AND you shall be my witnesses"—Christ's words to His very first followers were the above words; and they are still the penetrating words of Christ to us now.

This is the kind of command that can never find a resting place. It is a function that must go on forever and ever, until we finally are able to declare ourselves and those who we have warned to be "home at last."

Being witnesses is a task from which we can never depart. Our very highest calling is to be witnesses for Christ. The Caring Church theme that comes to us from our division leaders seems to suggest people who are steadfast, caring—visionaries of hope in a world of shadows, a people who embody the light of Christ. Doing comes from being, for what we are, we do.

To be good, solid witnesses means proclaiming the Gospel with every nerve and fiber of our being. It means talk, but not too much talk. It means the word of testimony wisely, appropriately and timely spoken.

Being these persons called "witnesses" also means to feed the hungry, to welcome the strangers at our churches, to clothe the naked and to care for the sick and imprisoned.

Real witnesses for the Caring Church can show up in a nurse's uniform or a mechanic's jumpsuit or an executive's pinstriped suit or an astronaut's mask or a sanitation worker's work shoes or a housewife's apron.

This, my brothers and sisters, is the calling of us all—to be witnesses of and witnesses to the love of Jesus in all the everyday uniforms of life. Love and telling of this love spreads wide in all its beautifully different uniforms.

The goal of the entire affair is to be so Christlike in our characters, in our individual lives, in our Caring Churches and in our Christian interactions that folk everywhere must give witness of us.

People everywhere, when trying to describe a witnessing, caring group or individual should have no problem using us as that model. Remember, caring fold—you are His witnesses.

'Giving Bible studies is fun'

by Cindy Tutsch

SOMETIMES, dreams need someone to bring them down to ground level and organize all the pieces to make them a reality.

That's what happened recently at the Holly, Michigan, and Adelpian Academy churches. Many people had dreamed of young and older members going door to door with their Bibles under their arms, inviting their neighbors to begin a systematic study of the Bible.

Then, Don Gray, church ministries director for the Michigan Conference, conducted a lay training seminar at the Holly Church. He provided the necessary motivation and instruction to make those dreams of witnessing a reality.

About 35 members of the two churches committed themselves to giving Bible studies for a minimum of two hours a week for 10 weeks.

Initially, teenagers from Adelpian

Academy and adults took surveys of religious interest in the community. They asked questions including, "Do you believe in the literal second coming of Jesus?," and, "In your opinion, is Jesus 'God'?"

The concluding question, "Would you like to study the Bible on a regular basis?," led to the establishment of a weekly Bible study for each member of the team.

This kind of success has not come without planning and prayers. Most of those giving studies attended one of the Lay Bible Minister seminars at Camp Au Sable. Every week Elder Don Dronen and his associates meet to discuss logistics and petition God's blessing for each person's efforts.

The group meets Tuesdays at 6 p.m. in the junior room of the Holly Church. Holly deaconesses provide a simple meal for them—usually soup and sandwiches. Charles Cole, Adelpian Academy cafeteria director, donates his time to prepare the sandwiches.

During the fellowship supper, the witnessing team shares experiences or group leaders make suggestions for evening studies.

What has been the reaction of students to materialization of this dream? Darren Gottke says, "I've learned a lot in a short time about giving Bible studies."

Brian Schwab adds, "Giving Bible studies is fun—and a lot easier than I thought it would be."

John Dronen sums it all up when he says: "This has been a rewarding experience. But to appreciate it, you have to get involved!"

Adelpian students minister

Michigan—Spiritual activities at Adelpian Academy this year have been designed to give every student an opportunity to learn of and witness for Christ.

These projects require tight scheduling and much faculty leadership. It is the faculty's desire and prayer that academy experiences will be a launching pad for future leadership in the students' home churches.

Eighty-six percent of the faculty are directly involved with the students in the planning, preparation and delivery of these programs and activities.

On Monday evenings, Peer Counseling is offered to identify and help solve problems dealing with personal interaction.

Students team up with faculty and community members to give Bible studies in the homes of non-Adventists on Tuesday evenings. Students are allowed to choose a faculty home for worship on Wednesday nights.

Friday evening vespers include guest speakers, musical programs, and Christian films. Many vespers programs are followed with afterglow, a relaxed atmosphere of music, fellowship and sharing love for Jesus.

Sabbath School is planned and presented by students that are divided into classes, clubs and organizations.

Adelpian Academy juniors, Brian Ezell (left) and Janine Lim, participate in a clown ministry to a pediatric patient in a Flint, Michigan, hospital.

Each group presents two programs a year.

Students can choose to offer special music or tell a story for the different lower division Sabbath School departments in the Holly Church. Each church service provides training opportunities for many students.

Sabbath afternoon activities include creative communications and Christian drama programs, clown ministry to local hospitals, sunshine bands to a nursing home and Daniel Bible study groups.

Communion services have been held for the entire student body once each semester and once for each class individually.

Spiritual activities will prepare our youth for leadership in tomorrow's church.

The motto "It is better to build youth than to mend adults" is the foundation for Adelpian Academy's motivation for spiritual awareness.

Mail time—time to care

by Calvin B. Rock

SABBATH, June 14, is the day that each member in the United States is asked to give an offering in support of our men and women in the armed services.

This offering, which is scheduled every other year, is used to supply literature, including books, magazines and tapes to personnel in America and overseas.

Many of these individuals are in isolated circumstances and depend upon these materials for their spiritual ties with God and church. Very often the articles and sermons are used as evangelistic tools and become instruments of soul-winning.

It has been my pleasure in the last few months to personally visit our centers for the U.S. Armed Forces in Seoul, Korea, and Frankfurt, Germany. These and our center in Okinawa, Japan, are literally havens of rest for hundreds of Adventist military personnel who must often spend months and, sometimes, years away from home.

The personnel whom we pay to manage these centers, as well as our sons and daughters who have been sent to lands "afar" by Uncle Sam, deserve our attention and support.

The 1984 offering amounted to $161,900 or approximately 26 cents per United States member. We know that this is not a true expression of our concerns, and we earnestly appeal to pastors and members to remember Servicemen's Offering Day, June 14, 1986.

Ministry to Adventist military personnel is an important phase of Harvest 90

If the date conflicts with another activity in your church, please reschedule this appeal for a date close to June 14.

A vital part of Harvest 90 is conserving the crop we already have. Ministry to the Adventist military personnel is an important phase of this objective. They need it; God expects it; let's do it on June 14, 1986!

Doris Meyers' spiritual family adds nine members

Lake Union—Nine people associated with Doris Meyers were baptized in a special service at the Marion, Indiana, Church on March 22.

Doris Meyers was featured in the first quarter 1986 "No One But You" sound and slide presentation. Her work in cooperation with welfare officials for underprivileged young people was shown. Doris cares for more than 20 young people in her Hartford City home. And eight of those recently baptized live with her.

Bible studies with this group of young people, all from non-Adventist backgrounds, were initiated by Bob and Beth Bartlett of Marion. They made the 25-mile, round trip to Hartford City for the studies each week. When the arrival of the Bartlett baby interrupted the series of studies, Larry Kinman and his family took over the project.

The baptismal service, conducted by A. M. Peterson, was held during the vesper hour. Bob Bartlett and Larry Kinman, elders in the Marion Church, presented baptismal certificates to the new members.

Doris Meyers was baptized in 1981.

She says 20 of her foster young people have been baptized during the past three years.

IN ancient times, God's people had feast days of special blessing and celebration for great things God had done for them.

Into the spirit of celebration, praise, gratitude and worship was born the modern camp meeting, a time of refreshing for all God's people today—a modern feast day for modern Israel.

In the same manner as in ancient times, God comes near to His people with unique blessings during these special times of praise and thanksgiving.

It is a time of examination of one's personal experience with God, a time of repentance, a time of revival. No one should miss this opportunity for a new and fresh walk with Jesus and their fellowmen.

After much prayer and thought, the Illinois Conference Broadview Academy Camp Meeting speakers and format were chosen. The meeting has been planned to reach the felt needs of as many people as possible in the time allotted.

Early morning devotions will feature C.L. Brooks' wealth of ministry. Elder Brooks is in the General Conference church ministries department. In addition to the morning devotions, he will share his singing talent in other meetings.

There will be four dynamic seminars: "Growing in Christ" by Andy McRae, pastor of the Brookfield, Illinois, Church; "Sharing Christ" by Royce Williams of "It Is Written"; "Family Life/ Compleat Marriage" by Harry and Nancy Van Pelt, family life counselors, and "The Lord's Day" by Samuele Bacchiocchi of the religion department at Andrews University, Berrien Springs, Michigan.

Seminar presentations will be introduced during the 11 o'clock preaching hour. During these periods, guest speakers will tie heartfelt, Biblical messages into their seminar themes.

At the four o'clock hour on Wednesday, Vernon Alger, trust services director for the Lake Union Conference, will give a seminar on trusts.

On Thursday, Conn Arnold, executive secretary of Adventist-Laymen's

Services and Industries, will speak on the work of the laity around the world. He is the General Conference representative for this organization.

On Friday, Royce Williams will share God's method of personal evangelism and the power of the media in witnessing.

Evening meetings will be geared to Harvest 90 evangelism with speakers featuring different aspects of the Caring Church concept.

Opening night, June 10, Everett E. Cumbo, conference president, will speak on "Harvest 90 and Evangelism." On Thursday night, Brad Newton will speak on "Harvest 90 and How to Grow Churches." Friday and Sabbath evenings, the challenge by H.M.S. Richards Jr. includes "caring for people."

Youth meetings will be conducted by Peter Neri, youth pastor for the North Shore Church in Chicago. Erwin Gane, an educator from Australia, will be special guest.

Brad Newton, pastor of the Galesburg/Prairie View, Illinois, churches, will conduct earliten meetings. Erwin Gane and the Van Pelts will be special guests for those meetings.

The junior and primary divisions meetings are geared to fun and for learning of Christ.

You just can't miss the Illinois Camp Meeting. It's going to be a "feast," a celebration, a time of worship, friendship, fellowship and commitment! Join us June 10-15 at Broadview Academy in LaFox, Illinois.

I've been studying you guys [Seventh-day Adventists], and you don't know what you've got. Look at the advantages. I mean, you've really got

by Carl George

WHENEVER I practice the keeping of Sabbath, my whole life runs better because it imposes a discipline of calendar on me that I otherwise do not have; it organizes my whole life.

I have been studying you guys [Seventh-day Adventists], and I've been finding out that your doctrine is a lot better than you practice! I've been finding tired Adventists! That shouldn't be. If Sabbath is properly observed, there shouldn't be tired Adventists.

What will happen to a people who are taught to keep the Sabbath properly? They will be people who receive blessings from God—not just the particular blessing of God for obeying His law, but also the general blessing of God for doing something that fits into the Creator's design of the universe.

You get to the end of 60 hours of work and you say, "I am sick; I have spent 60 hours of precious life I can never recover, and all I've got to show for it is money." And then you sit down to write out checks for your monthly bills, but before you start writing them you calculate your tithe and write that check first.

Writing out that first check makes you feel everything is worthwhile because you've taken 10 percent of every hour that you put into work that week and said, "This is hallowed because I am giving a portion of this to the Lord for His work."

And this is a great blessing. The writing of that first check each month becomes a supreme act of worship.

Now, what benefits and blessings are passed to such a person, besides being saved from crass secularism? The tithe teaches him the whole idea of ordering finances—he is in the world for the good of people beyond himself and looks for opportunities to exceed the tithe in giving.

In doing so, he is emulating the behavior of Jesus and the behavior of God the Father, who gives to those who are unworthy as well as to the worthy. In other words, he develops a giving spirit, so instead of being on a constant take attitude, he is on a constant give attitude.

Society is transformed by having such people in it. If all society were grasping and selfish, it would be a perfectly miserable place to be; but these people are walking around behaving as God would have them to, because they have learned the discipline of tithing.

You know it is a fact: Income that is properly disciplined and administered with intention is not dissipated. People who tithe cannot dissipate their income; they cannot just simply whittle it away.

They have to exert discipline on their spending, and in doing so, they become prosperous in other areas, too. Because, if they can discipline themselves to tithe, they also can discipline themselves to save.

They can discipline themselves to spend money in an appropriate way. They see that their money is discretionary to a greater extent than they would otherwise, so there is a whole order imposed upon their spending.

I have several points in mind, and already the first two have made prosperity for people because of a disciplined schedule and a disciplined checkbook.

Meat is terrifically inefficient as an approach to production of foodstuffs for human beings. When you eat one beefsteak, think of the amount of time and grain it took to turn it into beefsteak. This same amount of grain could have been feeding 30 people in other parts of the world!

Now, I'm not saying you have to be a vegetarian to be an Adventist, because many of you don't say that either.

But what I'm saying is, I'm finding a self-consciousness about your diet that makes Adventists almost apologetic for it; you use depreciating terms such as "phony baloney." I listen to this and say, "You guys don't know what you've got."

You know, I look forward to eating among you because I never have to worry. I can eat anything that you have and know it will be better for me. Why apologize for healthful eating? What's wrong with lengthening your life? What's wrong with enjoying your life?

You are constantly calling people to be aware of the fact that Jesus is coming soon and that there is to be a great resurrection. Jesus said there are two great resurrections coming—one to eternal life and one to judgment. Everybody is going to participate in one of them.

When you give people the notion of Christ's soon return and also the notion of an eventual resurrection of all mankind, you have just ordered the future for people so that they're taken from a state of quandary to a state of certainty.

What this does is let them know that they are not subject to every whim and wind of doctrine; they become solid individuals.

Look at the advantages. Look at what you've done. In several major truth strokes, look at what you have done to transform the lives of people.

You have given them the Sabbath; you have given them God's blessings with the tithe; you have given them God's discipline on finance; with the diet, you have given them the disciplines and learnings of the people of God throughout the ages; with the soon coming of Christ, you have taken fear out of the future.

And with the resurrection, you've given them great certainty for eternity. You have added one other value, too, that I perceive, and that is: You have given them a value for education as a way of rational upgrading of life.

And, finally, you have been determined to take the benefits of the Gospel to the entire world, so you're four times as numerous outside the United States and North America as you are inside the United States. So you have a missionary fervor for the world.

Now, with those kinds of blessings, you bring enormous value to people in the temporal world. I mean, you've really got something worth having!

Marion, Indiana, elementary students are active in helping community

Indiana—Eighteen students of the Marion, Indiana, Adventist Elementary School are finishing a very active program in community involvement. Christine Rivera, (next to the Christian flag), guided her students in nursing home witnessing and picking up litter on busy city streets. Nine of the students were invested as Pathfinders on April 5. Two students graduated from the eighth grade in May.

Indiana Conference news notes

● The Bedford Adventist Elementary School received a Royfax bond copy machine from Tillamook (Oregon) Medical Associates. "When the medical associates learned of our needs, they donated a five-year-old machine to the school," said James McCorkle, principal. One of the physicians is Mr. McCorkle's son-in-law. Plans have been drawn to build an addition to the Bedford school before the fall term begins.

● Warsaw Church members served 113 people who visited their health screening van at the K mart plaza on March 16 and 17. Lola Hively, communication secretary, reports that 21 persons requested stop-smoking information, 48 requested nutrition helps and 38 requested Bible studies. Volunteers in the community awareness program were Cheryl Hart, Tracy Sikora, Leslie Baxter, Pastor Ron Olney and Susan Alexander, R.N. There are 40 members in the Warsaw Church.

Cicero Church examines deceptions

Indiana—A weekend evangelistic series held in the Cicero Church February 28-March 2 focused on "Being Deceived." Friday evening, a film about the Jim Jones/Jonestown incident in South America was presented. Sabbath morning, Pastor Fred Rogers urged members to beware of false doctrine. Jerry and Tim Reutebuch provided special music.

Cicero youths present worship

Indiana—Ondrea Easter presented a sermonette for the Cicero Church earliten worship service held Sabbath, March 15. Youths also provided musical selections. Ron and Mary Green are earliten department leaders. Ramona Trubey, church communication secretary, reports that students prepared their sermonettes in the school Bible class.

Indiana mothers form youth group

Indiana—As a result of a telephone conversation by mothers of two teens attending Indianapolis Junior Academy, area churches have formed the Adventist Youth Group.

Dorreen White, her husband, Pastor Harold White, and Rosemary DeHart of the Shelbyville Church attempted to contact youth leaders of all the Indianapolis area churches and explain the program.

The first meeting on January 11 included a vesper program, refreshments and some games.

Glendale youth leaders headed the February 22 meeting held in the Glendale gym for 30 youths.

The third program was held at the Indianapolis Junior Academy gym where volleyball, basketball, floor hockey and just good fellowship were enjoyed. Some youths brought neighbors who joined right in, including in prayer.

"We want the group to grow," says Mrs. White. "We will be trying to contact those who may still be unaware of it.

"We want the youths to be able to have good, clean, Christian fun," comments Rosemary DeHart. "We want this to be their club. We are only there to guide, assist with transportation and supervise when necessary."

Harold White, pastor of the Indianapolis Irvington Church says, "There are great temptations hurled at our youths because the adversary knows these are the most susceptible years for the Gospel to take root.

"These are hard years," he continued, "and, sometimes, the church and parents may feel a little frustrated. These young people are filled with enthusiasm. That's neat. They are neat, and the church needs to let them know it."

The Adventist Youth Group of the Indianapolis area invites others to join them. For more information about upcoming events, contact your youth leaders or Mrs. White at 317-862-2296 and/or Mrs. DeHart at 317-835-2034. Pray with us that the youths will organize into a very positive Christian influence here in Indiana.

Indiana Conference hosts PREACH Seminar

Indiana—Fifty-six people attended Indiana's second PREACH Seminar held at the Indianapolis Interchurch Center in Indianapolis on April 23.

James J. Londis and Morris Venden, Professional Growth Seminar speakers, encouraged 43 pastors of various denominations and 14 Adventist pastors to use story telling in preaching and pastoral counseling.

Dr. Rex Edwards was master of ceremonies. He is director of continuing education for the General Conference and coordinator for Professional Growth Seminars.

"The prophets of God could feel pain, and feelings bring insight," Elder Londis said. "They told their own story, which is how they reached people. Truth is best confronted by stories that have the effect to transform character. Jesus was the greatest storyteller in the parables of the Gospels. His method works."

Morris Venden, pastor of the 2,700-member Keene, Texas, Church, shared insights on marriage counseling that causes changes. "There can be no relationship without communication," he said. "And yet this is where the breakdown occurs."

Elder Venden defined marriage as "when two people get together personally and permanently." Speaking about money and marriage, he said, "Many families need plastic surgery—removing the credit card from the wallet.

"Marriage is for adults," he said. "And if people are dependent on parents for money, food, tuition or housing, they are not ready for marriage."

When asked about discipline, Elder Venden told ministers, "There is no limit to the discipline a child may receive as long as the child knows he is loved and accepted."

One pastor commented, "I enjoyed being fed for a change." Another said, "It spoke to my needs."

Ladies of the Indianapolis Southside Church supplied a soup and self-serve sandwich table. The PREACH Seminar will be an annual event in Indianapolis as a part of Harvest 90.

Illinois Conference news notes

● Elder Morris Venden, author of many books, gave four lectures at the South Suburban Church, in Flossmoor. The series opened Friday evening, February 21, with one lecture. On Sabbath, he presented three lectures followed by a question-and-answer period. Elder Venden is pastor of the church at Southwestern Adventist College in Keene, Texas.

● Broadview Academy reports that expanding campus industries have increased work opportunities. Harris of Pendleton, a furniture factory that employed 53 students, has expanded its finishing department. This increase provides work for 8 to 11 more students, age 16 or older. Harris employees are paid industry scale wages. Because of the students' low quality-control error rate, Deutze-Allis managers have decided to send Broadview as much work as Academy Pak can handle for the next four or five months. Other work places, such as Academy Gardens, Geneva Creations and the academy farm, have helped sizably increase the student labor force. This means increased summer work opportunities for young people who want to help pay for a Christian education. Students needing summer jobs can contact: Roy Roberts, Broadview Academy, Box 307, LaFox, IL 60147; 312-232-7441.

● Pastor Lee J. Gugliotto baptized Thomas E. Rodden and Michael Weinstein, inmates at the McClean County Jail in Bloomington on February 8 at 7:30 a.m.. Ray Miller, a layman with extensive prison ministry experience, accompanied Pastor Gugliotto at the baptism. Mr. Miller had worked with Mr. Weinstein, and Pastor Gugliotto had studied with Mr. Rodden in preparation for baptism. Both inmates were voted into the fellowship of the church later that Sabbath morning. Three inmates have been baptized at the prison since the ministry began in October. Pastor Gugliotto, Mr. Miller and Sylvia Timmons, an experienced crisis counselor, are working with 11 inmates. Pastor Gugliotto and Mr. Miller are working with two in this group who have requested baptism.

"I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content."
Philippians 4:11

South Suburban Seventh-day Adventist school jumps for heart

Illinois—Students, staff, and parents of the Lance Lockwood South Suburban Seventh-day Adventist School took part in the eighth annual Jump Rope for Heart on March 18. This was the first year the school has participated in the event and students indicated that it will not be their last year. Pledges gathered by the students and staff totaled more than $1,100 which was given to the Chicago Heart Association for cardiovascular research, education and community programs.

Adventist editors form professional association

Washington—The International Association of Seventh-day Adventist Editors was officially formed in a meeting held in Takoma Park, Maryland, in March.

Representatives from Europe, Africa, Australia, the Far East, South America and North America attended this meeting, held in conjunction with the International Editorial Council.

The association, which has been in the planning stages for some time, was formed to encourage communication, education and professionalism among Adventist editors around the world.

Regular membership is open to denominationally employed persons with editorial responsibilities. Associate members may be Adventist students majoring or minoring in English, journalism or communication and Adventist professors in any of those fields.

William Johnsson, editor of Adventist Review, was elected as the first president of the association. Barbara Wetherell, associate editor of Listen, and Kyna Hinson, associate editor of Message, were elected as vice president and secretary/treasurer, respectively. The officers will work with a five-member, international executive committee.

For further information about the association, write William Johnsson, 6840 Eastern Avenue NW, Washington, DC 20012 or call him at 202-722-6966.

Abolitionist Adventist is honored on stamp

Washington—A Seventh-day Adventist is honored by the United States Postal Service as the ninth in the Black Heritage U.S.A. Series of commemorative stamps.

Calling herself Sojourner Truth, she was really Isabella Van Wagener.

Exhorter against slavery and occasionally on temperance and women's rights, Sojourner said her name was God-given.

"The Lord gave me the name 'Sojourner' because I was to travel up and down the land . . . and . . . 'Truth' because I was to declare the truth to people."

After her emancipation in 1828, she set out for New England to lecture on the sin of slavery.

She became a Seventh-day Adventist after the church was organized and she had moved to Battle Creek, Michigan. There, she became a friend of John Byington, Dr. John Harvey Kellogg and others prominent in the faith.

Relatives of Uriah Smith have described her baptism by him in the Kalamazoo River at the end of Cass Street in Battle Creek, Michigan. He also officiated at her funeral, they say, where 3,000 people overflowed the "Dime Tabernacle."

Sojourner Truth is buried near Ellen White and other pioneers. Her grave site is noted in the Michigan tour guide of significant locations of Adventist history.

Book review

Bridge to Space Island

Part of the Bible Bookshelf series, Bridge to Space Island is written to accompany the third quarter Sabbath School lessons.

Containing all new material, this useful commentary deals with the major themes of the Gospel of John, including belief, eternal life, Christ's miracles, and His "I Am" statements. Most importantly though, Bridge to Space Island deals with God's bridge—Christ—to this isolated and lost planet. A bridge of love.

Ken McFarland is the author of not only the third quarter Sabbath School lessons and this book, but the author of numerous other books and articles. He is currently Pacific Press's assistant vice president for English Editorial Development.

• The Lifestyle Learning Center has been established at "Faith For Today" to follow through on the interest being shown in the "Christian Lifestyle Magazine" television series. The Lifestyle Learning Center is designed to take a viewer who has little or no knowledge of God's plan for their life through a series of "learning guides." Students are led to a deeper knowledge of God's truth. Weekly invitations are given on the program and in full-page ads in the follow-up print magazine. Viewers enroll in the first course, "Keys to Wellness," an introduction to Ellen White's eight natural laws of health. More than 5,400 viewers are active in this new course. The largest concentrations of the 96% non-Adventist respondees are non-churched, Roman Catholic or Baptist. To date, more than 43,000 people have received the follow-up print magazine or Lifestyle Home Seminar study materials.

• A $10,000 appropriation was made toward establishing a library for the technology department at Bethel College in the Southern Union Mission, Republic of South Africa.

• Penny Estes Wheeler recently accepted the responsibilities of acquisitions editor for the Review and Herald publishing house. Penny is author of seven books, including The Appearing and The Beginning. Mrs.

Wheeler will function as an emissary between the publishing house and its authors, recruit new authors and match good story ideas with competent authors. Mrs. Wheeler has been editor of Guide magazine since February 1983.

• Adventist World Radio inaugurated another radio station in Central America during December. Located on the campus of the Adventist Center for Higher Education in Costa Rica, the station is managed by Dave Gregory. A graduate of Pacific Union College in 1980, Dave has a major in communications with emphasis in broadcasting. He previously spent a year in Italy installing studios and antennas and training local maintenance personnel. This station reaches areas of Central America untouched by the station in Guatemala City.

• There were 1,642 responses to receipt of the first free issue per month of the Adventist Review. More than 1,200 responses were from new subscribers and the rest were renewals. This was the largest return from any Adventist Review promotion in recent times.

Thanks to Elder Everett Cumbo, Illinois Conference president, for his article concerning a visit to the Broadview Academy freshman Bible class, printed in the April 22 issue. The students and I express our appreciation for his interest and kindness.

Perhaps, President Cumbo's idea could be perpetuated by featuring an elementary or academy teacher on a regular basis—it's a great morale booster!

How can a small Christian university like Andrews compete with a Goliath-size state university?

Actually, we don't try. Our goals are different. Andrews is a university with a mission. Yes, we have a reputation for academic excellence and we are pleased, but that's not all we are about. We are an institution with Christian heritage and vision.

If your goals include academic achievement and strong professional preparation in a school small enough to care, Andrews is your kind of university.

If your values are Christ-centered, they are the stone that no Goliath-size state university can compete with.

Use the coupon to the right to help us help you reach your goals.
