had opened the Champaign, Illinois, Children's Home and served as its administrator.

On March 17 this year, Jack Roland, president of the Indiana Chapter of the American College of Nursing Home Administrators, presented Dorothy with a plaque commemorating her selection as Administrator of the Year at the annual banquet for the 160-member Indiana chapter. This was the first time this award had been given in Indiana.

Helen Rogers, editor of the Camelot Hi-lites Newsletter, wrote, "We have had a feeling of personal pride and a boost in morale since Mrs. Huston's award, as we feel it is a reflection upon us all."

Mrs. Huston received many cards of congratulations and floral arrangements as well as recognition in the newspapers and on the radio.

A job well done became a powerful witness for her faith.

WHOEVER said, "It's a job getting a job!" certainly knew what he was talking about.

Few endeavors facing the college graduate today demand more unwearied patience and personal preparation than finding a job suited to one's interests and skills.

Labor-saving technology and keen competition require a willingness to learn practical and personal skills for successful job hunting.

And that's where Peggy Kroncke comes in. This vivacious mother of two is director of the Career Information Center at Andrews, and brings to her position an impressive record of 21 years of working with students—the last 14 years as a teacher at the Hull and Martindale junior high schools in Benton Harbor. When she speaks, you hear the type of determination she has modeled before hundreds of students.

"The specialists are telling us that by the year 2000, 75 percent of today's jobs will not exist as we currently know them," she says. "The next two decades are going to demand very practical skills in finding a job suited to one's talents, and a personal flexibility to adapt to the possibility of six career changes per person, which the specialists are also predicting."

During her one year at Andrews, Peggy Kroncke has greatly changed the scope of the university's career counseling program.

A new Career Information Center has been established in the James White Library and supplied with a continually updated collection of materials about modern career options. Microfiche readers available to all users of the library allow students to gather data from the Michigan Occupational Information System.

This spring Mrs. Kroncke also joined Herman Johnson, director of Andrews counseling and testing center, to offer a new class in career and life planning. The class will become a regular part of each quarter's academic offerings beginning this fall.

"We already have an academic reputation here at Andrews," Mrs. Kroncke adds, "and now we want to follow through to make it practical. It's not only full-time students that we are trying to serve through this program. There are many women who are going back into the job market after having raised families, and many other working mothers can benefit from the practical skills we are trying to teach."

Andrews' new career counseling service emerged from numerous visits by Mrs. Kroncke and colleagues to private and public universities in the Midwest. Both large and small institutions were studied first-hand to discover elements of an effective career counseling program.

Monies are now being sought from various agencies and foundations to add necessary equipment and technology to the service.

As if that were not enough for any one person, Mrs. Kroncke is also director of freshman education for the university. This past year she personally interviewed more than 300 freshmen about such topics as choice of academic major, adjustment to college life and career options.

ANDREWS UNIVERSITY CAREER COUNSELING

Taking the Trauma Out of Job Hunting

During the 1981-82 school year, she will also visit all the academies in the Lake Union, providing the same services to interested academy students.

"I'm not going to the academies to recruit students for Andrews," she says. "I'm going there to provide a service. I want to make it clear that Andrews can be of help to these students while they are still in academy."

Emphasizing a four-part program of physical, mental, social and spiritual development, she points to the motto on her desk that reads "Well-Rounded Is Not Square."

"With the great expense of education today, and with the Christian philosophy of caring about the whole student, we believe there's a great need for strong advising in all areas—academic, personal and career."

Through her efforts, each of the university's 2,200 undergraduates will be assigned a faculty advisor during the 1981-82 school year for continuing assistance in academics and personal guidance.

Relevant data concerning each student will be maintained on a computer in the counseling center, and will be available to support and service personnel who work closely with students.

And the goal of all this personalized attention? Peggy Kroncke says: "Studies have shown that the most significant factors that students cite for remaining at a university are the strong advising program and the caring attitude of the faculty and staff.

"If we believe that students coming through this institution are being exposed to a quality education, it is incumbent on us to show the practical and personal concern about their studies, their future careers, and their individual situations that will make them want to stay and continue to grow as persons."

Help like that certainly takes some of the trauma out of finding a good job.

PSYCHIATRIC EVALUATION CENTER OPENS AT B.C.S.H.

BATTLE CREEK—In order to provide better and more comprehensive service to the community, Battle Creek Sanitarium Hospital, Battle Creek, Michigan, opened a new psychiatric evaluation center on May 26. The center is already beginning to accomplish its mission, according to Don Wallace, the center's manager. A steadily increasing number of patients are being evaluated and receiving treatment.

The 24-hour service provides access to the hospital's programs in general psychiatry, outpatient psychiatry, physiological, and substance abuse services. The center complements the current services and other programs that the hospital may formulate in the future.

Patients may come to the center by referral of a private or emergency room physician who has ruled out all physical causes for the individual's behavioral symptoms. The referring physician will be expected to provide a diagnosis and upon arrival the individual will be assessed concerning his need for services and admission to the Battle Creek Sanitarium Hospital program.

Exceptions to the physician referral rule are the substance abuser who volunteers himself into the hospital's treatment program, and the person with chronic mental illness who recognizes his need for treatment. Persons in these categories may call the center for an appointment.

HOME NUTRITION INSTRUCTORS COURSE

HINSDALE—Fifteen Illinois Adventist laymembers and two pastors participated in a Home Nutrition Instructors Course sponsored by Hinsdale Hospital from June 8 to 11, according to Glen Robinson, public relations assistant at the hospital. Held at the hospital's Health Education Center, the course was taught by Cynthia Hadley, R.D., community nutritionist (front row, right). With the help of other health professionals, Miss Hadley gave the course participants a background in basic nutrition, and taught them how to organize their own cooking schools, publicize them and conduct food demonstrations. At the end of the four-day course, each person in the class conducted a food demonstration and took a written test. All class participants received General Conference certification as Home Nutrition Instructors.

BOARD NAMES HASEL DEAN OF SEMINARY

Gerhard F. Hasel has been named dean of the Theological Seminary at Andrews. The action came as the board of trustees met on campus on September 1.

Former dean of the seminary Thomas H. Blincoe will return to the classroom as professor of theology.

Dr. Hasel is professor of Old Testament and biblical theology, and serves as chairman of the seminary's Old Testament department and as director of the school's Doctor of Theology program.

MASTERS IN MED TECH NOW OFFERED AT ANDREWS

Andrews will begin a new Master of Science program in medical technology with the opening of school this month, according to William P. Bradford, chairman of the department of allied health at the university.

The new program, voted by the trustees in January this year, has been approved by the General Conference Board of Higher Education.

A student can finish the master's degree in four quarters of work, Mr. Bradford said. "A person enrolled in the program will take the classroom work in Berrien Springs, and complete the clinical aspects of the degree at Hinsdale, Illinois," he said. He also said that students living in the Chicago-Hinsdale area can complete all requirements for graduation at Hinsdale.

According to Richard W. Schwarz, vice president for academic administration for the university, the program is tailored to meet the needs of the individual student. "There will be three areas of study within the program offered at Andrews and six more available on the Hinsdale campus.

"We will offer business administration, education, and computer science here, and hematology, clinical chemistry, microbiology, medical technology educational administration, lab administration and immunohematology at Hinsdale. Students will focus their studies in two of these nine areas of study," Dr. Schwarz said.

With this addition, Andrews offers 46 graduate-level degree programs.

The new Aurora Church seats 320 people.

AURORA OPENS NEW CHURCH

After nearly seven years of planning and working, a dream came true for the Aurora congregation on June 27, when they entered their new church home to worship for the first time. Celebrating the joyful occasion with them was retiring pastor Hampton White, and former pastor Milton Erhart of Boise, Idaho.

On opening day Sabbath School was held in the school. Then the members formed a procession to the new church. After Pastor White gave a short sermon, there was a baby dedication and eight persons were baptized. Pastor Erhart spoke on the vision that brought this church into being and the vision needed by God's people to carry God's church forward to final victory.

The new church seats 320 people and covers 14,000 square feet all on one level. The focal point of the church is a large stained glass window above the baptistry. A spacious narthex is as high as the sanctuary ceiling.

Adventists everywhere can be proud of this church. It is a monument to the faith and dedication of the Aurora church members. A communitywide opening is planned for September 19, 1981.

ARNOLD SWANSON ELECTED SECRETARY FOR MICHIGAN

Arnold Swanson, pastor at Troy, has been named executive secretary of the Michigan Conference, according to Charles Keymer, president.

vacant when James Hayward became president of the Wisconsin Conference.

Elder Swanson has been pastor at Troy for the past five years and has served on the conference executive committees of three conferences for a total of 14 years.

Before coming to Michigan, he had pastorates in 12 cities in New England. His wife, Mildred (Jamieson), has served the church as a librarian, Bible teacher and elementary school teacher. Their daughter, Linda Fuchs, is a teacher at Pontiac Junior Academy in Pontiac.

The Swansons both graduated from Atlantic Union College. In 1974, Elder Swanson received an M.T.S. degree from Gordon-Conwell Theological Seminary in pastoral ministry and counseling.

The appointment as executive secretary is effective immediately, but the Swansons will not move to Lansing until October.

Members of the Hastings Church set a goal in 1979 to provide their own elementary school. On Sabbath, August 22, they reached their goal.

The school is built from portable classrooms purchased at Bellevue. Cost of the project so far is only $27,594, including the land.

Those present from the conference office included President Charles Keymer, Educational Superintendent Gary Randolph, and his associates, Alvin Astrup and Cathy Thrall.

In his dedicatory sermon, Elder Keymer said, "You are setting the right example by your desire to provide the best possible Christian education for the students of this church—training in church school prepares children to be capable in all careers of life."

Elder Paul Howell is pastor at Hastings, and Rex Reed will be the teacher at the new school.

VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL AROUND THE CONFERENCE

The first day of Vacation Bible School is often a mixture of anticipation and dread for the 102 directors and their helpers in Michigan.

"Many times today I closed my eyes and heard the children's voices," Madlyn Hamblin of Adrian said in her "Dairy of a Reluctant V.B.S. Director."

"Images of them are conjured up often when a familiar song pricks my consciousness. I've noticed lots of children who have been to our V.B.S. two or three times in a row," she said.

These thoughts might be echoed by many other V.B.S. leaders throughout the summer. Working in Vacation Bible School is not an easy job, according to conference Sabbath School Director Clyde Groomer. But the "wages" are good.

One payment from last year's V.B.S. included at least 16 baptisms, he said. Ninety-six children are attending Sabbath School, 44 went to junior camp, 29 joined Pathfinder clubs and several others are taking Bible courses.

Of the 5,232 children attending V.B.S. this past summer, 3,455 came from non-Adventist homes.

Many leaders reported the results of their schools:

Chikaming members witnessed not only to their neighbors, but to vacationers camping at Warren Dunes State Park. They registered children from Florida, Chicago, Indiana, Canada and Texas.

The youth class of the Onaway Church helped run the V.B.S. there. Ron Pierce told an object lesson story every day, Diane Robinson played the piano, Diane Robinson played the piano, Carol Joles assisted in crafts, Carla Lemmon worked in kindergarten, and Kim Tribisondi and Tim Church conducted the primary department.

last year's V.B.S. A young woman is also preparing for baptism.

Children at Kalamazoo worked on their Adventist Youth honor in trees and passed it during V.B.S., according to the director, Violet Hill.

Vassar communication secretary Connie Ross reported that a young non-Adventist girl came forward during one of the meetings and prayed that her parents would become Christians.

Adele Laszlo wrote that her first time as a V.B.S. leader at Sparta was a "blessed experience."

Marlane Searfoss of Gladwin said they invited parents to join in the last day of V.B.S. with their children. Parents went to all the activities that day instead of to a closing program.

At the close of her diary, Madlyn said, "Now we just need members to volunteer to visit each non-Adventist home. Reluctance is a heavy garment I chose to cast aside."

It's follow-up time! Are you helping?

Camp meeting is a time for spiritual feasting.

Camp meeting is a time for learning about Jesus.

Camp meeting is a time for committing your life to Jesus.

Camp meeting is a time for music.

Camp meeting is a time for prayer.

WHAT IS CAMP MEETING?

Camp meeting is defined in Webster's Dictionary as "a series of evangelistic meetings held outdoors or in a tent." For those who attended the 1981 Wisconsin Camp Meeting, the days and evenings were indeed filled with inspiring messages delivered in brightly colored tents.

From the first Friday evening message by It Is Written Speaker George Vandeman to the last Sabbath evening meeting expounding the themes of Revelation by Dr. Roy Naden of Andrews University, a spiritual blessing was there for everyone.

Workshops conducted in the afternoons covered such topics as personal witnessing, nutrition and family life, studying the Bible, and finance seminars for all age groups. Children's meetings emphasized crafts, recreation and stories.

A highlight of each Wisconsin Camp Meeting is the Sabbath afternoon baptismal service. The candidates each had a story to tell about their conversion.

Wendy Pfundtner, one of the baptismal candidates, had attended Camp Go-Seek as a Girl Scout. Little did she realize she would be back at the same place accepting a new life in Christ. She is going to be a teacher in the Adventist school system.

"What would we ever do without camp meeting?" was a comment heard time and time again at the 1981 Wisconsin Camp Meeting. Plan now to attend next year!

3 PASTORS ORDAINED AT CAMP MEETING

The highlight of the 1981 Wisconsin Camp Meeting came for three families on Sabbath, June 20, when several pastors were ordained to the gospel ministry.

Byron Chalker is a Bible teacher and assistant pastor at Wisconsin Academy. He has ministered to students for the past 12 years. He and his wife, Barbara, have four children. Byron's desire is to introduce students to Jesus Christ and to encourage and train them.

Donald Giarrusso, who is presently pastor of the Bethel district, was baptized with his wife, Ann, in 1972. Then Don committed his life to the gospel ministry. The Giarrussos have four children.

Stephen Shipowick is the son of an Adventist minister. The ordination was especially meaningful to Steve and his wife, Florence, because Steve's father was present for the service. Steve, who is currently pastor of the Stevens Point district, has, with his wife, dedicated his life to telling others of the Saviour and His love.

Participating in the ordination service were It Is Written Speaker George Vandeman; Robert Dale, Arthur Nelson and Wesley Jaster, Wisconsin Conference president, treasurer and executive secretary, respectively; Lewis Shipowick, Canadian Union Sabbath School and lay activities director, and Dan Matthews, speaker, Faith For Today.

Dan Matthews delivered the ordination address.

GOD CARES, Vol. I, is one of the most important books you'll be reading in this decade. It contains the latest research on the book of Daniel and follows a verse-by-verse commentary style.

Definitely this is a publishing event whose time is now.

The author is Dr. C. Mervyn Maxwell, chairman of the department of church history and professor of church history at Andrews University. He writes with a lively freshness in easy-to-understand language, yet the book is scholarly.

When you have read GOD CARES, Vol. I, you'll know much more about God and how much He cares for you, and about the meaning of world history. It's a book for the times.

TAKE ONE METRIOPATHEIN

by Robert H. Pierson

Sounds like a medicine. Really it's a Greek word from the Bible. But it does work like a wonder drug; it's guaranteed to help make your home a happier place in which to live.

In Hebrews 5:12 in the King James Version, it is translated "have compassion." One translator, however, prefers "to feel gently."

Scholars say metriopathein is a word that is very difficult to translate. But it is a wonderful word. It includes the ability to face difficult situations without becoming angry or resentful. If husbands and wives have metriopathein, they will not lose patience when a spouse or a child senselessly makes the same mistake over and over.

Although metriopathein does not react angrily to imperfection in a loved one, neither does it condone the fault. Rather metriopathein strives to discover a loving way to help the erring one grow.

If we had more metriopathein in our relationships one with another, if we "felt gently" more often toward our loved ones, what encouraging places our Adventist homes would be.

Be sure you have a generous supply of metriopathein in your home today!

'WESTBROOK HOSPITAL' IS ONLY TELECAST AIRED ON ALL CHRISTIAN NETWORKS

Faith For Today's "Westbrook Hospital" series is now seen nationwide 14 times a week via satellite, according to William Hull, station relations director.

It is the only telecast presently aired on all five Christian networks. These include Trinity Broadcasting Network (TBN), Praise The Lord (PTL), National Christian Network (NCN), Christian Broadcasting Network (CBN), and most recently, Eternal Word Television Network with headquarters in Birmingham, Alabama.

Telephone and mail response indicates that the satellite broadcasts are being picked up in every union of North America.

During the month of May, the program received more than 13,000 telephone responses. Viewers should consult local listings for air time.

TV MINISTRY NEEDS FRIENDLY PEOPLE

Faith For Today is looking for a lot of friendly people.

The television ministry plans to establish a network of "Faith Associates" throughout North America, according to Gerald Hardy, F.F.T. field services director.

"These would be persons we could contact when there's a need for a personal visit in their territory," he explains. "But it's not a traditional visitation program.

"You don't have to know how to give a Bible study to be a Faith Associate," says Mr. Hardy. "You just have to have a real interest in people, and be willing to make friends."

In the mail that comes to Faith For Today headquarters every day, there are often letters from people who simply need someone to talk to. They may be facing problems that seem insurmountable. Or they may be simply discouraged with life.

"The Faith Associate is a person we can ask to visit or phone one of these people," says Mr. Hardy. "Then after a while, when a friendship has developed, hopefully an opportunity will arise to share the message of eternal life."

Mr. Hardy already has about 100 persons who've applied to be "Faith Associates." They come from a wide range of backgrounds, and range in ages from teens to senior citizens. All applications will be screened by a Faith For Today committee.

For more information about becoming a Faith Associate, send an addressed, stamped envelope to Faith Associates, Faith For Today, Box 320, Newbury Park, CA 91320.
