

FROM A COLPORTEUR IN ALASKA

Carried into the sky by a coastal plane, my mind turned to Isaiah 40:31: "But they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint."

The preceding verse made me think of the little village I was leaving with four places to buy liquor and one tiny church which was doing its utmost to let its light shine but the visible results of its influence were very small. However, as I left this village and flew over islands, mountains, and rugged inlets and mines, joy came to me as I thought of the literature I had placed in the homes, and the four families that had signed for the Bible course. As we view the unfinished task here in Alaska, we thank God for His promise in Romans 9:28, "For He will finish the work, and cut it short in righteousness; because a short work will the Lord make upon the earth." "For the harvest is plentiful and the laborers are few." Let us not fail to pray that the Lord will send messengers into these isolated cities, villages, and scattered dwellings throughout Alaska.

While I write these words, I look out my window and view a burial taking place on a little island about three city blocks away—apparently too much liquor, a fight and, the result? The wife laid to rest. Could it be if I had reached this village a few days sooner, this tragedy would not have happened? I am endeavoring to reach these places as quickly as possible. God has never placed before us a task that He has not made it possible for us to accomplish.

My work for the next four weeks will take me by air to eleven towns and villages. I certainly solicit the prayers of our people that great work may be accomplished in these places. Because of strikes and other adverse conditions, the colporteur work here has been quite difficult but the Lord has greatly blessed. Many are found that are interested in understanding God's Word. Perhaps one experience will be sufficient to show the interest that some are taking in our literature:

In this particular home the family purchased the Bible Stories, Children's Hour, one volume of Treasures of Life, and some of our periodicals, paying cash. Later in the week I was invited to this home for Sunday evening dinner which was accepted, and during this time a closer friendship was made. When I delivered the rest of their books a few days later, they were very pleased. Just as I was leaving, the husband asked me if I had any other books. I said, "Yes, I had a nice medical set," and showed him Medical Counselor and Bible Readings including journals. For these he paid cash. I went to get the books and brought back also a large family Bible which he bought. After he paid for it, he asked me if I had any more books. I said "Yes" and asked his daughter to bring the black book (one of the Treasures of Life volumes). I showed him the Treasures of Life spread and explained how the four volumes would complete his set, and that the index would guide his reading in the Bible, Bible Story, and Treasures of Life. He said, "This is what I have been wanting, but don't you have any more books?" "Yes," I said, "I have a book that completely covers Daniel and Revelation verse by verse." He said, "That is what I have been looking for," and paid me for it—a total purchase of over $200. Please pray for this dear family that they may accept the truth.

G. F. WIMER

"The harvest is truly great, but the laborers are few: Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest that He would send forth laborers into His harvest." Luke 10:2. Current events are loudly declaring the certainty of Bible prophecy, and the surety of God's promises. Are you doing all you can to bring hope to judgment-bound souls? "By the canvassing work the truth is presented to thousands who otherwise would never hear it. We have no time to lose."—Colporteur Ministry, page 8. ## "Serving Christ at Sea"

In order to answer the commission of the Gospel to all the world, the Seventh-day Adventist Church not only sends its missionaries to the far-flung corners of the earth and into remote and strange lands, but also as chaplains in the armed forces. Yet as one chaplain recently remarked, "No one can believe in missions more than does an Adventist chaplain. You see, not only do missions provide the gospel for those in foreign lands; they also provide a place for our men to worship when they are far from home, loved ones, and are presented with every temptation under the sun."

Chaplain R. L. Mole

As international tensions continue to mount, larger numbers of Adventist oriented young men will wear the uniform of their country. Thus it is good to know that the church feels its responsibility and provides ordained ministers to also serve in uniform in order to bring the Gospel to men and men to God. There are eleven military chaplains at present with six in the Army, three in the Air Force and two in the Navy. These men can do much to aid in the understanding of Adventism and thereby make it easier for young men of the church to serve and be faithful. Moreover these ministers, loaned to the services by the General Conference, have almost unlimited opportunity to present the beliefs of Adventism in sermons, lectures, informal conferences and in counseling so that they are really full-time workers for the church, but without cost to the church treasury.

Chaplain Robert L. Mole, a Lieutenant-Commander in the Navy, is presently the highest ranked of all Adventist chaplains. Before accepting the appointment as the first Adventist minister to serve as a chaplain in the Navy, he and his wife served as missionaries in Lebanon and Cyprus of the Middle East Division of the General Conference. He with his family have recently been ordered by the Navy to the West Coast for a two-year tour of sea duty with Amphibious Forces of the Pacific. In this assignment as a squadron with ten ships, his work may be compared to the "circuit-rider" of the early church on the western frontier. As a chaplain he moves from ship to ship for sermons, lectures, counseling, etc. Because his squadron considers the whole Pacific Ocean as a "watery" highway, his ships may be found anywhere on the West Coast or as far as need may require.

Because of our chaplain's desire to be of maximum benefit to Adventists and Adventist oriented men, if you have a loved one in the Navy and serving in the Pacific, Chaplain Mole would appreciate it if you would send him his name and address so that he may be able to contact him as he travels about during this time at sea. You may always reach him by writing to:

An Appeal to Sabbath School Secretaries and Teachers

Beginning in January 1961 a plan was adopted to encourage more faithful visitation of absent members. Sabbath School Absent Member Contact cards were furnished to all of our Sabbath Schools. The secretary of the Sabbath School was to attach three or four of these on the outside of each class envelope with a paper clip for all divisions from the Primary up, and especially the Senior Division. The teacher in turn, when checking the attendance record, was to write the name of the absent member on one of these cards and give it to one of the class members in attendance with the suggestion that he contact the absent member as soon as possible to let him know the class missed him.

I think we will all agree that one of the weakest links in our Sabbath School is the matter of visitation and personally contacting the absent members to let them know they have been missed and the class is interested and is praying for them. The Sabbath Schools that are using cards and are faithfully visiting the absent members each week are the growing Sabbath Schools. There is no excuse for any Sabbath School not to use these contact cards each week.

We must count on our Sabbath School secretaries to be faithful in attaching these to each class envelope. Put them on the outside, not inside the envelope, attaching them with a paper clip. We must count on our faithful teachers every week to care for this important item before ever starting to teach the lesson. If our teachers will use these cards, they will find it will greatly strengthen our visitation-of-absent-members program. We miss these absent members. When some other member of the class or their teacher visits them to let them know they were missed, it brings great blessing to both the one doing the visiting and those visited.

Sabbath School teachers, we appeal to you not to start teaching your lesson until arrangements have been made to visit every absent member. Sabbath School secretaries, we appeal to you to see that each week these Absent Member Contact cards are attached to the class envelopes. If your supply is out, send to the Sabbath School Department of your local conference for more. They are free. May God help us to be faithful every week in letting our absent members know that we are truly interested in them and miss them. This applies to regular members who are absent only one week as well as those absent longer periods of time.

Archeological Thrills in Biblical Shechem

Have you ever thought as you read thrilling accounts by archeologists about finding treasure beneath the sands of Egypt, the stony soil of Palestine, or the silt deposits of the Mesopotamian Valley, that you would like to have the privilege of going on such an expedition yourself? Beginning November 2, the Review and Herald invites you to join Dr. Siegfried H. Horn, Professor of Archeology and History of Antiquity at Andrews University, at a recent "dig" into the ruins of ancient Shechem, where Abraham first pitched his tent in the promised land and where Christ spent a sultry noon hour conversing with a woman of Samaria.

You will soon agree with Dr. Horn that life at the archeologist's camp is anything but a romantic adventure. Such sentiments evaporate rapidly in the hot, dry Palestinian summer. Your drinking water comes from the village well in gasoline cans. The village women try to keep your water boys from further depleting the already scant supply in the well, and you make repeated visits to beg the village elders to intercede for you. At that, there is not enough water for a bath, to wash off the dust and perspiration. For that you must wait for the next weekly visit to Jerusalem, forty miles away. When the electric generator works—as it does now and then—you push the oil lamp off to one side and get out your electric razor. Dinner is served in Nablus, two dusty miles away. Your task is to stand in the merciless, scorching sun for eight hours every day overseeing the "dig." You return to your tent, and by nightfall the wind blowing through the pass between Mt. Ebal and Mt. Gerizim has risen to a gale that fills the tent with sand. Fortunately, however, the wind gradually turns the night air so cold that before morning a good wool blanket or two will feel good.

But there are compensations. At ten minutes after six o'clock on the very first morning of the big dig you discover a small silver coin of King Demetrius III who reigned from 95 to 88 B.C. On the second day you make one of the outstanding discoveries of this year's expedition, one that makes newspaper headlines around the world. As you wipe off the accumulated dirt of two and a half millenniums you have the thrill of holding in your hand a translucent amethyst seal and of reading the Hebrew inscription of its original owner. A few days later your trowel frees a small juglet from its hiding place. You notice that it is slightly cracked, but not smashed. To your amazement, it contains thirty-five large silver coins dating from the reign of Ptolemy I, about 300 B.C., to that of Ptolemy V a century later! Some luckless inhabitant of Shechem had hoarded these coins, buried them during some emergency, never came back to retrieve them—and now they are yours!

When the season is over, you and your fellow archeologists have unearthed, sorted, and classified over 200,000 pieces of pottery—the archeologist's best silent "clock" for measuring the centuries of antiquity and piecing together the jigsaw story of the long ago. You feel well rewarded for all work, by such discoveries, an evidence of the fact that Shechem did exist as one of the major cities of Palestine when Abraham pitched his tent there, and centuries before that in fact. Your eyes have seen remains of the same buildings Joshua saw half a millennium later. You came across the partially-preserved ruins of an Israelite home that was destroyed by fire in the great Assyrian invasion about 722 B.C. The walls are still standing to a height of six feet—in places, that is. You find, partially protected by a section of the fallen roof, crushed cooking pots, cups, bowls, and other household utensils where they stood the day the Assyrians came. You also find there a few fine painted pottery vessels in excellent condition.

We might go on and on. Suffice it to say we think you won't want to miss Dr. Horn's splendid new series, "Excavating Biblical Shechem," beginning in the Review for November 2!

Elder Charles Allaway officiated. We wish this new home God's richest blessing and much success as the young people continue their studies at Walla Walla College in preparation for the Lord's service.

Doris Peach and Adam Bollinger exchanged vows while standing beside a lovely little lake. The garden ceremony was a reminder of the setting of Eden. Their friends and relatives gathered Thursday afternoon, August 24, to witness the ceremony and wish God's richest blessings on this new Christian home. They will reside in College Place, Washington, where they will pursue their education. Elder Estel D. C. Richardson read the ceremony.

Miss Ruby Ott and David Miller of Caldwell, Idaho, were united in marriage, Sunday, May 14, in the Caldwell Seventh-day Adventist church by Elder C. E. Bishop. Brother and Sister Miller have been spending the summer at a fire lookout in the Idaho Wilderness area, and will make College Place, Washington, their home where Brother Miller will continue his education.

Sunday evening, August 27, Bonita Chandler of Baker, Oregon, and Sidney Tucker of Homedale, Idaho, were united in marriage at the Caldwell Seventh-day Adventist church where Elder C. E. Bishop performed the ceremony. Both have attended Gem State Academy and Walla Walla College. For the present they are living in Homedale but plan to return to College in the fall of 1962.

Geraldine Van Devender of Eugene, Oregon, became the wife of Wallace Wacker, also from Eugene, at their wedding September 3 in the Eugene Seventh-day Adventist church. Many friends and relatives were present to witness this happy occasion for this young couple. May the Lord's blessing rest upon this newly established home.

The marriage of Miss Pat Scyphers and Ted Winn was solemnized Sunday evening, August 6, at Butte, Montana. Elder A. M. Matar officiated at the ceremony. Appropriate songs were sung by the groom's brother, Hugh. We pray God's richest blessings upon these young people as they attend Walla Walla College to prepare themselves for work in the Master's service.

The Green Lake Seventh-day Adventist church was the setting for the marriage, September 10, of Janice Carol Rhoads to Knut Jensen. Mr. Jensen graduated from Walla Walla College in 1960. The bride will get her B.A. from the University of Washington in 1962 where, after a year in another line, Mr. Jensen will continue his post-graduate work. Elder J. W. Rowland, great-uncle of the bride, officiated.

In a beautiful service Sunday, July 2, at 4:00 p.m., in the Vancouver, Washington church, Carol Rose Wyman became the bride of Milan Stanley Nelson. The bride's brother, Elder C. Lloyd Wyman, pastor of Hollywood church, read the ceremony. Many friends attended the service and the reception following. May God's blessing rest upon this new family as they make their home in Vancouver, Wash.

Mrs. Marybelle Coleman was united in marriage to Mr. Hector Sterling at a private ceremony on August 30. The bride is a Bible instructor at the Spruce Street Seventh-day Adventist church in Seattle, Washington. The couple will reside in Seattle. We pray God will make their home a shining example of Christian love and devotion.

Sunday afternoon, September 10, a host of friends gathered in the Caldwell church to witness the marriage of Eva Lovejoy and Barry Kellogg. These young people have been attending Walla Walla College and plan to return this fall. Both Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg are graduates of Gem State Academy. Elder C. E. Bishop performed the ceremony.

"It Is Written" Telecasts Are Resumed

At a meeting last winter the Conference Committee gave study to the advisability of continuing the "It Is Written" telecast for another year. At that time it was the opinion that it would be better not to put the program on the air during 1961 and '62 but to look with favor upon televising the program sometime in the future. But as the telecasts were drawing to a close the interest of viewers was rapidly increasing and we were conscious that many were just picking up the program for the first time. This, with the urgent requests coming to us from the field, was cause for the Conference Committee to reconsider the matter. After further study it was voted to provide our members in every church with a brief, simple questionnaire asking for their evaluation of the program, if it was their opinion that the program should be repeated during 1961 and '62, and if so, what could each do by way of financial support.

The response was practically one hundred per cent in favor of continuing the program through the fall and winter of 1961 and '62, and the pledge assured us of financial support to cover the expenses. So, the contract was signed for exceptionally good time which will cover our conference territory, and by the time you read these lines thousands of people will have viewed the first of the telecasts for the months ahead.

Naturally the expenses have already begun piling up and we are coming to our good people for the help promised. Some of the pledges were for a cash lump sum, others to be paid by the week or month. We will greatly appreciate anything you can do for us at this time and during the months ahead.

As these messages go into the thousands of homes in our conference and as plans are formulated and executed, following up the interest and reaping the harvest, let us all work and pray for the success of the program.

Help for These Confusing Times

There never was a time when the leadership of this people were more concerned over the flock than at the present time. War clouds hang thick over our heads. The world is stunned and confused. Almost daily at times, the mails bring us voices from professedly Christian people which tend to cause doubt and confusion. These voices attack some of the great fundamental truths that this denomination has held sacred and taught throughout its history. The same voices judge and criticize the leadership of this movement and endeavor to cause us to lose confidence.

This should not be a great surprise to us as God forewarned us through prophetic utterances that these things would happen. But with such nefarious work, there are always some to lose their way. Everyone of us should be fortified with every help possible so we will be ready and quick to discern what is truth and what is error; what builds up and what tears down.

God has provided us with this material. The Bible, the Testimonies and the Review and Herald are God-sent helps to you and me. Every member should have access to helps at all times. The past few years many of our people have felt that they could not afford the price of the Review and for this reason have been deprived of its weekly visits into the home and the inspiration and help it provides.

With the new plan for the the Review and the new low price of $3.95, or about half of the original price, it is the hope that not one S.D.A. family will be deprived of the great benefit the Review will bring into their home. Without delay or before you forget, why not call your church missionary secretary and either subscribe for the first time or renew your Review subscription. God will greatly bless such a move.

Working for Christ

Alden Thompson, a student literature evangelist of the Upper Columbia Conference, tells his experience as he spends his first summer going from door to door with the printed page:

Alden Thompson

As I compare my original arm-chair views of canvassing with the impressions I now have of this phase of God's work, I find that my ideas have undergone considerable change. I had expected to find that everyone would be more than happy to talk and, of course, quite willing to buy. Reality soon exploded that bubble when we approached the first door. My partner and I discussed our fortunes as we analyzed our first few days in the field. We decided that we looked too much like the ordinary salesman—the one that everyone sees too often. It took much meditation and prayer on our part before we were able to go about our work in the true spirit of Christ. The public was still icy, but it rarely fazed us now. We had come to understand what our mission really was—to acquaint others with the love of Christ. Once the initial hurdle had been passed, our work became intensely interesting and more rewarding with each passing day.

VOICE
CALL SUNDAY

Be it large or small, God has a place for each one of us in His great harvest field. I certainly appreciated the opportunity to work as a student literature evangelist. In the field of Christian salesmanship lies a gold mine of experience that is worth every minute spent in search of the treasure.

ALDEN THOMPSON

The Lord rewarded Brother Thompson with a scholarship for his faithful efforts, and, no doubt, there will be many souls in the Kingdom who had accepted the literature he carried to their homes.

We look forward to our young men and women from our academies and college to do great exploits for God through the printed page.

Troy Pathfinders Enjoy Camp-Out

Taking advantage of the beautiful fall weather, the Pathfinders and their leaders went on a camp-out Wednesday night, September 13, in the hills near Elk River. It was a thrill to hear the bugling of the bull elk, and for many it was their first experience. After a night out in the woods and a hike off the mountain, this hungry pack consumed almost eight pounds of pancakes and the trimmings. On the way home, they visited Elk River Falls, one of nature's beauties seldom seen by the busy people of our day. Joining the Pathfinders on the trip was their leader, Dean Whybark, two assistant leaders, Mrs. Omer Drury and Mrs. L. L. Reiber, Elder and Mrs. W. H. Ward, Mrs. Whybark, and Dr. Drury.

The Sabbath church services on September 16 were conducted by Elder W. H. Ward, pastor, the Pathfinder leaders, and the local Pathfinders in honor of Worldwide Pathfinder day.

Millions of Voices

Many times as I travel from place to place, I have been asked certain questions over and over again. I do not mind answering the questions as they are very good questions and deserve an answer, but I have thought to myself in the meantime, Oh, if I could only speak and more people hear each time I speak. Then I turn on my car radio and what do I hear coming over the network but H. M. S. Richards on the Voice of Prophecy speaking out the message with clarity and power.

It thrills me to think that one voice can speak into the microphone in southern California and that, through the modern invention of radio, it turns into multiplied millions of voices throughout the land. Those who hear are found in shops, homes, automobiles, churches, resorts and a multitude of other places.

I am very grateful to the Lord that He permitted the invention of radio to be discovered and that in effect millions of "voices" via the Voice of Prophecy are being heard each week heralding the good news of our Lord's return. Will you not plan with me to have a large part in the promotion of this fine evangelistic seed-sowing program on October 14 when the Voice of Prophecy offering will be taken for the year 1961?

The Long, Long Trial

Not the "Trail," but the "Trial." This is the name of one of the books in the October Special set. It is written by Olivine Nadeau Bohner, and is the story of her childhood and later service in the mission field of Singapore with husband John. It is a book that reveals the fervent faith and unquenched hope of a girl who set up her ideal at an early age and worked steadily toward the goal. It is excellent reading for young people and inspiring reading for all ages. Fill in the blank below and get the The Long, Long Trial with Wilderness Parish for the special saving of $2.55 during October.

Ground-Breaking at Kalispell

The Kalispell church held their long anticipated ground-breaking ceremony for a new church school building on Sunday, September 24. Construction is progressing well and it is the hope that the new building will be ready for occupancy by January, 1962. The new site has a large area for outdoor recreation which is lacking at the present location. The school room is large and the plan of the building allows for expansion when increased enrollment necessitates it. Rooms for crafts and indoor play area is provided in the full basement.

Members of the building committee are the pastor, C. M. Christianson, Beuford McIntyre, George Ainley, Ernest Birnel, and Mrs. Verna Wright.

Auburn Academy Opens With Large Enrollment

The Lord continues to bless Auburn Academy and the student body seems to have an abundance of that undefinable quality known as school spirit and loyalty.

The student body is known for its cosmopolitan atmosphere. Even though we have fewer students from outside the conference this year than in the past, several places other than the Washington Conference are represented. This year there are 8 students from Canada, 1 from Central America, 2 from Egypt, and 9 from Thailand. These, along with the students from our own country, make up an enrollment of 343.

The senior class of 93 is noticeably smaller than last year's 116, but the 138 juniors make up a decidedly larger group than last year's 96. Fifty-nine sophomores and 52 freshmen along with 1 postgraduate student round out the opening enrollment.

It is interesting to note that 37 families are sending 2 students to the academy here and 6 families have 3 of their children currently enrolled at Auburn Academy. This should be encouragement to those who feel they cannot afford to send even one. Christian education costs money and pays dividends, so continue to pray that this school can continue to be a bulwark against the influences of the world.

Remember also to pray for the teachers and students so that we may have strength from on high to finish this year in an exceptional way.

Summer Camp Reflections

This morning I stood looking up at four canoes hanging overhead from the dining room rafters. I was all alone. The hall that for nearly a month had been ringing with the joyous voices of hundreds of young campers was deserted now and deathly quiet. The tables were all stacked for the winter and we were ready to leave for the season.

As I stood looking at those canoes, many thoughts flooded through my mind. The memory of the Indian canoe, just at dusk slowly and majestically gliding across the mirror of the lake up to our glowing campfire carrying Chief Running Waters in full Indian dress, who would in solemn tones give the campers the law and tradition of our camp.

Another picture comes—that of two youngsters dripping wet and grinning from ear to ear jumping from their craft and shouting at the life guard in one voice, "Hey, we finally got it; we shook all the water out of our swamped canoe and didn't even have to touch bottom to do it."

I wandered slowly out on the dining room porch. The lake, too, was quiet. Gone were the swimmers, boaters and skiers who had for so long been enjoying its warmth and sparkling surface. From the porch I could see up into the deep woods across the lake. Suddenly there flashed before my mind's eye a picture of the quiet beauty of the Chapel in the Woods with its huge trees, moss-covered ground and delicate ferns forming the ceiling, floor and walls of our camp church—the sanctuary where once each day our young people came face to face with the Creator and His will for them.

As my eyes swept around the perimeter of the lake, taking in the deserted ball field, the covered trampolines, the empty archery range, a hundred other memories of past experiences and joys welled up within me. It was time to leave; but as we slowly got into the car and turned our backs on another wonderful summer, we took with us, in our hearts, a large share of the inspiration and challenge that had been ours while at Sunset Lake.

Campus Architect Arrives

A step forward in campus planning will become possible with the arrival this week of Grover Starr, Walla Walla College's first campus architect, says business manager A. W. Spoo.

An architect engineer with a B.S. in Engineering from WWC and two years in work and design in the School of Architecture at the University of Southern California, Mr. Starr will assist in the development of the master plan for the college campus, and will design future buildings and will have charge of plans for modernizing the existing structures.

The first major design will be for the Engineering-Physics building to be located on the quadrangle south of the Walla Walla College Academy.

Mr. Starr has had wide experience since his graduation here in 1952. He worked five years for the Los Angeles firm of Heitschmidt and Thompson, architects for the College of Medical Evangelists. Since then he has been a project architect with the firm of Neptune and Thomas in Pasadena.

For the past three years he has been in charge of the work of the firm connected with the campus at UCLA. This work includes three major projects: the Laboratory of Nuclear Medicine and Radiation Biology, Addition to the Cyclotron Building, and Physics Building, Unit II. He is a registered architect in the State of California and a member of the American Institute of Architects.

Mrs. Star is the former Bonnie Wilson who studied in WWC three years, majoring in secretarial science. The couple have three children.
