Charles Creacy lost his job. A supermarket chain executive told him that if he would not work on Saturday, he would be fired.

Charles was manager of the meat department in a large supermarket in Lawton, Oklahoma, and was required to work every Saturday. When he decided to make a stand for the Sabbath, he arranged his work schedule so he would have the day off. Saturdays had always been the busiest day for the grocery store, but within two weeks of Charles' taking the Sabbath off, meat sales began to go up. He would work late on Friday afternoon and go in early on Sunday morning to make sure the cases were filled.

The sales kept getting better and this brought some attention to Charles' department. The executive heard what was happening and when he learned that Charles was an Adventist and didn't work on Saturday, he went down to check it out. When challenged on his Sabbath keeping, Charles tried to defend his position, but he made it clear that he would not work on Saturday.

Thus he lost his family's only source of income. But he and his wife, Stacy, had something else—faith. They had Jesus on their side and were filled with peace.

When Stacy saw Charles Creacy three years ago, it was love at first sight. They met in the store (a different one) where Charles worked as a meat cutter. Stacy held a position as executive vice president for a general contracting company in Oklahoma City. Seven days later they were married.

They had everything they could ever want: high-paying jobs, a big beautiful home, two new cars, a jet boat, vacations, and lots of parties. Three months after they were married they were thrilled to find that Stacy was expecting a child.

Stacy already had a daughter, Stephanie, from a previous marriage.

Then a week later came the bad news. Stacy lost her $50,000-a-year job when the company went bankrupt as a result of the decline in the petroleum industry. She could find no other work. Charles' salary alone could not pay their bills. So they had no choice but to file for bankruptcy.

Stacy had grown up an Adventist, but when she started making it big with her career, religion was given a back seat. Although the Lord had been speaking to her heart all along, it was only in the crisis that she decided to listen. She turned to the Bible and found answers, and reassured Charles that God was in control.

Charles was promoted and moved to Lawton. This helped them to leave their embarrassing financial experience behind. Stacy began taking Jazek and Stephanie to Sabbath school. When a Revelation Seminar was scheduled, Stacy told Charles that if he would go to the seminar with her, it would be the best birthday present he could give her. He did so, and attended faithfully. After additional studies with the pastor, Don Fortner, he took his stand, which was followed so quickly by the loss of his job.

Failing to find work in Lawton, Charles knew they could not go for long without any income. They loaded up their children and their belongings and headed for Fort Worth, Texas, where Stacy's mother lived. An old friend told Charles about an advertisement he had seen of a job opening at Keene Distributors. He drove over and was hired as a truck driver.

They are now settled in Cleburne, Texas. They don't have a big house or fancy cars, but Jesus is a part of their lives. God continued to do marvelous things for them.

One Sabbath they were invited to give their testimony in the young adult Sabbath School, recently started at the Keene church. They felt impressed to pray before leaving home that they would make it safely there. Their car had some serious problems and they knew it was only a matter of time until it would stop running. They made it to Sabbath School and gave their testimony of how Christ has led them. It was an inspiration to those present. On the way home from church the breakdown came. As they called a friend for help they could only laugh, realizing that God had helped them make it to the church to meet their appointment.

They claim the promise, "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee: because he trusteth in thee." Isaiah 26:3. Stacy says, "If you ask the Lord for faith, you'd better be ready for what He will do in your life." ●

Healthfest '87 to be Held in Killeen Mall

Metroplex Hospital joins with Central Telephone Company and Killeen Mall in sponsoring Healthfest '87 which is scheduled for July 24-25 at the Mall.

Healthfest '87 is a free health screening and medical information exchange which was begun last year as an annual event. It features free films, displays, medical screenings, and free information from area health organizations.

Last year about 42,000 persons were in the mall during the Healthfest, according to Nance Travis, the Mall's marketing director. Because of that tremendous response in the first year, an even larger attendance is expected this year.

Metroplex Auxiliary Hosts Luncheon

The Metroplex Hospital Auxiliary recently hosted a benefit luncheon as part of a program to raise funds for the purchase of a mamography machine. About 350 persons attended the event at the Killeen Sheraton Hotel.

The Style Shop of Killeen and Lea's of Copperas Cove provided garments for a fashion show. The models were the wives of physicians and members of the Metroplex Hospital Foundation, and Rosamma Joseph and Lilian Blankenship (Metroplex physicians). The show was organized by Mrs. Franklin House.

Houma Church Helps with Community Food Bank

Unemployment in southeast Louisiana has hovered around the 20-percent mark since the plunge of OPEC oil prices sent the domestic oil industry into a tailspin. With lost jobs came poverty, hunger, and loss of homes.

Sister Miriam Mitchell, Catholic Social Services director, envisioned a cooperative effort among the churches of Terrebonne Parish (county) to help those in need. In her soft Irish accent she asked the pastors attending the ministerial association to invite lay persons to attend an organizational meeting.

William and Sharon Burchard and Roger Fitch, of the Houma church, were the Adventist delegates. William was surprised when he was selected as chairman of the board of what was to become Terrebonne Churches United, with 28 cooperating congregations.

After eight months of hard work, William cut the ribbon on May 17 to open the food bank set up in a building provided by a local businessman. Prayers of dedication were offered at the open house by a Catholic priest, an Episcopal priest, and the Seventh-day Adventist pastor. The Houma Courier carried more than 30 column-inches front page coverage.

The next day, Rae Reta Peel, the Houma pastor's wife, and their daughter Cindy were on duty to greet the first applicants for aid. About ten members of the Houma church have received training to screen and counsel needy applicants.

While food is distributed to meet emergency needs, William says that one of the goals of the organization is to ensure that the needy do not become dependent on the free food. Counsel and guidance are given to help people, as far as possible, to become self-reliant.

Shreveport South Reports Baptism

Three persons were received into membership in the Shreveport South church during the Sabbath worship service on May 16, 1987.

Shenika Williams has attended the church with her family since she was a small girl. She was baptized following studies with her pastor, Jerry Oster.

The other two new members were converted as a result of a Revelation

Seminar conducted by Jim Crooms, a church elder, and Pastor Oster. Gloria Nielsen had attended a number of churches without having joined any of them. After attending the Seminar, she began attending South Church and chose to make this her church home.

Jeff Fuller recently had a conversion experience and was baptized in a church of another denomination. About this time Mike Salzman, South Church treasurer, invited Jeff's father to the Revelation Seminar. He was not much interested but he took a handbill home and showed it to Jeff, who in his enthusiasm over his new experience in Christ, attended, and in due time united with South Church.

Clinton Church Gives Nutrition Class

The Clinton, Arkansas, church recently sponsored a series of five nutrition classes in the Community Center, with Howard and Ruth Doss as instructors. All who attended could see the demonstrations and taste the results.

A great interest was shown in nutrition and a vegetarian diet, by the 30 persons who attended, about one-third of whom were nonmembers.

Champion to be Featured At Camp Yorktown Bay

Scott Green, an Adventist Christian water skier and a national champion, will be a special guest at the Camp Yorktown Bay Waterskiing Camp, July 26-31, 1987.

Scott began water skiing at four years of age, and eight years later he started training seriously for tour-namment and show skiing. This brought problems because of his strong personal religious convictions.

"I've never been on water skis on Saturday," he says. "I was brought up a Seventh-day Adventist, and as I grew up I came to the personal conclusion that I was going to stick to those beliefs."

In 1978 Scott participated in the Midwest Regionals in Minneapolis. On Thursday his points for the trick skiing were far beyond his nearest competitor. On Friday he was again ahead in the slalom competition. Then his jump was scheduled for Sabbath!

The temptation was strong, but he petitioned the judges to schedule his jump for Sunday or waive this event, allowing him to progress toward his goal of the U.S. Nationals. The judges proposed a compromise: "Put on your skis at the starting dock on Saturday and let the boat pull you out of the water; then throw the handle, and we'll mark you as if you had jumped."

What to do? Scott had put all his energy, emotion, and extra money into this sport, and the Nationals were within his grasp—if it weren't for the Sabbath! Scott decided not to ski on the Sabbath.

As a result of a massive letter-writing campaign to the American Water Skiing Association, Saturday events were waived for Scott's benefit. Consequently Scott Green holds many national and regional title championships.

Scott runs his own concrete business in Orlando, Florida, and is a design and test consultant for Connally Skis. He is employed also at Orlando Sea World, and services all of the professional Connally skiers.

Meet Scott Green personally, hear his testimony, and watch his private ski show at Camp Yorktown Bay's Family Camp and Waterskiing Camp, July 26 to August 2. For information, call or write Pastor Ron at 318/631-6240. P.O. Box 31000, Shreveport, Louisiana 71130.

People Have Fun at CYB Work Week

Every spring Camp Yorktown Bay invites anyone and everyone to spend a week helping the camp's full-time staff to clean, repair, and do preventive maintenance work at the camp. Ron Whitehead, conference youth director, appreciated their work so much he said he would double their salaries if they will return in the spring of 1988.

Among this year's crew was Roy Cole of Gentry, Arkansas, retired teacher who celebrated his 93rd birthday during work week.

The date for the 1988 annual Work Week is tentatively set for March 28 to April 1. Everyone is invited. Motel room and board is free.

Breathe Free Launched in Midland

John Barroso, D.D.S., held his first Breathe-Free Plan to Stop Smoking recently at Midland College, Midland, Texas. Because of the differences in this new program from the old Five-Day Plan, he wanted to keep it small to become acquainted with the new format. So it was not advertised except by word of mouth and a few posters.

And small it was! Five persons showed up on the first night, but five graduated, smoke-free on the final evening! Because of the small group, close friendships were formed; the meetings were casual; and there was much discussion and many questions asked.

One of the participants was Trish Sandoval, a manager at Sam's Wholesale Club in Midland. Her boss readily gave her time off to get help to stop smoking. He also told the rest of the employees not to smoke around Trish. Her fellow employees made sure she drank her juice and water every day. She says there was no way she could have smoked even if she had wanted to. Her boss also said that if she was successful, he and the other smoking employees would attend the next Breathe-Free Plan.

Midland College has put the Breathe-Free Plan in their adult education class schedule, and it will be offered on a regular basis. The next one will be advertised on television and radio, and the 100-seat lecture hall in the Health-Science Building will probably be filled, since public interest seems so great.

Albuquerque Heights Pathfinders Go and Do

In January, members of the Albuquerque Heights church were treated to a Pathfinder Day service. The young people presented a program which included a demonstration of Indian sign language and the singing of "Jesus Loves Me" in Navajo.

This Pathfinder Club of 14 boys and four girls in four units directed by Anne Wham, assisted by a group of devoted helpers, is very active. Since September they have had a share-your-faith activity almost every month. For Thanksgiving they collected food and distributed food baskets to some local families, one of which had 14 children.

They are working on a number of Adventist Junior Youth honors including Indian lore, wood carving, pottery, and basket weaving. A fundraising dinner is scheduled to provide the club with tents. Hikes and overnight trips are being planned.

The Pathfinder Club provides these boys and girls with many opportunities to take an active part in their church. Their leaders realize that they are the future of the church.

Medical Van Visits Muskogee

When the Muskogee church was notified that the Southwest Region Medical-Dental Van was available to them, they went into action.

Ira Gilliam, Muskogee personal ministries leader, began making phone calls. Instructions from Vera Wolfe, Oklahoma Conference Community Services director and John Hope, director of the van, led to more phoning to schedule physicians, dentists, and nurses.

Eight local dentists and many more physicians offered their services. Martha Mathis, a nurse at Hastings Indian Hospital in Tahlequah brought six other nurses.

On opening day at 9 a.m. the big white van with its sign advertising Seventh-day Adventist Community Services Health Screening was parked at the front door of Wal-Mart. Already a line had formed—a line that continued for two days. Periodically, registration had to be stopped until the people inside could be cared for. People from six states, ranging in age from 5 to 89 years, availed themselves of the services. They were so impressed that many volunteered offerings to help with the expenses. One man gave a $20 bill.

More than 50 stores placed posters in their windows advertising the van's presence. Both local radio stations repeatedly broadcast its servi-

Okeene Students Enjoy School

Being sorry to see school close for summer vacation would be a lot to ask of any student. But missing the teacher is something that makes Seventh-day Adventist schools special.

Students at the Okeene Adventist School agree that they will miss their teacher, Kathy Lorenz, and all the things she does for them. It has been an exciting year, and being in a farming community has helped. The students have dissected a lamb, learning about the different organs and how Classroom study came alive during the study of sound and how it moves as well as the human body, changes it makes, and hereditary traits. Numerous experiments have added to the desire to learn.

Care for their school prompted the youth to help with several fund raising projects, under the leadership of Jeffrey Schnell and Jacob Schellenberg.

Brownsville English Church Dedicated

On Sabbath, May 30, the Brownsville English church was dedicated debt-free. Sacrificial giving, a garage sale, International Food Fair, and much prayer and hard work made this possible, for God's glory. Jac Colon, Valley/Coastal Bend Area administrator, preached and assisted in the dedication. Jeff Brown is the pastor.

A fellowship potluck, baptism, special music, and the visit of the San Benito church made a full program. Elder Colon challenged the church not to relax after this great accomplishment, but to go forward in public and personal evangelism.

Jeff Brown, Brownsville pastor, and Jac Colon, area administrator, hold a cardboard model of the church. The model was burned as part of the church dedication.

Venden Speaks to Baptist Congregation

Morris Venden, senior pastor of the Keene church, has been preaching righteousness by faith in Seventh-day Adventist churches and camp meetings for a lot of years. He is probably the best-known minister we have on this subject. He has been in most if not all of the United States as well as other countries.

In April, Elder Venden was the featured speaker for a Dalton, Georgia, Baptist congregation. Pastor David Henderson first heard Venden on WSMC, radio station of Southern College, Collegedale, Tennessee, and then attended a Venden week of prayer series at Southern College. He was excited about the righteousness by faith concepts and invited Venden to hold a revival in his Dalton church. "You may be surprised at my openness toward Seventh-day Adventists, but I grew up on the Voice of Prophecy and later married a granddaughter of one of your members," said Henderson.

Dalton Adventists were invited by the Baptist pastor to attend their revival so the audience was a healthy mix of Adventists and Baptists. The Dalton Adventist church is planning a follow-up Venden series next year in their church. At this time they will invite the Baptist congregation to join them.

Everman Adventurers Invested

The Everman Pathfinder club, under the direction of Ellen Klinke, held the first investiture service for an Adventurer club in Texas, last month. (The Adventurer club is composed of children of pre-Pathfinder age.) Enthusiasm was high on all levels as Adventurers, Friends, and Builders were acknowledged for their accomplishments.

FAST FACTS

- The summer youth programs are well under way. They began Sunday, June 14, as the adventurous 8-10-year-olds, aptly called the Adventurers Club, assembled in the Nameless Valley Ranch cafeteria, wide-eyed and slightly solemn. Not all were novices. Some looked and felt very much at home and they managed to convey confidence to the new recruits. Apprehension dies quickly when there are so many wonderful things to see and do. Boys and girls began checking in early and there were 108 registered by the 5:00 p.m. deadline.
- Have you read They're All Dead Aren't They? Don't miss it—a remarkable true story written by a remarkable young lady.
- Camp meeting—specialized sermons, magnificent music, workable workshops, and Christian camaraderie. It's wonderful for adults but what about the young people? Especially the younger ones? In spite of a few loose ends the garment of programming got knitted and the kids loved the end result. The children's leaders who only enjoyed camp meeting through the eyes of their youthful charges, are appreciated. If you were one of those leaders, remember—you can buy tapes of all of the sermons from Tim Culver, Prison Ministries Department.

“Go to the Lord In Prayer”

One day, I was thinking about what to do with my life, when something told me to ask the Lord what I really ought to do.

I had this funny feeling that I had never had before. I didn't know what to do or even what to say, but this voice said again: “Go to the Lord in prayer.”

I then knew that the voice was a heavenly angel sent down from above. I took the advice, and now know what it was talking about.

So, if you ever want to understand something, just ask the Lord in prayer.

You will surely see wonders if you pray. And if you do pray and ask for the Lord to help, then you will see the light, and you will understand one day.

Hairdresser's Project Sends Bibles to Prison

Diana Perryman, a hairdresser in Keene, wanted to do something to help Texas Prison Ministries. Here, in her own words, is her story.

“I felt weak and small about the idea of trying to help the Lord's work in Texas prisons. After having read Romans 8:24-25, I knew it really didn't matter about those feelings. It was only my 'hope' that counts and the Lord would do the rest.

Diana Perryman, who raised money for Bibles for prisoners.

“On February 23, I held a cutathon fund raiser. For a $10 donation to Texas Prison Ministries I would give someone a haircut. From 9:00 a.m. until 1:00 p.m. no one came in, but by 6:00 p.m., I had $50. Knowing the money will go to purchase Bibles for prisoners (at $1.50 per Bible), it's a nice beginning!”

SAN ANTONIO PATHFINDERS (Highland Hills and Durango Spanish), at the end of their Great Texas Bike Hike on the track of the Lackland Air Force Base parade ground. The event was organized by Joe Garcia, Highland Hills Pathfinder director. Use of the track was granted by the Base Commander.

Our summer classes for new students run July 27 to August 21.

Your grades can sizzle in Intro to Business taught by Alan Weis (you've seen him in Insight ads); in Intro to Chemistry with Dr. Barbara Jones (you've seen her in Insight, too); or in Life and Teachings of Jesus with Dr. Mel Underhill.

To tell you the truth, it's pretty cool to get a head start at a hot college - Southwestern Adventist College.

OLÉ!

Finally, true south-of-the-border flavor in all-natural entrees!

Try new Mexican Entrees from Natural Touch®—four savory combinations made with real cheeses, whole pinto beans and vegetable protein. They're meat-free, but sizzling with more natural flavor than you can shake a sombrero at.

You'll find them in your store's frozen-food section. Just heat and serve with your choice of mild tomato or zesty green chile sauces (both included). Try all four, amigos!
