Ingathering: Give, Reach, Receive

More and more of our church members are making their Ingathering missionary visits during the pleasant, warm, fall weather instead of waiting until the cold, icy, winter days and evenings. The official Ingathering crusade dates are November 13 to January 1, but a number of our churches have already completed their Ingathering and some are preparing for a fall series of evangelistic meetings.

Because of the many fund-raising drives and also because of the many fraudulent means used in soliciting money from the public, city officials are trying to restrict all solicitation. It is therefore very, very important that our church leaders and pastors become acquainted with these officials and talk to them personally about what we are doing as a church. If a letter is written explaining our work, the General Conference suggests that it be delivered in person so that the pastor or church leader may explain or interpret the total program. We have discovered again and again that we would not have been misunderstood had we followed this procedure.

True Ingathering should be a spiritual crusade and not just another fund-raising drive.

The original threefold purposes and objectives of Ingathering as endorsed by Ellen White are:

- Distribute literature containing present truth.
- Find and reach interested souls for Christ.
- Raise funds to carry on the work of the church.

In order for us to reach these objectives we suggest the following guidelines:

1. Personal preparation. We need first to consecrate ourselves to Him whose work we wish to do so that we can truly represent Him to those we contact.

2. Be diligent in our efforts. Search for souls. Point out the magazine gift Bible study offer. If there is an interest, suggest that you would be happy to take the filled out card with you and mail it for them.

3. Pray in as many homes as you can.

4. Record the name and address of any one in physical or spiritual need.

5. Be enthusiastic and pray that your countenance may reflect the joy and happiness of a child of God.

6. Report all special experiences and names of those interested or in need to the pastor or director of lay activities in your church.

I have every confidence that when we follow these guidelines our World Service Appeal may be the best that we have ever enjoyed. God bless you all with a real experience with the Lord as you visit your neighbors and friends during this Ingathering crusade.

In 1976 hundreds of little children around the Lake Union came to churches and schools to participate in Vacation Bible School. More than half of these young people were from non-Seventh-day Adventist homes. They took home to parents what they had learned about Jesus in V.B.S. Parents came to graduation services and church to find out for themselves about the God-Man, Jesus Christ. Through the witness of crafts, stories and games more people have been won to the kingdom of God.

As we have seen, in true worship we respond to God. This means that worship is always something we do. It can never be that which we only see and hear someone else do for us. No other person can make our response to God. Others may provide an avenue through which we respond as, for example, in "special music." They may lead us in our response, and this is what happens in public prayer, but they cannot substitute for us. Worship is participation, action on the part of all, not just something done by those on the platform.

THE OFFERING

This, of course, is easy to see in the act of worship we call the offering. Here is an opportunity for all to take part. But it is important to remember that our offerings are not primarily for the worthy projects announced from week to week, as important and needy as these may be—they are for God! Furthermore, it is not a matter of giving Him His tenth and whatever beyond that we choose and then feeling free to do whatever we want to with that which is left. In this act of worship, through the giving of what we possess—what we so easily and frequently come to think of as ours alone—we make a very concrete and specific response to Him which can be a meaningful way of saying, "All I have now or ever will have, and all I am or ever hope to be is yours forever."

An essential ingredient in this act of worship is a cheerful heart (2 Cor. 9:7). If our offerings are prompted by some other attitude or motivation—if they are seen as a duty that must be done, or in some way the means whereby we manipulate God to gain His favor in our behalf or guarantee His action to insure our material prosperity—we shall hear His indictment, originally pronounced on those whose per-capita giving led the list, "What to me is the multitude of your sacrifices? I have had enough of burnt offerings of rams and the fat of fed beasts; I do not delight in the blood of bulls, or of lambs, or of he-goats." Isaiah 1:11. Make no mistake about it, if our gifts are prompted by that spirit which called forth Israel's offerings of old, God will be no more pleased with dollars and cents than He was with the fat and blood of sheep and goats even though we may think our money more aesthetically satisfying.

SCRIPTURE READING

As Seventh-day Adventists we place great emphasis on the importance of Scripture, yet other Christians in their worship services often use the Bible more prominently and frequently than we do. There is a strong unexplainable neglect of the Bible in Adventist worship.

The public reading of the Word of God can and ought to be a vital element in our worship services. It may take place in a variety of ways. It should involve a significant portion of Scripture and include more than just a verse or two. The reading may be a portion of the Bible which fits and reinforces the experience of the worship of God, such as one of the Psalms, or it may be a passage which fits with or is the basis for the sermon.

The reading may be done by one individual while we as a congregation listen and "hear the Word of the Lord." Or the one reading Scripture perhaps will invite us to follow that reading in our own Bibles. In this case he must be very careful to give the congregation adequate time to find the passage. All too often the reader rushes on leaving us struggling desperately to locate the text before he finishes reading, and wondering if he was serious about our trying to follow.

The reading of Scripture may also be done responsively. However such reading needs to be more than a gimmick for involvement by having the leader read one verse and the congregation the next, without any concern for meaning or genuine response. There are portions of Scripture, such as Psalm 24:7-10, which are actually responsive in form. With some thought and preparation other effective readings which are genuinely responsive in nature can be prepared and included in the church bulletin.

But effective Scripture reading is impossible if its selection and preparation are done only in the waning moments before the pastor and elders walk onto the platform. Such a practice is a tragic dishonor to the Word and Person of the One in whose presence we gather. The public reading of God's Word requires and is worthy of the most careful preparation.

The passage selected should be carefully analyzed as to its context, its central thought, mood and climax. It should be read interpretatively, but not as a dramatic performance. It should be read with that feeling and meaning which come from a genuine realization of the truth it contains and with those changes of mood and meaning inherent in the passage rather than with an all pervading "stained glass" tone or attitude.

The reading of the Bible can be a part of the service awaiting with eager expectancy.

THE SERMON

While nothing that has preceded the sermon is merely preliminary or incidental to it but an important part of worship, the sermon also takes its place as an essential element of worship. The Bible teaches us that God is active in preaching and that in a very real sense He is speaking through His messenger. "So we are ambassadors for Christ, God making his appeal through us." 2 Cor. 5:20.

Ellen White sees it in the same light. "When the word is spoken, you should remember, brethren, that you are listening to the voice of God through His delegated servant. Listen attentively. Sleep not for one instant."—Testimonies, vol. 5, p. 493.

She describes how Satan and his angels busy themselves trying to paralyze the senses so that God's message will not be heard or heeded. She urges all by their words and actions to make clear to those around them that they regard the message from God's servants as a message from God Himself (Testimonies, vol. 5, p. 498). This puts a high importance on the place of the sermon in worship and views it as a time of the most earnest activity on the part of God, the preacher and the congregation! The biblical command to preach God's Word is coupled with an equally firm command to hear that Word. Both preacher and congregation have an active part to play.

In a very important sense the sermon is the responsibility and work of the entire people of God. Through the sermon God continues to make Himself known to His people and to equip them to return to the world in which they live their daily lives, there to bear witness for Him and to call others to a life of worship.

A WORD TO PASTORS AND ELDERS

Before I close this series, may I speak especially to you. Twelve years ago Norval Pease, the author of this quarter's Sabbath School lessons, raised a challenge for every minister and member of the Adventist Church as he expressed his conviction: "The success of the church to which we are devoting our lives depends to a great extent on what happens between eleven and twelve o'clock on Sabbath mornings."—And Worship Him, p. 7.

Pointing to the frightening possibility that while we spend millions of dollars and put forth uncounted hours of effort to lead people to Christ and the church, he noted that the results of all this endeavor and expenditure may be dissipated by irreverent and unsatisfying Sabbath services which dishearten new converts and drive interested persons away. He also observed that while we as a church have made much of the day of worship, we have given little attention to the way of worship.

During this quarter through our Sabbath School lessons we are involved in a careful biblical study of the subject of worship. This presents us as ministers with a golden, "once-in-a-long-time," opportunity. This quarter is an ideal time for pastors, church elders, and all who share in the privilege and responsibility of planning and leading in Sabbath worship services to make a careful examination of their understanding and actual practice in preparing for and leading in these sacred services.

Thoughtful coordination of the worship services with that which will be taking place in the Sabbath School lesson study needs to be planned. In this way every element of our worship services may come to be understood and experienced in a more profound and meaningful way.

Our worship services all too easily can become a weekly ritual through which we move with comfortable familiarity but little life and understanding. Yet the divine charter of Revelation 14 puts the call to worship at the very forefront of the reasons for our existence and mission. With the worship services this quarter creatively related to the Sabbath School study, we have the exciting possibility for responding in a more effective way to the high calling given us to make our services "intensely interesting. . . pervaded with the very atmosphere of heaven."—Testimonies, vol. 5, p. 609.

Some things which might help in moving toward this goal could include the following:

1. A careful reading or re-reading of Norval Pease's book, And Worship Him.
2. A series of sermons on the subject of worship that, while not duplicating the lesson study material, would build on and be enriched by that study and would supplement and reinforce its impact.
3. A number of informal discussions with the church elders about the actual worship service. By using a tape recording of the service to recall and reflect on what actually happened, the group can recognize in a very concrete way the elements of strength in a given worship service and those areas which can be made still more effective.
4. Some tactful experimentation with a somewhat different order of service. This should be accompanied by an explanation of the reason and purpose for such change.
5. Informal Sabbath afternoon or Wednesday evening "feedback sessions" in which leaders and members can respond to and discuss their own particular church's experience and service of worship.

But above all, let us pledge ourselves to never offer to God in our worship whether as leaders or congregation, that which has cost us little or nothing in time, effort, prayer or preparation.

DR. RAY SMITH RECEIVES COMMUNITY SERVICE AWARD

Dr. Ray Smith

Dr. Ray Smith has been selected to receive the annual Community Service Award of the Glendale Seventh-day Adventist Church. He will receive the award at the Community Relations Day, October 16, at 9:30 A.M.

Robert Taylor, pastor of the church, says Smith was chosen for the honor because of his contribution to the community in the area of cancer prevention. Dr. Smith has been reappointed to the board of directors of the American Cancer Society of the Marion County Unit.

This is a two-year reappointment. He has served six years previously. He was also elected to the executive committee of the State Division on September 16. He has just been elected to the State Board of the American Cancer Society. It is the second year that Dr. Smith has served in that capacity. He is the medical director of the Reach to Recovery program of Marion County. He served in this capacity for seven years since its conception.

To reduce the number of cancer victims Dr. Smith encourages smokers to kick the habit of smoking in order to decrease their chances of having oral or lung cancer. "It is a 365-day-a-year job," stated Dr. Smith. He was interviewed on Channel 8 by Alpha Blackburn concerning the Five-Day Plan to Stop Smoking. He was asked to represent the stop smoking program by the State Cancer Society.

Dr. Smith was also interviewed on WISH-TV by Bruce Childs concerning the prevention of breast cancer.

BOGGSTOWN CELEBRATES BICENTENNIAL

Boggs town Church celebrated the Bicentennial birthday of our country on Sabbath, August 28, at the church. A special patriotic program for Sabbath School was planned by the superintendent, Virginia DeHart, using all the young people in the church.

Jerry Lastine, director of trust services of the Indiana Conference, had the 11 o'clock service incorporating the patriotic theme into his sermon.

A fellowship dinner was held at the Goodrich Party House.

A very entertaining afternoon program was held. Cameron DeHart, local church elder, was the master of ceremonies, and he presented the history of the Boggs town Church which is the oldest Seventh-day Adventist Church building in Indiana. Jerry DeHart, Cameron's son, gave a short history of our country, and Don DeHart, another one of Cameron's sons, talked on the life of Abraham Lincoln. After each presentation the DeHart trio sang a song to harmonize with the talks given.

There were visitors from all over the conference. The Philosda Club members were part of the visiting group.

In the evening a bonfire and hayride were enjoyed by all the singles and Philosda members.

Workers studied and discussed their findings during group sessions.

'FINISHING THE WORK'— FALL WORKERS' MEETING

The workers of the Lake Region Conference gathered September 26 to 29 on the campground in Cassopolis, Michigan, for the annual fall workers' meeting. It was a pause to revitalize personal ministries that will bring a spiritual uplift to the churches.

Conference President J. R. Wagner, in planning for this four-day pause, used the theme "Finishing the Work." C. D. Brooks, field representative from the General Conference and speaker for the Breath of Life TV program, launched the sessions with the message "Wearing Paul's Armor."

Morning and evening devotions were given by C. D. Brooks.

Brooks' evening and morning messages were graphically and spiritually presented before the workers. Interspersed throughout the sermons were musical selections by Cloie Logan and T. M. Kelly.

C. E. Bradford, an associate secretary of the General Conference, spoke on the subject "The Ministry of the Pastor." Evangelistic methods were rehearsed under the guidance of L. R. Palmer, president of the Allegheny East Conference, and E. C. Ward, pastor of the Oakwood College Church. In keeping with evangelism, a slide presentation entitled "Let the Church Be the Church" was presented by Charles Cheatham, communication media director for the Allegheny East Conference.

R. W. Bates, leader of discussion groups, talked with pastors.

The presentations of these men were interwoven with lively discussions and group sessions that dealt with the theme. Such questions as "How can the lay leadership of the church be used in a more effective way?" and "What can be done to translate into reality this urgent need for repentance, revival and reformation?" were deliberated.

Oakwood College Pastor E. C. Ward discussed methods of evangelism.

The workers were divided into nine groups for dialog and study. The Bible, Spirit of Prophecy books Christian Service, Ministry of Healing and Evangelism were their tools. These discussion groups were under the direction of R. W. Bates of the lay activities department of the General Conference.

Further information came from William Scales Jr., successful pastor/evangelist from the Allegheny East Conference. Scales has seen seven churches grow and multiply in the cities where he has pastored.

Ned Lindsay, inner-city director for the Northern California Conference, brought a pictorial presentation on the inner-city work in that part of God's vineyard.

Following the final service a vote of thanks was verbalized by the workers for the materials gathered and given each one. A note of gratitude was expressed to Wagner and the conference officers for a well-planned and spiritual workers' meeting. Beautiful fall weather, delicious meals, table tennis and softball added to the great fellowship that comes when fellow workers are together.

Boothby and the former Barbara Moravetz were married September 7, 1926, in Green Bay, Wisconsin. They are both retired physical therapists who resided in Gobles for 21 years before moving to Paw Paw 29 years ago. They are active members of the Lawrence Church.

• Dr. and Mrs. Donald Fahrback and their 15-year-old son, Thomas, of Munising are on a three-month medical relief mission to Zaire, Africa. Fahrback joins another physician at the church's 100-bed hospital and leprosarium in bush country. Mrs. Fahrback, who calls herself a "very rusty R.N." took her nurse's uniforms along—"just in case." Tom will perform maintenance work at the hospital while continuing his studies by correspondence.

Sabbath speaker will be Harold Keubler, former Bible teacher at the academy. A film will be shown Saturday night, "A Man for All Seasons."

PORT HURON HAS GROUND BREAKING

Ground-breaking ceremonies for Port Huron area Adventists were conducted Sunday, September 19, at the nine-acre piece of land purchased by the congregation last year.

The new building will have more than 6,000 square feet of space on one floor level including a sanctuary seating 235 to 260 persons. It will have facilities for a church school and a multipurpose room where stop smoking clinics, better living seminars, and other public service type programs can be conducted.

The cost of the building is estimated to be around $116,000 exclusive of the electrical and excavation needs. This part of the construction work will be donated by the local first elder, Russell Goodrich, an electrician, and Malcolm Chartier, a friend of the nearby Algonac congregation who has promised to care for all excavating needs.

Participating in the ground breaking of the new church building for the Port Huron area were, left, Loren R. Eastman, architect; Russell Goodrich, first elder; and Elders Olav M. Labianca, local pastor, and Charles Keymer, conference president.

About 80 members and friends attended the afternoon ceremonies including, from the conference office, Elders Charles Keymer, Gordon Carle and their wives, and from the city of Marysville, Harry W. Stark, its mayor. The church will be located in Marysville and will be called the Blue Water Church.

PLANE CRASH KILLS FORMER BERRIEN SPRINGS RESIDENT

A missionary to Africa from Berrien Springs has died of massive burns received during the crash of a light plane in Kenya on August 31.

Gene D. Hunter, 49, a math and science teacher at Kamagambo Secondary School and Teachers' College in Kisii, Kenya, was one of six passengers aboard a Piper Cherokee plane returning from a mission assignment to Nairobi.

The plane, which went down in the Ngong Hills broke in two, caught fire and was totally destroyed. All six passengers, including Hunter's wife and two daughters, ages 12 and 13, were injured in the crash. He died September 9 and was buried in Nairobi. The other five victims are reported to be recovering from their injuries.

The other two persons on board were the pilot and his wife, Pastor and Mrs. D. R. Brenneman of the Zambia Union. They are from Riverside, California.

According to word received at the conference office from Cora West, communication secretary for the Burlington Church, her daughter, Mrs. Frank Fieblekorn, also of Burlington, had arrived in Africa just a week before the crash to visit Mrs. Hunter, her cousin. Mrs. Fieblekorn's luggage was on the plane and totally destroyed along with a camera, cassette recorder and other equipment she was planning to use in recording mission activities for back home use. She herself had decided not to make the 150-mile trip by plane choosing instead to ride a bus in order to see the countryside and village life.

The Hunters have two other daughters, Lynette attending Cedar Lake Academy and Cheryl attending Andrews University.

COOKING SCHOOL HELD IN HOWARD CITY

A cooking school in the Howard City Adventist Church, sponsored by the Community Services Center, was held from August 30 to September 2. Elder Norman A. Yeager was the instructor.

The purpose of the school was to show the public how to lower the fat content of their diet and to introduce them to vegetarian cooking.

In the demonstrations Yeager used recipes containing ingredients that can be obtained in the average grocery store. On the final evening Joyce Yeager demonstrated how to prepare homemade choplets.

Assistants for the cooking school were Irene Allen, Doris Sahlbom, Mary Schutter, Maude Sorensen, and Ella Tawney.

BUCHANAN AND NILES BAND TOGETHER FOR PATHFINDERING

On September 17 the Buchanan Church was the site of the induction of 21 Pathfinders into the newly formed Niles-Buchanan Pathfinder Club. A beautiful service was conducted in which each new Pathfinder took the pledge to be a faithful witness as a member of the club. Candles were lighted from one central candle, and the new members lined up in the aisles of the church letting their light shine, which was indicative of their desire to let their light shine so that others may come to know their Saviour.

Esther McDaniel of Niles is the director, and Ken Eager of Buchanan is the associate director. Deputy directors include Pat Munroe, Jess Burns and David Keys, all from the Niles Church. Counselors from the Niles Church are Midge Burns and Ken Leak, while from the Buchanan Church are Janet Blair and Harold and Melinda Davis.

FABRIC SALE IN NILES

New desks are being enjoyed this year by students of the Niles Church School as the result of a fund-raising project last school year. Some of the 55 new desks received are shown in this picture of the lower grades taught by Mabuta Eager. Other new furnishings include a kidney-shaped table, an office desk and a portable science lab. Because of the success of that "gigantic" fabric sale Susan Coleman, Home and School leader, has announced that a similar sale will be held this fall from Sunday, November 7, through Wednesday, November 17. The benefit project will be held in the school gym, 110 North Fairview on the west side of Niles, from 9 A.M. to 9 P.M., except Friday when the sale will close down from 2 P.M. until the following Sunday morning.

Andrews University

David Bauer, Correspondent

Robert D. Moon Jr., director of research for Andrews University, watches the computer in his office during registration week to note the number of students being enrolled for A.U.'s fall term. Figures this year show an increase of 5 percent over last year.

ANDREWS REGISTRATION BRINGS ACTIVITY TO CAMPUS

Students registering at Andrews, September 27 to 29, transformed the quiet campus into a hive of activity. The current enrollment reflects an increase of 5 percent over last year at this time with an enrollment of 2,788 as compared with 2,655, according to Robert D. Moon Jr., director of institutional research at Andrews.

Summer term reports show a record high at the university for summer enrollment, said Moon, with an 8 percent increase over last summer, which itself was the largest summer enrollment up to that time.

The last three years at Andrews have shown a substantial increase in enrollment each year, according to Dr. Moon. He added that statistics show that usually after a two-year increase, there is a drop in enrollment percentage. Instead of a dip in enrollment figures, the records show an increase for four straight years, a record in itself, Moon indicated.

Registration procedures have been improved this year as the university attempts to "iron out the bugs." One such step was the setting up of the cashier's office in the gym, along with most of the other stations. Students who do not need to arrange for financial aid are able to complete financial transactions in the same building as other registration steps.

An updated and more sophisticated computer system enables the admissions office to enter student information into the computer records and compile a registration packet immediately, eliminating a delay for the registrants.

After each student has completed his registration, his program is fed into a computer terminal. Within seconds he receives back a printout of his complete schedule to be inspected for errors. One hundred students per hour can receive printouts.

The university is working toward a system whereby the student who has any financial aid—grants or loans—will have all that information available to him on his fee card prior to registration, according to Norman Roy, director of undergraduate admissions. "When he is ready to pay his money, he will be able to go right through without any hold up."

What's Your Line?

Registration, of course, still means lines, some longer, some shorter. "Is this a line for something?" "I don't know if this is the right line or not—I'm just in it." The end of one line led to a camera where one's "mug shot" was taken for an I.D. card. "Look up here and smile; one-two-three," the photographer said, and then fired. After having "shot" more than 200 students in a single morning, he confessed, "My throat is getting hoarse."

Other lines led to clearance for labor, finances, campus security, and to the student affairs office. At other tables, faculty and staff members gave out class cards. Remarked Ingrid Johnson of the physical education department, "I love to see all these students."

For the large number of freshmen on campus, registration week provides their first taste of collegiate life. The orientation program, with tours, group meetings, testing and social activities, occupies much of their time between September 26 and 29.

Not a Sink-or-Swim Proposition

Freshmen were not left to "sink-or-swim" at their registration. A.U. Student Association volunteers wearing large orange tags saying "Guide" or "Ask Me" were on hand to assist the freshmen in getting started. Guides were stationed near the gymnasium entrance where they could meet the freshmen. "Usually we go up to the student first, because sometimes students are afraid to ask," said Steve McKenzie, student services director for the Student Association. "We'll start them out and go to the first four or five stops with them. By that time they've gained confidence. All our guides, however, are willing to go through all the steps [of registration] with a student if necessary."

Despite the usual complaints such as "You need a degree to be able to register in this college," some students still had good words for this year's process. Said sophomore Jeanette Oren, "If you keep your cool, you can go without getting terribly frustrated." And, noted fellow-sophomore Alicia Gonzalez, "This year it went a little faster and smoother than last year."
