Today's health care demands many different types of professions, some of which are represented by the people on the cover. Pages 2 through 7 present a special report on health care in the Lake Union. Photo by Howard Bjornson.

THE Seventh-day Adventist Church operates and manages a large system of hospitals that belts the globe. Seeking to follow the example of Jesus, church workers make the prevention and treatment of disease a major part of the worldwide evangelistic endeavor. This part of the work is sometimes referred to as "the right arm of the message." In certain areas of the world, religious work is not welcome; but medical work is.

The beginning of this endeavor in the Seventh-day Adventist Church can be traced to instruction Ellen White gave in 1863, which resulted in Adventist pioneers establishing a health institution in Battle Creek called the Western Health Reform Institute. From that small beginning in 1866, with great faith and little money, the work has become known around the world.

But why should we as an international church, believing in the imminence of Christ's return, be involved in medical work? After Jesus made people feel better physically, they were ready to listen to what He had to say about spiritual matters. The same principle holds today. The purpose of the medical work is to heal in order to win people to Christ.

Adventist medical institutions have changed because the nature of medical science has constantly changed. Techniques, tools, and equipment change so rapidly that in a few short years many become obsolete. Because the church has committed itself to provide health care, we are subject to regulatory agencies of local, state, and Federal government. While we feel we could do with less regulation, some of it has resulted in the upgrading of the quality of health-care services.

With so many overlapping and sometimes conflicting regulatory codes being imposed upon all medical institutions, many have gone out of business or have been absorbed into other systems. Church institutions faced the same dangers, as well as that of being pulled in directions which would cause them to lose their distinctive character.

These factors led to the General Conference's reorganization of the medical work in the United States into four regional health-care corporations. Adventist Health System North operates the church's medical facilities in the Atlantic and Lake Union conferences. From its offices in Hinsdale, Illinois, Adventist Health System North provides management services to the institutions within its territory, including auditing, financing, purchasing, marketing, recruiting, and planning. This coordination saves money, provides standardization of policies, and allows for creative approaches to maintaining an Adventist character in the varied institutions.

With the formation of these corporations, the church is now able to devote more resources to fulfill the mission of healing on a larger basis. The corporations are helping to spread the influence of the church through the acquisition of hospitals, nursing homes, and other health-care units such as hospices, home-health agencies, and retirement homes. The health-care corporations help foster a spirit of cooperation among Seventh-day Adventist institutions.

We are thankful for every one of the church's medical institutions. They are witnessing to people in important governmental, educational, and media circles. More people pass through Adventist health-care centers each year than we reach in any other way. They provide a wonderful means of serving mankind for our heavenly Father.

THE HEART OF THE LAKE UNION

'Our Miracle Has Come'

by David L. Gray

TO George and Bea Slagle it is a dream come true. For years they have prayed that a miracle would happen to make their church grow. "Our miracle has come," says Bea. "If you had told us this two years ago, we wouldn't have believed it."

That "miracle" happened almost one year ago when the Chippewa Valley Hospital and Nursing Home in Durand, Wisconsin, joined the Adventist Health System.

Hearing that the Durand hospital was having difficulties with management, Joel Hass, vice president of Adventist Health System North, went to visit with the town fathers, and told them the advantages of joining the Adventist Health System. He told them what it meant to belong to a health-care system that believed in caring not only for people's physical, emotional and spiritual needs, but also in keeping local health-care facilities viable.

"When Mr. Hass came to our church that first Sabbath and asked us how we would like to have the Adventist Church run our local hospital," says George Slagel, head elder, "we couldn't believe it. We were flying high. He told us to pray, and we did."

A lot has happened in Durand, Wisconsin, in the months that followed that initial visit by Mr. Hass. In November 1980 the hospital did join the Adventist Health System. In May ground was broken for a new 4.5 million dollar facility, and today, footings have been poured and walls are beginning to go up.

David Gray is director of communication for Adventist Health System North.

However, not only has the town witnessed changes at the hospital, but the local Seventh-day Adventist Church has also changed, all of which seemed impossible to the Slagles when they moved back to their hometown 10 years ago and only five members attended the church.

"The Durand Church is once again becoming a viable part of the town," says Richard Morris, pastor for the past four years. "Before, you could only get a handful of people to come to church on Sabbath because they lived so far from town; but now we have members who live and work in Durand who are taking not only an active interest in what happens to the town, but in the church as well.

"The church sees the hospital," he says, "as the service arm of the church. We in the local church will be working with the hospital to put on various health and community service projects where the leaders will be Seventh-day Adventists. This whole project has been like a shot in the arm."

With a new church school building now being planned, church membership up to 36, an added awareness of Seventh-day Adventists in the community, and hopefully a new church building in the not-too-distant future, the Durand Church seems a different place today.

It's been a year now since the Adventist Health System helped save a hospital for the people in Durand, Wisconsin. But to the members of the Durand Church it has been one of the best—the beginning of their miracle that they believe will keep on growing.

FOR more than 100 years, Seventh-day Adventists have been involved in health care.

Through the influence and counsel of Ellen White, Adventists opened the Western Health Reform Institute in Battle Creek, Michigan in 1866. Fresh air and sunshine, exercise and relaxation were trademarks of the sanitarium concept.

However, changes brought about by the depression and World War II affected the delivery of health care.

By the 1930's, medicine was being looked at as a science. No longer was health care something only for the wealthy, but a right of every individual.

In 1948, the government began taking responsibility for the health care of its citizens. With the leadership of Harry Truman, Congress adopted the Hill-Burton legislation which put 7.5 billion dollars into the construction of new hospitals.

In 1965, President Lyndon Johnson was able to get Medicare legislation passed. Once again the purpose of this legislation was to increase accessibility of health care, and to give poor and older Americans access to medical care which they had previously been unable to afford.

By 1973 the National Health Planning Act was passed, which began to place under state and Federal control health-care resources, assets, and future utilization.

Seventh-day Adventist hospitals, nursing homes, and other health-care providers were not immune to all of these developments. To adapt to these changes, Adventist hospitals began demanding more and more time from their administrators, often ministers, who realized that they were soon spending excessive amounts of time doing hospital work.

Therefore, action was taken at the 1973 General Conference Session to form health-care corporations in which the church's small and large hospitals could band together to share resources of personnel, finance, and management which would allow the church's hospitals to survive.

As pressures continued, it became clear that the small health-care corporation was in the same position as the small hospital 10 years ago. Thus, a decision was made by the church to create fewer multi-hospital corporations and coordinate these nationally.

As a result of this decision, the health-care corporations of the Lake and Atlantic Union conferences merged on February 26, 1981, to form Adventist Health System North.

Facilities which are now a part of the Adventist Health System in the Lake Union are: Adventist Living Centers, composed of eight nursing homes, three retirement facilities, and one clinic, all in Wisconsin; Battle Creek Sanitarium Hospital, Battle Creek, Michigan; Chippewa Valley Hospital and Nursing Home, Durand, Wisconsin; Hinsdale Hospital, Hinsdale, Illinois; Tri-County Community Hospital, Edmore, Michigan; University Medical Center, Berrien Springs, Michigan; and Health Care at Home, Stevensville, Michigan, a home health agency.

By working together, Seventh-day Adventist hospitals and other health-care institutions can now look toward better financial and administrative management.

It is the intent of Adventist Health System North to seek new opportunities to expand the health care of the Seventh-day Adventist Church. With today's restrictions on new hospital beds, much of this expansion will take place in the form of acquisitions.

Staffing these new facilities with Christian nurses, physicians, technicians, and other workers will be a top priority, and will allow Seventh-day Adventists to work and live in areas where there previously has not been any Adventist health-care work.

We believe the church's ministry of preaching, teaching, and healing can be even further met now that we are all working together toward that goal.

David L. Gray is director of communication for Adventist Health System North.

LIVING in times of intense competition today, many health-care facilities find themselves vying for patients in overlapping service areas. Today, citizens are also demanding more specific services of community hospitals.

Battle Creek Sanitarium Hospital finds itself in the midst of these trends, and yet in a position to respond to them in a manner that will broaden the prosperity of Christian witness through the healing arts.

A 155-bed acute-care facility, B.C.S.H. exists in close proximity to two of the community's three other general hospitals. Nevertheless, despite the presence of four major health-care institutions in a community of 75,000, B.C.S.H. has undertaken a course of strengthening and expanding programs that remains largely unduplicated in the surrounding area.

As primary provider of acute-care psychiatric and substance-abuse treatment services, Battle Creek Sanitarium Hospital has recognized the need of the community for access to these voluntary programs on a 24-hour basis.

In May 1981, the Psychiatric Evaluation Center (P.E.C.) opened its doors, supplementing medical emergency services available elsewhere.

Staffed by professionals experienced with psychiatric and substance-abuse patients, and with five psychiatrists rotating on-call duty, the P.E.C. has benefitted B.C.S.H. with increased psychiatric admissions with both inpatient and outpatient programs.

Other changes have enhanced the hospital's capacity to serve area residents. The alcoholism program, formerly operated within the Special Services Department, has become Substance Abuse Treatment Services (S.A.T.S.).

A tough, structured, drug-free program directed by Anne F. Norgan, M.D., S.A.T.S. offers a 28-day inpatient program followed by 11 months of aftercare for the patient and significant family members.

The treatment program recognizes individual needs and helps the substance abuser to improve functioning in all areas of life: physical, social, cultural, educational, vocational, psychological and spiritual.

In early May after consolidation of medical and surgical services in 41 beds on the hospital's second floor, the 34-bed third floor unit, reconstructed to accommodate the program's particular needs, became the home for the substance-abuse patients.

Fourth floor, licensed for 41 beds, thus was able to serve an increased number of psychiatric patients in conjunction with the 39-bed first floor mental health unit.

Heightened public consciousness in the area of preventive health maintenance through life-style modification, together with Battle Creek Sanitarium Hospital's reputation for comprehensive programming in health education, has resulted in increased demand for those services.

Heartbeat screening, stop-smoking support series, and vegetarian cooking classes have been supplemented by stress management seminars, a five-month weight management program, and an annual Fitness for Life program in total conditioning.

The B.C.S.H. Fitness Center, core element in weight and total-fitness programs, has recently expanded both hours and facilities to accommodate burgeoning community and hospital employee membership.

Rooted in the Seventh-day Adventist philosophy of health care and committed to the eternal principle of wellness and wholeness given us, Battle Creek Sanitarium Hospital continues a proud heritage of service to meet the needs of a troubled society.

Research for Healing

A Christian hospital with sophisticated medical procedures and innovative health education programming."

To many people, these words are synonymous with Hinsdale Hospital. However, if one were to mention scholarly research, images of a university medical center would more likely come to mind.

Yet, among the hospital's more than 250 board-certified physicians, numerous doctors are involved in avant-garde research, gathering data, publishing articles and lecturing to medical communities.

To assist those currently doing research and to encourage those with an active interest to proceed, hospital and medical staff leaders recently formed a task force.

With the goal of promoting a scholarly approach to medical practice, this group is making such resources as secretarial and audiovisual help available to physicians. Financial support is also being sought for research activities.

Hinsdale's commitment to progress is outlined in its mission statement which reflects its present position: "Hinsdale Hospital seeks to enhance the quality of medical care in Chicago's western suburbs by the appropriate addition of new services, teaching programs and research components."

Tangible expression of this goal can be seen in the hospital's cochlear implant program, its argon laser (the hottest argon ever built and the only one of its kind in the Chicago area), its rapid rise to prominence in the area of cancer surgery and treatment, its innovative orthopedic program and other areas of research.

A neurotologist at Hinsdale Hospital is serving as a co-investigator with the House Ear Institute of Los Angeles for the cochlear implant. Designed to give a person who is totally deaf a sense of hearing, the implant consists of an internal coil embedded under the skin behind the ear, and a wire introduced into the cochlea, the organ of hearing in the inner ear.

Through this system, current is supplied to stimulate the auditory nerve. The patient is able to hear environmental sounds and to use the sound of voices as an aid to lip reading.

The future of implant surgery is aimed at speech discrimination. Hinsdale Hospital is cooperating fully with other implant investigators and with universities and medical centers in the Chicago area and throughout the United States as advances are being made in surgical techniques.

Many clinical studies are being performed in the hospital's department of pathology, according to Reuben Ramkissoon, M.D., chief pathologist. With the high volume of breast and colon cancer surgeries performed at Hinsdale, many of the studies touch on these areas.

At present, one staff pathologist is developing a new technique to determine more readily whether a tumor needs surgical (carcinoma) or nonsurgical (lymphoma) treatment. Each hospital is unique in its own way in the types of cases seen.

By using the data collected from each case, new methods of diagnosis and treatment can be developed, unnecessary tests eliminated and a means of quality control established.

A program currently in the formative stages is the temporal bone surgical dissection laboratory. With the cooperation of major medical schools in the Chicago area including Loyola University, Northwestern and the University of Chicago, a Hinsdale Hospital physician will offer a course entitled the Chicago Intercollegiate Temporal Bone Dissection Course. Resident and practicing physicians will be able to study at Hinsdale beginning in the summer of 1982.

While recognizing the reservoir of talent at Hinsdale Hospital and its corresponding potential for the advancement of medical science, G. Howard Glassford, M.D., president of the medical staff, notes, "We must not threaten the essential nature of this hospital. We are not giving up a dedicated Christian community hospital to become a university research hospital."

Physicians at Hinsdale continue to place prime importance on the patient's welfare; however, they recognize the increasing value of observing, recording and sharing their experiences in specialized medical practice. The hospital gains prestige, the medical staff acquires credibility. And ultimately, the patient benefits from a higher quality of care.

HINSDALE HOSPITAL

Orthopedics for the Young

Therapy is hard work for the young patients in the orthopedics program. Staff physical therapist Melody Sparks helps one young patient gain confidence and balance control.

YOUNG children and teenagers with orthopedic problems such as spina bifida, cerebral palsy or muscle diseases have been finding help at Hinsdale Hospital in recent years. Thanks to surgical and therapeutic treatment, these young people are learning to live a more normal life.

Orthopedic handicaps may often seem insurmountable to a child whose body is still growing. They can hinder social as well as physical development.

Hinsdale Hospital stresses individualized treatment in contrast to the traditional concept of a structured program. Treatment may involve corrective surgery, therapy, the use of braces or some combination of these.

So such procedures are helping a young cerebral palsy patient who had been receiving therapy for five years. Her disease shortened the muscles in her legs requiring her to walk with knees and hips bent almost in a crouching position.

Nine months ago surgery lengthened the muscles in her legs, and today through therapy, she is learning to walk in an upright position.

The influx of pediatric orthopedic patients (the hospital currently averages 10 to 15 patients at any one time) has allowed the pediatric unit to hire therapists and nurses having an interest and an expertise in treating patients with these particular problems.

BOLINGBROOK MEDICAL CENTER

A Community Service

LONG before the first ambulance-delivered patient arrived at Bolingbrook Medical Center (B.M.C.) on July 14, the communities of Romeoville, Woodridge and Bolingbrook were taking advantage of their new health facility.

From opening day on February 23 until September 30, the emergency room personnel logged 6,255 cases ranging from broken bones to poisoning to childbirth. During the same period, 298 outpatients were treated in X-ray, 487 in the B.M.C. laboratory and 47 in multiple areas.

Since its first class in early April at B.M.C., the health education department has continued to increase the variety of classes offered. On September 8, the first class designed to train babysitters drew 19 participants, and a Red Cross First Aid and Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation class on October 1 drew 13.

Other classes deal with fitness, bread-making, how to stop smoking, stress and nutrition, and natural foods.

Early November saw the start of physical therapy services on the lower level of B.M.C. According to Harry Royal, therapy coordinator at Hinsdale Hospital, "The physical therapy department at Bolingbrook will offer essentially the same services as those at Hinsdale."

Kurt Frembling, formerly chief physical therapist at Hinsdale, now heads the department at Bolingbrook.

The degree of community support needed to make Bolingbrook Medical Center successful is typical of the communities of Bolingbrook and Romeoville.

Opened for service on February 23, Bolingbrook Medical Center's emergency room can accommodate nine patients in observation, trauma and treatment areas.

FAMILY SUPPORT WORKSHOPS OFFERED

MARSHFIELD, WISCONSIN— One of the most difficult decisions facing families is placing a relative in a nursing home. Often the decision is forced when the relative requires constant, professional care.

Still, the decision is not an easy one. It is an emotionally trying time for families and friends as well as the new resident.

The department of social services of Marshfield Convalescent Center, Marshfield, Wisconsin, conducts Family Support Group Workshops to help families and friends of nursing-home residents cope with the emotional trauma of placement.

The workshops also encourage families to visit the residents and to express any concerns they have for the resident's welfare to the nursing-home administrators.

The monthly workshops consist of three weekly sessions. Each session deals with topics related to nursing-home life such as "You Know I Had to Do This," "Making Visits Count," and "No Question Is Too Small; 'What's on Your Mind?'"

Families and friends of new residents are invited and urged to attend these sessions. The staff of Marshfield Convalescent Center desires to work with families to enhance their relative's new life in the center.

BATTLE CREEK ACADEMY STUDENT COMMENDED

Stephen Yeagley, a student at Battle Creek Academy, has been commended in the 25th Annual Merit Scholarship Program, according to Principal Robert Mead. A letter of commendation will be presented to Stephen, who placed among the top 51,000 participants. A spokesman for National Merit Scholarship Corporation stated, "To be designated a commended student is an outstanding attainment, deserving of public recognition. . . We sincerely hope that the able young men and women being honored will receive whatever assistance is necessary for them to achieve the high goals they set for themselves."

ANDREWS ACADEMY ENROLLMENT AT 287

Andrews Academy began the 1981-82 school year with the annual "Hodge Podge." Enrollment reached 287 students, and Dr. Richard T. Orrison, principal, looks forward to a "great year." Pictured here are students greeting one another during "handshake." The annual school picnic was held just one week after the beginning of classes. The academy students went to Van Buren State Park where, among other activities, they enjoyed sand sculpturing.

NEWS NOTES

● Bennett D. Chilson, director of food service, began a one-year term as president of the 300-member Seventh-day Adventist Dietetic Association on September 22 at the association's annual meeting. Concerned with the education and promotion of correct nutritional information for the public, the association also serves as a resource organization on vegetarianism to other professionals and the public. Mr. Chilson says his primary goal during his term will be to promote increased membership in the association.

● Alice Marsh, professor emeritus of home economics, was the recipient of a "Distinguished Service Award" at the annual convention of the Seventh-day Adventist Dietetic Association on September 22. Mrs. Marsh served as chairman of Andrews' home economics department for 25 years. Though now retired, she is very active in research and writing and teaches occasional classes. She has filled numerous positions in various dietetic associations and has been a president of the Seventh-day Adventist Dietetic Association.

● Seven Andrews faculty members have earned advanced degrees in recent months, according to Richard W. Schwarz, vice president for academic administration. R. Kenneth Blanton, assistant to the vice president for student affairs, and Ralph M. Coupland, executive director of the alumni association, both received Doctor of Education degrees from Andrews. Richard Davidson, assistant professor of Old Testament exegesis, received a Doctor of Theology degree from Andrews. Barbara K. Friesen, assistant professor of physical education, earned a Doctor of Philosophy degree from the University of Utah. Terrell D. Gottschall, assistant professor of history, received a Doctor of Philosophy degree from Washington State University. Bill Kirk Belles, assistant professor of architecture, finished a Master of Architecture degree at the University of Illinois at Urbana Champagne. Lewis R. Carrington, instructor of graphic arts, received a Master of Arts from Western Michigan University.

CONSULTATION ON PREACHING AND WORSHIP SCHEDULED

Andrews will conduct its second annual Consultation on Preaching and Worship, November 2 to 6, according to Dr. Arthur Coetzee, director of continuing education.

According to Steven Vitrano, director of the seminar and chairman of the department of church and ministry at the Theological Seminary, the consultation is oriented for clergy of all faiths as well as any concerned Christian involved in the design and planning of worship.

The series of meetings begins on Monday, November 2, with orientation and an introduction, followed by a presentation by Norval Pease. Dr. Pease is an Andrews alumnus and former professor. He is the author of And Worship Him and four other books.

On Tuesday, November 3, the Andrews music department will present "Music and Worship." Main speakers will include C. Warren Becker, Paul Hamel and Harold Lickey.

Lloyd Perry, one of America's leading teachers of preaching and the author of 17 books, will make Wednesday's presentation. Dr. Perry is currently the director the Doctorate of Ministry program at the Trinity Evangelical Divinity School, Deerfield, Illinois.

On Thursday, November 5, Franklin M. Segler will discuss aspects of worship. Dr. Segler has written seven books for Broadman Press and is a renowned lecturer on church worship.

On Friday, November 6, James Earl Massey will give a presentation on preaching. Dr. Massey, the speaker on the weekly "Christian Brotherhood Hour" radio program, has taught New Testament and preaching at Anderson Graduate School of Theology since 1969. Dr. Massey will conclude the consultation with a Friday evening vespers service in the Pioneer Memorial Church, open to the public.

Graduate and continuing education credits are available if desired. For reservations and further information, contact Andrews University Lifelong Learning, Berrien Springs, MI 49104, or call (616) 471-3286.

Ken and Diana Bauer

NEW SCHOLARSHIP TO BENEFIT M.B.A. STUDENTS

A new scholarship endowment has been established to benefit graduate students in Andrews' School of Business.

According to Dale Twomley, dean of the School of Business, the first presentation of the Ken and Diana Bauer Endowed Scholarship was made to Gail Glenesk, a graduate student from Willowdale, Ontario.

The new scholarship endowment was established by Kenneth and Diana Bauer of Kettering, Ohio. Mr. Bauer is secretary-treasurer of Kettering Medical Center.

Mr. Bauer received a Master of Business Administration degree from Andrews in 1975. His undergraduate degree was taken at Loma Linda University, where he earned a bachelor's degree in management in 1973. Mr. Bauer's wife, Diana, received a bachelor's degree in dental hygiene from Loma Linda in 1974.

"I am a strong supporter of Christian education," says Mr. Bauer. "When I was an M.B.A. student at Andrews, I was awarded a Weniger scholarship. That was a tremendous help because I was able to devote much more time to my studies. That scholarship was the essential inspiration behind our decision to set up this endowment."

Upon completion of his graduate work at Andrews, Mr. Bauer accepted a position as internal auditor at Kettering Medical Center. In 1976 he was appointed assistant treasurer, and in 1978 he assumed his present position as secretary-treasurer.

The Bauer scholarship will be awarded annually to students pursuing a Master of Business Administration degree. To be eligible for the scholarship, the M.B.A. student must have a grade point average of 3.0 or greater and exhibit a commitment to Christian principles and academic excellence.

"It is because of committed alumni such as the Bauers that the endowed scholarship fund at Andrews has grown dramatically," Dr. Twomley said. "We are especially pleased to have this scholarship to benefit M.B.A. students."

Joseph G. Smoot, president, said Ken and Diana Bauer are the youngest individuals to establish an endowed scholarship at the university.

"This kind of endowment shows real and lasting commitment to the purpose and mission of Andrews University," Dr. Smoot said. "We know that it will be an inspiration to other young alumni to take some significant action to benefit Christian education."

TREATS AND SURPRISES FOR ADVENTIST TEACHERS

The first day at the Adventist School in Rockford was no picnic, it was a banquet! The Adventist Day School students and staff were treated to an "Apple for the Teacher" luncheon instead of carrying a brown bag on their first day. This was done with the direction of Home and School leader Jenny Gulke. Social graces and old-fashioned manners were stressed, lending a good start to the school year, according to Joyce Friestad, communication secretary. Each student wore a "Welcome Teacher" badge. New teachers on the staff are Lou Gruesbeck, principal; Eleanor Krogstad; Elaine Poulos, and Debbie Dewey, teacher aide. They are all enthusiastic about teaching at a school whose motto is "The Extra Caring School." Pictured are Eleanor Krogstad, left, Greg Smith and Melissa Meisner.

ABC OFFERS EXPANDED BOOK DISPLAY

The Illinois ABC serves the churches of the Illinois Conference and the Lake Region Conference. Plans were set into motion this past spring to acquire a 32-foot book display trailer to supplement the 24-foot truck which has been used the past couple of years.

In addition to being more spacious, this new trailer is equipped with a propane furnace to make shopping more enjoyable on chilly evenings.

Manager Ed Lindsay reports that initial reaction to this new display trailer has been favorable.

He said that more than 60 displays are already planned, with more to be added between now and Christmas. Please watch for announcements in your local church regarding dates and locations, or the schedule as it will appear in the announcement section in future issues of the Herald.

FAMILY OF 7 JOINS JOLIET

The Fred Rice family first came in contact with Seventh-day Adventists when they bought a set of children's books from a colporteur several years ago.

Then church member Bob Kensey began a series of Bible studies with the family in the fall of 1980.

During the course of the studies Fred's sister died, leaving several children orphans. Fred and Mayra have taken the two youngest into their home and are in the process of adopting them.

The studies continued during this traumatic period, and the family found love, comfort and friendship as their circle of Adventist friends grew.

When the time came for them to make a decision for baptism, the whole family wanted to be baptized, including the youngest of the children. It was a heart-warming scene as each family member was led into the baptistry.

Fred and Mayra were so excited about their new faith and their relationship with Jesus that they were eager to share with Mayra's family in Mexico. When they left in July to visit Mexico, they were armed with a projector, a set of Bible study slides and Bible studies in Spanish which Pastor Wright helped them get.

If you should get acquainted with Mayra, ask her to show you pictures of the company of believers they were able to establish during their month in Mexico. The sparkle in her eyes and her smile will tell you a little of the joy which comes in sharing one's faith.

60 BAPTIZED AFTER HUMBOLDT PARK MEETINGS

As many as 750 persons in the Humbolt Park area of Chicago recently heard Illinois Conference Evangelist Sergio Ortez present the Seventh-day Adventist message.

More than 120 people made decisions to follow Christ; 60 people have already been baptized.

Health testing and education occupied the early weeks of the two-month Spanish evangelistic effort.

Held in the National Guard Armory, the Spanish campaign has resulted in the establishment of a new church, with from 140 to 160 people attending each Sabbath.

Assisting Elder Ortez in the crusade were local pastors Cesar Funes, Oliver Mastrapa and Sam Mercado, as well as four Bible workers.

NEWS NOTE

● The Indianapolis Chapel West Church members recently gave Elder and Mrs. Duane Longfellow a surprise farewell party. The Longfellows have been assigned to La Porte, and will also serve the churches in Michigan City and Knox. The Longfellows served Chapel West and Irvington for the past two years, and it was through their efforts that the building programs in both churches were initiated, according to Esther Pacamalan, communication secretary.

● On Sabbath afternoon, September 12, Lelah McDougale, 11, was baptized by Pastor James Clarke in Coldwater, Michigan. Lelah is now a member of the Angola, Indiana, Church, according to Mary Lint, Angola communication secretary. After the baptism the church had a farewell supper for Pastor and Mrs. Clarke and their son, Jared. The Clarks are moving to Indianapolis where he will pastor the Irvington and Chapel West Churches.

MUNCIE NEWS NOTES

● October 4 was Super Sunday at the Muncie Welfare Center, complete with a chili dinner, bake sale, rummage and white elephant sale, and games and prizes for all who participated. Funds raised are for the Muncie Elementary Church School. The public was invited. Earlier in September a rummage sale netted more than $450 for the school.

● The Muncie Pathfinder Club conducted the church service on September 26.

SOUTH BEND MEMBERS REACH OUT TO COMMUNITY

In July, September and October the South Bend Church conducted Five-Day Plans to Stop Smoking. The church has several Five-Day Plan teams in action and their aim is to run seven Five-Day Plans during the year.

Recently the coordinator of the South Bend Five-Day Plans received this letter:

"I received your notice of your next Five-Day Plan session for smokers. I am happy to say that I have not smoked since I took the plan in the May 3 session. I wish to thank you for holding these sessions. I hope that the new session will be as profitable for those attending as it was for me. After 25 years of smoking two packs per day, I didn't think that any plan could make me quit. Your plan did, and I am most grateful for it. I really don't even miss my cigarettes, I am happy to say. Keep up the good work! Sincerely, Rev. Joseph Walter, C.S.C., University of Notre Dame."

Recently the church also conducted its first stress control seminar. Many of the church members have been involved in conducting the community programs.

Elder Don Eckenroth is currently holding a Revelation Seminar on Thursday evenings.

HAMMOND CHURCH ON THE MOVE

This summer the Hammond church members felt a conviction to be an integral part of the community and also help fulfill the Gospel commission. As a result the church began several witnessing programs.

The church co-sponsored, with the Woodmar Shopping Mall, a 3 C's Health Screening Program which attracted nearly 600 people.

Ten stations were manned by more than 20 volunteers who screened people for such things as blood pressure, weight, posture, flexion, and sickle-cell anemia. Demonstration booths featured the hazards of smoking and heart disease.

A special feature of the program was a natural foods cookery booth which was organized by Patty Sluzas and Christine Malmgren of Hinsdale, Illinois. This booth offered free food samples and reading materials.

In addition, a key element to follow-up was a health consulting station where people were given an evaluation of their health as reported in their 3 C's life-style questionnaire.

After this program the church also sponsored a blood-drawing unit which allowed participants to have blood screening for a minimum fee.

As a follow-up to this program the church also sponsored at the Hammond Public Library a 3 C's health lecture series which attracted as many as 50 people.

The response to all of these health programs was overwhelmingly favorable—more than once people remarked about the Church volunteers helped participants fill out life-style questionnaires.

"wonderful community service" and how impressed they were that Seventh-day Adventists were interested in them.

Besides these health programs, the church also made more definite spiritual inroads. A baptismal ceremony was held in which Emily Wolan made her commitment to Jesus Christ and joined the church. Yvonne Sims made this same commitment through profession of faith.

Both of these women have become a dynamic part of the family of Christ and are endeavoring to share their faith with their loved ones and friends.

Young people enjoyed the Vacation Bible School at the Hammond Church.

In August the Hammond Church sponsored a week-long Vacation Bible School which attracted many young people every night to an understanding of Jesus. On graduation night the parents, many of whom had never attended an Adventist Church before, happily saw their children demonstrate what they had learned.

Upcoming in the agenda is a stop-smoking program to be held at a local hospital, a cooking school and ultimately a series of evangelistic meetings. The Lord has been good, and the church is praying that they will continue to be faithful to this commission.

SILVIA BARNES SPEAKS AT BURNS AVENUE

Elder J. David Parker welcomes Silvia Barnes to Burns Avenue where she was the featured speaker on Women's Day, September 19. Mrs. Barnes, a professor at Oakwood College in Huntsville, Alabama, spoke on "The Complete Woman." Another recent event held at the Burns Avenue Church was the areawide seminar on soul winning, according to Dexter Pierce, communication secretary. Seminar speaker was S. F. Monnier, General Conference associate director of lay activities.

LAYMEN'S PLANNING SEMINAR IN CASSOPOLIS

The annual Laymen's Planning Seminar convened September 25 in Cassopolis, Michigan.

The weekend had an old-fashioned Adventist "flavor." Was it the peaceful campground location, the enthusiastic congregational singing, the reverent atmosphere of the Calvin Center Church, the simple but delicious meals served by Nancy Lindo, the Christian fellowship, or the plans made during the buzz sessions on Sabbath afternoon?

Leading the buzz sessions in planning were: Elder and Mrs. Charles Drake, Sabbath School teachers; Elder and Mrs. Robert Tolson, children's division; Muriel Wray, superintendents' programming; Leola Williams, Sabbath School teaching; Jerry Paige, Adventist Men; and Ernestine Sampson, community services, with special assistance from Myrtle Nelson, secretary to Elder James C. Wray, coordinator.

The sermons were given by Elder Jerry Lee of Indianapolis; Elder R. P. Stafford of Kansas City, Missouri; and Dr. C. D. Joseph, president, Lake Region Conference. Closing remarks were by Elder R. C. Brown Sr., secretary-treasurer of Lake Region.

The early morning devotionals were conducted by Pastor Emanuel Foxworth and Elder Jerome Davis.

Highlight of the weekend was the introduction of Cornerstone Connections by Elder Horace Jones of the Lake Union Conference and Elder Conrad Gill of the Lake Region Adventist Youth Department.

If you missed this Laymen's Planning Seminar, plan for it next year, because Elder Wray is already making plans for the 1982 session.

V.B.S. FLOURISHES IN LAKE REGION

The Bible Chapel in Springfield, Illinois, conducted a Vacation Bible School, with the direction of Ruby Mounts. Twenty-seven children attended; most of them were non-Adventists. Of special interest to the children was acrylic painting. They painted bisque forms with religious themes.

More than 50 youngsters attended the Vacation Bible School in Pontiac, Michigan, directed by Ann Benton, teacher in the Pontiac-Waterford School System. Creativity was evident in the seed art work, mosaic designs, mobiles, and letter holders displayed at the end of the 10-day period.

A very successful Vacation Bible School, in conjunction with a lay crusade, was sponsored by the Shiloh Sabbath School department, and coordinated and conducted by Patricia Burns and Sylvia Hamyng, with crafts by Lillie Bonner. Many children were introduced to the message that Christ is coming again soon.

With the guidance of Theresa Rogers, the London Church in Maybee, Michigan, conducted a different type of Vacation Bible School. For eight weeks, approximately 32 children attended evening meetings, beginning with a candlelight dedication service. The children were taught songs in sign language, crafts, and the hazards of smoking, among other things.

The main attraction was the balloon lift after the closing program—75 tracts were sent over the London area. Follow-up has already begun with a Bible Club organized and a Pathfinder Club and camp-out scheduled for the near future.

C. E. BRADFORD SPEAKS ON DORCAS DAY

NEWS NOTES

● Sturgis members have purchased the church they have rented for three years from a Mormon congregation. For two years they have searched for property, little realizing that they would be able to purchase the church they had been meeting in, according to communication secretary Betty Powell. The church is located two miles north of Sturgis on M-66 on 15 acres of land. Members remodeled it for their evangelistic meetings this month.

● Centerville Pathfinders, comprised of youth from Sturgis, Mendon and Three Rivers, recently canoed down the the Au Sable River. The 15 Pathfinders learned about wilderness survival and worked on Adventist youth honors. The trip, led by Hershel Powell, Monique Strong and Art Rasmussen, took five days.

● Shelby church members, with seven children in their church, conducted a Vacation Bible School for 65 non-Adventists. They are now following it up with a story and variety hour.

● Berrien Springs Village Church youth met in their new chapel for the first time on September 26. About 125 attended. The sermon, "Will the Real American Hero Please Stand Up," illustrated qualities of love, meekness, and kindness, and was presented by Randy Fishell. Also participating were Pastor Brian Stevenson, Julie Johnsson, Paul Reiss, Kevin McDaniel, Daron Dent, Al Cristancho, Chris Taylor, Greg Dunn, Scott Wilson, Rodney Olsen and Ted Hessel. The service will become a regular monthly event for village youth.

● Pamela Geschwind of the Pinedale Church left August 27 for Jakarta, Indonesia, where she will teach English in the language school. Pamela is an elementary education student at Andrews University and is being sponsored by the University Language School program.

● Three Michigan elementary teachers have recently developed materials in their classrooms that make teaching easier and learning more pleasant, according to educational assistant Cathy Thrall. Anna Marie Liske and Marilyn Bauer have produced a book of duplicating masters titled Little Ellen for use in teaching the Spirit of Prophecy. Junior High Reading, by Norma Hunt, is a workbook that is correlated with the seventh- and eighth-grade readers.

● Michigan's landmark 1978 Lobby Reform Act has been ruled unconstitutional by Judge Robert Homes Bell. The law was seen as an encroachment on citizens' rights to free speech and equal protection under the law. The law would have made it difficult for religious bodies to instruct legislators regarding their positions and concepts.

● Comments from campers who attended the 1981 health camp at Camp Au Sable ranged from "It was one of the finest camps I ever attended," to "I felt like part of a big family." John Swanson co-directed the camp with Dr. Arthur Weaver, Natalie Weaver and Sheryl Swanson. The camp offered a variety of programs, including a live-in stop-smoking clinic, a stress-control clinic, vegetarian cooking with on-the-job training, and a weight-control seminar. Other activities included warm-up and aerobic exercises, nature walks, bird-watching, canoeing, horseback riding, ceramics, wagon rides and fellowship. Information for next year's camp may be obtained by writing to Better Living Seminars, Box 574, Plymouth, MI 48170.

GRAND HAVEN HOLDS OPEN HOUSE FOR COMMUNITY SERVICES

Open house on September 22 at the Grand Haven Community Services Center attracted several civic leaders.

Church, and Evelyn Spencer and Carl Soper, directors of the local center.

A vegetarian lunch was served at noon and the guests were given a tour of the facilities. The local newspaper reported the event with a full page three-column story, including four pictures. The story caption was "Center Is Love In Action."

Community leaders were given a brief tour of the facilities at the Grand Haven Community Services Open House. Carl Soper described their outreach ministries.

The Grand Haven Church has just over 100 members, but their community services center is very active.

Last year they helped 2,302 persons with 890 items of furniture and bedding, $677 in cash and food, 2,564 household items.

Members donated 4,536 hours of time. They processed 66,125 pieces of clothing for local use and overseas distribution.

This center is one of 65 such facilities in Michigan.

The Paw Paw Church was dedicated free of debt on September 12, 1981.

Mr. Bates of Pullman quoted original poetry during the dedication service.

Elder Charles Keymer preached the dedication sermon at the afternoon meeting and sang the dedicatory song.

Adventist groups merged. They were Lawton, Waverly and Almena.

In the early years a student from Emmanuel Missionary College held a series of evangelistic meetings there. He was discouraged that no one was baptized. But one person who attended had second thoughts in later years and did become a Seventh-day Adventist. Now several of her children are Seventh-day Adventists, including Marian Merchant, a professor at Andrews University.

Sabbath dedication services included several unique features. Mr. Bates of Pullman quoted original poetry. The mortgage was cut up into small pieces that were distributed among the members. They then brought the pieces to be burned in a bronze kettle on the platform during the service.

Elder Keymer sang "Bless This Church" to close the act of dedication. The present pastor, Dean Burns, delivered the 11 o'clock worship sermon, challenging members to prepare for the second coming of Christ.

Burning the mortgage are Caroline Bird, Dean Burns, Duane Miller and Bert Randall.

PAW PAW MEMBERS DEDICATE THEIR CHURCH

Dedication services for the Paw Paw Church began Friday Night, September 11, with a candlelight celebration of the Lord's Supper. Directing the activities were Charles Keymer, Michigan Conference president, and Myron Voegele, ministerial department director.

Paw Paw became a church in the early 1900's when three nearby

RIVERDALE CHURCH BAPTISM

SAGINAW SPONSORS BOOTH AT FAIR

The Saginaw Church has maintained a booth at their county fair for more than 10 years. In Jesus' ministry, He was often found where the press of humanity was greatest—at the national feasts. This year the fair booth motif was Bible prophecy. Elder Wilbur Woodhams used evangelistic felts to create interest. Twenty-two fair goers signed up to attend a Daniel seminar.

NEWS NOTES

- A baby dedication took place at the Wausau Church on September 19, 1981, according to Sally Westman, communication secretary. Six children were dedicated: Erin, Jaime, and Derek, children of Donald and Joy Zimmerman; Aaron, son of Robert and Paul Sachse, and Jason and Melissa, son and daughter of Vicki Kubichek and granddaughter of Ruth Henrich. Paul Scofield, pastor, conducted the dedication service.
- A weekly vesper service held each Sabbath evening has been started by Steve and Lee Ann Nyberg at the Wausau Church, according to Sally Westman, communication secretary. Steve is the lay activities director and Lee Ann is his assistant. Families and groups are asked to share their favorite thoughts and materials with other members during the services. Topics such as thankfulness, personal testimonies, personal experiences and Bible texts have been discussed.

- The main features of the September 26 Home and School meeting for the Green Bay Church were an open house and a lecture by an optometrist, according to Gloria Wilde, communication secretary. Parents and guests were given the opportunity to be students for the evening. Marilyn Heinke, O.D., presented a lecture geared to the problems of visual skills and learning disabilities. Dr. Heinke was given a large volume of The Desire of Ages as a thank-you gift.

- The Evansville Church members welcomed 28 children to their Vacation Bible School held June 8 to 12 and June 15 to 18 in the evenings. The program coordinator was Betty Jeske. She was assisted by Ruth Lohse, Auda Lampert, Mrs. Lester Bowen, Alice Bowen, Kim Jeske and Sherry Budd. A closing program was presented for the parents. The Evansville Church has been conducting a story hour at the church for the past six years and the attendance has been as high as 22 children.

SEEDS PLANTED BRING RESULTS

Because of the sharing witness of a faithful sister, and the alert concern of a pastor, five persons were recently baptized into the Green Bay Church.

Bonnie Krueger of Shiocton has a sister who became a Seventh-day Adventist. Bonnie's sister immediately began sharing her new-found faith with her family, which resulted in the conversion of her parents. Next, she began to share with Bonnie and began sending her Bible lessons through the mail.

Bonnie became interested, and went to find an Adventist Church. She took her children; a friend, Cliff Miller, and his brother, Mike.

They filled out a visitor registration card, and Bill Wilson, pastor, phoned them a few days later. They accepted his offer to visit, and were waiting expectantly with open Bibles and lessons on the table when he arrived.

They took weekly Bible studies, attended church regularly, and became part of God's family on September 5.

INGATHERING: HOW IT ALL BEGAN

Bushels of crisp, tart apples; clusters of royal-purple grapes, mounds of golden squash: This bountiful harvest seems to signal that autumn has arrived in the Lake Union.

For Adventists, autumn also marks the beginning of one of the church's most important outreach ministries—Ingathering. The name has changed slightly—many remember it as Harvest Ingathering—but church members still show the same spirit of dedication for the program that germinated in the mind of a consecrated Adventist about the turn of the century.

Jasper Wayne believed that if people of all faiths understood God's leading in advancing the Gospel in foreign lands they would be interested in giving money to promote the work.

So he decided to test his plan. Beginning what seemed to him to be a tremendous undertaking, he ordered 50 copies of Signs of the Times. When the bundle arrived at the post office, he unwrapped the parcel and began handing out the magazines to people standing in the post office lobby. In a short time, he had given away nearly all of the magazines and collected $3.

There is more to the story. A few days later, Jasper was surprised to find another package waiting at the post office—50 more copies of Signs. Later he commented on the incident: "Not being a subscriber to the Signs I did not know, and no one from that day has known, how my order came to be duplicated. But there is One who does know, and knew from the first what use would be made of these papers."

Jasper distributed the duplicate order, then forged ahead with a request for 400 more copies. It took him almost a year to hand out all the magazines. But by then he was convinced that the program was viable. For not only had Jasper raised what he considered a handsome sum ($100) for mission work, he also found the endeavor provided him an opportunity to explain the goals and objectives of Adventist missions.

So Jasper took the burden of his heart to church leaders. The General Conference Committee adopted the plan, and soon the first general Harvest Ingathering campaign was conducted.

When the home missionary department (now lay activities) was formed in 1913, Ingathering was placed among its official responsibilities.

In 1926 the General Conference prepared a booklet to acquaint academy and college students with the work of the department. Titled Lessons on Home Missionary Departmental Endeavor, the book outlined the goals of Ingathering:

1. Placing truth-filled literature in the hands of people in the homeland, and following up the interest developed by further lines of personal missionary work, with a view of winning souls for the kingdom.
2. Securing funds for our mission operations.
3. Developing the latent talent of our church members, affording training for efficient Christian service.

"Many a willing, but timid soul," the book says, "has found his way into a broad field of fruitful service through the portals of the Harvest Ingathering work; and every year witnesses many additions to our ranks as a result of this great missionary campaign."

These goals remain today. The results are the same, too. And we probably even still have a few "timid home missionaries" among our ranks who falter weak-kneed at the thought of knocking on a stranger's door.

But no matter. For with God's help, timid home missionaries and courageous Ingatherers alike can accomplish the goals set forth more than half a century ago.

ADVENTISM IN HAITI TO BE SEEN ON CBS

CBS network television will air a 30-minute feature on Adventism in Haiti on the weekly religious program, "For Our Times." It will be seen in New York on Sunday, December 20, at 10:30 E.S.T.

CBS affiliate stations across North America make the decision whether or not to air at the same time, at another time, or not at all.

So if you wish to see the program, consult your local TV schedules to see whether "For Our Times" is broadcast each week. If not, call the program director at your local CBS-affiliate and ask them to carry the television program.

To prepare the program on Adventists, Pat Layne, a CBS producer, visited Haiti for two weeks in April. He and his three-man film crew visited a crowded church service in Port-au-Prince, a Loma Linda University Extension School, a Seventh-day Adventist Welfare Services, Inc., warehouse and field operations in Grand Goave and Cap Hatien, the Seminaire, the Polyclinique Adventiste, and the new Hospital Adventiste D'Haiti.

NEW RADIO SPOTS FEATURE BASIC NEEDS

Five basic human needs are the topics for "Brite Spots 2," a new set of public service radio spots released by the Voice of Prophecy.

Each spot announcement discusses one of the basic needs: loving, belonging, sharing, accomplishing, or forgiving. For each need, there is both a 30-second and a 60-second spot.

And because radio stations have many different formats, each spot was recorded in eight different styles. These special versions include a complete set in Spanish. John Robertson produced the series, a total of 80 spots.

"We anticipate several hundred radio stations in the United States and Canada will air the spots without charge," says Dave Hartman, station relations director.

The Growing Place

The Adventist Health System North is a "growing place". In fact, we are growing by leaps and bounds. Included among our many health care facilities are a 450-bed acute care referral center equipped with a Varium linear accelerator and a SMAC 20 blood analyser, a 300-bed general hospital, a 120-bed general acute care hospital, a 44-bed general hospital, and multiple nursing care facilities. We are looking for dedicated young people to fill immediate practice opportunities in family practice, general surgery, obstetrics, gynecology, anesthesiology, dentistry, and health education.

We would like you to grow with us! We will even help with site location, office staffing, billing/management services, and legal counsel. Please don't wait a moment longer — write or call COLLECT today (312) 920-1100.

The NORTH
is so SPECIAL,
it must be
SHARED!
