CONCERN has been expressed over the rapid expansion of Seventh-day Adventist Health Care Systems. Those voicing their concern feel it might be wise to slow down the acquisition of additional acute and long-term care facilities. Some wonder whether or not we are spreading ourselves too thinly, thus weakening our financial base. Cautions are offered against jeopardizing the solvency of some of our larger established institutions by adding so many smaller ones. "Would it not be better to hold where we are," they ask, "and strengthen the financial position of the hospitals we already have?"

The difficulty in finding enough qualified Seventh-day Adventists to staff additional institutions is cited as another reason for not acquiring more. How can a health care facility be truly Adventist if the preponderant number of its personnel are nonmembers? Is there not the danger of an institution losing its Adventist flavor with such a disproportionate mix?

These observations have merit. They are worthy of our prayerful consideration. We must ever keep in mind the primary purpose for the establishment of denominational health care institutions. It is to bring healing to both body and spirit. In Testimonies for the Church, vol. 7, p. 100, Ellen G. White states: "Many sanitariums are to be established. They are not to be large, but sufficiently complete to do a good and successful work."

This and many similar statements in her writings seem to support the acquisition of more health care facilities rather than concentrating our efforts on a few large ones. In fact, warning after warning is offered against the centralization of church-owned institutions, be they health care related or otherwise.

I am fully aware of the danger of rashly accepting any institution that is offered to our system. Bigness does not automatically make an organization better. Development and growth must be by design. It is my opinion, however, that strategically placed health institutions in several areas can have a far more favorable result than one large facility. I found this to be true in the establishment of churches. Four carefully situated churches of three hundred members each can have a greater impact on a community than one church of twelve hundred members.

The placement of a church-owned and operated hospital, nursing home, or a clinic in a new area brings to that area a Seventh-day Adventist presence which otherwise might not materialize. Church members employed by the institution soon build a church. A school for the children of the health care employees usually follows. As our workers move about the community and rub shoulders with their neighbors, numerous opportunities arise to witness about their Lord. It is not too long before souls are added to the body of believers. Thus former dark areas are lighted by the good news of the Gospel taught and practiced by our members.

These are just a few positive aspects of health care expansion. On page 59 of Testimonies for the Church, vol. 7, we read: "Every new institution is to be regarded as a sister helper in the great work of proclaiming the third angel's message." According to another source, "More new people enter Adventist hospitals in one week than Adventist churches in an entire year." If this is true, our dedicated physicians, nurses, technicians, administrators, and other staff have limitless opportunities to share their faith. Many souls are being won to the Seventh-day Adventist Church through the ministry of health care personnel.

Your earnest prayers on behalf of the "right arm of our message" are greatly desired.

THE HEART OF THE LAKE UNION

Strength from Faith

by Glen Robinson

AS the morning shift begins in the four north nursing unit at Hinsdale Hospital, seven nurses gather in a small room at the back of the unit. With them is Martin Feldbush, the hospital's senior chaplain. There for the worship service that begins each shift, the nurses grow quiet and Chaplain Feldbush begins:

"I predict that some time before you leave this afternoon, you're going to see Jesus Christ here. . . ."

Hinsdale Hospital, like the 252 other Adventist hospitals throughout the world, has two goals: The first is to provide quality health care.

The second goal, one that makes Hinsdale Hospital unique among Chicago-area hospitals, is to provide such health service within a context of Christian love.

Donald Hanson, hospital president, puts it this way: "We look at more than just an ulcer or an appendix. We try to address treatment of the whole man. We call upon our Heavenly Father to direct us and give us strength in our daily program."

"The body of man is the temple of the Holy Spirit," Chaplain Feldbush adds. "To love people through healing is the embodiment of God's love in human flesh. The work of ministry in this hospital is not just the role of professional ministers. Every employee has a ministry to love and care for patients."

The nursing department's management philosophy states: "Reconciliation, re-establishing the dependent relationship with God, brings healing and health, enabling each being to reach the highest potential attainable. Through the management process, patients and staff should have an opportunity to see a reflection of the love of God."

"We believe we were created to be healthy," says Marianne Hoag, director of nursing service. "The stronger a person's relationship with God, the healthier he'll be. Witnessing is the ability to help the person make his own choices about God."

Although the hospital doesn't try to fill all 2,100 employee positions with Adventists, it does seek employees who are able and willing to work within the hospital's Christian atmosphere. But that Christian point of view cannot be imposed on the patient. It must be subtle, appropriate.

"Too often we Christians have identified witnessing with joining a church. We have to look at witnessing as helping the person establish a relationship with God," says Mrs. Hoag.

As Chaplain Feldbush ends the worship period, he tells the nurses they are taking care of Jesus when they take care of their patients:

"Remember that He said, 'Inasmuch as you've done it unto the least of these, you've done it unto me' . . . He tells us we'll see Him in the faces of a thousand patients."

The worship service ends, and the nurses prepare to begin their workday.

"I will instruct you and teach you in the way which you should go.
I will counsel you with my eye upon you." Ps. 32:8

"I will instruct you . . ." The Lord calls us to teach us, and by His words and actions He would change our lives. In a short time, a few short years here on earth changed the very course of history.

We as individuals cannot change the course of history, but we can change our lives, in some small way, of everyone we meet. Through small acts of kindness, personal gestures of love, and our own God-given talents, we can make our world a little better place to live.

Your talents are important and need to be used. You can make the difference in someone else's life. Isn't that the real meaning of Christian living? The Adventist Health System North would like to help you use your talents to work. We would like to help you start a new life of caring. There are openings in all specialties of medicine, dentistry, nursing, allied health, and health education. The Adventist Health System North will assist with site location, housing, legal counsel, management assistance, and more. Call collect to (312) 920-1100.

ADVENTIST HEALTH SYSTEM NORTH

Adventist Health Care Expands Throughout the Lake Union

by David L. Gray and Sharon K. Anderson

OUR medical institutions are to stand as witnesses for God. They are established to relieve the sick and the afflicted, to awaken a spirit of inquiry, to disseminate light, and to advance reform."—Testimonies for the Church, vol. 7, p. 104.

These words penned by Ellen White more than a century ago have always been a challenge to Seventh-day Adventist medical institutions worldwide.

At Mrs. White's urging, Adventists established health care institutions to serve the needy; to advance healthful reforms, many of which were unknown; to be places of refuge from the germs and diseases of 19th century American cities, and to show Christian concern to mankind.

The work of healing has always been a part of the church. Christ, while here on earth, set an example of healing, preaching and teaching, which the church through the ages has fostered.

Of Christ it is written that He "went about all Galilee, teaching in the synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness and all manner of disease among the people," Matthew 4:23.

A variety of convictions and motivations rooted in Scripture have motivated Seventh-day Adventists, as well as other denominations, to sponsor hospitals. The ministry of healing has strong biblical precedence.

During the Old Testament period, God sometimes healed through direct intervention (see Numbers 21, II Kings 4 and 5). In the New Testament, Christ regularly performed miraculous healing of the sick, making the deaf hear, the blind see and crippled walk (see Matthew 8 and 9, Luke 13, 17 and 18, John 11).

In the Christian perspective, the whole person is made up of the body, mind and spirit. Seventh-day Adventists, in particular, have believed this.

In one of her earliest counsels to the church, Mrs. White said, "Christ is no longer in this world in person, to go through our cities and towns and villages, healing the sick; but He has commissioned us to carry forth the medical missionary work that He began. In this work we are to do our very best. Institutions for the care of the sick are to be established, where men and women suffering from disease may be placed under the care of God-fearing physicians and nurses . . ."—Testimonies for the Church, vol. 9, p. 168.

Thus, in 1865 with $2,625 raised in two churches, a campaign to "provide a home for the afflicted and those who wished to learn how to take care of their bodies that they may prevent sickness" was launched.

Land with a residential building was secured in Battle Creek, Michigan. By September 5, 1866, the institution known as the Western Health Reform Institute opened with Drs. Lay and Phoebe Lamson, two bath attendants, one untrained nurse, and three or four helpers.

It was a small beginning, but one which has grown to more than 500 Seventh-day Adventist medical facilities worldwide.

For several years, the institute in Battle Creek was the only Adventist health care institution. By 1876 it had grown considerably, and Dr. John Harvey Kellogg (brother to the cereal magnate, Will Kellogg) had assumed directorship.

Feeling that the words "reform institute" were too threatening to people, Dr. Kellogg coined the word "sanitarium," renaming the institute Battle Creek Sanitarium.

To Dr. Kellogg and other Adventists, this would be a place where people from all walks of life could come to learn how to live healthier lives. Thus, the sanitarium concept was born.

Through the years, other sanitariums were established in California, Florida, Illinois, Massachusetts, Oregon and as far away as Australia. Today, through the health care corporation Adventist Health System North, Inc., Adventist medical services are expanding within the Lake Union.

During 1981 Battle Creek once again took a look at its name as Dr. Kellogg did. In choosing Battle Creek Adventist Hospital, a misconception about the services of the hospital will be removed.

"For Battle Creek Adventist Hospital, the clear statement of denominational affiliation underscores its continued adherence to the humane treatment philosophy espoused by its founders more than a century ago," states Bettina Costello, Battle Creek public relations director.

Battle Creek also opened a 24-hour psychiatric evaluation center enabling it to assist in an emergency at any time.

Bolingbrook Medical Center, in Bolingbrook, Illinois, opened its doors on February 16, 1981, to the residents of this far western suburb of Chicago.

The center, operated by Hinsdale Hospital in Hinsdale, Illinois, offers full emergency and selected out-patient services to this area not locally serviced by a hospital. From its opening in February, the center treated 9,878 patients during 1981.

Chippewa Valley Hospital and Nursing Home in Durand, Wisconsin, made plans and broke ground for an entirely new facility of 30 hospital beds and 60 nursing home beds.

The combination of the hospital and nursing home in the same building allows nursing home patients immediate access to acute care services if they become necessary.

Hinsdale Hospital also made plans for constructing two floors on the south wing. Although the additional floor space will not increase Hinsdale's bed capacity, it will provide space for existing services.

The laboratory will double its area, making it easier to meet the demands of the 440-bed hospital. With more than 260 births a month, the addition will also expand the labor-delivery-recovery suite and newborn nurseries.

Responding to the growing alcohol and drug abuse problem in society, a corporate substance abuse program, New Day Centers, was established to coordinate the programs at Battle Creek Adventist; Hinsdale; and Tri-County Community, Edmore, Michigan.

These programs provide families, businesses and industries with a proven way to help the family member or employee who has a substance abuse problem. A new unit has also been opened at Gaylord, Michigan, in connection with Tri-County Community Hospital.

An advantage of the coordination of the four programs is that the same treatment may be continued at another location if necessary.

AHS North believes it can help individuals know themselves, care for their family and friends, and regain the trust and respect of their employer and fellow workers.

Adventist health services not only reach patients inside the hospital, but outside as well. For people requiring long-term care, Adventist Living Centers extended its services from Wisconsin to Illinois with the acquisition of La Grange Colonial Manor Convalescent Nursing Center, La Grange, Illinois.

It was a goal of Adventist Living Centers to have a nursing home near Hinsdale Hospital to provide people with the same loving care and concern that is known in Adventist hospitals.

Health Care at Home, the home health division of AHS North, provides another way to offer medical services outside the hospital. The home office in Stevensville, Michigan, has opened an office in Hinsdale, Illinois, in cooperation with Hinsdale Hospital.

This service provides professional and supportive health care to sick and disabled persons in their homes. Health care professionals assess the patient's needs, monitor medications and vital signs, and help with clinical procedures such as blood drawing and dressing changes. The services can range from a single visit by a member of the health care team to 24-hour care.

Adventist health care endeavors to bring patients hope and assurance that God loves them and cares for them. It is the goal of AHS North to provide this service through integrated Christian witnessing, promotion of optimal health, prevention of disease, treatment of illness and rehabilitation of the disabled through sound, current scientific methods.

"We do not look upon patients from an evolutionary standpoint," says Martin Feldbush, Hinsdale Hospital chaplain. "We, instead, see them from a biblical point of view, recognizing that they are God's children created in His image and, therefore, worthy of a very special quality care."

Adventist Living Centers provides the same loving care and concern known of Adventist hospitals to patients in its nursing homes.

FROM the time Adrian members held their church services in a hall over Woolworth's Five and Dime to their present location on Hunt Road, they have experienced many changes.

Fifty-eight years ago, Elder P. C. Hanson pitched a tent near the downtown section of Adrian and conducted a series of meetings. As a result of the meetings, and the arrival of two new Adventist families in Adrian, a church of 38 members was organized.

Among those baptized by Elder Hanson at that time was a young man, Mr. Pickett. Soon after his baptism, at about 30, he enrolled in Emmanuel Missionary College, married and went as a medical missionary to China.

While there, he contracted an illness and died. He was laid to rest in China, and his wife stayed to finish his mission term.

In the early days of the church, members held quarterly meetings. Mrs. Morris, a church clerk for many years, would call the roll. Members were expected to stand and give a testimony.

Sometimes Mrs. Morris would add at the end of the testimony that the person who had just spoken paid a faithful tithe and gave generous offerings.

In the early days of the church, members met in homes. Then they rented a hall. But in the summer, with windows open for fresh air, the clanging streetcars and noise of shoppers did not create a very worshipful atmosphere. Finally, they rented a church.

The depression made it difficult to meet the expense of 10 dollars a month rent. But they persisted and trusted God for help.

After another series of evangelistic meetings, conducted by Elders William Ellis and Obed Klein, membership increased and the members decided to build their own church.

They named the new church, located in Greenly Street, the Wayside Chapel. It also served as the first church school until a new one was built on Ives Road between Adrian and Tecumseh.

Throughout the history of the Adrian Church, members have strongly supported Christian education. During the years that Benedict Memorial School has operated, many graduates have become denominational workers, with several serving in the mission field.

The Wayside Chapel eventually became crowded, and a new, larger church appeared on the drawing board. With the direction of Pastor Richard Broome, who has since died, the present church became a reality.

The members acted as their own contractor during the building program, but hired most of the work done. Total cost of the project came to $275,000, and the sanctuary has a seating capacity of more than 200.

On Sabbath, June 24, Adrian members and their friends gathered to celebrate the completion of the project and to dedicate the church to God's service.

Lake Union Conference President Robert Carter presented the morning message. The dedication service helped those present to remember the past through a skit prepared by Evelyn Miller.

Michigan Conference President Charles Keymer preached the afternoon dedication sermon and sang "Bless This House." The present pastor, Albert Parker, coordinated the services.

A Man with a Special Mission

by Bonnie Kotter

Lew Blumenberg's call to the Lake Union Conference became inevitable when literature evangelists unanimously voted to authorize the Lake Union to take a portion of their commission for the salary of a qualified and proven individual who could assist them in activating more Bible studies and winning more souls.

"Qualified" and "proven" were words that well typified Lew Blumenberg, according to John Bernet, Lake Union publishing director.

"I became acquainted with Lew while working as associate publishing director for the Columbia Union Conference in 1966," said Elder Bernet. Lew was a full-time colporteur in New Jersey at the time, and was always responsible for 20 to 30 baptisms each year. During his 10 years as a literature evangelist, Lew won more than 200 people to the Adventist Church."

At the time of his call to the Lake Union, Lew was employed by the New Jersey Conference as a publishing evangelist who followed up the interest of persons contacted by colporteurs.

In 1979, his first year assisting Lake Union literature evangelists, baptisms originating from colporteur contacts increased from 178 to 224. In 1980 colporteur baptisms totaled 338, and in 1981 the figure rose to 490.

How does Lew generate enthusiasm for soul winning? For Ellsworth Wery, who had been a colporteur for two years in Wisconsin and had never experienced winning a soul, motivation for soul winning came at an institute in 1980 when Lew conducted a class on the subject.

Ellsworth recalls Lew saying,

"Every literature evangelist should have at least one Bible study."

"I didn't have any, and Lew's statement bothered me," Ellsworth said. "So when I saw Lew later sitting alone in the meeting tent, I approached him and told him I didn't have any Bible study in progress. Lew said, 'I'll come and work with you.'"

Since that time Ellsworth has been directly responsible for three individuals being baptized, and his joy is multiplying as he sees these newly converted persons now winning others to Christ.

Lew's insights have not only benefited colporteurs newly venturing into soul winning, but those who are already effective in this area. Ben Lewis, a Michigan Conference literature evangelist who has won many souls, has gained valuable assistance from Lew.

"I learned the direct approach from Lew in obtaining decisions for Jesus," says Ben. "In bringing a person to a decision, Lew will ask such questions as, 'Do you know Jesus Christ as your personal Saviour?' or 'What do you know about Jesus Christ?' or 'Are you willing to accept Jesus Christ as your personal Saviour?'" Ben, who was responsible for 20 baptisms last year, believes this approach has made him a more efficient soul winner.

According to Lou Toscano, pastor of the Kokomo, Indiana, Church, Lew is not afraid to use unconventional methods for winning souls, if the Lord impresses him to do so.

Eleven years ago when Lew met the Toscanos, they belonged to another church. Lew had received a referral card from them for The Bible Story books and called at their home.

As they talked, it became evident to Lew that the Toscanos were sincere about their desire to understand the Bible, and Lew asked if they would like studies. When they agreed, something impressed Lew to leave them the book Daniel and the Revelation to read before the first Bible study.

By the time Lew came for the first study, Lou Toscano had read half the book. He confided in Lew that he had been a history major in college and had learned the historical viewpoint, but now as he read Daniel and the Revelation the biblical perspective came into focus, and suddenly history made sense.

The Toscanos were baptized six months later. Four years after their baptism Lou Toscano entered the ministry.

One trait which assists Lew in soul winning is his ability to empathize with people, even when their reasoning disagrees with his.

Several years ago Lew began studying with a man whose wife was a school teacher and a member of another church. The husband was very interested in the studies, but the wife wanted nothing to do with them. Soon the husband and wife were clashing on religious issues.

The husband asked Lew to try to talk to his wife; however, when Lew arrived the wife was grading papers and ignored Lew's attempts to include her in the conversation. The husband became quite adamant in trying to prove his wife's religious concepts wrong.

Then Lew said to the husband, "You should be considerate of your wife. You wouldn't want to be bugged about her religion if the shoe were on the other foot." The wife immediately responded saying, "That's right," and then became involved in the conversation. Both the husband and wife were baptized.

Lewis Norwood, who has been publishing evangelist in Indiana for the past two years, was trained by Lew to contact persons whose accounts were paid up, and other persons contacted by colporteurs.

What did he learn from Lew? "The friendship and love you show for an individual is just as important as the Bible study."

Lew's capacity for loving even the unloved was verified by Ray and Phyllis DeLong, who are now both literature evangelists in the Indiana Conference.

Five years ago, while working as a literature evangelist in New Jersey, Lew was asked to check on the DeLong's delinquent account. Upon arriving at the home, Phyllis DeLong apologized and wrote him a check. The check bounced, and once again Lew returned to the home. A spiritual discussion ensued, and Phyllis agreed to begin Bible studies with Lew.

The DeLong home was a three-hour ride—one way—from Lew's home, yet he went weekly for Bible studies for two years.

Phyllis and her three children were baptized within seven months after beginning the studies. However, Ray, an alcoholic, took no initial interest in the studies. "I would sit in the kitchen and drink beer while Lew studied with my family," says Ray.

"After the studies, Lew would always ask me to help him with his Dukane projector, and we would walk to the car together. Lew would encourage me and speak kindly to me, sometimes even saying 'You'll give your heart to Christ someday.'"

After Phyllis was baptized, Ray joined the Bible study. A year later he, too, was baptized.

Jeff Blumenberg, the youngest of Lew's four children and assistant publishing director for the Indiana Conference, says, "Dad has the ability to see people the way they can be in Christ, not the way they are. People like to be around him even if they are not living up to his principles. I remember as kids when we'd ask counsel, we knew he'd give us an honest evaluation, even if it wasn't what we wanted to hear. But we always knew Dad loved us."

Apparently these attributes have had a dramatic effect on Lew's children. Two daughters and a son are involved in literature evangelist work, and one son is a supervisor at McKee's Bakery, a firm owned by Adventists in Collegedale, Tennessee.

Certainly a man with this much understanding and tactfulness would be expected to have had a college education, or at least some psychology courses. Such is not the case with Lew Blumenberg, however.

When Lew was 16 his father died, so Lew had to drop out of high school in his junior year to help support his mother and sister.

Lew gives God the glory for any success he has experienced in soul winning and says, "If I can do it, anybody can."

At the literature evangelist institute in August, Lew will be officially ordained into the gospel ministry. But as Lew says, "I believe I've been ordained of God for a long time."

LODGED in our hearts are all the precious truths and the spoken words we have heard at this camp meeting. Our heart's treasury is full and it is better than 'the minting of a gold-crowned king!' Our thanks to you and all who made it possible."

These thoughts, expressed in a note sent to Conference President James Hayward, seem to sum up the feelings of many who attended Wisconsin Camp Meeting at Camp Go Seek, June 18 to 26. Many others also expressed deep appreciation for the high spiritual tone of the entire meeting.

"We really sensed the working of the Spirit among our people here," said Elder Hayward at the close of camp meeting. The ABC ran out of tapes of many of the messages, and Dan Houghton, who has duplicated tapes at camp meeting for the past four years, completely used up the largest supply of blank tapes he has ever brought.

Camp Meeting 1982 began on Friday evening with a message by Charles Watson, associate secretary of the General Conference. He related his experience as a shepherd, drawing a correlation to our relationship with God.

On Sabbath afternoon, campers witnessed the largest ordination in Wisconsin's history when Lake Union President Robert Carter directed the ordination of six men.

Throughout the week Elder Norman Kinney of Michigan spoke to large crowds who braved unseasonably cold and sometimes rainy mornings to attend the 6:45 devotional.

At 10:45 each morning, Elder Hayward's series on last day events proved to be one of the most deeply appreciated features, but it was here that Satan seemed most determined to interfere.

Friday morning dawned wet. The rain fell straight down, with no wind, lightning or thunder. Suddenly, at 10:45, a bolt of lightning struck somewhere in the heart of the campground.

ABC workers reported that cassette tapes flew from shelves and that they witnessed a ball of fire roll along the steel beam at the side of the building.

In the main tent one man said he saw another ball of fire go across the steel gantry that supports lights and a projection screen near the platform.

Several hundred yards away in the youth tent, Elder Mike McBride was just disconnecting a power cord and received a shock that threw him 30 feet through the air and left him paralyzed for 15 minutes. He reportedly received no permanent injury, but doctors marveled that he wasn't killed. No one else was injured.

Elder Hayward was just coming onto the platform to speak when the lightning struck. The public address system was only temporarily disabled, so he delivered his sermon. The sermon was not taped, however, because the lightning destroyed two taping units. Elder Hayward plans to preach the message again soon.

Elder Watson continued his evening messages throughout the week, and mornings and afternoons were filled with seminars on health, how to be good parents, financial planning, and missionary magazine follow up.

Wisconsin Camp Meeting, "a good old-fashioned tent camp meeting," held some good old-fashioned blessings for all who attended this year.

'We've Been Robbed!'

I don't remember why now, but circumstances found me making my way through the dark back to my car one night. Not accustomed to walking alone at night, I heard each insignificant sound. All of a sudden fear overtook me as the sound I dreaded most came up behind me—footsteps.

What should I do? Walk faster, run, or scream? Before I had a chance to make a decision, I felt a hand clasp tightly over my mouth, and a hard object press into my back. The thief took my purse, and hurried away. In the stillness of the night I wanted to scream at the top of my voice, "I've been robbed, I've been robbed!"

Now, many years later, those feelings of fear and anger are still there—only they are associated with a different kind of robbery—one that has left a definite mark not only on me, but on my family as well.

We had never considered ourselves "teleholics," and had not been able to admit that we had lost control of the television in our home. Our exercise of control and adherence to strict standards of acceptable programming was, we felt, superior to that of our friends, fellow church members, and neighbors.

It wasn't until our oldest son was caught "stabbing" a neighborhood child in the back with a pencil that we took time to re-evaluate the influence of TV in our home.

Not only were we deceived into feeling we were in control, but we found that the TV robbed us of many important things in life.

We've been robbed of time—time to accomplish so many things, like talking to each other. Oh yes, we have been able to communicate, but rarely have we taken time to communicate our deepest feelings and love for each other.

We have been robbed of the time to share with our children their feelings, their hopes, and aspirations on a one-to-one basis.

We've been robbed of the time to do special things with them—a picnic in the park, playing ball, baking cookies, and other things that tell children they are important and help build their sense of self-worth.

It is hard to admit, but too often when they needed attention our words in their direction were, "Be quiet, I can't hear." or "Do you always have to stand in the way?"

We've been robbed of time for private devotions and the time it takes to establish a relationship with Christ, learning to know Him as a dear friend.

We've been robbed of the sweet fellowship that is found in associating with neighbors and friends. So many times the calendar that we've checked before making a social commitment has been the TV Guide.

We've also been robbed of the assurance that our children have been influenced by wholesome, pure ideals.

Perhaps you can identify with our situation. It is time to stop taking for granted the influence TV has had in your home.

Paul's advice to the Philippians in chapter 4, verse 8 reads, "Finally, brothers, whatever is true, whatever is noble, whatever is right, whatever is pure, whatever is lovely, whatever is admirable—if anything is excellent or praiseworthy—think about such things." (New International Version.)

There are "big bucks" to be had in advertising. A program's dollar value is measured by its place in the ratings. Violence and sex are a proven way to achieve higher ratings. With industry using TV to turn a profit, programming has fallen short of the Christian ideal. Even "good" programs are filled with questionable scenes, and advertising is deplorable.

What is needed is not a controlled gradual method of decreasing media dependence, or other techniques such as charting time, setting goals, limiting time, and watching with the children. These are devices of the devil to assure you that you are in complete control of this influence in your home.

It has been some months now since we instituted the "cold turkey" method of controlling our TV. It has been banned to the closet until such time as it can be sold. The first several weeks were hard: The impulse to get the set out and turn it on to relax, or to keep the children occupied, was great. But with the Lord's help, we have overcome!

How long it will take to undo the influence from the minds of our children, however, only time will tell.

The Christian family has a responsibility to actively pursue worthwhile information and wholesome entertainment rather than accept the questionable programming and advertising of today.

Christian family members also have a responsibility to each other and to the community. "And this gospel of the kingdom will be preached in the whole world as a testimony to all nations, and then will the end come." Matthew 24:14, NIV. This responsibility will not be met if you are a victim of TV robbery.

ARNOLD Miller, known affectionately as "Smokey Joe," rededicated his life to Christ in baptism last year. Some 36 years ago he was an Adventist, but became interested in show business.

A native of Columbus, Indiana, Arnold became a vaudeville performer after graduating from high school. In 1938 he married, and became a "Forty-Miler," playing shows 40 miles or less away from home at night, and then returning to his daytime employment as a tire-store manager. He performed stand-up comedy, dance acts, radio shows and managed his own booking agency. His wife, Marj, was his financial manager and costume maker.

Arnold Miller

The Millers moved to Springfield in 1967. For some time, an Adventist friend had been sending the Millers a subscription to These Times. The magazines went unread until one day when an old copy of These Times fell out of a stack of railroad magazines Arnold was sorting.

He picked it up and became engrossed with its message. This was the turning point in his life. As he read the message in the magazine, he determined to surrender his life to Jesus. The other issues which had been put aside were also brought out and carefully read and studied.

Soon after, Arnold contacted the pastor of the church in Springfield on behalf of his sister who had emphysema. Pastor Harold Ashcraft gave Arnold materials to help his sister stop smoking. Arnold and the pastor discovered they had a common background—the pastor was also from a show business family.

Three or four months after first reading the old copy of These Times, the Millers attended church, and soon after, Arnold was baptized. Now he is temperance director, and builds bird houses for Investment. His only regret is the 36 "lost years," but he is determined to make every future moment count for his Lord.

ILLINOIS CONFERENCE

Two Lives, One Savior

I have been treasurer every year since about 1954 and I was also treasurer before that time, but I missed a year or so. I suppose all together, it must be at least 30 or 35 years. I've never kept track."

George Windemuth, treasurer of the Rockford Church, described some of the changes that have taken place in the work of a treasurer.

A membership increase from 170 to 350 has increased the volume of work. Information that could once be kept in one small book now requires a large book with at least 20 different accounts.

The coming of the combined budget has made the work of the treasurer more complex. While a simple savings and a checking account were once sufficient, now church funds must be placed where the church can receive the most interest possible.

George takes pride in his work. He showed me a letter from a conference auditor which stated: "It is a delight for me to audit the books at Rockford. Of all our larger churches, these have to be one of the easiest to audit. You had a perfect score."

George estimates that his duties require at least 18 hours each week if there are no problems. Special campaigns can add many hours to this figure.

Although he now receives a very small salary, he can recall many years when he received nothing for his work or the car expense required to carry it out.

Annette, his wife, has also helped as assistant treasurer, and they have both served in other church offices.

In 1974 George lost a leg and his hearing is now impaired. For these reasons he has decided that this coming year will probably be his last year as church treasurer. Church members have expressed their appreciation for George's "sincere concern for the financial care of the church during all these years."

LAKE REGION CONFERENCE

Help Needed for Haitian Refugees

THIS brief article brings to you the plight of nearly 2,000 Haitians being detained in the United States by government order.

In some cases family members have been separated from each other. Many refugees are sick, and most of them are discouraged.

A large number of the Haitians tried to come to the United States in small boats; many lost their lives. For example, Saint Juste Ronald left Haiti with 333 other people; 111 of them died of heat, hunger, thirst, and other causes. The other 222 are still in detention camps.

Not all of the Haitians have come by boat. Among the 900 persons who have been interviewed, there are 12 teachers, 8 civil engineers, a large number of accountants, and other people with business skills.

These people paid their fare to fly to the U.S., and have stated they came with an American visa and the offer of a job. But many have been detained.

Just last week, however, a Federal judge passed down a ruling which may be the beginning of relief for these refugees.

According to an Associated Press source, U.S. District Judge Eugene Spellman in Miami ordered the immediate release of 1,900 Haitian refugees from detention camps in the U.S. and Puerto Rico. The Federal government has asked for some time to rework its policy for handling the refugees, many of whom are illegal immigrants.

Judge Spellman then gave the government 90 days to develop a new policy, but said that the 1,900 refugees should be released immediately.

Remembering Jesus' admonition in Matthew 25, we believe that church members should help these people where they can.

We are currently visiting with as many of the refugees as possible to bring them consolation. We are seeking lawyers to take their cases. We need your prayers and your interest in these people seeking freedom in this country.

The Power of a Good Name

by Ronald Knott

SOLOMON tells us that "a good name is to be chosen rather than great riches." That proverb, of course, is as true of Christian institutions as it is of individuals.

It was the good impression that Andrews University made on two avowed atheists that inspired them to do something that will benefit many students seeking a Christian education.

The Ralph and Susan Moore Endowed Scholarship Fund was recently established by an action of the Andrews University Board of Trustees, according to Dean McDaniel, director of development/trust services at Andrews.

The $85,000 endowment was a gift to the university from a trust established 10 years ago by Ralph and Susan Moore, an elderly couple (now deceased) who lived in Coloma, Michigan.

Ralph Moore worked for many years as a teacher, banker, businessman and accountant in the southwestern Michigan area. His wife, Susan, made a career of teaching high school English in Benton Harbor public schools.

Reese Jenkins, who was Andrews' trust services officer from 1971 to 1977, says the Moores' special interest in the university was influenced heavily by the turmoil on college campuses across the nation in the late 1960's and early 1970's.

Ronald Knott is the Andrews University public relations staff writer and a General Conference communication intern.

The Moores had originally planned to will their estate to another school. But they became unhappy with the general anti-establishment attitude prevalent throughout much of public education, so they began to look elsewhere.

Mr. Moore had known of the college in Berrien Springs from times many years before when he had ridden the public trolley that ran through the campus of Emmanuel Missionary College. He had also been contacted by E.M.C. students during Ingathering, and had been favorably impressed.

So on a summer day in 1971, Ralph decided to visit the campus again. He was surprised by what he saw, as the institution had grown from E.M.C. into a full-fledged university.

He told Elder Jenkins: "I never saw such a big improvement. It was nothing like it used to be. The place had really grown. When I finally found my way out to the streets, I went downtown to see the chief of police. I asked him if there were any riots or walkouts or demonstrations at Andrews. The chief said, 'No, they have a really quiet place up there.'"

Dean McDaniel, left, and Wes Flory are Andrews University trust officers. They manage more than 200 trusts like the one described in the accompanying story.

Impressed with what he saw and the students he talked to during his visit, as well as the good word from the chief of police, Mr. Moore and his wife contacted the president's office at Andrews, indicating that they wished to talk to someone about including Andrews in their will.

Elder Jenkins clearly remembers his first visit with the Moores. "I talked with them for about two hours, explaining the various aspects of Andrews' trust program.

They told me then that they wanted to set up a trust with Andrews and so I said, 'Mr. Moore, what you have decided to do is a wonderful thing and God will bless you for it. By the way, what is your religious persuasion?' And he said, 'We're atheists.'"

"I was really taken off my feet for a moment, but I quickly said, 'Mr. Moore, although I'm a Seventh-day Adventist minister, I believe in religious liberty, and if you can put up with us, we can put up with you.'"

After the trust papers were signed at the university, Mr. Moore told Elder Jenkins, "I want to make one thing straight with you. Now that we've signed this trust, I don't want Andrews to forget us."

Elder Jenkins promised that the university would not forget them, and that promise was kept. Through the years since the trust was established, the university not only served as financial manager of their property, but developed a very strong personal tie with the couple.

Andrews personnel visited them nearly every Sabbath at their retirement home, took them to university and church activities, provided them with season tickets to the Andrews Concert-Picture Series and arranged for visits by Andrews students.

"The Moores had no family of their own," says Elder McDaniel, "so they looked to Andrews for the warmth and friendship normally provided by a family. They had invested everything in Andrews, and hoped to find their interest returned. And we did that in every way we could.

"The Andrews trust services department operates on a philosophy of personal care and concern. Our experience with the Moores is just one example. The people who establish trusts with Andrews become part of the university family, and we do our best to make sure they know their generosity is appreciated."

Ralph Moore died in 1980, and Susan died in 1981. Their endowment will generate more than $7,000 each year in scholarships for worthy students striving for a Christian education.

There's power in a good name.

Middle East Travels

Editor's Note: The following article about Victor Schulz, pastor of the East Chicago Spanish Church, is reprinted with permission from the Post-Tribune of Gary, Indiana. Pastor Schulz has made a series of topical films in the Holy Land to use in evangelistic meetings: a movie about the caves of Qumran is shown the night the Bible is introduced; a film on Gethsemane is shown when prayer is presented; the Jordan River is featured when baptism is the topic. Elder Schulz says, "We are using the Bible lands artifacts and movies as a means of building faith in the Bible as God's Word. [Then it is easy to lead the audience] to faith in Christ, His salvation, and His message for today."

AFTER a lecture series in Houston, Texas, in which he talked and showed slides of his travels in the Holy Land, Victor Schulz of Merrillville, Indiana, was described by a reporter as a man with "two keen eyes, a filming camera and an inquisitive mind that took him through the old lands of the Middle East. He had to travel by airplanes that sometimes he himself chartered, boat, automobile and the back of a camel to reach remote, dangerous and [hard-to-reach] sites.

"He climbed the pyramids in Egypt, crawled inside the mortuary chambers of the pharaohs and climbed up to the site of human sacrifices in Petra, the Lost City. He lived among Bedouin tribes, traveled through the inhospitable desert and to the holy places many times.

"For his trips, Dr. Schulz made the equivalent of three turns around the earth and filmed over 15,000 feet of Technicolor film [to compile his] audiovisual program about . . . the Bible lands."

In 1977, Pastor Schulz began to work with the Seventh-day Adventist churches of northwest Indiana. But what was it that drew him to those faraway, almost inaccessible sites around Jerusalem and the Middle East?

"Simply the desire to visit the places where Jesus was born and where he died," said the man who is considered an expert in archaeology of the Middle East;

who has conducted six tours to the area, and who wrote his doctoral dissertation on Middle East archaeology; . . . the man who has a private collection of valuable artifacts from that area, including coins, pottery, gold and silver objects, and valuable replicas of objects from King Tut's tomb; . . . and the man who took his two sons, Ronald Arthur, 12, and Leroy Edgard, 10, on one of his expeditions and baptized them in the River Jordan (where John the Baptist baptized Jesus Christ) simply so they'd have an experience they'd never forget.

A native of Hohenau, Paraguay, Pastor Schulz has been in this country for eight years and still has a heavy German accent. He came to the United States for graduate studies in theology at Ohio University in Youngstown after receiving his B.A. at an Argentine university.

Pastor Schulz, a third-generation minister, says he's always been fascinated with the Holy Land. His dreams of traveling there to see the places he'd become so familiar with through his studies began coming true when a study tour with Ohio University took him there in 1974.

It was this trip, says the 39-year-old minister, that whetted his appetite, making him determined to return to the Middle East.

Pastor Schulz did return to the Middle East the following year, also in 1977 and in 1979 (when he made two visits), and in 1980. His wife, Elsa, has accompanied him on most of the expeditions.

His travels have taken him to Israel, Lebanon, Syria, Jordan, Egypt and Saudi Arabia, as well as Greece and Italy.

In his vast collection of artifacts, he is most proud of a jug which he says was found in Cana in Galilee near the place where Jesus performed his first miracle by turning water into wine.

He also has a jug he says was found in Samaria, near Jacob's Well. What is surprising is that it's in almost perfect condition.

Also among his prizes are a replica of the golden mask of King Tut; a replica of the crown of thorns worn by Jesus made from branches from a king plant, and a tablet found in Babylonia which, he says, has been dated to around 3,000 B.C., and is one of his oldest relics.

Although Pastor Schulz has participated in some archaeological digs, many of his artifacts were obtained from people who knew he sought relics from the Middle East. And, although many are purported to be 2,000 years old, Pastor Schulz feels the value of each artifact is not so much in the artifact itself, but in knowing it is from the time of Jesus.

During his visits to biblical locations, Pastor Schulz also lived in the desert for a few days with a tribe of Bedouins. They took him to Petra, he says, in what today is Jordan.

Accessible only by camel, it was an awesome sight to see palaces and auditoriums carved in the mountains, he recalls. Still there, he said, were the channels which caught the blood from the religious ritual of human sacrifices to the sun.

On his visit to King Tut's tomb, Pastor Schulz flew into Cairo, then chartered a plane to Luxor, an ancient city in the Valley of the Kings, where many pharaohs were buried.

Students Win College Bowl Championship

ANDREWS UNIVERSITY—Five Andrews University students who are enrolled in the medical technology extension program at Hinsdale Sanitarium and Hospital at Hinsdale, Illinois, won first place in the Illinois Medical Technology Association student bowl on May 6 and 7 in Harvey, Illinois.

The student bowl was held in conjunction with the Illinois Medical Technology state convention. Twenty-seven schools from Illinois participated in the student bowl, according to Beverly Huff, Illinois game coordinator.

"This is only the second year we have entered the student bowl," said Jack Blume, program director for medical technology at Hinsdale Hospital.

The Andrews University/Hinsdale Hospital team beat the University of Illinois 105-35 on May 6. The following day the team beat St. John's Hospital of Springfield, 100-45; St. Francis Hospital of Peoria, 90-45; St. Anthony's Hospital of Rockford, 55-45, and last year's champions, St. Mary's Hospital of Peoria, 85-45.

The Illinois state champions are Ted Shea of Berrien Springs; James Dean of Smethport, Pennsylvania; Deborah Hall of Berrien Springs; Jonie Fetz of Phoenix, Arizona; Sharon Montgomery of Vancouver, Washington.

"This is quite an accomplishment for our senior level program at Hinsdale," said Bill Bradford, chairman of the allied health department at Andrews. "Credit goes to Roland Lonser, medical director of the school at Hinsdale, and Lillian Laatz, Hinsdale game coordinator."

Scheresky Named V.P. for Nursing

HINSDALE, Ill.—Grace D.

New Members Join Indianapolis South Side

INDIANA—During the months of April and May, eight new members joined the South Side Indianapolis Church as a result of personal witnessing, encouragement from family members, and the evangelistic crusade held by Jack Bohannon, Lake Union Conference evangelist. Some of the new members have been the subject of family prayers for years, according to Louise Suttle, communication secretary. South Side members hope this will be of spiritual encouragement to the Seventh-day Adventist family elsewhere to continue to commit their loved ones to God's care each day. Pictured in the top photo are Bob and Michelle Lake; Brad Lake; Evelyn Crouch; Jane Lake, who renewed her baptismal vows, and Elder Robert Chase. In the bottom photo are Roger McDonald, Ola Hobby and Marica and Jose Del Rio.

752 Illinois Youth Invested

ILLINOIS—Every church school in Illinois held an investiture program this year, reports Jeff Wilson, conference youth director. A total of 752 youth were invested, an increase of four over last year. The largest class invested was 120 fourth-graders who received Helping Hand insignia; 111 fifth-graders were invested as Friends. To strengthen local church youth leadership, 15 Master Guides were invested. Although figures point out that about 75 percent of students were invested, the youth ministries department and teachers press toward the goal of 100 percent. The 12 students of the Quincy Church, above, were invested on May 10.

Scheresky recently joined Adventist Health System North, Inc., as vice president for nursing, according to

Grace Scheresky

Robert H. Carter, AHS North board chairman. Miss Scheresky has a Bachelor of Science degree in nursing from the University of Oregon in Portland, and a Master of Science degree in nursing administration from Loma Linda University in California. She has continued graduate studies at Andrews University in Michigan.

Before joining AHS North, Miss Scheresky was vice president for nursing at Hinsdale Hospital, Hinsdale, Illinois.

As vice president for nursing, Miss Scheresky will be a consultant to nurses in nursing management positions throughout AHS North, and assist in evaluating potential member hospitals.

She will serve as a spokesman for nursing and as executive secretary for the AHS North Nursing Council. She will also promote the spiritual aspects of nursing care, specifically Seventh-day Adventist nursing.

She is a member of the National League for Nursing, the National Society for Nursing Administrators, the Suburban Directors of Nursing Council, and the Association of Seventh-day Adventist Nurses.

Lake Union Conference Office Security Provided by Andrews

LAKE UNION—The Lake Union Conference has arranged for the services of Andrews University Security to patrol the union building and parking lot on a regular basis, according to Charles Woods, assistant treasurer. The office building will be checked daily, and the parking regulations will be enforced by the Andrews patrolmen. "This security program has been set up to protect the union facilities and everyone who uses them," said Elder Woods. "We will appreciate the cooperation of visitors and employees alike."

1 Million Copies of Great Controversy to Be Sold in the Lake Union

LAKE UNION—One million copies of The Great Controversy will be sold or given away in the Lake Union Conference territory during the Thousand Days of Reaping to begin in September, according to John Bernet, union publishing director.

"The idea originated with the North American publishing directors as a project to enhance and advance the Thousand Days program to win people for the kingdom," said Elder Bernet, "so we talked to the Review and Herald and Pacific Press Publishing associations. They agreed to give us a special price on the book if we ordered a large quantity, such as a million or more.

"Then when other departments found out about it, they wanted to participate. The lay activities, youth and education departments are planning to join us in this project."

Literature evangelists will sell the paperback edition door to door for just $1.00, Elder Bernet said.

Church members who may wish to give copies as gifts, or churches wishing to do a mass mailing in their area may buy them for 60 cents at Adventist Book Centers.

Several plans for financing the project are being used. "We expect to have an order of 300,000 books by October 1. We need to have $150,000 in hand by September 1, because we'll have to pay the bill on November 15 in order to get this good price," Elder Bernet explained.

Some churches and individuals have already made plans to assist in this endeavor.

The Berrien Springs, Michigan, Village Church voted on July 10 to pay for 20,000 books. Each member will be asked to give $4 a year for three years. They have pledged $4,000 by September 1 this year.

Bob Baker, a student in computer science at Andrews working part-time at the union office, says he and his wife, Jane, a school teacher, have decided to send out one copy of The Great Controversy a day during the Thousand Days. "But we're not limiting it to that," Bob says.

"We believe the Lord will bless our work, and we're going to send out as many copies as we can."

Robert Carter, Lake Union president, commented: "The Lake Union endorses this plan because The Great Controversy, next to the Bible, gives the last warning message more distinctly than any other book this church has."

Further information will be published in future issues of the Herald. If you have a special interest in participating in the project, contact the union publishing department.

Announcements

Announcements for publication in the Herald should be received by YOUR LOCAL CONFERENCE office at least FIVE weeks before the scheduled event.

LAKE UNION

THE 1982 MINORITY WRITERS' WORKSHOP, convenes at Andrews University on August 15. The 3½-day session will run from 8:30 A.M. to 5 P.M., Monday through Wednesday, and close at noon on Thursday, August 19. If you would like to attend but need more information, write or call your local conference communication director for details.

The mealtime treat that's quick to fix and good to eat.

There's something irresistible about new Chik Stiks from Worthington. Their unique shape. Their golden-brown outside. Their tender, chewy inside. But most of all, their really delicious taste.

And, Chik Stiks are rich in vegetable protein, completely meatless, free of preservatives. So easy to fix, too...just heat and serve.

Whether you serve new Chik Stiks at mealtime or as tasty and nourishing snacks, they're definitely a new family favorite. Look for new Chik Stiks in your store's freezer case. Irresistible.

 WORTHINGTON
Putting good taste into good nutrition.

Hot-diggity!

New Corn Dogs from Loma Linda

Hot dog on a stick! What a taste thrill for kids of all ages!

To make new Corn Dogs, Loma Linda takes great tasting meatless weiners and dips them in wholesome flavorful corn batter. All you do is sizzle them quickly in your deep-fat fryer, or just heat in your oven or microwave until they're crunchy and hot.

Then watch them disappear as kids and grown-ups reach out and dig in. New Corn Dogs are that easy to prepare, that simple to eat for great on-the-go lunches. New Loma Linda Corn Dogs are just dog-gone good!

Look for them in the frozen food cabinet of your favorite market.
