The rapid expansion of our educational and medical institutions makes additional housing for students and staff a necessity. Some of the institutions find it necessary to incur indebtedness in order to provide this housing. Because the self-liquidating nature of the indebtedness incurred on dormitories and housing reduces the risk,

VOTED, That institutions may be permitted to borrow funds for the construction of dormitories and other housing for students or staff for repayment over a ten-year period instead of a three-year period as heretofore, with the following stipulations:

1. That approval be secured from the North American Division Committee on Administration on each project before it is begun.
2. That the institution shall have a substantial equity in the project before authorization is granted to borrow.
