How Much Shall I Give?

by H.J. Harris

While visiting a church recently I watched those on the platform make their usual announcements and perform their duties. Suddenly one of the elders stepped quickly to the microphone and said, "In our haste to hear our speaker today, we almost forgot the offering. The conference wouldn't want us to forget that." Too many of us, I fear, see the work of the church through "me" and "them" eyes — "me" for my interests and likes; "them" for the ones who try to keep the work of God in its many facets moving forward.

Last month our pastor called a special meeting, complete with a free meal (no such thing), and discussed the 1987 church budget with us. Charts, pictures and graphs showed us what happened to every dollar. Those who chose to attend were enlightened and blessed. Those who chose not to attend cannot be as enlightened and could become victims of the us/them syndrome.

In the church there should be no such distinction. It is "our" church. I'm as happy when I hear of souls won in Mozambique or in Bacold, Philippines, as I am when I hear of similar victories in Portland or some other place close by.

When I hear of needs of someone over there in "far away places with strange sounding names," somehow I feel good about giving. It's still my church. Even though I may have spent my dollars somewhat differently than they did, I'm still happy to give, knowing that it is of help somewhere.

The motivation behind giving is the real key. After all, no one should give if he doesn't want to. In II Corinthians 9:6-7 Paul says, "Every man according as he purpoeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or unwillingly: for God loveth a cheerful giver."

Just a few days ago I was talking with a young wife who is going through the pains and hurts of a divorce. She told of an incident in their married life when she asked her husband if he would wash her car while she did the laundry. His reply was, "I don't drive your car; I don't wash your car." Without saying a word she set about doing the laundry — actually her laundry, for she carefully laid aside his clothes. She proceeded to wash her own.

A little while later he came by and saw his stack of dirty clothes lying on the floor while hers were neatly stacked and pressed. "What's this?" he exclaimed. "How come you didn't wash my clothes?" You guessed it. She said, "I don't wear your clothes; I don't wash your clothes." I can hear many people say, "Good for her." I agree, but then I remember, too, that they were getting a divorce. They were giving to each other for the wrong reasons.

Many years ago I gave a Bible study on stewardship to a young couple who were thinking of being baptized. They asked how to divide their check so they could be good stewards. The husband picked up a tablet, wrote at the top of the page his monthly income, placed the tablet in my hands and said, "Show us how to make our budget." It was a moment of surprise. I almost stepped into the trap of telling others how to spend their money.

Fortunately, God helped me. I gave the tablet back to him and said, "How do you think Jesus would divide your check? Where on the list would He put tithe and offerings? What would He buy? What would He spend money on?"

Before you decide on giving, return to the silence of your heart to see what God has written there. What does His still, small voice say?

H. J. Harris is Secretary of the North Pacific Union Conference.

Christmas?

Tomorrow is Christmas.

I read again the date at the top of the page and glanced across to the top of the next page. Sure enough it said December 25 for tomorrow's reading so tomorrow must be Christmas. Yet the weather man says to plan for near 90 degrees by afternoon. The calendar tells me that it is really May 8 and I must admit that I haven't been playing by the game rules.

The "Morning Watch" book is designed to have one thought for a particular day. But with Dick Winn's book, His Healing Love, I'm like a child waiting for Christmas to come so I can open the presents and I'm not good at waiting. In fact I think I'll open another "package" tonight before I go to bed. I'd like to thank Dick Winn for all the gifts he has wrapped in each page of this book and I plan to treasure them always. Thanks Dick!

Will My Faith Stand?

If the Lord is our Shepherd why fear, He promised to care for His own and our bread and water are sure.

If we serve Christ He will never leave us. By rejecting Him we reject eternal life.

I wanted my way. At my sister's death I realized I was lost. I had traded my Lord for self serving. I desired to do better but how could I? Some people I could not love. I had bad habits I could not break.

I let things go as they were, wondering what to do. Then to my surprise the bad habit desire was gone and I could love all people. Thank God, He leaves no one to fight their battles alone. . . .

Foot Washing

. . . We have much clear counsel in the Spirit of Prophecy on the subject of foot washing. The following is just a small sample.

" . . . He (Christ) instituted a memorial service, in the ceremony of feet washing, and the sacramental supper, to be observed by His followers through all time and in every country." 5 BC 1139.

"Reconciliation one with another is the work for which the ordinance of feet washing was instituted. . . . By the example of our Lord and Master, this humiliating ceremony has been made a sacred ordinance." Evangelism, 275.

On page 273 of Evangelism, we are told that these ordinances are monumental pillars of our church. Dare we presume to remove one of the pillars upon which Christ has inscribed the name of the true God?

Winona Seibold
Madras, Ore.

. . . I feel that the particular ceremony of foot washing that Mr. Schoepflin mentioned is rather appropriate as we have it. If we take a close look at the texts dealing with the first communion (Matt. 26:26-28; Mark 14:22-25; Luke 22:19-20) they all mention this as the first evening that Judas stepped out to chat with the chief priests.

Interesting as how on the evening of foot washing (John 13:4-12) John records the same account of Judas. If you add that all up you find they were on the same night . . .

The fact we have communion four times yearly is not going against the Bible record. Notice it says "As often as you do this . . ." Some do it every week, some once a year, we have chosen a fair medium . . .

Rick McEdward
Rexford, Mont.

Mr. Schoepflin seems to be saying that we should not observe the ordinance of foot washing, yet at the same time does not really say no. I wonder if there is some question he has regarding this. May I suggest that he and anyone else who may have such questions about this being an action instituted by Jesus read counsel from Mrs. White regarding this subject. They may begin with De- sire of Ages, pages 646, 649, 650 and Early Writings pages 116, 117 and the appendix notes for these two pages in Early Writings. Mr. Schoepflin suggests there is no Bible text that shows where Christ instituted the foot washing. What about John 13:14?

Marlene Barnes
Wrangell, Alaska

Nowhere does Viola show up on any of my maps of Idaho; however, Howard Schoepflin receives much acclaim from me for having the courage of his convictions to "come out of the closet" as it were, on the matter of "Foot Washing." Ever since I have been able to comprehend Scripture, I have held this same conviction.

Every time, in each of my respective church membership experiences, in which I would broach this subject . . . I would find myself and family on the "outside" of the "social circle" of the congregation. Once a year, and a very special candlelighted Friday evening during Passover week would be just fine with me! The Sabbath services are disrupted completely, as it is done now!

What Is Going On?

Hello Adventists. What is going on out there? Why are so many of us questioning and rationalizing away some of our fundamental beliefs and Adventist mores that we have clung to all these years for comfort, pleasure, hope, support and guidance? True, we are thinking. We need to scrutinize every belief we hold to, as long as we end up with "thus saith the Lord."

I think of ourselves on a big ship, destination heaven. The Captain has always been on duty, storm or calm. But it seems some are trying to get us off into an old leaky rowboat. I am not "jumping ship." I am going to hang on with the determined. The harbor is in sight.

Legality Questioned

Is it true? Matters affecting the local churches must be printed in the "Church Manual" and all changes affecting the local churches can only be voted by the local churches or by a majority of the delegates at a General Conference Session.

If the local churches or the General Conference delegates do not vote on a change of standard that effects the beliefs of Seventh-day Adventists, is it legal?

Was it legal for a small group of men meeting in Washington, D.C., in November 1986 at the year-end North American Division meeting to change Seventh-day Adventist beliefs or standards?

Did they have the constitutional right to change Seventh-day Adventist beliefs or standards concerning wedding rings?

I am not discussing if it is right or wrong to wear a wedding ring, only the legality of the way the change came about.

If the change was not legal, our pastors should not baptize new converts into the church with wedding rings on.

News From Lakeview

We met last at the Lakeview, Ore., Church in July 1986. You will be happy to hear the laymen have carried on through the winter. Since you were there major cleanup and painting as well as repair has been completed inside and out.

There is an active children's division. On May 2 the little church nearly bulged with members, friends, visitors, totaling 36. Pastor Bill Ring is filling in until camp meeting. . . .

In the meantime GLEANER readers might be interested in hearing about "the little church that refused to die." . . .

 The Lakeview Church has had its problems in the past. However, with the aid of many dedicated individuals, the congregation continues. Mrs. Rice, who was raised in the area, spends each summer in Lakeview doing her part to keep the church going.

Idaho Pastors, Elders Study Plans for Closer Cooperation

By Morten Juberg

The spectacular spring beauty of Idaho's Payette Lake and Camp Ida-Haven provided the setting for a meeting of the conference pastors, office staff and church elders.

In opening the well-attended session, Conference President Paul Nelson, quoting Ellen White, said, "When we bring our hearts into unity with Christ and ourselves into harmony with heaven, the Spirit that fell on the disciples on the Day of Pentecost will fall on us."

Arthur Patzer, a retired General Conference administrator from College Place,

The pastors and elders meeting was directed by President Paul Nelson and Church Ministries director Tom Stafford.

Wash., presented three messages to the group on the topics of "Renewal," "Reaffirmation" and "Reward."

In his opening message Patzer challenged the audience, noting that heavy responsibilities come with being a strong spiritual leader.

He called for "a renewing of our spiritual heritage, our spiritual fervor and spiritual commitment."

Speaking during the Sabbath worship period he told the group "We must reaffirm our mission and our belief." "We don't go with the flow," he said. "We shape the flow."

In addition to the periods of devotion and inspiration, there was ample opportunity for discussion. Several presentations dealt with practical aspects of the church service and program.

Arnold Kurtz, who is retired in Idaho, had another appointment, but had videotaped presentations on the church service and how it should be conducted.

Pocatello Pastor Charles Ferguson was joined by his first elder, Vincent Porter, and "guest speaker" Leon Cornforth in dramatizing what happens in the "little room" just preceding the worship service when the pastors and elders meet to put the final touches on the program.

Other discussions on Sunday were presented by Kurtz, Cornforth and Tom Stafford, director of Church Ministries.

The women present joined with their spouses for much of the program, but they also had separate sessions. Barbara Nelson

Adventist Think Tank Head Discusses Adventists and Witnessing

By Shelley Nolan

Editor's Note: James Londis is the director of the Washington Institute for Contemporary Issues in Washington, D.C. The institute has a two-fold function: to conduct research and publication on moral and ethical issues, and to present public conferences, seminars, and media programs designed to influence thinking and prompt action.

At the request of the Mission Directions Taskforce of the Blue Mountain Ministerial Association, Londis visited Walla Walla recently to share his views on Adventist outreach. Miss Nolan talked with him about the role of Adventists in the community.

The Adventist Church does not have a very high profile in most of the communities in which it exists. Adventists are perceived to be a people who keep to themselves, who are not involved in community affairs or issues. Why do communities have this image of Adventists?

The perception that we don't seem to care much about the community arises out of our limiting our speaking to the community to articulating what we believe doctrinally and not speaking to issues with which the community wrestles, from our own perspective or from a general Christian perspective.

Adventists strongly believe in witnessing, yet many are uncomfortable trying to witness or are even turned off when the subject arises. Why are we so uneasy?

I'm not worried about witnessing. I'm worried about being a witness. By that, I mean making it obvious that my whole life is dedicated to service to others.

Witnessing has been defined too narrowly as talking to people about the Sabbath, the second coming, and our beliefs. Witnessing should have a bigger definition of serving the community. We ought to define evangelism as being involved in our community for the betterment of humanity as well as informing people about the claims of the Christian faith.

What is the Biblical picture of witnessing?

I think Jesus' ministry was a total ministry of healing and teaching, as well as preaching. There's no evidence that Jesus only healed people He thought might respond to His message or that already had. The Bible nowhere tells us that results are the key factor in evangelism.

What it says is to be faithful witnesses. I think a results-oriented evangelism tends to distort the honesty and integrity of my relationships with people. I'm always hoping these people will say yes to the gospel or yes to Adventism so I can get them into the church.

So if our first priority is not to improve baptismal statistics, where should our effort be focused?

First of all, I think we ought to care about people whether they're religious or not. God does, so why shouldn't we? Secondly, who's to say that their attitude won't eventually change?

Most Adventists don't know very many non-Adventists. They're not having enough interaction with non-Adventists. And this business of inviting people to meetings is not enough. We can't be content to sit in the local church and have our only friends be Adventists. If we work in a non-Adventist company or environment, we need to take the time to really be sociable with people, to care about them, to be involved in their lives and their problems.

I don't think we have a right to talk to people about religion until we've earned it. Religion is too personal in people's lives. We have to earn the right to get into people's religious values, and that can only be earned by spending a lot of time with individuals. And the key is sensing when the other person has given you permission to get into such topics.

How does the professional person, who may not have close social relationships with co-workers, start to talk to them about religion?

That's important. It's almost always the case that when you become relatively comfortable and friendly with anybody who's not an Adventist, our lifestyle becomes an issue. The Adventist lifestyle creates a certain curiosity because it's a little different. That inevitably leads to questions about beliefs that back up the lifestyle. Then talking about it becomes natural and easy.

Nobody feels like their private space has been invaded or violated, or that you're evangelizing them.

Besides stressing the importance of forming relationships, you also advocate extensive community involvement. Why should we become involved? And if we do, what should our motive be?

I don't go into the world because I want to witness. I go into the world because that's the right thing to do.

It's important to people to sense that the church is willing to help them with their problems and deal with some of the issues they face, whether or not they're potential members of the church. That's part of the gospel commission — to engage in social action from a Christian perspective. There is no gospel commission just to baptize people and bring them into the church.

What do people in the community want from Adventists?

What non-Adventists want to hear from Adventists is what is it that's distinctive about us that we think they need and they miss. Such things as our view of the wholeness of man, our confidence that the future is in the hands of God, our gift of the Sabbath as a day of total rest. They don't care about Ellen White or the sanctuary per se.

I think it would be a wonderful thing if in a lot of communities the most respected individuals were Adventists. Why can't Adventists acquire the reputation of being very helpful wherever they are in communities in helping to shape and set standards for values and moral behavior, not in some rigid way, but as caring people? That Adventists run seminars to help families learn how to stay together. That we be aggressive about changing, let's say, the smoking habits of kids in high schools. That we be famous for running radio or TV programs that really deal with moral issues. That when we hear about a tragedy in the neighborhood we get right on the phone and say, "Tell us how we can help you."

Non-Adventists want to hear and see that we are a caring group of people. ➔

New Seminar Series Puts Baker, Ore., Church in Family Way

By Ed Schwisow

A young Baker, Ore., pastor has penned a brilliant prescription to help solve the "not enough time with my family" complaint. He and his wife have written and conducted a family life seminar in their church.

What may seem a punishing solution to a pressing problem makes a lot of pastoral sense to Jim Berglund, who nine months ago was called by the Idaho Conference to the Baker pulpit.

"A while back, I realized that one of the topics people seemed concerned about was the family, as much among our own members, as in the community," says Berglund. "I was spending a lot of my time counseling families. So my wife Shelly and I decided to hold The Family Seminar in our church.

"Instead of being asked to counsel 20 couples on an individual basis, I could tell them in a seminar basically a lot of what they need to understand to begin solving their problems," he adds.

Shelly liked the idea of seeing Jim around the house more, so she eagerly joined in helping to put together The Family Seminar program. (Besides, to all except those with the most severe uncorrected astigmatism, the apparent reasons for Shelly's feeling in a "family way," had a more than mere psychological root.)

She and Jim decided to make it a public service program that would attract and serve those with a sincere interest in enriching married life.

With the help of church members, they mailed out 6000 color brochures to addresses in Baker, the nearby town of Haines and to all rural routes within 10 miles of the church.

Writes Own Topics

But in order to offer solutions to the deep-down problems faced by families he had counseled and hoped to meet through advertising, Jim found that he had to pen his own series of topics.

"Our topics included stress management, household finances, family conflict, sexuality, the marriage vow, time management, divorce and grief management, and a lot more," says Berglund.

Larry Kennedy and Lisa Johnson, an engaged couple who responded to the advertising and who have completed the five-week, four-session-a-week, series, are Shelly and Pastor Jim Berglund of the Baker, Ore., Church present The Family Seminar, a program which has had an impact among their church members as well as visitors from the community. The Family Seminar of the Berglunds should not be confused with the series developed by Rocky Gale in Florida. While the Berglunds use the advertising flier from that series, the Berglunds have written more in-depth material to address family issues they faced in counseling.

now involved in church activities. When they tie the knot, they say, Jim Berglund's going to be preaching the word and asking for the "I do's."

The topic that entranced them had to do with temperament. They discovered, under the tutelage of Shelly and Jim, that people — even soon-to-be-married couples — didn't actually look at life in the same way.

New words such as "choleric," "sanguine," "phlegmatic," and "melancholy," soon had them humming with brand new discoveries about one another and their personalities.

"Pastor Berglund really kept our attention. And even after the meetings, we'd talk a long time about what we'd heard," says Lisa.

Lisa, who now admits to being somewhat "choleric," works in a local hospital surgical department; Larry, a mechanic, draws out the word "sanguine" when describing himself with a shrug and a grin.

"We'd both been out of touch with religion," says Larry. "The seminar series with Jim and Shelly has added this important ingredient to our lives."

Doctrines Mentioned

The Berglunds often referred to Bible teachings in the course of their seminars, but never focused on them specifically.

"The doctrines were mentioned. For example, we talked about the Sabbath when we discussed time management. Those who came to the seminar learned a lot about what our church teaches, but we didn't specifically study doctrines at all. We were there to talk about marriage and family life," says Jim.

The Berglunds use this brochure for advertising the seminar.

The seminar has been a blessing to members and visitors alike, says the pastor, and has helped many become deeply involved in church activities for the first time in their lives.

Is their evangelistic life after family life? Yes, says the pastor. Now there's a natural curiosity about the Bible in the minds of those who attended.

"We had as many as 70 persons turn out on a good evening; I suppose we averaged between 35 and 40, don't you think, Shelly?" (Jim nods toward his wife, whose carefully tailored maternity attire now falls woefully short of disguising the blessed event soon to come.)

As if cued by the analogy, Jim continues. "No, we haven't baptized anyone yet from The Family Seminar. But this was only an introduction for many. We're now studying the Bible with several families and couples. It's a natural growth process, and we want to let it take its course."

At Baker, Ore., they're learning that strengthening family ties can definitely put the church in a soul winning "family way."

Washington Pathfinders Enjoy Full Day at Annual Fair

By Dennis N. Carlson

"Through Nature's Window" was the theme of this year's Washington Conference Pathfinder Fair. The day began at 7 a.m. in Rainier Auditorium on the campus of Auburn Adventist Academy when more than 450 Pathfinders and their leaders and counselors from 27 of the 37 Pathfinder clubs in the conference arrived to set up the club booths inside Rainier Auditorium.

Ceremonies began at 10 a.m., which included the recognition of five-year

Pathfinders. The grand parade began at 10:15 a.m. around the campus and past the review stand. A team of judges including Jerry and Beverly Brass, Bob Knutson, Dale and Louise Bartholomew, Callis and Janet Rowe, and Nathan and Phyllis Merkel were busy judging the floats and the booths.

Jess and Ginny Nephew, conference Pathfinder directors, along with their area coordinators, Brad and Darilee Brown, Dave and Jan Lewis, Ina Dalbey, and Willie and Deloris Edwards, directed the activities of the day, which concluded at 4 p.m.

The theme of the 1987-88 Pathfinder year which concludes with the Pathfinder Fair in May is "The Family of God."

Dennis N. Carlson is Communication director of the Washington Conference.

Samantha and Scott Watson of the Snohomish French Creek Club operated their radio-controlled cars as a special demonstration at the recent Washington Conference Pathfinder Fair.

Terry Council received the Silver Award Medallion from Pathfinder Director Jess Nephew at the recent Pathfinder Fair. The Silver Award Medallion is earned by meeting the requirements of the President's Council on Physical Fitness along with the spiritual dynamics and is awarded by the Youth Department of the Adventist Church.

Pathfinders who had been club members for five years were given special certificates on the stage of Rainier Auditorium at the recent Pathfinder Fair for the Washington Conference.

School of Medicine Accepts Four

Four Walla Walla college students have been accepted by Loma Linda University's School of Medicine for the 1987-1988 school year.

Hepker says that the department plans to utilize and strengthen the grant-writing program in the future. "There is money there to help students go to school and work with people," she says.

Persons interested in the stipend should contact the Social Work Department at (509) 527-2273. Minorities and single parents are encouraged to apply.

Sociology Department Receives Two Grants

The Walla Walla College Department of Sociology and Social Work has received two $25,000 grants to be used for student stipends in the child welfare training program.

The grants, which came from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, will be used for two consecutive years beginning with the 1987-88 school year. Each provides student stipends of $1,000 to $2,500 to be granted to social work majors committed to working in child welfare after graduation. The recipients must be incoming juniors or seniors and may apply for grants both years.

The Social Work Department has also received other grants that stress program development rather than student aid. These funds are used for prevention of child abuse, community education, parent aid programs and mental health services. Wilma Hepker, professor of sociology and social work and chairman of the department, says these developmental grants also contribute to student training.

Wilma Hepker, chair of the WWC Sociology/Social Work Department.

"Students receive many benefits from these grants as well," Hepker says. "By doing research and field work funded by the grants, they have an opportunity to get experience in their area."

This experience includes working at the department's Parent Education Resource Center as well as working in the community with Child Protective Services, the migrant labor camp and the Children's Home Society.

Previous grants have enabled the department to send staff and students to the Theraplay Institute in Chicago for week-long training sessions.

Gift Certificates For Tuition Are Available

Cassie Ragenovich, director of student financial services at Walla Walla College, recently announced that tuition gift certificates are available at the college.

Ragenovich says, "Academy graduation is an ideal time to give a gift certificate. They are available in any amount and are a practical and meaningful gift for parents, grandparents, relatives and friends to give. Besides being a practical gift, the certificates also encourage students to obtain a Christian education at Walla Walla College."

The View From Campus

"When the Lights Went Out"

By Alden Thompson

On May 12, the lights went out on much of the campus at Walla Walla College. And they stayed out for almost two weeks. Was God's hand on the switch?

Providence is a tough question for Christians in the aftermath of disaster. When spectacular fires wiped out first the main building at Battle Creek Sanitarium in February 1902, and then the Review and Herald Publishing plant in December of that same year, Adventists agonized over the question: Did God do it?

As I was preparing this column, I paged through the special issue of the Review (December 8, 1977) which featured the Battle Creek fires. An article by Ellen White caught my eye. Addressed to the church at Battle Creek, it was read to the congregation on January 17, 1903, some two weeks after the Review fire.

The heading was especially fitting: "Because the Review and Herald fire had destroyed the heating plant that supplied heat for the Tabernacle, the church was unheated; nevertheless, it was well filled."

Immediately I thought of our own campus with the power out. Students groped their way along darkened hallways, stared at blank computer screens, and shivered in cold showers — there was no steam and no hot water.

The lights were out in Sittner Hall, Library, and Administration Building. Labs ground to a halt. Machinery fell silent at the press. Ice cream began to melt at the dairy; biochemistry experiments were ruined when the refrigerators quit.

Some buildings still had electricity: the cafeteria and some of the dormitories: Foreman, Conard, Sittner East. The gym and Canaday Technology Center still had power. So did our plant service building a few blocks from the center of the campus. These places became beehives of activities as computers, typewriters, and people moved to where the power was.

We considered canceling school. But then the pioneer spirit took over — too much at stake to call it quits now. President Bergman called a special assembly for 9 a.m. Wednesday. As we met in the darkened church, the mood was buoyant, almost festive, and the turnout was impressive — even the faculty showed up in significant numbers. To be sure, when Dr. Bergman suggested that we could cancel classes there was a burst of applause — students love to pay $2,000 a quarter in tuition and then skip class — but these same students grinned and nodded their assent when Dr. Bergman announced that life must go on.

With auxiliary generators big and small, we managed to survive. And there were comic moments, too. When Ron Carter took his animal physiology lab to his garage, a lady driving by thought it was a garage sale. She was properly horrified when she saw the rats.

Most significant, however, was the way in which this little "crisis" brought us together. A number of minor problems had been brewing on campus. But adversity helped us rise above our petty difficulties and carry on. That's why I raised the question of Providence and God's hand on the switch.

We are grateful that no one was hurt when the electrical panel in our power house went berserk in a blaze of fireworks. But our gratitude is tempered by the knowledge that disaster of a much more sinister kind still stalks our world. We still remember the three tragic deaths at Pacific Union College just a few weeks before. At Whitman College across town, one of the brightest and most promising students was murdered by a jealous friend.

And in the midst of our own "little crisis," a much sharper pain tore at the heart of the campus — the memorial service on Friday for Rob Miller's five-year-old girl. On my desk is a letter from a student: "How can we talk about Jesus' love for children when we're sitting there with a dead child in front of us who'd been through not one, but 12 heart surgeries, none of which made her well?"

There is no easy answer to that question. But there is hope — the advent and a new world lie just ahead.

Walla Walla College is an "adventist" college, committed to the task of preparing the world for our Lord's return. That's the best reason possible for carrying on when the lights go out. And that's why I suspect that the Lord just might have flicked the switch — to remind us how easy it is to forget our petty difficulties and to press on together toward that higher goal.

Alden Thompson is Provost and Dean for Academic Administration at Walla Walla College.

Two Hundred Students Awarded Scholarships

Approximately 200 Walla Walla College students received awards and scholarships totaling more than $118,000 during a special awards ceremony.

According to Doug Taylor of WWC's student financial services office, the dollar total represents an 80 percent increase over last year's figure. Nearly 60 students received awards of $1,000 or more. Forty-one of those were given for outstanding employment programs.

The awards ceremony, held each year, rewards students based on merit earned in their respective major fields, outstanding employment records, potential and contributions to their major departments. While several of the awards were gifts from WWC funds, many were donations from businesses, alumni and friends of the college.

Breaker Failure Puts Campus in Darkness

A major circuit breaker blew out at Walla Walla College power house at 8:15 a.m., Tuesday, May 12. At the time of this writing, many of the buildings west of College Avenue, including the Administration Building, Kretchmar Hall, Fine Arts Center, Peterson Memorial Library, Sittner Hall and Rogers Elementary School were without power.

The exact cause of the breaker failure is not known. The breaker was totally destroyed along with some of the panels around it. Fortunately, no one was injured. New parts had to be built and shipped from California. The school did not close despite the loss of power, and continued to run as close to routine as possible.

Montana Announces Camp Meeting Schedule

Plans for the annual summer convocation of Montana Seventh-day Adventists have been announced by Herman Bauman, Bozeman, president of the church in the Treasure State.

The session will open Wednesday night,

June 24, and continue through Saturday night, June 27. Representatives from the 42 congregations in the state will meet on the campus of Mount Ellis Academy, just east of Bozeman. Visitors will use the dormitories at the boarding high school or live in tents, trailers and recreational vehicles.

In announcing the program for the meetings, Bauman said the convocation is the largest and best-attended meeting of the church each year. Some 1,000 guests are expected for the Saturday services.

"We're following a tradition going back to the old camp meetings which Adventists first held in Montana in 1892," he said. "Services are planned all day long beginning with a 7 a.m. devotional and continuing through the evening preaching service."

Speaker for the opening service, as well as the other evening meetings of the convocation, will be Bruce Johnston, president of the Seventh-day Adventist Church for the North Pacific area.

Other guest speakers include: Roger Coon, from the church headquarters, Washington, D.C., Martin Weber, Newbury Park, Calif., from the church's television program It Is Written. Richard Fenn, Portland, Ore., in charge of Public Affairs and Religious Liberty for the Pacific Northwest.

Special sessions for young people, from toddlers to teen-agers, will also be conducted.

Women's Ministries Begin in Conference

Women's Ministries for the Oregon Conference began on Sunday, May 3, at the East Salem Adventist Church as women of all ages from across the Conference came together to share their enthusiasm, and ideas and to plan for the future.

Marjorie Moreno, hostess for the luncheon, and chairman of the Christian Women's Retreat, welcomed the pastors' wives and representatives for Women's Ministries.

Guest speaker Norma Miller of Well-spring, an Evangelical organization for Women's Ministries, challenged the group with the needs within the church and in the community for women reaching out to other women.

Future plans include the Christian Women's Retreat, Oct. 16-18, at Camp Kuratli, near Boring, Ore., regional seminars, and beginning as well as further refinement of continuing programs in local churches.

Lents Pastor Dies After Lengthy Illness

Sunny W.C. Liu, pastor of the Lents Church in Portland, died May 20 after an extended illness with cancer. Pastor Liu was born on April 6, 1924, in Kealia, Kauai, Hawaii. In 1948 he graduated from Walla Walla College. His long denominational record began as a singing evangelist in 1949 for the Upper Columbia Conference, continuing there until 1957.

He then received a call to the Greater New York Conference and worked in the capacity of an associate pastor and singing evangelist in New York until he came to the North Pacific Union in 1965.

For the past 22 years, Sunny has worked tirelessly as a pastor in the Sunnyside, Gresham, University Park, Beaverton and Lents churches. In addition to his pastoral duties, Pastor Liu became a popular recording artist for Chapel Records and produced many sacred music albums.

As a soloist he was much in demand at church meetings, weddings, and funerals. Virtually all of his sermons included at least one song. His rich, mellow voice was known locally, nationally, and internationally, and will be remembered by many for years to come. Sunny's immediate family includes his wife of 35 years, Bernice Lee Liu; two sons, Charles, a pastor in the Hawaii Conference; Edward, a Portland area businessman; five grandchildren, two brothers, two sisters, and his mother, Violet Liu.

dance of their teacher, Ken Smith.

Smith became intrigued with signing seven or eight years ago when he attended the Longview, Wash., Church and watched a member signing for a guest who was deaf. Later he took signing as an elective at Portland State University, where he received his master's degree.

Coming from The Dalles, this is Smith's first year at Rivergate School. When asked how many words his students have learned to sign this year so far, he replied, "More than 200 — plus incidentals they use in songs."

Signing is a lot more to these students than learning songs. They talk to each other by signing when silence is a must during classes. Some are so turned on with their new talent that they practice even for a few seconds when lining up to go out for recess.

No letter grade is given or needed. Signing is a pleasure-motivated learning experience for these students. Recently I was invited to visit their classroom during their daily 15-20 minute signing lesson. Not an audible word was spoken, but teacher and students communicated back and forth. Occasionally there was a twitter of laughter that rippled across the room as a bit of humor was shared. When I left, the students signed for me to visit again, and by then I could sign back, "Thank you!"

Rockwood Congregation Helps Romanian Family

On March 2, a young family boarded a train in Bucharest, Romania, for Rome, Italy, on the first leg of their journey toward freedom. But it was a bittersweet farewell, for the very passports that granted them permission to leave also forbade them to ever return to their homeland.

The family was Grigore (called "Bebe") and Gheorghita (or "Gina") Dumitrescu and their five children. They had waited six years for their passports. Now they are in the United States, under the sponsorship of the Rockwood Adventist Church.

With the assistance of an interpreter, Bebe explained during a recent church service at Rockwood why they wanted to leave Romania: "We wish to have total freedom of religion and speech. And most of all, we want a future for our children to grow and develop in a free country. We want them to grow up happy and honest."

Romanians are permitted to attend church and to pray, but they are watched carefully in all things. If church activities conflict with communism, the people must obey the state or be punished. This is why Bebe, who was raised by Adventist parents, had to quit school after seventh grade. Beginning with eighth grade, children are required to attend school six days. They would not attend school on Sabbath, so for Bebe to continue would have meant possible imprisonment for his parents.

According to the Dumitrescus, the Communist Party seeks to be God to all people. It seeks to control all aspects of life. For example, there are no private businesses — everyone works for the government. To express independence from the Communist Party is unheard of, if one wishes to stay alive and well.

The Dumitrescus are currently living in a small, one-bedroom house next to the Rockwood Church. It is furnished almost entirely with items donated by the church members. Although all had a part in welcoming the Dumitrescus, three members deserve special thanks: Kim Iverson, Ann Lamberton, and Glenda Lorenz.

The children will attend Ross Island Center, where a special program exists for refugee children. Bebe and Gina would like to learn English. And Bebe would like to discover what sort of training might be available to help him learn a trade so he can support his family. Although he was a shoemaker in Romania, he is not certain how much he could use that skill here.

Gina summed up their feelings about the United States and the Rockwood Church by saying, "Thank you, thank you so much! Thank all the dear people — the wonderful people who have helped us so much. Thank you for your friendliness — for everything!"

Sharon Seminar Graduates 50

After giving his commencement address, the speaker called the graduates forth to receive their diplomas. This unusual ceremony was not held on a college campus, but was held at the Sharon Church on Sabbath.

The students completed their studies in a series of Revelation Seminar classes that were held at the church for a total of 24 nights. Since the Revelation Seminars were held in a classroom setting Pastor Alphonso McCarthy, in keeping with this mode, wore his master's degree robe. He also fashioned his sermon, which was entitled "Study to Show Myself Approved Unto God," into a commencement address.

Sharon's class of 1987 consisted of 73 graduates. On that Sabbath 50 graduates received their diplomas, of which 27 were presented to non-Adventists. It was a joyous celebration.

Students Honored

Two students have been selected by the Cypress Adventist School Operating Committee and faculty to receive newly initiated scholarships. These awards are based on citizenship, service, academic prowess and leadership abilities.

New to the school this year, Jan Cvancara, left, daughter of Marie Cvancara and the late Ferdinand Cvancara, is a member of the Ballard Church and a seventh-grader at CAS. Jane's special interest in math has influenced her desire to become an architect. Ice skating and skiing are some of Jane's favorite sports.

Mary Goo, daughter of Benette and Bronson Goo, has attended Cypress for 10 years. She works in the school office and has been active in many extracurricular activities. She will attend Auburn Adventist Academy next year. In the future she looks forward to a career in fashion.

Board Members Give Buena Vista Faculty a Day Off

By Gale Crosby

At the Buena Vista Elementary School in Auburn, a slight twist to a normal school day took place recently. Students came to school as normal and classes were held as normal, but what was different was the teachers.

Earlier in the school year, the School Board had voted not only to tell the faculty that they were appreciated, but also show them. This resulted in the School Board members themselves taking a day from their busy schedules and teaching classes for the whole day.

This program was set up to do two things: 1) to give the faculty a day off and to say "Thanks for all the hard work — you are appreciated"; and 2) to give the School Board members a chance to find out more about the school and its program.

Both objectives seemed to be met with great success. The faculty expressed their gratitude for the day off and for the fact that the board members were obviously concerned for them and for the school.

Roger Hinshaw, the sixth-grade teacher and vice principal, said, "It gave the School Board members an opportunity to gain more insight, on a daily basis, as to what the needs of the school are. This will help as they allocate funds in the board meetings and as they set priorities for the school."

The board members shared that they were impressed at how organized the faculty was and how many activities actually take place in one school day. They also had high praise for the way that the students had been trained and followed their daily routine with no problems.

Russell Hanscom, a School Board member who was principal for the day, commented, "The day gave the School Board members a chance to see some of the problems that the teachers face and to be more sympathetic to their needs. I really enjoyed the day."

Gale Crosby is principal of Buena Vista Elementary School.

Edmonds Student Wins Scholarship

Tamma-lynn McDonald, a freshman elementary education major at Walla Walla College, College Place, Wash., has been awarded a $5,000 scholarship by the state of Washington Higher Education Coordinating Board.

Tamma-lynn, daughter of Robert and Lorraine McDonald of 20520-25th Ave. West in Lynnwood, was one of 35 students in the state to receive the award. Applicants for the scholarship must be residents of Washington enrolled in an accredited education program at a four-year college while maintaining at least a 3.0 cumulative grade point average. They must also have graduated in the top 10 percent of their high school class or have equivalent GED scores.

Shares Jewish Heritage

Sharing her Jewish heritage, Jill desGarenes of the Kent Church recently prepared and performed a traditional Jewish Passover Seder supper. Mrs. desGarenes was assisted by her family and friends, who explained each ritual to the nearly 150 persons in attendance at the Kent Church. Those in attendance at the event tasted of the bitter herbs and drank the four glasses of grape juice (wine) and followed each scheduled event with the leaders.

A member of the Kent Church, Mrs. desGarenes also shared the Passover with a Kent church of another denomination, drawing a large crowd there as well.

Adventist Horsemen Have Active Organization

By Lou E. Venden

What does A.H.A mean? This is often asked of Seventh-day Adventist horsemen. Let me share with you what it means to many families who belong to the Adventist Horsemen Association.

There are five area clubs spreading from Idaho, to Oregon, the Columbia Basin, with two area clubs, and toward the Canadian border. Each area group tries to have some kind of social gathering all winter and rides during the summer, at least one time a month. There are also camp-outs with Friday evening vespers, guitar singing around the campfire, and play days. One area group will have their second play day this spring.

We get together twice a year, with all of the clubs coming together. The first one is held, usually in February, at Moses Lake, our central point. The other one is termed Cowboy Camp Meeting. This year the gathering will be at Frosty Meadows near Ellensburg, Wash., July 3-6.

Many of the horsemen have taken part in parades at Omak, Wash., and Pendleton, Ore. The beautiful Christian flag and the Adventist Horsemen flag with the statement "Horsemen for Christ" let everyone know that we're trying to be Christians. The many favorable comments are, indeed, worth all the getting up at three to four o'clock in the morning to be there. White shirts, pastel ties, blue saddle pads and leggings (given to us by another horse club) make the riders an attractive group.

There are wilderness rides in the Pasaytens this summer. The dates are Aug.

2-9 and Aug. 9-16. These will be led by reliable persons. If you are interested, contact the Youth Department of Upper Columbia Conference soon!

For anyone interested in attending the area club meetings or the Cowboy Camp Meeting, feel free to do so. No, you do not have to have a horse to enjoy our gatherings!

Last summer at the fourth Cowboy Camp Meeting we had 79 horses with 150 people in attendance. We have plans for the youth, church services with much music, and something for the entire Sabbath. There is no horseback riding that day at the camp, but there is plenty of time to ride the trails on Sunday and Monday. Those who can come earlier can ride on Friday.

We are a caring group, and we share our tack and anything else needed with others. If you want details, contact any of the following officers: President, Lou E. Venden, Box 330-B, Rt. 3, Omak, WA 98841; Vice President, "Chuck" Chamberlain, 995 SW Grandview, College Place, WA 99324; Secretary-Treasurer, Ruth Fenton, Rt. 4, Box 370, Spokane, WA 99204; News Editor, Clara Werner, 221 "D" St., NW, Ephrata, WA 98823; Liaison Officer, Mike Werner, 221 "D" St., NW Ephrata, WA 98823; Chaplain, Pastor Otis Parks, Rt. 1, Box 198, Troy, ID 83871.

Why not enjoy the great outdoors with us? "There is something about the outside of a horse that is good for the inside of the man."

Lou E. Venden is president of the Adventist Horsemen Association.

Students Visit Schools With Weeks of Prayer

To the students of Upper Columbia Academy, Week of Prayer has meant having a guest speaker for one week of spiritual emphasis. However, two weeks this year U.C.A. students have been involved in bringing this spiritual emphasis to other schools. In early November, 25 students (five daily) went to Tri-Cities Junior Academy. The theme was "Making Christianity Real." They enjoyed leading the lower- and upper-grades in song and presenting spiritual programs.

More recently Pastor Keith Jacobson took a group of seven academy students to Wenatchee Junior Academy. This week the group stayed at the school the whole time.

Being with the students from the time they arrived in the morning till the time they left in the evening helped them get to know them as friends.

This second week was more successful because being with the students all day helped to know and relate with them better. Next year, plans at U.C.A. include two more Weeks of Prayer at other schools.

Two Pathfinder Clubs Clean Up Campground

The Wenatchee Apple Valley and Ephrata Sun Basin Pathfinder Clubs worked together on a community service project for the Leavenworth Forest Service District.

During the winter extensive selective logging had been done at the Johnny Creek Campground on the Icicle River. With the snow melting, cleanup of the debris could begin.

The two clubs spent five to six hours of hard work in the campground cleaning up the downed limbs and smaller logs from the campsites and piling them closer to roads where they could be picked up.

Thousands May Be Blessed

By Eileen Lantry

Words penned almost a century ago found partial fulfillment in the small community of Clark Fork, Idaho.

"By the atmosphere surrounding us, every person with whom we come in contact is consciously or unconsciously affected. . . . Thus by our unconscious influence thousands may be blessed." (Christ Object Lessons, pp. 340, 341)

Several years ago Don and Carol Hicks chose to leave the "rat race" of Southern California and build a home in the mountains by the Clark Fork River. But even the beauty of their surroundings could not put peace in their hearts. Sensing a need for God, Carol, without telling Don, requested Bible studies.

When a minister came to their home, Don resented his presence and decided to order him off his premises the next time he came. But the Holy Spirit changed Don's anger to curiosity, and he listened. Soon he and Carol accepted Jesus as their Saviour and found a new joy in studying the Bible together.

Now a new Don mingled with the businessmen of the community. Though a quiet man, he could not hide the change in his words, acts and the expression on his face. Another newcomer from California, Jay V. Totten, seemed drawn by Don's inner power. He admired his ethics of faith, courage and hope and wondered why he felt so uplifted with each contact with Don.

Totten had spent the last 25 years in a highly paid job working out of Vandenberg Air Force Base. His primary mission was to check out all the missile base ranges before any rocket launches from the West Coast to Cape Canaveral in the east. A commercial pilot, he also flew air ambulances.

But Totten felt restless, unfulfilled. He seemed to be searching for something unknown to him. He threw his energies into helping others, getting involved in a local church, working as a volunteer fireman. When his marriage failed, he decided to quit his $83,000-a-year job and settle in a spot he had enjoyed on a vacation some years before.

He bought a small piece of land with a cabin in the mountains near Clark Fork. Each time he came to town he looked up Don Hicks. Their friendship grew. He felt accepted, bad habits and all. One day Jay felt compelled to ask,

"Don, I want what you've got. Will you help me?"

"I'm just learning myself, but I'll be glad to share what I know. Carol's a good cook. Come over tonight for supper and we'll study the Bible together after we eat."

"Batching isn't too good. I'll be there."

And so for nine months Jay Totten enjoyed both physical and spiritual food with the Hicks. He even went to a cooking school Carol conducted. Jay struggled with his bad habits, but the power from his new-found Savior won, and Jay Totten found the unknown something he had been seeking.

During this time another family, Doug and Judy Stuart and their two little boys, moved to Clark Fork. Shortly before they left California, Judy had attended a Revelation Seminar and had been baptized. But Doug, whose mother was devout Catholic, clung to his childhood beliefs. As a role model, he had always admired his mother's faith in God when she faced trouble and trial. Doug had many unanswered questions, but Judy, who knew so little about the Bible, could not help him. Yet he realized that their differences could cause deep problems in child rearing.

Doug had spent four years in the Navy and had worked as maintenance man for state parks. As he searched for a job in Clark Fork he met Don Hicks, who went out of his way to help Doug find work. The silent witness of this unselfish man had an almost irresistible influence on Doug. Finally he decided to share his concerns.

"I'm failing in my efforts to keep my family united. We're pulling in opposite directions. I want the same eagerness for God that you have. Can you help me?"

In his modest way, Don answered, "I can only share what I know. Carol and I will be glad to come over to your home and study the Bible with you."

Recently both men joined the family of God by baptism. Both men told Pastor Jay H. Lantry they had found the peace for which they longed. Both men were influenced by a man who loved God supremely and his neighbor as himself.

Eileen Lantry is Communication Secretary of the Bonner's Ferry Church.

The influence of Don Hicks, left, led to the baptisms of Jay Totten and Doug Stuart, who is shaking hands with Pastor Jay Lantry.

Pathfinders participated including Imogene Thomas, East Cascade Pathfinder District coordinator; Karen Lloyd, Apple Valley Pathfinder director; Joyce Smith, Bob Fairbanks, unit counselors; Darren Ravassipour, Stephen Matthews, Alex Hines, Jason Wendt and Samuel Barcroft, Nathan Rouse, Stevan Ruelas, Bryan Taft, Lacey Orr, Erin Wallace, Josie and Jeremy Smith.

VBS Is Community Outreach in Granger

Vacation Bible School has been an important community outreach for the Granger Church for many years. Every year the urgent need for a follow-up program is felt.

Before the 1986 VBS started, a committee composed of the VBS director and division leaders met and planned a monthly follow-up meeting for those of junior and earliten ages only. This program has proved to be successful.

The goal was Bible study with these children and friendship with them that would lead to friendship with Jesus.

The monthly Sunday evening meetings consist of singing, Bible study and a fun activity.

For the Bible study, Junior Bible Lessons were ordered from the Voice of Prophecy. The children are divided by age into groups and, with adult teachers, work the lessons and mark their Bibles.

The activities planned have been varied. A hay ride with a bonfire and roasted potatoes and apples, an October barn party with bucking barrel, craft nights, Christmas caroling to a parent or grandparent with a gift of fruit-nut bread, a taffy pull and a progressive party with pizza, have been some of the fun times we've enjoyed.

To supplement the program, Listen magazine has been ordered for the older

Edgemere and Spirit Lake Members Active in Outreach

By Lavonne Bierwagen

The Edgemere, Idaho, Church is not in a town — it is a community. There is no store, post office or service station. The building is small, well-kept, and boasts two new outhouses. One would wonder where the members come from, but there are many houses hidden in the trees and some come from quite a distance to make up the 85 membership.

The people in the Edgemere Church are in all stages of spiritual growth and development. There are frequently new people visiting the church out of a sincere interest in learning more "truth." There is a nucleus of members who have a burning desire to see souls saved for the Kingdom of God.

These people would keep things moving whether they had a pastor or not. Recently Dan Haugen was baptized. His first contact with the church was by being picked up as a hitchhiker on several occasions.

A few years ago, there was no church in Spirit Lake. Its main street is about two blocks long, on which are three bars and a liquor store. There is a restaurant, a grocery store with a gas pump, a hardware store and the post office.

In 1974 Phyllis and Curtis Brown moved to Spirit Lake, and as other Adventists moved into the area or were baptized they joined the Edgemere Church. In 1980, 10 members swarmed from the Edgemere Church and began meeting in Spirit Lake.

In 1981 they were officially organized into a "company." They were organized into a church in 1982, broke ground for a new church in 1983, and moved into a new church building in 1984. All the while new members were added to the church — many as a result of Vacation Bible Schools. Today the membership is 56.

Exciting things are happening in both churches. In addition to Dan Haugen, who was baptized and joined the Edgemere Church, James and Robert Adkins were baptized and joined the Spirit Lake Church. The pastor is conducting baptismal classes currently in Edgemere and Spirit Lake.

The pastor and his wife Lavonne recently conducted "Spiritual Gifts" seminars in both churches. Some commented they had waited years for this. After this, the Edgemere Church sponsored a Breath-Easy seminar in Priest River, conducted by Dr. Lon Peckham, a dentist who recently moved into the Edgemere district, but practices in Priest River and attends church in Sandpoint. He was assisted by Pastor Roger Bierwagen and laymen.

While this was going on in Priest River, Spirit Lake was sponsoring a Stress Management Seminar in the Spirit Lake Church.

Robert and James Adkins are recently baptized members of the Spirit Lake Church.

Stan Baker, left, and Ben Hornby are members of the Edgemere Church who have been conducting a Revelation Seminar in Priest River.

Don Parks, Health Education director of the Upper Columbia Conference, led out in this. Before that ended, Lavonne Bierwagen started a nutrition and cooking school for the Edgemere Church, held in the Edgemere grange hall.

Mrs. Bierwagen is a certified nutrition instructor with the Adventist Health Network, has authored several articles on nutrition and has won several recipe contests.

The cooking school was one of the largest projects recently. Sixty-seven people came in all, and 31 of those were non-members. Pastor Bierwagen donned his apron to help in the breadmaking demonstration.

Immediately after the nutrition seminar, both churches started Revelation seminars. Both were preceded with prayer vigils. There were guests in both churches who are attending the Revelation seminars and who came to the cooking school.

Pastor Bierwagen is conducting the Spirit Lake seminar, assisted by one of the elders, Jim Hawvermale. Two laymen, Stan Baker and Ben Hornby, are conducting the Edgemere seminar, which is being held in Priest River. Stan Baker and Roger Wright did the last seminar six months ago.

Spirit Lake has plans for public evangelism immediately after the Revelation seminar in Spirit Lake.

Southwestern Adventist College, Keene, Texas. "The College of Vision" is replacing their nearly new Casavant pipe organ with the fantastic European 73 rank equivalent electronic classical organ, the Johannus Opus 340. Johannus, the largest selling classical organ in the world, is replacing many of the larger cathedral pipe organs with Johannus electronic. Many are tiring of the monstrous high original costs, maintenance costs, and rebuilding costs periodically necessary in pipe organs. Johannus matches the sound of the best in pipe organs and far superior to the average run of most pipe organs. Johannus costs are practically nothing by comparison. Investigate and learn the difference. Southwestern has recently obtained the famous Kurzweil 250 Synthesizer equipment — the finest developed. Also, they have already received their 9 ft. German Grottrian concert grand piano, rated in Europe as still the best made. And immediately they will be receiving their new Johannus organs and 11 new grand and vertical pianos from us with more to follow. We believe that Southwestern will shortly be the best equipped music college in the denomination and, with their fine cooperation, we are going to do everything humanly possible to make that an overwhelming reality. Southwestern believes, as we do, that Adventists should buy better and more sensible instruments. For personal recommendation you might contact: Prof. Larry Otto, Chairman, Fine Arts Department, Southwestern Adventist College, Keene, TX 76059, (817) 645-3921, ext. 217, or any one of many other professional names that we will furnish. ## PERSON-TO-PERSON

Advertisements for this section are accepted from North Pacific Union Conference single adults only. Each ad must be accompanied by a letter from an NPUC Adventist pastor indicating that the person is an NPUC member in good standing.

The charge for each ad is $15 per insertion for 50 words or less, 50¢ for each additional word. Payment must accompany the ad. There is no billing.

If you wish to respond to an advertisement, the following rules apply: You must be an NPUC member in good standing and must attach a letter from your pastor indicating this. These letters are kept on file. If a person has advertised or responded to an ad in the past, it isn't necessary to send an additional pastoral letter of approval.

The GLEANER assumes no responsibility as to the marital status of respondents or advertisers except that they are North Pacific Union Conference members in good standing.

Put your letter to the individual in a stamped, sealed envelope and place the identification number on the outside. Put this letter in another envelope and mail it to Person to Person, GLEANER, Box 16677, Portland, OR 97216.

Please put your FULL NAME and RETURN ADDRESS on ALL envelopes you send to us. We do not forward unmarked mail.

#490

Conservative 36-year-old male enjoys Bible studies and church outreach work. Never been married. Live in the country, relax by walking, gardening and sometimes a trip. Would like to correspond with ladies who study the Bible and Spirit of Prophecy, have similar interests and want to hasten Jesus' return. (15)

#491

I am a 68-year-old widow. I am a caring Christian, love people, have a sense of humor, honest, understanding, and love to travel. I would like to correspond with a man who is a caring Christian, considerate, kind, understanding, honest. I love children; am active in my church. Please let me hear from you. (15)

The Hall of Faith

Created for Sabbath School

"Sabbath School" means "World Mission"!

For 110 years the Sabbath School has inspired men and women "to go" and "to give." The lives of those who chose "to go" and plant the third angel's message were filled with adventure, bravery, emotion, and faith. The idea behind the HALL of FAITH is to tell their stories.

The Pacific Press and Mission Spotlight have joined talents in the development of 24 stories in the form of books and audio-visual programs. Persons selected for this distinction are those whose lives demonstrated unusual faith. An honor plaque for each is hung in the Mission Spotlight HALL of FAITH. The art piece for each plaque is reproduced into posters, collector's cards—and, used for the book cover.

The tribute honors people like J. N. Andrews, O. E. Davis, Anna Knight, Dr. Harry Miller—the list goes on! Their stories have priceless value: they instill future goals, they rebuild childhood dreams, they provide a deep respect for the roots of this church.

"The whole purpose," say the producers, "is to rekindle the fire of the mission of the Seventh-day Adventist Church in the hearts of our young people. Our generation has an obligation to tell these stories! And, to keep on telling them! After we are gone, who will tell?"

CHIK-PATTIES

CRISPY ON THE OUTSIDE TENDER ON THE INSIDE

Now, enjoy the rich full flavor of southern fried chicken with Loma Linda's new Chik-Patties.

Prepared from natural vegetable sources, these meatless patties contain no cholesterol or preservatives. Chik-Patties, generously coated with a layer of breading, cook-up crisp and crunchy on the outside - moist and tender on the inside.

Loma Linda's Chik-Patties are pre-cooked, ready to heat and serve - perfect for that last minute main dish.

No matter how you serve them, crisp in a bun topped with lettuce and tomato, or served simmering hot in your favorite sauce, you won't be able to resist the mouth-watering taste of Loma Linda's new Chik-Patties.

Look for Chik-Patties in the frozen food section and bring home the great taste of southern fried chicken.
