The "Review" Inspires, Educates, Unifies

A Worthy Endeavor

From the beginning of the activities of Seventh-day Adventists as a separate and distinct people, even before they were organized into a separate denomination, the "Review and Herald" has been the official organ, and has stood in defense of the doctrines as held by this people. At all times, and under all conditions, the "Review and Herald" has given a clear, definite note of warning, counsel, reproof and instruction. It has been the comfort and stay of the advent band, not only in this country, but in foreign lands wherever the English language is read. It has been the medium of communication between the home and the foreign lands. It has done more to stabilize and unify the believers than any other one instrumentality God has given us outside of the Bible and the Spirit of prophecy.

During the month of July a special campaign is on to place the "Review" in every home of Seventh-day Adventists in this country. No more worthy enterprise or endeavor on the part of laborers and laity than to see that the "Review" is in the homes of our people can be presented to us. The subscription price, $2.50 a year is small in comparison to the subscription price of other church papers. It is only five cents a week, and what Seventh-day Adventist can afford to get along without the "Review" for five cents a week? Better—far better—cut down the secular papers that flood our homes and occupy our time than to let the "Review" fail to minister to our spiritual needs. A live interest is being taken by our brethren in every conference to increase the subscriptions.

If you are not a subscriber to the "Review," and these words reach you, please accept them as a personal appeal for your subscription. Send your name, address, and the subscription price to your conference office, or, if you do not know the conference address, send to the "Review and Herald," Takoma Park, Washington, D. C.

We wish to call attention to another feature. During the month of July the "Review and Herald" will celebrate its seventieth anniversary, and as a token of the faithfulness of its readers, the board of managers has agreed to extend the regular subscription price to a period of fourteen months in place of twelve months.

This certainly will appeal to us as a liberal offer on their part. May we rally to this call and do our part.

J. W. Christian.

The "Review", fourteen months, $2.50.

Has Read Every Issue of the "Review"

On October 29, 1852, which was the fourth Sabbath I had ever kept, I first saw the "Advent Review." I also met Brother and Sister White for the first time on this day, in a Sabbath meeting in Rochester, New York.

At the close of the service Brother White gave me copies of all the "Reviews" he had published up to that date. These were eight-page papers, and comprised the numbers of volume 1, printed in the state of Maine, volume 11, published at Saratoga, New York, and the numbers of volume 111 up to that time, printed in Rochester. So I had the pleasure of reading all of these, and have since read every number published. The weekly issues, instead of being semi-monthly, contain more than four times the reading matter of each number in 1852. It is to me a delight to fully peruse its columns.

At the present time the editors are carefully and prayerfully giving us the bearing of the events of the world which are so evidently filling the prophetic announcements respecting the same,—the "meat in due season"—for this time; just what is needed by all who are preparing for the coming conflict, and final deliverance at Christ's coming.

It is a poor excuse made that one "cannot afford to take the 'Review:'" it being only five cents a week. When I had completed reading the May 22 copy, I said to myself, "That one copy is worth a year's cost of the 'Review.'" If unable to pay for the "Review," I would surely borrow it from some one.

Our Saviour said, "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." Matt. 24:14. In the "Review" we are constantly notified of the progress of the work, and so of our nearness to the consummation of our hope.

Not long before Sister White's last illness, she said of those who failed to read the "Review," and keep track of the progress of the work, that "the loud cry of the message might come, and they not know it." Let us all be found among the watchers, and not with those who think there is delay because they do not know of the advancement being actually made by the message.

A Marvelous Growth

Did some one ask what I know about the paper carrying the title of "Advent Review and Sabbath Herald?" I feel very much acquainted with this dear old church spokesman, having enjoyed its visits for nearly sixty years. These visits, too, have been seasons of keen delight, and have never become wearisome in any degree. Not only have they afforded pleasurable intercourse with ministers and writers of long acquaintance, but have also introduced its readers to new companies of adherents to the truth.

Once this good paper was of small size, yet large enough to meet the small demands made upon its columns; now it is double in size to its earlier issues, yet hardly large enough to cover the deeply interesting reports from our foreign workers, besides filling a long-felt need of some in comforting and instructive articles from those most experienced in the message.

The seventieth anniversary number of the paper to be issued in July, will contain some astonishing statements of the rapid growth of our work in its various phases. Besides these, some pioneer reminiscences will be given, showing how marvelously God has wrought through human weakness and deep poverty in the steady development of His last-days' message. The pace set by this special number is intended to be kept up by all succeeding issues, and those who miss its weekly visits from this time forward will suffer the loss of valuable instruction and spiritual comfort. So let there be a general rally in all our churches to get the regular visits of this most valuable minister in every family.

J. O. Corliss.

Source of Inspiration

The good old "Review" has been a constant visitor in my father's home and my own for over forty years. As it has come to us from week to week it has been a source of inspiration and encouragement, always bringing something new from the field that has given us greater confidence in this message. At the present time we feel that it is unsafe for us to miss one number; for so rapid progress is being made that if but one week is missed we get far behind.

I am convinced that it is practically impossible for a person to be a thorough, up-to-date Seventh-day Adventist and not keep in touch with the work throughout all the world as revealed through the columns of the "Review."

A letter was recently received from our home missionary secretary in which this statement is made. "It seems too bad that Arizona should so long stand at the head of the short or delinquent list." I am very sorry that he has been compelled to make this statement; not because we merely want to see a large list of "Review" subscriptions, but principally because of the dearth of spirituality that comes to those who fail to keep pace with the onward march of the gospel of the kingdom.

I trust that every member of the Arizona Conference will weigh this matter well, and see to it that he receives the spiritual refreshing that comes through the columns of the "Review."

A. R. Sandborn,
President Arizona Conference.

Devoted

Devoted means to direct, or apply one's self or one's time, chiefly or wholly to some purpose, work or use: to be given or surrendered completely to some person or end.

In Leviticus 27:28 we read that "every devoted thing that a man shall devote unto the Lord is most holy unto the Lord." This is, no doubt, why the word "devoted" impresses one with the thought of sacredness.

One of our periodicals is devoted to the proclamation of the "faith which was once delivered unto the saints." This is to say it is given or surrendered completely to the proclaiming of that saving faith which every saved soul must possess. It matters not how many to whom this faith may have been delivered. It is those who keep this faith that are assured of salvation through Him whose faith this is. For so saith the Lord, "Here is the patience of the saints: here are they that keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus." Rev. 14:12.

Now, of all the books, pamphlets, tracts, papers and magazines at the command of God's people to-day, the most important one for those surrendered to the third angel's message is that periodical devoted to the proclamation of the "faith which was once delivered unto the saints," "THE ADVENT REVIEW AND SABBATH HERALD."

For seventy years this ordained instrument of God has been devoted to a soul-saving, soul-sustaining work. It brings to the home it enters a blessing from heaven, and to the heart of its reader a sustaining power from Him with whom is all power in heaven and earth.

The "Review" will be sent fourteen months for the yearly subscription price of $2.50, if subscribed for or renewed before July 31, 1919.

J. D. Alder.

Are you getting the "Review?"

No Substitute

For more than sixty years the good old "Review" has been an able minister and true exponent of the third angel's message.

As the denomination has grown and the work has assumed larger proportions, the importance of this strong denominational organ has increased. Only those who have been constant readers of this weekly paper can fully appreciate what a mighty factor it has been in educating, unifying and building up the believers.

With the message, God gave the "Review" as an inspiring, spiritualizing voice, penetrating the earth with notes of cheer, progress and success, bringing hope and spiritual food to all its readers. Nothing can take the place of the "Review;" there can be no substitute. Other papers are good, sometimes almost indispensable. Every loyal Seventh-day Adventist ought to take and read the union conference paper. He cannot be intelligent regarding the work and plans without it. But it can only be local, and is not, neither can be, a substitute for the "Review."

The "Review" is of far more value than any newspaper. The newspaper may be read with small gain, or neglected without much loss, but the "Review" brings to us the news of salvation and the triumphs of the message from all parts of the earth.

Believers cannot deprive themselves of the "Review" without great loss, even for the sake of monetary economy; for it is an essential in our spiritual life, a weekly reviver, a constant inspiration, brought into existence and maintained solely for our spiritual health.

Never in the history of this movement has there been a time when it was more essential that Seventh-day Adventists receive the help and encouragement which comes through reading the "Review." The "Review" is our church organ; it proclaims the message with no uncertain sound, and through its columns as in no other paper, we get reports from all parts of the world.

In these days of intensity, with every wind of doctrine and phase of skepticism forcing itself upon us, and while our message is rapidly swelling into the loud cry, the safety of our people centers more and more in keeping in close touch with this strong unifying cord. Through this medium, our interests are cemented, our confidence strengthened and our faith in the final triumph of this blessed cause enriched.

Every family of believers in our conference should subscribe for the "Review." Each week we should have it come and sit in our family circle, as it were, to enlighten, instruct, and teach us.

G. W. Wells,
President California Conference.

No Respector of Persons

When I heard that we were to have a birthday celebration in honor of the good old "Review and Herald," I said: "I would like to give my testimony in its behalf."

I have been a reader of the "Review" a large share of my life, and it seems that my home would be a lonely place without this splendid visitor and faithful minister. The "Review" is no respector of persons. It speaks to every heart in the denomination who wishes to avail himself of the benefits of our good church paper.

In its columns every branch of the great cause of God is discussed. One is kept in touch with every department and with every phase of the work, in every part of the world. It is wonderful to me how many things can be crowded together in the weekly issues of this valuable periodical for the encouragement and enlightenment of the people of the Lord.

Long live the good old "Review."
H. S. Shaw.

President Central Cal. Conference.

The "Review"—thirty-two pages weekly.

Ten Reasons For Taking the "Review"

1. It fosters unity among the believers.
2. You cannot keep pace with the message without it.
3. It inspires faith, stimulates courage, and brings good cheer.
4. It keeps us informed regarding the progress of the work in all lands.

5. It is an inspiring, educating, unifying medium between God's people.

6. It builds up the believers, keeping alive the spiritual fires of the soul.

7. It imparts a spiritual force and vitality, creating a working devotion in our churches, as no other paper does.

8. It is a monitor of truth, a reprover of sin, an instructor of righteousness, and warns us against skepticism and apostasy.

9. The price is no higher than for many other religious journals. It has no paid advertisements, but each week its various departments are filled with choice, fresh material that elevates the soul, cultivates the desire for proper reading, and spiritualizes the heart.

10. The "Review" was the first printed sheet that ever voiced the third angel's message. It effectively served in the very beginning of the message to form a union of believers. It will remain until the work is finished, faithfully fulfilling its mission, and those who conscientiously follow its instruction will not weaken or drift, but will be overshadowed by the Holy Spirit and prepared to triumph with the people of God.

G. W. Wells.

Your family needs the "Review."

At the Head of the List

There is a certain list of periodicals, without which no Seventh-day Adventist home is quite complete. At the head of this list stands the "Review and Herald." This paper has been a source of encouragement and spiritual uplift to the writer for forty-four years. Like a member of the family we would seriously miss its weekly visits. It would seem impossible to keep in touch with the world-wide progress of the message committed to us as a people, without the broad survey of the whole field given constantly in the official organ of the denomination. Is there not a dearth in the home in which the "Review" is not received and treasured as a messenger of heaven?

G. W. Reaser.

In Which Class Do You Belong?

The pastor, in looking over the audience before him as usual, finds some who afford, if possible, a little more pleasure by their attendance than others, for the reason that their interest is a source of inspiration to him; and more than that, they are always there at every meeting. Many others are there also; but he sees them slowly slipping away and he seems unable to hold them. He wonders if it is the sermon, himself, or what can be the matter. Then he remembers that he saw a large number outside who did not come in at all. They are all church members. Why do they not come in?

These questions are rushing through his mind; and then, knowing that several visiting ministers present are to talk that morning he is more unable to understand the reason for the lack of interest, and decides that he will find out at the first opportunity.

He inquires if they are ill. No, just too busy, or too tired, or did not have the five cent car fare, or some other excuse. Then he is certain they are losing their interest in eternal things. True he finds a few who really cannot afford the five-cent fare, so he interviews the church council and it proceeds to secure the money to pay for their presence.

This pastor is the editor of the good old "Review and Herald;" the visiting ministers are the associate editors and contributors; those who afford him the most pleasure are the regular subscribers; those who slowly slip away are those who let their subscriptions lapse; those outside are the members who never subscribe, and are either too busy, or too tired to read, or do not have the five-cent car fare (cost of the paper each week). Then he is certain that they are losing interest in eternal things and wonders what he can do to help them. True he finds a few who are really too poor to afford the five-cent car fare, so he sees the church council (in every church) and asks that funds be provided to purchase the paper for them, that they may have the good sermons every week that come in the "Review."

If you are one of the church-members, in which class are you? It is to be hoped that you are one of the first class, and if not, will soon,—yes, right away—enter this class by sending in your subscription for the year, and receive as a premium two months free, all for $2.50 either for renewal or new subscription.

Supt. Nevada Mission.

Stronger With Added Years

The writer became acquainted with the "Review and Herald" when it was about the age at which man reaches maturity. Nearly half a century has passed since then, and the "Review" shows no signs of having matured. It grows stronger with its added years. This increase of power is not due to increased human strength, but to the fulfilling and unfolding of the prophetic Word of God.

If some, who read the "Review" two-score years ago, as it told through its prophetic horoscope, the Bible, of the coming world-war, and the approaching strife between capital and labor, could have fallen asleep and not awakened till to-day they surely would be impressed with the truth of its message.

The "Review" is not only a reviewer, and herald of truth to the world, but it is the harbinger of strength and comfort to those who are already keeping the commandments of God and looking for the coming Saviour, especially to those who are isolated from others of like faith.

Solomon said, "Thine own friend, and they father's friend forsake not." Prov. 27:10. Though our newly formed friends are very wise and vivacious it is not wise, to forsake, even for them, the friend that has long been true to us, and our fathers. The "Review and Herald" has for seventy years been the friend of the work and workers in the Lord's great gospel message to the world.

Much could be said for the "Review," but after all it is like a good dinner that has been extensively and strongly advertised, calling the attention of many to it, but only those made strong by it are the ones who take it themselves. Try it.

W. M. Healey.

Indispensable for Seventh-day Adventist Home-keeping

I have read the "Review and Herald" nearly as long as I have read anything. I regard it as one of the indispensables for Seventh-day Adventist home-keeping.

It is the digest of current news in the realm of the third angel's message. It is to us what the great metropolitan newspapers are to the communities where they are published. No periodical we publish, or book we issue, can take its place. Within its pages is chronicled week by week the progress of the message in all parts of the world.

If a man wishes to succeed in the ordinary affairs of life, it is expected that he will take and read some periodical that is published in the interest of the profession, trade, or avocation in which he may be engaged. Is he a bee-keeper, a poultry man, a stock raiser, carpenter, machinist, physician, lawyer, or teacher? If he is to succeed, there will be found on his center table such papers and periodicals as will be helpful to him along the line of his work. He will scan their pages for news, or suggestions, that will bring success and keep him in the front line of the work in which he is engaged.

Should "the children of this world be wiser in their generation than the children of light?" A worldly man in worldly business would hardly expect to be successful without some aid from these external helps.

Seventh-day Adventists are engaged in the greatest work in the world: the giving of the message is their only real business. The "Review" is the medium through which they speak to one another. It tells of the progress of the work in all parts of the world. Week by week it speaks of the battles fought, the victories gained, and the triumphs celebrated. It tells of the needs of the field, the health of comrades, brothers and sisters, at the front. It tells us of everything we need to know of the work and its advancement.

The Seventh-day Adventist who neglects to take and read the "Review" is like a man who fills his ears and eyes with putty, and then complains that he can neither see nor hear the advancement of the work.

Men seldom get behind in the message or grow cold in the work who read and digest the "Review."

The man who does not read the "Review" soon finds the pillar of cloud that is leading this work has passed on and left him. To the Egyptians who were behind the cloud it was black and an omen of evil. To the child of God, abreast or under the cloud it was glorious, and a symbol of God and victory.

The Lord asked His ancient people, "What could have been done more to my vineyard, that I have not done in it." What more can be said or done to persuade our brethren to come and partake of this feast of fat things, spread every week in the "Review." "Oh taste and see that it is good." Be willing to be persuaded. Do not reduce or lessen the rations for the spiritual man in order to increase the portion for the carnal one.

Send your subscription to-day. Do not wait.

E. W. Farnsworth.

The "Review" campaign. "Let's go!"

Some, But Not Many

Yes, occasionally we do meet them. Meet who?—Why, some Seventh-day Adventists who think they can get along without the "Review," and sometimes one even meets a preacher who will candidly tell you he is too busy preaching the message to read the "Review," a subscriber possibly, but too busy to even remove the wrapper. Too busy to read the daily paper, "Literary Digest," "Current History Magazine," etc.? No indeed! for an up-to-date preacher must be well informed.

But fortunately there are not very many like that. Some discerning ministers appreciate the "Review" so highly that they give their congregations sermons based entirely on "Review" articles, which is a tribute both to the good sense of the preacher and to the worth of the articles. But all of our members do not have the opportunity of listening to such sermons; yet all can have the regular weekly visits of the "Review" in their homes. All can receive the spiritual uplift, the encouragement and hope that comes to those who do read the "Review." Those who read the "Review" know what wonderful progress is being made in our foreign mission work, while those who do not read it know comparatively little about it.

Are you one of the few in the Southeastern California Conference who are missing the blessings of this weekly minister? If you are, we earnestly entreat you to join the "Review" ranks. You cannot afford to be without it. You cannot afford to deprive your family, your children, or yourself of the influence and help of our good church paper.

FIELD TIDINGS

INTER-MOUNTAIN

H. E. Lysinger, Pres. S. Donaldson, Sec.
Box 210, Grand Junction, Colo.

Delegates to the conference session should plan to reach the camp grounds not later than Friday, July 18, as it is hoped that we will begin our conference session Friday morning. Do not depend upon others being there, but make your plans to be present and help in outlining the future work of the conference.

Plans are being made to make the camp-meeting this year the best that we have had in missionary work, and we want you to come to learn with us how best to reach the hearts of the people. Two missionary volunteer meetings held each day are planned, and with the help that we hope for we can assure all our young people that they will not be disappointed if they attend camp meeting. We desire an opportunity to talk with you relative to your plans for the future, and urge you to attend during the entire time of the meeting.

Elder W. W. Eastman, assistant secretary of the General Conference Publishing Department, and Brother F. E. Painter, field missionary secretary for the Pacific Union Conference, are planning on spending the "big week" with us in colporteur work, and almost all our colporteurs are preparing for the "big week" so that all will be ready for a great drive. We want all of our people to spend some time in house-to-house work with the large books during "big week," July 13 to 19. Let us do our best to see that none who we might reach have been neglected during this special week of effort with our subscription books.

The conference committee has succeeded in securing perhaps the most desirable site in the city of Los Angeles for the camp meeting, to be held August 18 to 31. The location is at the northwest corner of Western and Melrose Avenues. The ground is accessible to both car systems which serve the city and suburbs.

Elder W. H. Green, secretary of the Negro department of the General Conference, arrived in Los Angeles Friday, June 27. The next day he addressed the Watts church in the forenoon, and the Furlong church (Los Angeles) in the afternoon. These churches appreciated the privilege of having Elder Green with them. He expects to visit other points on the Pacific Coast in the interest of the colored people, returning to Washington in time for the ministerial council.

Pomona Effort

Brother James Henry White sends the following from Pomona:

"The evangelistic company in Pomona is enjoying a regular attendance in excess of 200, and on Sunday evenings over 500. The faces of many are becoming familiar, and many hearts are enjoying the glad tidings of the gospel.

"Last Friday evening we were greatly favored by the presence of Brother Robert Saunders and his famous, old violin. Having advertised this feature extensively, the response was gratifying. Though a mass meeting was being held at the same hour, the larger attendance was at the tent—something over 500. This company listened attentively to the lecture of the evening, "Sixty Centuries of Progress," by Elder Philip Knox.

"The testing truths clustering about the Sabbath question were introduced Sunday evening and will occupy attention this week. Several names have been handed in with a request for literature.

"Twice a day the workers gather to study, plan, and pray for wisdom and guidance in their efforts. God's presence is with us, and we give Him all the glory for the blessings attending these meetings."

Compton Avenue Effort

Sunday evening, June 29, the tent located on Compton Avenue, Los Angeles, in charge of Elder J. W. Miller, was filled with a very attentive audience. Brother Owen Troy presented a musical program as a part of the evening's service. A male quartette, duet, soprano solo, violin selection, and full choir work prepared the hearts of the people for the evening's lecture.

Elder W. H. Green, secretary of the Negro Department of the General Conference, spoke on the subject of the resurrection. By a clear and powerful presentation of the truth, the pet, false theories of immediate reward at death were given a surprising exposure. Many present at this service, returned Tuesday and Wednesday evenings to hear Elder Green finish the prophetic story from the time of the first resurrection till the earth is made new.

The next night a health lecture was given by Dr. Ruth J. Temple, which was well attended. Only a small beginning could be made in the one evening, so the ladies were invited to return Wednesday evening at seven o'clock for a practical talk. A large company responded and intense interest was evinced in the plain instruction given. The sister who remarked she "would not have missed it for anything" expressed the minds of many. The Monday and Wednesday health talks will continue a part of the regular program.

BOOK WORK

A Last Word

Concerning the "big week"—the time is at hand, and we are depending on each worker to be in his place. The outlook for this special week is growing brighter. Quite a number of workers from the conferences, tract society offices, the publishing house and the College are going out with us, and we look for a record-breaking week. We are hoping that we may reach the $5,000 mark during this special week, and if each colporteur will put in 50 or more hours in faithful work, with the additional workers we will have in the field during this time, I believe that we can do it.

While reports for the month of June are not all in yet, those which have reached me indicate that our record for that month for the union conference will be close to $8,000, which is far the largest report we have ever had, and this was a camp meeting month, with many of our colporteurs out of the field attending these meetings.

With the "big week" coming in July, with no camp meetings except the Inter-Mountain, and with a larger force of workers in the field, I feel that we are perfectly safe in setting our goal for July at $10,000. So let us not only have a "big week," but let us make July a truly big month, in hours worked, in sales made, and in souls saved for the kingdom of God.

F. E. Painter.

A Good Reason

A sister we know recently asked her husband why he read the "Watchman Magazine." "Not two thirds advertising," was his comment, and then added, "it holds enough matter to make me read for an hour and think for a month."

Have you read "Bolshevism and Democracy" in the July "Watchman?" It is a most inspiring article on the second coming of Christ. This July issue should have a wide circulation. Order a few copies to-day.

Two New Books

Africa and India

Written by Men Now in the Field

Speaking of "On the Trail of Livingstone," Elder W. W. Eastman says:

"A copy of Brother Anderson's book 'On the Trail of Livingstone,' from your house, reached headquarters of the Publishing Department a few days ago. I began reading it at once, and could hardly stop until I finished it. Somehow there is something about the book and the way it is written that appeals to me from first to last more than any book I have ever read on missionary work in Africa. It should have a very wide circulation, both outside and within our denomination."

What one says of "On the Trail of Livingstone," other's say about
 "Fruit from the Jungle."

Over 3,000 of each have already been sold by the publishers. They are both in the Missionary Volunteer Reading Course this year.
