Kenneth Smith, Salem Central associate pastor, looks on as W. L. Schoepflin explains Oregon's Department of Deferred Giving.

Oregon Intern Training Emphasis

Recognizing the major role of the church in training her young ministers, the Oregon Conference administration has embarked upon a program of total awareness for interns. Many times a minister is in church employ for a number of years before he is fully aware of the policies, plans, objectives, and inner workings of the church. At other times ministers have become frustrated in their failure to know and understand the church's expectations.

In an effort to be all it can be to and for her young ministers, the Oregon Conference has launched a practical training emphasis. A three-day orientation program was held at Big Lake Youth Camp for all first- and second-year pastors. The agenda included presentations by Conference President W. D. Blehm; Secretary R. C. Schwartz; Ministerial Co-ordinator George Knowles; and Treasurer V. J. Jester.

"The Objectives of the Adventist Ministry," "The Minister and Conference Policies," "The Minister's Home," his "Study Habits," and "Personal Finances" were among the discussion topics. Also explored were intern-pastor relationships and the co-operation potential of the minister and Conference departments.

The Adventist clergyman's responsibilities and privileges were carefully analyzed. The hardships that sometimes attend the ministry were recognized, but not without an acknowledgment of the bountiful joys and blessings that attend the man who dedicates himself to the Master Preacher. The lovely Big Lake setting was conducive to quiet, in-depth evaluation of the ministry. Unlimited opportunity was given for questions relative to individual ministry and the church.

The objectives of the retreat were motivated by the administration's desire for the present and eternal success of each intern. Because these young men will be the church's leaders tomorrow, a solid foundation must be firmly laid today. In the words of Elder Blehm, "The intern in a few years will assume more important responsibilities in the church. We feel it must be the work of the Conference administration to do all it can to aid these young men to know their divine call and how the church works. We want Oregon Conference ministers to know the road to success by working together within the framework of God's church."

Reactions to the orientation plan were voiced in statements such as the following from Pastor Gary Adkison, Brookings district leader: "I feel there is great value in the fellowship and togetherness generated by this type of presentation."

Associate Pastor Dick Donaldson of the Sunnyside church gave this evaluation: "It is a moving experience to come together with fellow interns to share our struggles and successes. As I see the concern and interest of the Oregon ministerial interns, administrators, and wives at Big Lake Intern Orientation.

Pathfinder Camporees

During the last two weekends of September, twenty-one Pathfinder clubs of the Oregon Conference enjoyed camporee fellowship. Cold Springs, a beautiful forest camp near Sisters, Oregon, was the site chosen for the Northern Camporee. In spite of leaving home in heavy rain, the campers were rewarded with good weather during the entire encampment. Elder G. D. Brass, NPU Conference youth director, joined the Pathfinders for vespers and Sabbath services. He was also on hand to help with the events on Sunday.

The Southern Camporee used Abbott Creek Forest Camp, in the Rogue River National Forest, for their camping area. Again, good weather dominated the weekend. Elder E. J. Wyman conducted the church service for the clubs under the pines in the group picnic area. Pathfinder demonstrations were held in a large meadow on Sunday.

The main feature was the fire-building, pancake-making event. The Coquille club set a record by bringing in their pancake in 3 minutes and 55 seconds. No wood was collected ahead

2. Trophy winners at the Southern Camporee. Left to right: Ray Barkhurst, Coquille, first place; Bill Tourville, Medford, second place; and William Nussbaum, Shady Point, third place.

3. Medford Pathfinders camped in a camouflaged village. Club activities were centered around the club flagpole.

4. Elder Wyman speaks to the southern campers during the church service.

5. During the Sabbath school program given at the Northern Camporee by Cedar Creek, Director Carl Miller acts the part of the apostle Paul as John Mark left the ministry.

6. Hand axes were making chips during the contest as 8-penny nails were chopped out of logs. Hood River and Medford were first-place winners of the contests.

7. Three pancakes win honors at the pancake-fire building contest at the Southern Camporee. The clubs are, left to right, Coquille, Prineville, and Shady Point.

8. With a small fire, the University Park club prepares the winning cake in 4 minutes at the Northern Camporee.

of time and all cakes were to be made without benefit of pre-mix. It was fun to see the fires springing up and the cakes on the way to the finish line. Other events included the message relay marathon, the pup tent pitching contest, and the hand axemanship competition.

Camping skills are tested at camporee, and the ability to set up camp and cook over open fires is the ultimate in outdoor Pathfinder activity. We salute the faithful leaders and other helpers who spent so much time getting ready for these two fine camporees.

Praise God for New Advances

Each day's mail brings new requests from "It Is Written" viewers for books, Bibles, and study guides. It is most rewarding to read the urgent inquiries that come from people in all walks of life.

Of special interest was the request for "It Is Written" materials from a Catholic sister in a convent. Three books were mailed to her with an invitation to write for the Bible and study guides.

In just a few days her request card was received. Pastor and Mrs. George Knowles went to the address and found the cloister of a special order of the Catholic Church which is dedicated to prayer. The Knowleses were received by a gracious lady in her late sixties who had been in the convent for 45 years. She had only been out occasionally to see a doctor. She received the Bible with what Elder Knowles described as "reverent delight." He said, "She handled that Bible as a child does when receiving the most special gift."

The sister apparently had few if any visitors, and was most happy to receive the pastor and his wife. She was also delighted at the prospects of their return to discuss the Bible with her. She said she would like to pay for the Bible, but could not. She was told it would be more than enough pay if she would share the information with other sisters. This she promised to do.

The sister explained how she was literally cut off from the "evil" of the world. Her only contact is through the medium of religious and educational television. Other types of programming are banned in the convent.

Here is an illustration of the true blessing of television evangelism. Since this dear soul in the convent cannot come out, we can go in through this modern avenue of communication.

Another lady has written requesting materials and expressing appreciation for the "It Is Written" ministry. She describes herself as an excommunicated Catholic with no religion, but faith in God.

These are just two of the many requests which come to Oregon's "It Is Written" office each week. Please pray for an opening to your neighbors and other friends. Invite them to view the telecast.

Should you need materials or have questions, see your pastor or contact the "It Is Written" staff at the Conference office.

White Salmon district; Ed Huston, Vancouver district; Willard Santee, Roseburg church; Bernard Spencer, Florence district; and Loren Nelson, Springfield church. The intern wives were also invited.

To continue the awareness program, the week of October 13-17 was designated for intern departmental orientation. Each departmental secretary allotted one half of each day throughout the week for clarification of departmental services. An intern was assigned to each department for firsthand association with office and field activities. By week's end, five interns had been given opportunity to spend a half day in each Conference department.

The general consensus by all those who have participated in this program is one of appreciation and optimism. This has given the Conference leadership opportunity to clarify their work and these young leaders in the field to become aware of the cooperative services of the church.

The basic objective of this endeavor on the part of the Oregon Conference is succinctly stated in the following quotation from the pen of inspiration: "What the church needs in these days of peril, is an army of workers who, like Paul, have educated themselves for usefulness, who have a deep experience in the things of God, and who are filled with earnestness and zeal. Sanctified, self-sacrificing men are needed; men who will not shun trial and responsibility; men who are brave and true; men in whose hearts Christ is formed 'the hope of glory,' and who, with lips touched with holy fire, will 'preach the word.'"—The Acts of the Apostles, p. 507.

Vacation Bible School

The week of July 21-25 found over 75 children enrolled in the Vacation Bible School held in Grandview, Washington. Under the leadership of Mrs. Don Reiber and Mrs. John Rogers these children learned many valuable lessons. Devotional talks were given by Pastor Don Reiber.

Each day the juniors were taught lessons about God's heroes by Mrs. Phil Anderson, Sr. The primary lessons were taught by Mrs. Phil Anderson, Jr., and leading out in the kindergarten was Mrs. Earl Knutsen. Our music was under the able direction of Mrs. Robert Kenline. Crafts each day were directed by Mrs. Larry Williams. Nearly half of the children were from non-Adventist homes.

Graduation exercises were held on Friday evening, July 25.

Missionary Speaks at Troy, Idaho

O. W. Lange, missionary from India and Pakistan, spoke at the Troy Seventh-day Adventist church on October 4.

He and his wife went to India in 1930, serving in Surat and Bombay. Later they helped establish the Assam Training School where one of their daughters and her husband, Don and Marjorie Bankhead, now teach.

Pastor Lange served in many places of mission work and is now the president of the Pakistan Union.

"Language and customs of the various tribes of people can prove a real handicap to mission work," said Pastor Lange as he told where in one area the women rule everything; the husbands have nothing and cannot even claim their own children; the men must live with their mothers. In another area all the property is owned by entire families each of whom must agree to sell before any of their property can be sold.

"It was stated that the temperance work has aided us in reaching people in areas which are closed to regular mission activity.

Mrs. Lange also shared in the services of the day and told of the need for a new dormitory at Spicer College located at Poona. She also spoke of the Lasalagoon school, and stated that through the entire division many meetings must be conducted outdoors due to large audiences and the lack of buildings. According to the Langes, there is one place in East Pakistan where there are 900 people per square mile.

Out-of-town visitors included Mrs. H. C. Foos from Hood River, Oregon, sister to Pastor Lange; and Mr. and Mrs. Dorwin Lange, brother and sister-in-law from Palouse. They were house guests of Dr. and Mrs. Leland Reiber of Troy—Mrs. Reiber is a niece of Pastor Lange.

assisted in the workshop by keynoting various areas in leadership responsibility, followed by group discussions with the students and teachers. Water sports and other games and activities were provided on Sunday morning. It was an inspiring and extremely beneficial outing.

◆ "I am six feet tall, I don't like my first name and I weigh one hundred and plenty." Elder Morris Venden thus introduced himself to the students and teachers as the Fall Week of Prayer began on Monday morning, October 6. Besides his inspiring talks he spent much time in the various religion classes throughout the week, in addition to individual counseling. The Christian life was presented in such a way that showed it not only was the logical course to follow, but it was also the path to true happiness. Elder Venden's emphasis was on learning to know Christ better. We thank you, Elder Venden, for a most inspiring week! Every week in the life of a Christian should be a week of spiritual emphasis.

PROGRESS

It is a delight to see the new school building growing in size and beauty on the Weiser side of the outskirts of the city of Payette. The four-room teaching complex has the roof on and the gym is ready for the rafters.

This consolidated school serves the constituency in Payette, Weiser, New Plymouth and Vale. They are justly proud of this fine, new building. Elder H. E. Darby is leading out in the construction helping the contractors, the Trees brothers. The laymen in the area have given many hundreds of hours of labor.

The target date for completion is Thanksgiving. It will be a special Thanksgiving time as the new school begins to serve the youth.

GSA Receives Gift

Mr. Merle Hamilton, manager of the Caldwell branch of the Idaho First National Bank, presented the $2,000 donation to A. L. Nelson, principal of Gem State Academy.

Gem State Academy was the recipient of a $2,000 donation from the Laura Moore Cunningham Foundation of Boise. Five Boise area institutions received part of the $42,000 donated to charities and institutions this year which were made throughout Idaho by the banking family foundation.

The foundation was established in 1963 by the will of Laura Moore Cunningham for the purpose of aiding charities and creating scholarships to Idaho universities and colleges. It is administered by second and third generation members of the Moore family, one of the founders of the 102-year-old Idaho First National Bank.

Soldier of the Month

Spec. Garold W. Rogers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Irwin L. Rogers of Boise, was selected as Post Soldier of the Month for September at Fort Detrick, Maryland.

He graduated from Gem State in 1967 and attended Walla Walla College. His selection as Soldier of the Month was based on military bearing, knowledge, personal appearance and conduct.

Assigned to the Army Medical Research Institute of Infectious Diseases, Gary welcomes this opportunity for medical training and hopes later to go into the mission field.

A new Adventist Servicemen's Center just completed last year at Takoma Park, Maryland, is close to where Gary is stationed, and he has had the privilege of touring it and meeting Elder Green who is the chaplain. There are about 250 Adventist servicemen in this area. Other service centers provided by the church are found in San Antonio, Texas, and Frankfurt, Germany. Another is to be constructed on Okinawa.

Gary, like all servicemen, is grateful for all that has been done to help them, and for the letters, cards, and packages sent to them by those who took time to care.

Arctic Junior Camp: Bigger and Wetter

You can always tell when it is summer in the Arctic. The snow disappears, the days lengthen to twenty-four hours and the temperature climbs to 50 degrees and sometimes a little above. And when summer comes it's junior camp time in the village of Selawik, Alaska.

This year's camp was preceded by a two-week Vacation Bible School. I wish you could have seen the little village chapel as its sides bulged with eager anticipation to receive the boys and girls that were desirous of learning more about God's love for His children everywhere.

Judy Drake and Julia Fontanilla, two student nurses on leave from the smaller states, were the backbone of the program. Aided by Miss Alice Bentley and Naomi Topkok, the pastor's wife, the two girls followed the old adage of late to bed and early to rise makes one healthy, wealthy and tired. Everyone was blessed with many enriching experiences. As the two nurses said, they will be going back home with a new concept of mission work. Their hearts and purses will both be opened wide when the call for mission work is proclaimed.

This was the fourth annual Arctic junior camp. Our Eskimo name is Camp Nanuk (or Camp Polar Bear). The name was well chosen for this year's camp. The weather played no favorites and one boatload of over 40 campers had to spend a night on the beach huddled together for protection and warmth as the cold rain and damp spray from the storm-tossed lake made sleeping almost impossible. These hearty boys and girls of the North finally walked the last six miles to camp. They were given a warm welcome and some warm food. But alas, our poor old surplus tents have long ago done their best and many of the campers had to spend a second night with the rain dripping in on them. We are hoping to get new tents before our next camp.

Pastor and Mrs. Joe Chythlook, from Aleknagik, were new staff members at our camp this year. Pastor Chythlook served as our camp pastor and counselor. His wife, Molly, served as cook. We had two Coleman stoves and eighty-three mouths to feed. But Molly produced three warm meals a day and kept everyone coming back for seconds—some for thirds.

Some interested church members from the "lower 48" had sent the funds for leather crafts, and the belts and purses were much appreciated by the camper. When the whistle blew, everyone would run to the lean-to (which served as cookshack, chapel, craft room, nursing station and staff quarters). They would get their crafts and instructions then run back to their tent before they were soaked through and through.

The wind, rain and 45-degree weather were a pleasant relief from the 70-degrees-below temperature of winter. So, rain or shine, the beach was crowded with eager and shivering swimmers daily. If you have never been swimming in 40-degree water, you just don't know what an invigorating experience it can be.

Your continued support of the Alaska Mission makes the camp and other village evangelism programs possible. We want to thank you for your support and interest. Some day a little Eskimo may come down the golden street and say, "Dagoo!" (northern Eskimo for "Thank you"). RONALD BREINGAN

Camping on Vank Island

A week at an Alaskan Junior Camp is an experience long to be remembered! This summer 42 campers and a staff of 18 enjoyed such a busy, fun-packed week at Camp Lorraine, southeastern Alaska's camp, located near Wrangell on Vank Island.

The camp is situated in a picturesque setting along the beach of a sheltered bay, formerly the Hiebert Logging Camp. Tree-studded islands and clear blue waters, plied by fishing boats, tugs and barges, lend to a truly Alaskan setting.

Campers from the nearby logging camps arrived at camp by float plane, while campers from Ketchikan, Juneau and Sitka traveled to and from Wrangell by State ferry—a 19-hour trip each way for those living farthest away. Upon arrival at Wrangell, campers and baggage were taken the 10 miles to Vank Island by small boat over choppy waters.

Arriving at camp, campers in life jackets loaded their arms with suitcases, sleeping bags, etc., and made their way (a bit uneasily at times) along the so-called "stiff-leg," a narrow floating ramp leading from the boat float to the beach. In the rain, with the boards slick, this can be quite a feat, but the campers all seemed to keep their feet well planted and no one slipped into the water.

As the rain poured down, the camp staff at first felt a bit concerned that the spirits of the campers might well be dampened, especially since accommodations consisted of tents with no cots or beds. But such was not the case. Enthusiasm was high and the boys and girls showed a real spirit of happiness,

Left: Four days of rain and three days of mosquitoes did not dampen the spirits of these campers even though their tents offered little protection from either.

Right: There is standing room only in Camp Nanuk's outdoor cafeteria. No one seems to mind as the line is just as long when it comes time for seconds.

rain or shine (which proved to be mostly "rain").

Appetites were hearty and, sitting on the large wooden planks at the plastic-covered plywood tables, campers enjoyed wholesome meals prepared tastily by Mrs. Mary Varnell and her helpers. The dining area was outdoors, covered by clear plastic, and though a bit primitive, was the favorite spot of most of the campers.

The former little schoolhouse was a bustle of activity as campers worked diligently on shell crafts, led by Mrs. Harold Dawson. Shell pictures, pins, frogs and turtles were among the attractive finished products carried home proudly from camp.

Behind the camp, at the end of a wooden trail leading through the woods, stands a little white church—quiet and impressive against the backdrop of greenery, a bubbling creek to one side. Here the campers gathered each morning for a heart-stirring talk by the camp pastor, Douglas Cooper. Decisions were made, others strengthened, as in the friendly warmth of that little church young minds were directed to the "Source of all happiness."

The days were packed full of busy activities which included camp craft, boating, and even water-skiing for those who dared brave the chilly waters. Contests such as nail driving, tug-of-war, needle threading, and obstacle courses were a highlight each afternoon except Sabbath, when other appropriate activities were planned.

Each busy day ended with a rousing campfire program. The campers proved to be real songsters, their happy voices reaching out over the water in the stillness of the evening. Stories, continued from night to night, were another highlight of the camp.

As darkness began to fall, campers hurried to their tents and snuggled deep into their sleeping bags, falling asleep to the pitter-patter of raindrops on the canvass and the gentle lapping of waves on the shore. Another busy day was ended. Another day to be remembered and cherished in the heart of a junior camper.

Plans for camp improvement have been laid and are expected to be carried out over the next several years. These plans include seven cabins, each with a barrel woodstove for heat and for drying rain-soaked clothes, a lodge with kitchen and dining room, and a craft building.

Stewardship Principles Presented

Elder Mel Rees, Stewardship secretary for the North Pacific Union Conference, presented an inspiring series of stewardship messages to the Anchorage church on his itinerary throughout the ten Alaskan churches. He spoke on such topics as, "Disinterested Benevolence," "Money in the Way," and "The Smallest Gift."

The messages were illustrated with modern day miracles from the experiences of men and women who have taken God at His word, "Prove me now herewith . . ." and have since enjoyed remarkable fulfillments of that promise. It was pointed out that "man's extremity is God's opportunity."—Acts of the Apostles, p. 146.

As the basis and underlying principles of stewardship were portrayed, several were heard to comment in substance, "This is the most practical and meaningful presentation of the subject that I have heard." Many people left the meetings with a new concept of stewardship, and a determination to follow their Master with a total commitment.

Anchorage Dream Realized

On Sunday, September 14, after many hours of donated labor and many years of financial sacrificing by the church members, the new Anchorage school was officially opened. For some twenty years the Anchorage Adventist children were crowded into the Sabbath school rooms in the church where few facilities for a real school existed.

Elder J. C. Hansen, president and educational secretary for the Alaska Mission, with the aid of a former pastor, Elder H. L. Sauder now of Loma Linda University, cut the bright red ribbon that was tied across the entrance to the building. During the ceremony, L. David Ekvall, M.D., was awarded a plaque which expressed appreciation for his generosity in making the school possible. Dr. Ekvall donated the five-acre plot and supplied most of the building materials and workmen.

The open house that followed the ribbon-cutting ceremony had been announced through the local news media, and it was estimated that several hundred guests from the church and community toured the facility.

The new building houses three classrooms, a library, a large recreation room, and a one-thousand-square-foot teachers' apartment. The entire building is carpeted with the exception of the recreation room. The new school is well equipped with a complete sound system. One overhead projector has been purchased with plans for another this year. A self-contained science lab table with its own water and propane supply was given to the school the day of the open house. Future plans call for a listening post and a copy machine.

Most visitors marveled at the sight of the girls' rest room with its Gay Nineties decor and a gold-gilded framed mirror, delicate chandeliers, built-in cabinets and red velvet wallpaper.

The setting for the school is ideal in that it's located about ten miles out of town on the only paved road in the immediate area. The landscape is typical of Alaska, just natural and rustic. The entire five acres is beautifully wooded with birch and spruce trees with the exception of a small parking area and a small ball field. A picturesque creek flowing through one corner of the five acres adds to the already aesthetical environment of the area.

Mr. David Escobar, principal, pinpoints a current event.

At present, forty-two students are enrolled, giving the school the largest enrollment of any other Adventist school for over a half million square miles.

The three teachers along with the church members praise God for the accomplishments thus far and pray that this school will be instrumental in preparing many children in the Anchorage area for a part in the Lord's work, and that as a result many will be in heaven.

DAVID A. ESCOBAR

Principal

"The true object of education should be carefully considered. God has entrusted to each one capacities and powers, that they may be returned to Him enlarged and improved. All His gifts are granted to us to be used to the utmost."—Fundamentals of Christian Education, p. 82.

A visitor admires the finished product.

Weddings

On the evening of August 31, Judy Martin of College Place, Washington, and Douglas Way of Caldwell, Idaho, were united in marriage in the Sedro Woolley Seventh-day Adventist church. Mr. and Mrs. Way plan to make their first home at College Place where they will continue their education at Walla Walla College.

Minda Lea Shepherd and Ralph Christie were united in marriage by the bride's father, Pastor C. A. Shepherd, in a candlelight service at the Everett, Washington, Seventh-day Adventist church August 17. The groom is the son of Mrs. Agnes Christie, teacher at Mountlake Terrace School. The couple are making their home at Gem State Academy where the groom is teaching in the Spanish department and the bride is a student teacher.

Sunday evening, August 24, the Mt. Tabor Seventh-day Adventist church was the scene of a beautiful candlelight wedding which witnessed the blending of two lives into one. Cheryl Hanson became the bride of N. Bruce Alexander, both of Portland, Oregon. Elder B. M. Kurtz officiated. Following the ceremony the couple left immediately for Kentucky where Bruce is employed.

Lyndell Louise Hudson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Al Hudson of Baker, Oregon, and Phillip V. Anderson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Al G. Anderson of Chetek, Wisconsin, exchanged marriage vows August 21 in the Seventh-day Adventist church of Escondido, California. Elder N. C. Sorenson of Glendale, California, officiated at the candlelight ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson are making their home near Escondido where both are on the staff of San Pasqual Academy.

Lorraine Elizabeth Parker of College Place, Washington, and Dale Thomas Ortmann of Seal Beach, California, were united in marriage August 17 in the Chapel of the new College Place Seventh-day Adventist Church. Dale is a graduate of Walla Walla College and is now employed by the City of Los Angeles. Dale and Lorraine have established their new home in Seal Beach. Elder William L. Woodruff officiated at the wedding.

Community Involvement

To become involved in community activity and leadership without sacrificing the traditional Seventh-day Adventist principles or philosophies is highly commendable. To let our lights shine so that every class of people in our own hometown might have an opportunity to know and love the Christ we serve is the main aim of each and every employee of the General Hospital.

Some of the leadership abilities and capabilities that have been recognized among the staff members of the General Hospital this past year are the election of Mr. Jack Engeln, hospital pharmacist, to the position of president of the Eastern Washington Pharmaceutical Association; Mrs. Rose Nilsson, president of the Association of Seventh-day Adventist Nurses, Walla Walla chapter; Chaplain Bill Ward, president of the Blue Mountain Ministerial Association; and C. Gregg McKown, assistant administrator, president of the Walla Walla Council on Alcoholism and Drugs.

There are numerous individuals who are past presidents of many organizations locally and statewide.

Future appointments include Mr. Irmin Burke, hospital administrator, serving on the legislative committee for the Washington State Hospital Association and on the board of directors of several organizations, as well as being president-elect of the Pacific Northwest Personnel Managers' Association. Mr. McKown is also president-elect of the Walla Walla Kiwanis Club. These, in addition to many positions of leadership within the church, are all supplied by the staff at the Walla Walla General Hospital.

NORTH PACIFIC UNION GLEANER

Walla Walla College

The Romeros

The Romeros, Spain's first family of the guitar, appear on the Walla Walla College lyceum series in Columbia Auditorium Saturday evening, November 1, at 8 o'clock.

Celedonio Romero and sons, Celin, Pepe and Angel.

Since their introduction to American audiences seven seasons ago, the Romeros have been described as the Royal Family of the Guitar. As guest artists with symphony orchestras they added another dimension to their extraordinary performance record.

During their seven seasons of touring, they have averaged 100 concerts per season and have visited every major city and every state in the Union, including Hawaii and Alaska. The Romeros have also made several television appearances as guest artists.

Celedonio Romero, the founder of this family guild, was born in Malaga, the youngest son of a Spanish architectural engineer who designed the harbor of Gibraltar. Receiving his first guitar at the age of five, Celedonio almost immediately formed a love and dedication for the instrument which was to encompass two generations.

A most unusual aspect of Romero's life and career is the talent which he has developed and encouraged in his sons, Celin, Pepe (considered one of the world's greatest Flamenco guitarists), and Angel, who plays Bach and Scarlatti in concert with his family.

The children were practicing scales as soon as they were old enough to hold a guitar, and by ten each had made his concert debut at Seville's Teatro Lope de Vega. Under their father's guidance, each has developed an individual style of guitar playing which distinguishes him from any other member of the family.

The result of the family's art is a cohesiveness and unity of performance which is considered positively uncanny.

Alumni Homecoming Events

Rewarding Alumni Homecoming events have been planned for November 8 and 9 with Dr. William M. Landeen, alumnus, former president, writer, scholar, and challenging speaker to give the Sabbath worship hour sermon, according to Dr. Donald Eichner, executive secretary of the Alumni Association.

Registration in the College Church narthex will precede the Sabbath school for which Professor C. W. Shankel has arranged an all-alumni program. Elder Merlin Kretschmar, recently returned from South America, will give the mission feature; Elder Larry Lewis will teach the general class study; Jon Gilbertson is vocal soloist for the Sabbath school.

The three members of the modern language department faculty at WWC teach their native languages. Charles Rochat, department chairman and assistant professor (center), who displays a picture from his native Switzerland which he visited this summer, teaches French; Eladio Velazquez (left), a native of Chile, is instructor in Spanish; and German-born Reinhard Czeratzki teaches the classes in German.

From 2 until 3:45 alumni gatherings by decades are planned, locations to be announced. At 4 p.m. an Evensong will coincide with the close of the Sabbath hours.

A no-host dinner in Kellogg Hall is set for 5:30 as arranged by Mrs. F. E. Meckling, social vice-president. Elder Dean VanTassel will preside for the business meeting which will conclude in time for the annual Our Amateur Hour. (Tickets for reserved seats will be available at the program.)

Sunday morning at 8 o'clock in the Alaskan Room of Kellogg Hall a 190 Club breakfast is called, says Dr. E. S. Winter, chairman of the gymnasium committee.

New Dietitian Arrives

Walla Walla General Hospital is happy to announce the arrival of our new dietitian, Mrs. Iola Devereaux Cox, immediately from the New England Memorial Hospital in Stoneham, Mass., where she was the therapeutic dietitian and assistant manager of food service. Prior to this time she had served in the Bellevue School District and the Renton Valley Hospital. She is a graduate of Walla Walla College and has had extra dietetic postgraduate work at the University of Washington in Seattle.

She comments that the East is very interesting, but give her the dry, cool air of the West and its friendly people any time.

Mrs. Cox succeeds Miss June Bishop who was the hospital dietitian for five years. Miss Bishop also worked part time at Walla Walla College. She has terminated to continue her education with a Master's degree at Loma Linda University.

The hospital administration and Board of Directors join the rest of the hospital family in wishing Miss Bishop the best in everything as she continues her education and give a warm, hearty welcome to Mrs. Cox as she assumes her duties at the General Hospital.
