....MOODS OF MARCH....

People scurrying by--
Collars turned up high--
Snowflakes on the fly--
It's March.

Came in like a lion--
Snow will soon be dyin'--
There'll be no more sighin'--
It's March.

Flowers you've been keeping
Will, 'fore long, be peeping
From their beds of sleeping--
It's March.

Like a lamb she's going--
'Bye to winter's snowing--
Feel that spring breeze blowing?--
It's March!!

Tips

TOOTHsome, WHOLESOME FOOD

"Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." What better rule can we have to guide us? Let us choose foods which are rich in the vitamins so essential to good health.

One Glass of Tomato Juice Contains

as much Vitamin C as three oranges
as much Vitamin B as three yeast cakes
as much Vitamin A as one teaspoon of cod-liver oil

Tomato Juice Cocktail

1 No. 2 can ( $2\frac{1}{2}$  cups) tomato juice      Juice of  $\frac{1}{2}$  lemon
 $\frac{1}{2}$  teaspoon minced onion      1 teaspoon chopped celery
Combine ingredients in covered jar; salt to taste;
shake well and chill. Serves six.

Music hath charms for the stenographers, or so it would seem, judging by the number who are buying concert tickets these days. And since this is the trend, why not learn more about music and its composers, the better to appreciate it? Never before have there been at our fingertips so many books on the greatest of the arts—music.

On the market are many books of interest even to those who can't peck out "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean" with one finger. Here are a few: "Fun with Music" by Sigmund Spaeth (very new), "The Layman's Music Book" by Olga S. Stokowski, "Common Sense of Music" by Sigmund Spaeth, "Famous Composers" by Nathan Haskell, "Enchanting Jenny Lind" by Laura Benet, "Finlandie: The Story of Sibelius" by Elliott Arnold. Drop by the library soon and go away with one of these books tucked under your arm.

INTRODUCING—

Professor M. E. Kern's new secretary and the assistant registrar for the Seminary, a girl who says we'd better not ask her what she thought of Washington February 7 (the day she arrived). She was until lately a stenographer in the Wisconsin Book and Bible House. Before her graduation in 1940 she assisted in the Registrar's office at Emmanuel Missionary College. Her home is in Chicago.

She's one girl who doesn't "just adore scrapbooks" —courageous, isn't she? Instead, her chief like is bicycling. She doesn't know whether to have her bike sent here or not. The traffic seems to be the problem. Maybe she'll need some means of transportation to take her sight-seeing, for this is her first time in Washington. Better get that bicycle, EUNICE ROZEMA. You might need it.

Were you among the privileged persons who heard the Western Union messenger boy sing "Happy Birthday" to Irma Lee on Friday, February 21? It's a unique idea, and those who listened in wished they might be likewise favored.

Thelma Durrell and Edna Edeburn enjoyed Jascha Heifetz' concert at Constitution Hall on Sunday, February 23.

Another birth date has been added to the popular month of February. Sylvia Joan Steinman, who is the newest on the list, arrived Tuesday afternoon, February 4, and was heartily welcomed by Dorothy and Donald Steinman. Some day, perhaps, this six-pound-ten-ounce little girl will hold honors with the famous people of the month.

Mable Hinkhouse, with Ruth Conard, attended the February meeting of the Professional Writers' Club. This was their monthly meeting, held at the YWCA, and visitors are welcome. Ruth is a member of the club and Mable may join soon. She also plans to join the National League of American Pen Women.

Saturday evening, February 22, a surprise party was given in Irma Lee Hewett's honor at the home of Mrs. Robert Eldridge. After a delightful evening of games and refreshments, the guests departed, wishing Irma Lee many more happy birthdays. The guests were: Mable Hinkhouse, Esther Benton, Lucille Fenger, Minnie and Mintie Truitt, Sara Grant, Vesta Webster, Alice Love, Mildred Davis, Mrs. Casey, Dolly Long, Helen Bihlman, Thelma Durrell, Elaine Eldridge, Alice LaBonte, and the guest of honor.

Miss Lois Burnett has just returned from a week's trip to the Hinsdale Sanitarium and Emmanuel Missionary College.

Thoughts to Treasure

Remember the struggle you had the last time you packed your suitcase? The top would not shut in spite of heroic effort, and you were forced to decide what to take out. I am in just such a dilemma. What to leave out! I have been allotted a page in which to give a resume of our first two lectures. How can I pack into a few words even the gist of what was said in two hours?

Mrs. H. Lyle Campbell defined personality as "the way we affect other people." She reminded us that there is a difference between personality and character. A person may have a very fascinating personality, but a poor character. But that rather elusive quality--charm--goes deeper. A charming personality is founded on a fine character. Of course, all those with fine characters are not charming, but they may be if they will practice kindness, courtesy, self-control. They must develop their imaginations, have a genuine liking for people, build up their knowledge of human nature. A charming person studies her type and dresses accordingly--sophisticated, romantic, picturesque, patrician, exotic, athletic, modern, conventional. As a final admonition to those who wish to have charm, Mrs. Campbell said, "Do not add to the poison already in the world."

Elder D. E. Rebok brought to us a number of amusing, although interesting, customs of the people in the land of his adoption. He said that the secret of making a successful missionary to the Chinese could be summed up in the words "We Chinese." The "white man" must become one with the people. Do not try to change the customs of the country, Elder Rebok admonished--500,000,000 people have been doing things the Chinese way for four thousand years. When you have a Chinese friend you have one who will always remember you and always serve you well.

Those who missed these lectures missed a delightful time, as well as some inspiring and practical instruction. Come to our next ones and receive the inspiration that comes through the personal touch.

The foursome living at 210 Tulip Avenue are holding open house, and would enjoy a visit from each one of the Keepers. These "house-keepers" are: Alice Love, Mildred Davis, Sara Grant, and Vesta Webster.

On Thursday evening, February 20, several of the girls from the office went to Constitution Hall to hear the much-talked of Dorothy Thompson. At a few minutes past eight onto the stage came this gray-haired, vibrant, commanding personality. In the group accompanying her was Mrs. Roosevelt, who presided as chairman of the Town Hall.

One thing she said was to the effect that we are either about ready for emancipation or are on the brink of an abyss. Every day we should be grateful for our knowledge of coming events, and should do all we can to improve that knowledge and through God's help prepare ourselves to meet the crisis.

Opportunity: Don't miss Mary Chittick's lecture on Interior Decorating, scheduled for 7:45 p.m., Tuesday, March 11, in the Review and Herald chapel. May we remind you that the Keepers voted to have these lectures, and each girl should feel that to attend these interesting sessions is both her opportunity and her responsibility.
