

Student evangelists and Bible workers who worked in Laurel, Md., during the past school year

Dr. B. G. Wilkinson
Dean of Theology

Dr. Wilkinson, Dean of the School of Theology of Washington Missionary College is also Educational Secretary for the Columbia Union.

In his dual office the doctor is in constant touch with the needs of the field, and guides the students in the selection of the training that will best fit him for that specific service.

STUDENT EVANGELISTS

The Theological efforts of Washington Missionary College this past winter were conducted by 14 Theological students. So great was the interest that others, as musicians and medical workers were invited to participate. Up to date, over twenty have decided to obey the truth.

At Laurel, Md., where one of the efforts was held, only a handful of believers met each Sabbath in the church before the meetings began. Now the church is filled and the building found too small. Some weeks as high as eighty people receive Bible readings.

Splendid interest and success also attend the endeavors of the students at McLean, Va. The interest there grows apace. Photos on this page show those students engaged in these two efforts.

THE THEOLOGICAL COURSE

The Theological Course of Washington Missionary College aims to give to its students training of the highest practical nature. It aims to equip its graduates in such a way that they can take hold immediately wherever called. During the past years every graduate has received a call to enter the regular ranks of the ministry.

The Bible and Theological studies of this department are up to date. They instruct the student in the latest issues of the Kingdom, magnifying before him the ways of salvation necessary to meet the conditions of today. The candidates in this course are trained under skilled supervision to go into places around Washington and open evangelistic services and bring people into the truth. Each year success has crowned these student efforts. The subjects taught in this field of study are those necessary for successful training in soul winning. The enrollment in this course for the past year was forty-two.

CHERRY BLOSSOMS—Over 3,000 trees of 12 different varieties form the dazzling picture that each year attracts thousands of visitors to Washington.

Washington is well known as a center of many advantages to the student. Why not avail yourself of them? Theology, science, art, literature, and many other subjects are taught during the year at the college. So wishes may take.

THE FOLGER LIBRARY—Situated just across the street from the Library of Congress this comparatively new institution bids fair to become as popular and as useful as it is beautiful.

NURSING EDUCATION COURSE

Washington Missionary College is offering, among its various courses, a five-year course in Nursing Education in cooperation with the Washington Sanitarium and Hospital School of Nursing. The first year of this course is given at W. M. C., the next two and one half years at the Sanitarium, and the last year and one half at the College.

The course finished makes the student eligible for a degree of Bachelor of Science in Nursing, and fits the nurse for work in teaching, nursing supervision and administrative work.

NORMAL

The Columbia Union Conference has approximately 2,000 pupils enrolled in her church schools under the direction of 113 teachers. This teaching staff undergoes a complete turnover every 6 years, making an average demand of 18 new teachers each year.

A strong course is offered here at Washington Missionary College in Normal work. A training school with some 150 pupils is conducted and able critic teachers are in attendance.

A high degree of efficiency is maintained. Teachers entering the work in this Union must hold certificates from the Educational Department of the Columbia Union.
