Thoughts on the Bicentennial, Part 1

Let us all, during the coming months, study carefully the character, study the qualities of the men who founded this Nation. Let us try to grasp the stuff that was inside of each of them and all of them collectively. And then, let us release, if we can, the same spirit within ourselves. We have the same capacity for unity, discipline, and sacrifice. Let us show the world that the character and quality of the American people has not changed in 200 years.

Gerald R. Ford

38th President of the United States
Philadelphia, 1974

The year 1976, belonging to the Bicentennial anniversary of the independence of the United States of America, is one-third over. Those of us whose privilege it is to be American citizens during this memorable time in our nation's history have been asked to take notice of the Bicentennial year—to engage in serious exploration of the issues that are fundamental to our society. We have been asked to examine our heritage, our present in light of the past, and our future, to determine the direction of our thinking and of our goals.

The invitation has been extended to every individual American throughout the land to participate in a nationwide dialogue about our country—what it is, how it got that way, where it is headed. 1976 offers a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity for everyone to become involved. A free people, to remain free, must continually reexamine themselves.

Since 1966, when Congress established an American Bicentennial Commission, now known as the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration, preparations have been under way to create a three-pronged celebration that would, through its diversity, include every group and every culture within the nation; through its distinctiveness engender hundreds of creative new programs; and through its direction awaken a new understanding of the meaning of America. This new awareness would be the result of commemorating an idea—not a war.

The three basic components of the Bicentennial observance, as outlined by the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration are:

HERITAGE '76—a summons to recount the events of our heritage and place them in their historical perspective.

FESTIVAL U.S.A.—a nationwide opportunity to program activities and events to encourage our citizens to expand their knowledge of our country.

HORIZONS '76—a nationwide challenge to every American, acting individually or with others, to undertake at least one principal project which manifests the pride, the priorities, and the hopes of his community.

Never in peacetime has there been any greater opportunity for reflection and for renewal as now in this nation. Committed to God and Country—how is it with you?

Lake Union Conference 14th Business Session

Story and pictures by Ernie Wendth

More than 200 Seventh-day Adventists from Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, and Michigan met in the Atkinson Hotel in downtown Indianapolis, April 18 to 21, for the 14th Business Session of the Lake Union Conference.

They were church administrators, local ministers, educators, and lay persons of the union's five local conferences, and they were there to hear reports of the progress of the church during the past quinquennium and to elect union administrators, departmental leaders, and members of five different boards for the next five-year period.

The full report of the work of the church in the past five years was published in the April 20 issue of the Lake Union Herald. Highlights of the progress were incorporated into a special multimedia program presented during the opening evening. Then representatives for the various necessary committees were selected and the work of naming leaders and caring for other necessary business began. The nominating committee soon brought back its recommendation that Elder Bock be reelected as union president. The entire delegation unanimously approved of the motion and Bock then joined that committee to give whatever counsel was necessary to assist in the selection of his associates and assistants for the coming quinquennium.

Later the delegates reelected the current union staff with the exception of J. W. Proctor, who announced his retirement. Some additions or changes were referred to the Executive Committee for more careful study. One such item was the continuing search for a qualified individual to care for the growing and demanding work of the religious liberty department.

Such business sessions of the church are also planned to bring mini-refresher courses to denominational workers attending. This year four seminars were held stressing special needs in evangelism, the family and the home, pastoral counseling, and youth ministry. Eight to nine hundred ministers, their wives, and other church workers were present for the discussions. Those leading out were from the General Conference, SDA educational institutions, or special guests with specific expertise.

The seminar periods plus the numerous spiritual presentations during the entire session helped to meet the spiritual and professional needs of the church workers. Ministers, their wives, and other church leaders returned to their homes knowing they had a part in the democratic process of electing their church leaders and feeling better able to meet the day by day needs of their "flocks."

Conventions of any nature call for long-range organization and careful preparation. Housing accommodations for hundreds of people with varying needs must be arranged. Proper meeting rooms with adequate seating prepared and marked. Program materials must be available at the registration tables. Complicated equipment for the multimedia program set up and tested.

And then the host administrator, in this case Elder G. W. Morgan, president of the Indiana Conference, must welcome the delegates and visitors and appear as if caring for the myriad of organizational details had presented no presession headaches or tensions to himself, his staff, or members of the union administration.

The Adventist church operates business sessions on all levels in a democratic fashion. Groups of delegates caucus to name representatives to serve on the various committees needed to conduct the work of the session. Among the various groups who caucused were four student observers from Andrews University. One of their number sat in with the nominating committee chaired by Elder Neal Wilson of the General Conference.

Women were present and active in many ways during the four days of the business meetings and professional training for church workers. Wilma Mayor of Pontiac, Michigan, and a member of the Michigan Conference Executive Committee, served as the secretary for one of the major committees. Wives of some of the delegates were busy keeping their preschool children occupied and happy while others, now free of this type of activity, were able to be productive while still enjoying the meetings. ● After Elder Neal Wilson publicly congratulated Elder Lowell Bock, union conference president, on his reelection, Elder Bock introduced his wife, Merlo, to the audience. ● Among the guest speakers bringing spiritual messages to the delegates and visitors were Elders Neal Wilson and C. E. Bradford, both of the General Conference. ● Indiana Pathfinders assisted in the Pledge of Allegiance, and students from Indiana Academy presented a special program of musical selections.

The ministerial council featured seminars designed to further the educational growth of the ministers, their wives, and other participants. Colin D. Standish, president of Columbia Union College, gave instruction in pastoral counseling. The seminar on youth ministry was chaired by Elder E. Wayne Shepperd, youth director of the Lake Union Conference. He was joined by Elder Richard E. Barron of the General Conference youth department and Elder C. D. Martin, also of the General Conference. Dr. D. W. Holbrook, president of Home Study Institute, and his wife, Betty, led a lively seminar on family and home relationships within the SDA church. Guest speaker from Andrews University, Dr. Elden Chalmers of the Department of Church and Ministry at the Seminary, gave enlightening insights into the psychological aspects of pastoral counseling.

A special meeting of the Andrews University Board was called to be held during the Union Session for the purpose of selecting a new president of the growing educational complex at Berrien Springs. Dr. Richard Hammill has been called to world leadership as a general vice president. Elder Robert H. Pierson, General Conference president, explained to the delegates the value to the world field of a top administrator with educational background. After proper deliberation, the Board elected as its new university president, Dr. Grady Smoot. He and Elder Bock, vice president of the Board, began immediately to lay strong plans for continued development of the graduate and undergraduate programs of the university.

39 Seconds of Terror

by Howard D. Burbank

The town clock in Guatemala City stopped at exactly 3:03 a.m., February 4, 1976. Just 39 seconds later the greatest recorded earthquake in the Western Hemisphere, measuring 7.5 on the Richter scale, had taken its deadly toll. Latest official reports show 22,402 dead, 74,415 injured, and 1,160,969 homeless. The damage was incredible. The loss of life was appalling, and human suffering was beyond description.

Seventh-day Adventist World Service (SAWS) in Washington, D.C., went to work immediately. Our only means of communication here at the General Conference headquarters was through amateur radio, owned and operated by Elder Ed Peterson of the Review and Herald. The voice of Elder Bob Folkenberg, SAWS representative and president of the Central American Union, who is a "ham" operator, came through loud and clear. He described the devastation of the country and the needs of the people.

Exactly 74 hours and 57 minutes after the quake SAWS's first chartered Pan American Boeing 707 cargo carrier landed in Guatemala City with 100 tents, 7,000 blankets, 15 tons of clothes, 50 gas lanterns, pots, pans, bandages, splints, and medical supplies. SAWS personnel in both eastern and western depots worked night and day to get these relief supplies ready for transporting.

Additional space was purchased on Pan American and Aviãteca flights for 175 more tents. A few days later another Pan American SAWS charter flight touched down in Guatemala City with an additional 500 tents, 7,000 blankets, and 18 tons of clothing.

In those early hours the words "Emergency SAWS Board Meeting" seemed to be announced frequently on the General Conference intercom, as the board met to authorize additional shipments and money to purchase food for this tremendous operation. Food from U.S. AID stocks in CARE and Catholic Relief Service warehoused in Guatemala was also authorized by the State Department for SAWS's use in feeding 5,000 people per day in the disaster area. To date the church has distributed more than 150 tons of food.

Inter-America's SAWS representative, Sergio Moctezuma, went immediately to Guatemala. President B. L. Archbold of the Division requested further help for the stricken country. In those early hours there was no way of knowing the complete havoc wrought by this capricious catastrophe. When the full impact reached SAWS headquarters, the SAWS Board decided to send the manager to the disaster area as liaison and coordinator between the other volunteer organizations, the Guatemalan government, and the United States government, through U.S. AID.

I arrived Friday afternoon, February 13, and was appalled at what I saw. Guatemala City was in an unbelievable condition and the interior towns were worse. Elder Folkenberg flew us out in the union plane to Chimaltenango, a city with a population of 20,000. Seventy-five percent of the homes were completely destroyed. Union and mission personnel were working round the clock, making ready and distributing tons of food and clothing. They had already erected five tent cities.

Dr. Lang of Loma Linda University was on hand giving leadership to the teams of Seventh-day Adventist doctors, nurses, and technicians. Each one had paid his own transportation and had volunteered for service. Dr. Bob Shere furnished planes for transportation and had flown down thousands of dollars worth of medical supplies and expensive orthopedic equipment so necessary for the thousands of injured.

On Monday morning, February 16,

Howard D. Burbank is the executive secretary and manager of Seventh-day Adventist World Service, Inc. (SAWS) headquartered in Washington, D.C.

the SAWS/OFASA truck was loaded with clothing, blankets, and other supplies which had been sorted and placed in plastic bags the day before for our trip to San Martin, Jilotepeque. A report from U.S. AID indicated that the people in this town in the mountains were suffering tremendously because of the cold nights in the high altitude, the temperature dropping to freezing. Some of the children were dying from exposure. We drove as far as we could, which was about 10 kilometers from the town. Here the road went up over the quake fault and came to an abrupt stop. We had to unload the blankets and clothing and carry them on our backs three quarters of a mile across the fault to the other side, where we transferred them to another truck.

Upon arriving in this city of 33,000 people we found the main street lined with victims waiting for clothing and blankets. Every home had been completely destroyed!

As we distributed the supplies Elder H. M. Jurado asked the people how many had lost loved ones. Ninety-nine percent of the hands went up. We wept. It was a sight I shall never forget, for 2,904 people had died here in just 39 seconds.

The work isn't over yet, for now comes the tedious job of rebuilding. When we will have completed our work in Guatemala, the relief sent and the cash expended by SAWS on this one disaster will amount to just more than three-quarters of a million dollars. We are now furnishing supplies to help rebuild homes. This is now the most urgent need, for the rainy season will soon arrive.

This has been the most extensive operation SAWS has ever undertaken. Not only have the people and government of Guatemala, and the U.S. State Department indicated their sincere appreciation of SAWS's work as one of the major volunteer organizations, but the Wall Street Journal of February 27, 1976, mentioned our unique clothing program in which our Community Service Centers with "tender loving care" provided the clothing for our worldwide shipments. The article quotes Bill Swindell of the Red Cross commenting on the avalanche of unusable clothing sent to Guatemala: "I think people are just cleaning out their closets and bathroom cabinets and sending us whatever they find. (The Seventh-day Adventists, on the other hand, not only collect used clothing but also clean it, mend it, and sort it by size, sex, and season. It is then baled according to size and warehoused until needed. Handled in this manner, used clothing is quite valuable after a disaster, relief workers say, and the Seventh-day Adventists have sent 500 such bales to Guatemala.)" We have now sent 1,000 bales. But this is only part of the ever-increasing help given by SAWS around the world.

Not only is SAWS working in this disaster-stricken country, but during the past year SAWS helped to alleviate suffering in many other lands. In 1975 SAWS carried on its operation in more than 40 different countries. Last year disaster relief and continuing help amounted to just over $3.7 million.

In addition to the Disaster and Famine Relief Offering last year ($700,000) some $3 million came from government agencies, philanthropic organizations, commercial organizations, and a host of friends. What better way can you invest your dollars in alleviating human suffering when you find that the dollar is stretched so far to help so many with so much?

May 8 is the day for the Disaster and Famine Relief Offering. This will be received around the world. We know that as time grows short disasters will multiply. Will you not give sacrificially now to help in this Christ-centered work? Let us swell the offering this year to a million dollars. We have so much.

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me" (Matthew 25:40).

ADVENTIST CHURCH MOVES SOUTH AMERICAN OFFICE

The headquarters of the South American Division has moved from Montevideo, Uruguay, to Brasilia, the capital of Brazil. According to Roger Wilcox, former president of the division, the move was necessary because of a church membership shift. "When the division was founded in 1916," Wilcox said in Washington, "over 90 percent of the membership on the continent was in Argentina, Paraguay, and Uruguay. Now that figure is almost reversed. Only 12 percent live in this area." Wilcox added that a new member joins the Adventist church every 15 minutes in heavily Catholic South America. The new headquarters in Brasilia, which opened officially January 5, is centrally located to much of the church's work throughout the continent. There are one-third of a million Adventists in the division.
