There Is a Difference

The cover of your March 21 issue stated the animal in the picture was a "Dallas sheep ram" from Alaska. My husband has lived in Alaska for years and though there are "Dall sheep rams" in Alaska, none have looked like the one in your cover picture. We believe this beautiful creation of God belongs to the deer family.

Mrs. Stan Christensen
Milton-Freewater, Ore.

... The picture is not a sheep, but obviously of the deer family. There is no such "thing" as a Dallas sheep. There is a Dall sheep in Yukon and Alaska. Dall sheep are similar to Stone sheep or Rocky Mountain sheep, but are completely white and have a slightly different horn curl, but they are horned, not antlered. If the deer on the cover was from Alaska, it must have been a Sitka deer, the only type found there, smaller and more compact than local mule or white-tail deer.

Of course, McKinley National Park has had a name change to Denali National Park and Wildlife Preserve. Denali is the ancient Indian name for Mt. McKinley and means the Great One. Anyone who has seen Mt. McKinley in its majesty can easily understand why it was called "Great One."

The photography is excellent and the picture itself beautiful. It is sometimes nice to know that even publishers are human and make foolish mistakes!

Ray and Alice Grenberg
Coeur d'Alene, Idaho

... That has to be the funniest sheep ram I have seen and I have hunted with both gun and camera. ... Horns like that don't grow on a Dallas sheep ram.

Bill Rolstad
Pendleton, Ore.

I would like to compliment you on the beautiful GLEANER cover of March 21. On the cover is the picture of a blacktail deer, a buck in full velvet.

There is no such animal as a Dallas sheep ram. There are Dall sheep but they are all white with dark curled horns. Blacktail deer are usually found near the coast or in a wet environment. This species of deer are common in Alaska.

I don't mean to be critical but I thought some of the GLEANER readers may be confused by this inaccurate information. ...

Jim Sutton
Cashmere, Wash.

The red-faced editor is temporarily in hibernation and can be reached at Box 72, Irkutsk, Siberia. He is also planning to have his eyes checked so he gets the right caption with the cover. Reader Sutton is correct. The cover showed a blacktail deer, a photo taken by Tom and Pat Leeson near Hurricane Ridge in the Olympic National Park. The white flowers are avalanche lilies.

IF IT DOESN'T LOOK RIGHT,
DON'T PRINT IT.

New and Old Theology

I have been trying to learn about theology, old, new, true or false. Yesterday in trying to explain "new and old theology," I became hopelessly bogged down and realized I don't really understand.

This morning in the book The Upward Look, page 86, I read these comforting words from the pen of inspiration:

"We need not tax our minds for some far-fetched explanation of the words of Scripture. Thus the Jewish teachers did. They quoted the ideas and traditions of the rabbis, confusing the minds of their hearers." ... "Keep the love of Christ prominent. ... Repeat ... often His simple lessons."

I have decided not to worry about all the talk I hear, such as error in the Sabbath school Quarterly, etc. I will simply cling to God's word, "If ye love me keep my commandments. ... Be ye perfect. ... He is able to keep you from falling. ... This is the victory that overcometh the world ... faith"; and leave the fine points of theology to the preachers and those who readily comprehend.

Jo Ann Phillips
Yelm, Wash.

Name Correction

The Jan. 17 issue of the GLEANER carried the story "Alaska Visitor Has Reunion With Baker School Principal." The story was written by Blaine Kenney and not by me. ... I felt a little guilty about my name being signed to the article. ... Stella Carter
Baker, Ore.

Russian Member Identified

A recent issue of the GLEANER gave the glowing account of the Walla Walla College music group in the USSR. I am sure the group will never forget the trip as others who have been there will always recall every moment.

The picture showing part of the group with two Moscow church members left one member unidentified. The unidentified member is Peter Afanasuk. He was part of the Russian delegation to the last General Conference. I had the privilege of meeting him in Russia on a recent trip there.

Seatbelts Should Be Used

I was deeply concerned about the testimonial in the Feb. 21 issue about the family who survived an accident with only minor damage in spite of not having seatbelts on.

At the end of the article the writer expresses gratitude at God's caring but no mention is made of deciding to wear seatbelts. I would hope that decision was only omitted from the article but was made.

If not, it seems pretty presumptuous to continue expecting God's protection and care while ignoring reasonable and proven precautions. ...

Back to the Original Diet

Oh, how we look forward every other Friday evening to our copy of the Northwest paper for our time. Now that the ring issue seems to be laid to rest ... do you suppose we dare delve into such a discussion so controversial as what the Spirit of Prophecy could have possibly meant by the statement that God is leading His people step by step back to the original diet? Counsels on Diet and Foods, p. 380.

... Would it be too bold to suggest that unless we get our lust for "tasty concoct-

Work for the Deaf

I was pleased to read about the Adventist school for the deaf in the March 7 issue. I have a special interest in seeing this story appear because I am the parent of a deaf child.

Some people may not know that the school in Dallas, Ore., is the second Adventist school for the deaf in the United States, although it is the only school for elementary-aged children. The other Adventist school for the deaf is in Alpena, Ark., and is a training center for hearing impaired teens. . . .

So many times when we think of furthering and finishing God's work, we tend to think of it in a way that's most familiar to us with the hearing world. But as we all know, God's message isn't for the hearing alone. It's for the deaf, the blind, . . . for the mentally retarded, for the hearing and everyone else not mentioned here. . . .

I would like to propose . . . for the upcoming constituency meetings to consider a conference-merger fund for those special children's educational needs. Our church's first step towards reaching out to these special children has been to establish these deaf Adventist schools. . . . Consider this an idea to help with the Thousand Days of Reaping. . . .

Information on Bird Cover

Thank you very much for showing my photograph on the Jan. 3, 1983, issue of the GLEANER. I have for years enjoyed the photography displayed on the GLEANER covers and was happy and honored to have one of mine included.

In the cover description you indicated I called the cover picture "Clark's Nutcracker" and you also said, "In our ignor-

From the Editor

Tentative plans are being made for a series of articles for the GLEANER dealing with various aspects of marriage and divorce.

Interviews are needed to get information for the series. Such interviews will be private and confidential. No names will be used. Interviews are needed in the following categories:

1. You have been recently divorced or have gone through a separation.

2. You faced serious problems in your marriage but were able to work out solutions.

3. Your parents were divorced while you were a child in the home.

Drop a note to: Editor, GLEANER, Box 16677, Portland, OR 97216, or phone (503) 255-7300. Your help will be appreciated.

Using a Concordance

By Diane Forsyth

"A concordance is a place to find Bible verses something like a telephone book is a place to find telephone numbers. Neither telephone directories nor concordances are meant to be read through. And we would hardly turn to a telephone book for an explanation of how our friends are thinking nor for instruction in how to develop skills. The telephone directory only gives a number so that we can call our friend or the local community college. Likewise, a concordance only refers us on to the friendship and instruction in the Bible."

Is that how you understand a concordance? Or do you find some part of that description inadequate? Actually, I wrote that description to illustrate a common, but inadequate, understanding of a concordance. The problem is, the description only accounts for the first of the following three uses of a concordance:

Diane Forsyth is associate pastor of the Walla Walla College Church.

ance of birds, we assume this is the official name of this particular one." I thought you might be interested in a little more information on this particular bird. The picture is of a Clark's Nutcracker (Nucifraga columbiana) Crow (Corvidae). It is a bird found in stands of juniper, ponderosa pine and larch on high mountain ranges near the timberline. You'll find it near camps, trails or picnic sites for it begs and steals food scraps.

There is another bird called Gray Jay (Perisoreus canadensis) Crow (Corvidae). It also is found in the northern coniferous forest. It is smaller and has a much shorter bill than the Clark's Nutcracker. The Gray Jay was formerly called Canada Jay and more popularly known as the Whiskey Jay or Camp Robber. Since both birds are attracted

1. To find Bible passages
2. To become acquainted with Hebrew and Greek words (even if you don't know either of those languages)
3. To obtain additional understanding of the Bible writers and their messages.

Since it is true that a concordance is a place to find Bible passages, let's talk a little about that now, and more about the other two uses later.

Imagine that you read about a leopard changing its spots, but you can't remember where that is in the Bible. If you look for "leopard" in Young's Analytical Concordance of the Bible you will find leopard mentioned only eight times in the whole Bible. None of the listings mentions a leopard's spots. But "Jeremiah 13:23 — Can the Ethiopian change . . . skin, — or the leo" sounds familiar. So you turn to that verse. Sure enough, that's it.

What if a verse does not have a unique, or infrequently-used word in it? For example, "The sabbath was made for man, not man for the sabbath" (Mark 2:27). You will be able to find a verse like this more quickly in an abridged concordance, like Cruden's, because it doesn't give every listing for each word.

This week get acquainted with an unabridged concordance like Young's or Strong's and also with an abridged concordance like Cruden's or Walker's. If you don't have these, check with a library or friend. Maybe you could borrow them from the church. Now, think of some Bible verses you have heard, but can't find. For example, "When the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" Would you look in the abridged or unabridged concordance for that? As you look, notice other verses that contain similar or complementary thoughts. Are there other verses, for example, that say something about "finding faith?" Are there other verses that indicate the Son of man looks for faith?

to campsites to appropriate as much food as possible, it is quite common for novices to identify both birds as Camp Robbers.

Idaho Conference Constituency Session: A Call for More Lay Involvement

By Ed Schwisow

In a day-long session marked by swift dispatch of assigned business and active floor discussion, Idaho Conference delegates adjourned their triennial meeting March 20 with a full slate of reelected officers and departmental directors.

With a final ballot count at the Gem State Academy meeting of more than 10-1 in favor of reelection, Bruce Johnston, president; Don Gray, secretary; and Reuben Beck, treasurer; retained their positions for three-year terms.

Also reelected were the following directors: Evaine Fehrer, Adventist Book Center; LaVern Opp, education; Ed Howland, publishing; James Gray, Sabbath school and personal ministries; Robert Reynolds, youth and Pathfinders; and Leon Cornforth, trust services.

In his report to the assembly, Johnston recounted highlights of the past three years, but also spoke of perplexities facing the membership.

He mentioned specifically the uncertainties created by the bankruptcy of Donald Davenport, a physician who had solicited and received large loans from various church institutions.

"The trauma caused by the Davenport loan losses has made us all take a long, hard look at how we should safeguard church funds," Johnston said. "Though the progress of our work in the Idaho Conference has not suffered because of recent losses to the denomination, we still are members of a world church. When one part suffers, all the body feels the pain."

In his report, the president appealed for greater lay participation in the formal decision-making process.

"We see the need for wider lay counsel in all aspects of the conference, but especially in financial decision making," he said.

As if in response to this statement of policy, the assembly approved an amendment to alter the conference executive committee to include eight lay persons in the 15-member body. Those elected to the committee are as follows: Bruce Johnston, president; Don Gray, secretary; Reuben Beck; Ron Carroll; Nelma Drake; Herb Hef-fel; Al Heitzmann; Don Oltman; Harold Page; Sarah Spaulding; Newton States; Jim Stiltz; Elmer Unterseher; Wayne Wentland and Henry Zollbrecht.

The assembly also voted to authorize specialized lay advisory committees to prepare recommendations for the conference committee on matters where specific expertise might be required in financial matters.

Johnston said that laymen with expertise in this area had helped the conference in a recent transaction in which a nursing home facility, formerly known as the Boise Convalescent Center, was deeded to the Idaho Conference.

After lay advisors and conference committee members had given careful study to the question, it was voted to sell the facility immediately on a 20-year contract. The transaction of the $2.4 million sale was completed March 1, 1983.

The monthly income from the nursing home sale will be used as follows: 50 percent for evangelism; 25 percent for education and 25 percent for special projects. The conference committee has approved this formula.

During the time set aside for delegates to approve plans and resolutions, delegates directed the conference committee to give added attention to secular campus ministries. The motion, in its final form, stopped short of calling for a full-time employee to coordinate the campus work, but directed the committee to seek advice and expertise from various sources to help educate youth leaders as they begin or continue campus ministries.

After committees on constitution and bylaws, licenses and credentials and nominating presented their final reports, time was set aside for questions and answers.

Delegates took this time to request information on various issues which had come up during the day, but the deepest interest seemed to converge on what some felt to be a breakdown of accountability on the Davenport loan question.

Richard Fearing, North Pacific Union Conference president, told the assembly that the major questions on responsibility and discipline would be resolved after a special session of the union executive board met the following week (March 29) in Portland. (See story on page 8.)

Delegates also directed the conference committee to urge further study on streamlining organizational structure for more efficient administration among the various levels of the denominational system.

Repeated testimonies from the delegates during the final hour of questions and answers showed that the assembly appreciated the openness and willing responses by administrators. But even more convincing testimony to the importance of the session — especially the latter portion — was given as members, often from distant churches, registered their interest by staying by until the call for adjournment.

The president's call for greater lay involvement, interest and counsel seems well on its way to reality.

Bruce Johnston was reelected president of the Idaho Conference.

Walla Walla Brass Choir Takes Part in Many Area Church Services

By Larry Parsons

The Walla Walla College Brass Choir believes that praising God doesn't have to be confined to only one group of people. It's interdenominational.

Through the years the brass choir has reached out to its community by providing many church services filled with energetic praises toward God, both in non-Adventist and Adventist churches.

"There are a lot of sincere Christians out there who really want to know Christ," says Dr. H. Lloyd Leno, director of the ensemble. "The primary goal of the brass choir is to praise God through sacred music with these people."

The brass choir has been doing just that, and enjoying the fellowship of other Christians for years.

There has been some very positive feedback from the churches. "We often get letters that speak well of the group," Leno said. "The personal comments at the churches are even more indicative of sincerity, though. We have several personal comments after every church service."

The written responses do speak well for the group. Andrew Jarvis of the First Presbyterian Church of Walla Walla wrote commenting, "The members of the brass choir performed and conveyed the very best in the way of Christian music and the spirit of Christ-like love."

Dale White, senior pastor at the Tri-City Community Church, wrote, "It was a very special treat for us to host the Walla Walla College brass ensemble. The group's selection and performance were impeccable."

Every church the brass choir has performed at has requested that the choir return for more performances.

According to Leno, playing at other churches is a way of making friends with non-Adventists. "It's a demonstration that we're interested in them," Leno said. "This results in the breaking down of barriers and the erasing of prejudices."

There are benefits for the choir members themselves also. Aside from the sumptuous potlucks prior to the services, playing in different churches gives the students in the choir a chance to get acquainted with people of different denominations.

Kim Chapman, a percussionist with the choir, commented, "It's very important to let people know that we're not an isolated church. We don't force our beliefs, but we share and compare them. I think that is a very good approach to that situation."

Barry Doneski, who plays trumpet with the group, said, "I think it's good to get to know people in their own religious environment. I've learned a lot about other denominational services this way."

Al Crook, a trombonist with the ensemble, said, "I think that visiting in this way is great because it lets people know that Adventists are interested in them. Performing in other churches tells people that our college is here to serve."

According to Leno the value of the brass choir is its low-key approach and indirect appeal. "We're opening doors and making friends," Leno said.

"We're not an intimidating group. Music creates a sense of community. We're not trying to reap the harvest before it's ripe."

"It's a privilege to play music at other churches," Leno said. "We have a unique opportunity that not many people have."

"Someday we'll all know Christ fully, and we will praise Him . . . together."

Several Oregon Academy Students Participate in Week-Long Health Experience

By C. Elwyn Platner

High winds whipped great frothy waves high onto the beach as nine academy students seated on a sand dune just above the water contemplated the power of nature and God during the early hours of a winter morning.

The students and their leaders, Gary Parks and Brad Davis, had come to Pacific City, Ore., for a week of study and meditation to get a clearer understanding of God's original plan for total health physically, mentally and spiritually.

A week-long experiment, the adventure was limited to six students from Milo Academy, two from Laurelwood Academy and one from Hood View Junior Academy. The young people bunked at a cabin provided by Dale Akerman of Salem. Meals were coordinated by Carol Edmister of Meadow Glade, Wash.

To qualify for the project each student had to receive clearance from the faculty committee, his or her guidance counselor and work supervisor as well as contribute $25 for expenses.

"Our rationale was that many of our students have attended weekend Bible conferences," said Brad Davis, "but we wanted to take a whole week when just a few students could participate to experience the biblical concept of right living and learn to live together as a group. That's something that's tough to do just on a weekend."

Each day began at 5:40 a.m. with personal devotional study before a jog on the beach which came at 6:15. Breakfast was followed by mild exercises and then a study session centered on nutrition, exercise and other subjects of body care. The afternoon session included an activity in the community, more time in study and then more recreation.

Among the community activities were a walk through the community to get acquainted with people on the street and offering to help anyone who wanted help and a field trip to the Tillamook Adventist School to interact with the students.

Group interaction projects were introduced on Monday afternoon by Bj Christensen, pastor of the Portland Sunnyside Church.

Class study centered on a syllabus which Parks and Davis had prepared from materials they had gathered from various specialists in the fields of nutrition, public health, medicine and others.

For the weekend activities the students prepared a Sabbath school program to present in the nearby Nestucca Church and then, following the services, they visited with two church members. They hiked up dunes at Cape Kiwanda and that evening they joined in a 6.7-mile jog.

Commenting on the week's experience, Kathleen Palanuk, a Laurelwood student, said, "Every day seemed like Sabbath to me. We listened to music much of the time and never was it anything less than what would bring glory and honor to God Himself. Never did our conversation leave God out, yet I didn't feel like I was overdoing Him."

Another student, Rhonda Pierce of Milo Academy, remarked at the end of the week, "I've never felt so refreshed and cleaned out in all my life. And the closeness we've shared is just beautiful . . . seeing each other at our worst and still caring. It's helped me personally beyond my highest expectation. I came here shy and withdrawn, but now I can really feel good about myself and my relationship with God and other people."

Regarding their study on health, Dan Miller of Milo Academy said, "I believe I learned more about health and God this week than in the last three years or more."

Out for a jog between classes are Joey Brett, Anna Lee and Rhonda Pierce.

With their faces to the wind while perched atop a dune are Jill Harris, Julie Grinnell, Mark Perry, Gary Parks and Tom Weiskind.

Family Pet Dog Survives 25 Days of Bitter Cold in Coyote Trap

By Craig Troinanello

Editor's Note: Craig Troinanello is a staff writer for the Daily Record published in Ellensburg, Wash. The Colemans are members of the Cle Elum, Wash., Church. Troinanello also took the picture.

Brutus is recovering.

For 25 days the four-year-old cross between a St. Bernard and Great Pyrenees endured icy rains, snow and sub-zero temperatures after his leg became snagged in a coyote trap.

Then on Sunday, almost a month after he disappeared, Brutus was found by a passing hiker.

"It is a miracle. All he had to eat was snow. I just can't believe it when you think of all the cold, icy, rainy nights," said owner Connie Coleman of rural Ellensburg.

"I don't think he could have lasted much longer," Mrs. Coleman said.

Veterinarian Dr. Gary Schmid agrees.

"He was pushing it right to the limit," Schmid said.

Brutus, a once hulking 150-pound dog, now weighs only 75 pounds.

Lying in the open without protection from wind, rain or snow, his body used its reserve of fat and then began feeding on muscle tissue, Schmid said.

"He was literally a rack of bones when he was brought in, but he is coming along well," Schmid said.

Brutus is being fed a special high protein diet that includes plenty of canned cat food while he recovers at Schmid's clinic on the Old Vantage Highway.

But for Brutus, the battle isn't yet completely over. Part of his front right leg may have to be amputated if circulation can't be restored to the area below where the thin wire snare cut. But Schmid thinks the dog has a 50-50 chance of retaining the leg.

"The trap really cinched down on the leg, but the leg is still warm, and that's surprising," Schmid said.

The snare-type trap operates similar to a lasso. The wire usually catches the animal by the neck and tightens the more the animal struggles. Washington State Game Department agents are investigating the case to determine if the owner of the snare trap had been checking the trap every 72 hours as required by law.

The dog is still weak and a short walk down the veterinarian's hallway is enough to exhaust him. But his tail wags and his eyes follow all the movement around him, especially that of nine-year-old Ronnie Coleman.

"Ronnie said a lot of prayers, and I guess they were answered," Mrs. Coleman said.

Brutus disappeared from Coleman's Elk Heights home on Dec. 15. Ron and Connie Coleman took long walks around their property looking for the dog, and they took out newspaper ads and placed notices on the bulletin boards of local veterinarian offices. But no sign of Brutus. Christmas passed. Mrs. Coleman accompanied a sympathetic trapper on his trap line, but found no evidence of the dog.

After nearly a month the Colemans had pretty much given up hope. But on Sunday a call came from Dr. Michael Cole who had been hiking above the Highline Canal in Watt Canyon about a mile from the Coleman's home when he spotted the dog.

"I hadn't been in that area for about five years, but I decided to hike there that day," Cole said.

"I spotted what appeared to be a carcass, but as I walked toward it, it moved its paw," he said.

Cole then removed the metal snare from its post which allowed the dog to rest its foot. But the dog growled, and Cole decided not to attempt to remove the metal wire that had completely embedded itself in the dog's foot. Instead, he left the dog to seek some sort of help.

"I was thinking more about how to put it out of its misery than anything else," Cole said.

Cole asked the first person he saw if they knew of anyone missing a dog. He was given the Coleman's name.

"There was disbelief. It looked like the family had adapted to the loss," Cole said.

Coleman left his house immediately with a sled and warm milk for the dog.

In spite of 25 days without food and sub-zero weather, Brutus recognized his owner and began licking his hand.

Coleman lifted the dog on the sled and transported him to a road where he was loaded aboard a car and rushed into Ellensburg for treatment.

The dog could neither walk nor stand when it was brought into the clinic, Schmid said.

But after devouring several pounds of food and lots of liquids, Brutus began showing more signs of life.

On Monday Mrs. Coleman took her son Ronnie down to the clinic to see the dog for the first time since he disappeared.

"He just buried his head (in the dog) and cried," Mrs. Coleman said.

Brutus responded with the most vigorous tail wagging that he had exhibited since he was found, Mrs. Coleman said.

Nine-year-old Ronnie Coleman gives his dog Brutus an affectionate hug after the dog survived nearly a month in a coyote trap.

Special Committee Votes Approval of Reprimands to Union Conference Officials

By Morten Juberg

In a marathon 16-hour session held on March 29, 34 members of the North Pacific Union Executive Committee were joined by 27 others to hear and act on recommendations for reprimands that came from the President's Review Commission and General Conference officials.

Recommendations for discipline came in the aftermath of the bankruptcy of Dr. Donald J. Davenport, Long Beach, Calif. Davenport, a surgeon turned real estate developer who had defaulted on loans made to him by church entities, including the North Pacific Union Conference.

The delegates to the specially called meeting in Gladstone, Ore., included 21 lay members from the conferences in the Northwest augmented by five retired ministers. Representing the General Conference were Neal C. Wilson, president; Charles E. Bradford, vice president for North America; and J. William Bothe, associate secretary of the General Conference assigned to the North American division.

As a result of their deliberations, the group voted to accept the General Conference recommendations for reprimand.

Procedural Decisions

The representatives spent the first two hours of the session ironing out procedures to be followed that day. They agreed that the entire group would vote on the Review Commission's recommendations, but that the final vote would be taken by the members of the North Pacific Union Conference Executive Committee.

In all cases, as it later turned out, the Executive Committee agreed with the larger group in their voting.

Another procedural matter involved the election of a chairman. After some discussion, delegates agreed to the selection of Dr. Richard Hammill, a retired vice president of the General Conference now residing in Olympia, Wash.

Dr. Hammill noted that the situation in the North Pacific Union Conference regarding the Davenport loans was one that had developed over a long period of time.

"Though the present incumbents had involvement in the loan program, there was a pattern of thinking about the investments that developed gradually over the years," he said. "The present persons shouldn't be thought of as having developed this program but were in a sense carrying on investment patterns of their predecessors. The committee in dealing with this situation has to take this into recognition."

Levels of Discipline

According to the Adventist Review of March 24, in an article written by President Wilson, 80 persons were to be disciplined throughout the United States. These disciplines fell into four levels as defined in the article.

Level I: "A private letter of administrative disapproval, caution and disappointment will be sent to 46 active and retired workers."

Level II: "A private letter recommending administrative reprimand for dereliction of fiduciary responsibility will be sent to 25 active and retired persons. Their employing organizations will be requested to review their performance at a regularly called meeting of their controlling committee or board and to administer official discipline. As a deterrent for the future, it will be the duty of such committees to emphasize that a portion of the North American Division working policy entitled "Care and Responsibility in Financial Operations" reads as follows: "Leaders who show inability to operate the work in harmony with established financial policies shall not be continued in executive leadership." p. 15, 45.

Level III: "A private letter recommending administrative reprimand for dereliction of fiduciary responsibility and a transfer or reassignment to some other type of work will be sent to six individuals. We likewise will request their employing organization to review their performance openly at a duly called meeting of their controlling committee or board and to administer discipline and take the necessary official actions."

Level IV: "It is recommended that three individuals be permanently terminated from denominational employment and that the controlling committees withdraw their ministerial credentials.

Those who have retired and who have left the church a legacy of financial problems by their participation in Davenport loans will receive a private letter from the president of the General Conference, expressing keen disappointment that they did not follow more closely policies designed to safeguard church interests. They so will be informed that if they had still been employed, an appropriate level of discipline would have been recommended."

President Wilson outlined thoroughly the procedures followed by the president's Review Committee. This group, composed of church officials and a representative group of lay members, reviewed interviews taken by a legal firm from all the individuals on the list to be disciplined.

"We had a clear understanding with the commission in writing that the General Conference officers would have the privilege of modifying, refining, and making appropriate revisions," Wilson said.

He noted that the Review Commission had no authority to enforce any discipline and that this had to be done either by officers with administrative and management responsibility or by action of an executive committee.

He added that if a committee didn't act in good faith on the recommendations for discipline, that "we would ask the matter to go to a constituency session."

It was suggested by one delegate that the North Pacific Union Conference Executive Committee should disqualify itself from voting since they were in some degree subject to the union president.

President Wilson replied that he hoped the church could work through its regular channels and if they didn't have the necessary integrity to act, then it would defer to a constituency meeting.

Violations Defined

The main issues as defined by Charles Bradford in his presentation dealt with violations of the church's conflict of interest policy and the safeguarding of the funds of the church. The conflict of interest focused about the fact that all but one of the six individuals subject to discipline had had personal loans with Davenport.

Morten Juberg is editor of the GLEANER.

The safeguarding of funds allegations dealt with the fact that necessary title searches weren't made as well as failure to follow regular escrow procedures.

J. William Bothe read the levels of reprimand suggested by the President's Review Commission and the General Conference officers. These included Level II for the president, secretary, treasurer, trust director and the second assistant trust director. A level III discipline was recommended for the legal counsel.

A former trust director of the North Pacific Union Conference was present, but the administering of discipline in this case didn't come under the jurisdiction of the called committee since he had retired. He did, however, make a presentation to the committee. The large committee voted later that he refrain from trust agreement counseling in the North Pacific Union Conference.

Each of those to be reprimanded had the opportunity to speak and each one expressed regret for the mistakes that had been made.

The entire proceeding was punctuated with lengthy discussions on the part of the delegates, who also had the opportunity to question each of those who were to be reprimanded. The session was marked with calmness, and full opportunity was provided for discussion of the issues involved.

During the latter part of the session, the individuals to be reprimanded were dismissed while the delegates heard a complete listing of the reasons for the assignment of the persons to their particular level. There were some discussions and motions for changes in two of the levels but these were turned down by the delegates.

Delegates questioned the usage of the word "Dereliction" in the Level II designation. They voted to change it to "breach of fiduciary responsibility."

Each name was considered separately and delegates voted as to whether they wished to accept or reject the recommendations of the President's Review Commission. In each case the recommendation was accepted with a substantial majority.

Errata

A report in the April 4 issue of the GLEANER about the Montana Constituency Session erroneously stated that the treasurer was reelected with stipulations. This is not true. The treasurer was reelected without any stipulations.

After the entire group had voted, Chairman Hammill called the North Pacific Union Conference Executive Committee into session and they voted to accept the recommendations for discipline from the President's Review Commission.

At the conclusion of the lengthy session, those to be reprimanded were called back to the meeting and informed of the decisions of the large committee.

There was some discussion at the close for another session of the large committee to meet and discuss what was termed "the healing process."

PAMC

Several organizational changes have been made at Portland Adventist Medical Center. They include the naming of a new vice president of nursing and a new director of personnel.

Maxine Blome, vice president of nursing, has accepted a call to Adventist Health System-West, where she'll serve as a vice president. Gale Olsen, a unit supervisor, has been named as her replacement.

Olsen is a graduate of the Walla Walla College School of Nursing's baccalaureate program. She will complete her master's degree in nursing administration from Andrews University in May.

During her 10 years at the hospital, she has worked as a staff nurse, a team leader on a surgical unit, as a quality assurance nurse, a staffing coordinator, and a unit supervisor. She has also worked as an inservice instructor for a Saskatchewan hospital.

Alfonso Small

Such a meeting was tentatively set for early May.

At the beginning of the session, it was called "a historic meeting." Probably never in the history of the North Pacific Union Conference has such a meeting been held.

More specific information as to personnel can be received by writing to the Secretary, North Pacific Union Conference, Box 16677, Portland, OR 97216 or by personal viewing at the North Pacific Union Conference office, 10225 E Burnside, Portland.

Olsen will fill her new position May 16. During the interim, she will undergo orientation with Blome.

Alfonso Small, assistant director of personnel, has been named director of personnel. He has been with the hospital since 1980, and previously worked in personnel for First Farwest Corporation, and the Port of Portland.

He replaces Dale Wendt, whose vice presidential duties have expanded beyond personnel to include health education, the volunteer auxiliary, and all the hospital's insurance programs.

Idaho

Dennis King, a 1982 graduate of Walla Walla College and a member of the Gem State Academy class of 1977, is working as an associate pastor in the Caldwell, Idaho, Church. He and his wife, Jan Pifer King, were married just days before King began his ministry in Caldwell last summer.

Two Newberg Physicians Honored for Health Work

The presentation of community service awards honored two local physicians at the Newberg, Ore., Church, Sabbath morning, Feb. 19. Doctors David Abbott, family practitioner, and Gregory Skipper, cardiologist, were recognized for the continuing contribution to the community through sharing professional knowledge with those who attend the Five-Day Plan stop-smoking clinics.

Chuck Lewis, health director for the church, expressed appreciation to the physicians and presented both with an inscribed plaque and a copy of the book The Desire of Ages. Women at the services center prepared gift quilts to further express the church's gratitude.

In introducing the honorees, Lewis explained, "Without Adventist doctors in the community I went to the Yellow Pages. David Abbott headed the list of physicians." Lewis noted that Dr. Abbott gave a positive response to his request and has cooperated with the program since that time.

Church members Bill and Rose Krause had suggested that Lewis contact their heart specialist, Dr. Gregory Skipper. He too responded to the opportunity to serve the community.

Both doctors prepared written statements for press release. These statements along with a story and picture of the award service announced the March 20 Five-Day clinic to the community through the local newspaper, The Newberg Graphic.

"Most illness is self-inflicted," explained Abbott. "Each of us has to become responsible for his or her own good health. Smoking is the foremost cause of our ill health. The Adventists'

Five-Day stop smoking clinic has been very effective in helping people to free themselves from this self-inflicted habit." He went on to say, "Although I am not an Adventist, I am proud to have helped in this successful program."

Dr. Skipper stated, "Working with the Adventist stop-smoking clinic is one of the most important and satisfying things that I do."

Large Group Attends Lay Bible Minister's Seminar

The Lay Bible Minister's Training Seminar held in February at the Gladstone conference center was attended by 306 lay persons from 68 Oregon Conference churches. Featured devotional speakers were Richard Fearing and Lewis Shipowick of the North Pacific Union Conference and John Todorovich of the Oregon Conference.

Will Degeraty, southern Oregon church growth coordinator, taught a four-hour class in basic witnessing skills such as preparing a personal testimony and presenting the gospel on a person-to-person basis.

Pastor Bill Bossert of Silverton presented Dr. Kennedy's Coral Ridge method of evangelism explosion. Participants in this class were taught how to present the gospel to a receptive unbeliever in his or her home so as to lead that person to Christ.

The art of giving home Bible studies was presented by Skip Bell, Portland-area church growth coordinator. There were demonstration studies and later each person in the class had the experience of giving an actual Bible study to another person.

Pastor John Alspaugh and his wife Loretta of the Stone Tower Church in Portland presented "A Caring Ministry" for reclaiming discouraged and inactive members.

Dorothy Watts of Portland conducted a Sabbath school program and birthday celebration for the creation of the world. Attractively packaged gifts were placed on a table at the front. Volunteers from the congregation each selected a gift, opened it and had the privilege of keeping the gift, providing he or she performed a designated part in the program.

Time was allotted for sharing experiences by Lay Bible Ministers present. Among the encouraging experiences related was that of Dr. James McHan of Springfield. He asked several couples present to stand and told how the Lord had used him, his family, and his fellow church members to guide these couples to the Lord. They are now being trained to win others.

Charles Bullock, personal ministries leader of the Nestucca Church, was typical of lay leaders present who expressed their joy at the larger number of church members present compared to previous training programs.

"Enthusiasm for the Lay Bible Ministry is growing in the Oregon Confer-

LAA SENIOR CLASS ACTIVE. The 79 members of the senior class of Laurelwood Adventist Academy have participated in a variety of activities recently. At the Senior Presentation on March 5, Charles Dart, conference superintendent of education, spoke.

As a highlight of the Alumni Weekend, the seniors presented a talent night, April 2. Then they attended College Days at Walla Walla College, April 10 to 12. They plan an outing to Camp Wi-Ne-Ma on the Oregon coast for May 3 and 4.

Lewis Corwin of the Medford Church expressed his joy at seeing the increased interest in lay involvement in soul winning but noted that many others probably could not come because of economic difficulties.

Those present were among hundreds of laypersons in the conference working toward a Lay Bible Minister's certificate. They are required to be involved in visitation and Bible study under the supervision of their pastors for a minimum of two hours per week and must be successful in seeing at least one person accept the Lord and be baptized before receiving their certificate.

Already 156 such laypersons have been certified in the Oregon Conference.

In the Hockinson, Wash., Church, organized only one year ago, 28 of the 60 members are certified Lay Bible Ministers. This church has one of the fastest growth rates of any in the conference. "The rapid growth is largely the result of God blessing the involvement of church members in the work of soul winning," states Pastor Al Oetman.

Ron Watts, personal ministries leader of the conference, led out in the final commitment in which 190 persons committed themselves to the Lord to give a minimum of two hours per week in conducting home visitation and Bible studies.

LJA Bell Choir Presents Concert

At recent Sabbath services, the Livingstone Junior Academy Bell Choir provided special music for the Silverton, Ore., congregation.

The 10-member choir, organized in September, is directed by Marie (Wall) Bucher.

Presently, the bells are on loan from David Pratt of St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Salem. In the near future a fund-raising program is planned to purchase bells of their own.

Kelso-Longview Students Learn by Working Locally

Every Friday, the ninth-grade students at the Kelso-Longview, Wash., Adventist School have a different educational experience awaiting them. They are part of a learning program that utilizes various businesses and other organizations in the community for which the students volunteer their services in a variety of ways.

The local institutions that have been cooperative in accommodating the ninth graders include St. John's Hospital, Frontier Skilled Care Facility, Longview Parks and Recreation Department, Longview Veterinary Hospital and Head Start.

The students each spend three-month stints on a rotating basis at three of the aforementioned places. Their duties may include filling out clerical forms, caring for animals or children, visiting the sick and aged, cleaning equipment or running important errands.

Lynette Bramlett, ninth-grade teacher and originator of the program, says, "Life is a practical matter and we cannot be happy and satisfied living it with only book learning.

"For their own physical health and moral good, children should be taught to work," she continues, quoting from Child Guidance, p. 342.

Transportation of the students to their work assignments in the morning is provided by Yvonne Webb, the school's secretary and aide. Then Mrs. Bramlett picks them up in the afternoon and returns them to school in time for them to board the bus for their trip home.

The five ninth-grade students involved in the program, Sue Polasek, Amber Bramlett, Rohn Falter, Scott Valler and Katherine Hose, have been enthusiastic about it.

"I've learned a lot working with different people and new ideas"; "It gives us an idea of what the work in these fields would be like"; "It gives me the opportunity to witness as a Christian to these people," are examples of the kinds of responses the students have made about the program.

Irrigon Church Adds Two New Members by Baptism

Pastor James Stevens had the pleasure of doing a "finished work" when he baptized Lora Pennock into membership of the Irrigon Church.

Nelly Sjoren of the Hermiston Church started Bible studies with Lora more than a year ago, using the DuKane projector series. However, Pastor and Mrs. Gunnar Sjoren were called to Boise to serve there before Lora felt she

Macedonian Call, 1983

I am an attractive little church in Condon, Ore., but I am lonely. I need a congregation! Come to Condon and help us. (This is the Macedonian Call, 1983 version.)

If you feel this call might be for you, I have some good news and some bad news. The good news is that due to the economic downturn, excellent property values are quite available. The bad news is that work opportunities are not — for the same reason. Consequently, people with some income other than wages alone can best fulfill my need.

I admit this is a very human way of looking at it. Our Father in heaven has a thousand ways of accomplishing His purposes of which we know nothing, so if He taps you on the shoulder and says, "I can use you in Condon," He already has the necessary arrangements made.

Write me at Box 3, Condon, OR 97823 or call my friend, Dave Pester, at (503) 383-3083.

was completely ready to be baptized.

Reatha Beezley then extended her friendship to Lora prior to the arrival of Irrigon's new pastor and wife, James and Beulah Stevens.

Another recent addition to the Irrigon Church is Emma Harrison. Roland Hallgren studied with her and she was one of the group he brought each night to Garrie Williams' meetings in Hermiston.

The next project will be the Revelation Seminar conducted by the members of the church with Pastor Stevens leading out.

Coeur d'Alene Church Has Two Community Programs

Doctors Richard Bell and Guy Oltman, along with their wives JoAnne and Paula, both registered nurses, worked with Pastor Paul Penno recently to offer the Coeur d'Alene area a stress clinic and a Five-Day Stop-Smoking Plan.

The stress clinic met two evenings in the waiting room of the medical offices. There were 14 present for the two evenings. Pastor Penno provided the emphasis on one's spiritual needs. Dr. Guy and Paula Oltman gave a slide presentation about stress, the body's reaction to stress, and how to determine the present stress level of the body. Included were thoughts on the physical care of the body, emotions involved, what to do with a change in work or social environment and methods of relaxation.

The Five-Day Plan to Stop Smoking met with 16 smokers in a church room. JoAnne Bell organized the plan and helped to see it carried through. Again, Pastor Penno worked on the motivational aspect. The two doctors, Richard Bell and Guy Oltman, emphasized the medical hazards of smoking. Paula Oltman touched on weight control for a person who ceases the use of cigarettes.

The group seemed to be faithful in attendance, and while not all had quit by Friday evening, the sponsors were able to report a 50 percent success rate.

Grandview Gym Renamed For the Richard Bocks

For the past 20 years, the auditorium at 108 N Elm in Grandview, Wash., has been called Grandview Junior Academy Gym. However, on Saturday night, Feb. 19, the name officially became Bock Auditorium, named for the late Richard "Dick" and Marg Bock, former Grandview residents.

Dick Bock was a well-known brick mason in the Northwest for more than 20 years. With his assistant, Dan Clark, and sometimes his two older boys, Dick did the brick work on the Bock Auditorium and the Grandview Church, donating all the labor; the Milton-Freewater, Ore., Church; Tri-Cities Junior Academy, Pasco, Wash.; Harris Junior Academy, Pendleton, Ore.; and the cafeteria and music building at Upper Columbia Academy.

He helped his brother with the College Church and Foreman Hall, a dormitory at Walla Walla College; as well as many apartment buildings and homes. Dick passed away in 1975 and his wife passed away in 1974.

The four Bock sons and their families joined other relatives and friends in Grandview for the day. Terry Bock spoke for church, his sermon appropriately titled "Welcome Home, Children." Terry teaches at Walla Walla Valley Academy; Kelly teaches at Milo Academy; Rick lives in Grandview and works at the Hanford Project in Richland, Wash.; and Rollie is a student in Walla Walla, Wash.

Other guests attending the weekend activities were Roger (brother to Marg) and June Dorner, Wenatchee, Wash.; their daughter, Dixie, and her husband Darrell Hunt, Wenatchee; Alfred and Sadie Dorner, parents of Marg, College Place; Leon (brother to Dick) and Norma Bock, College Place; former pastor Don Reiber and his wife Joan from Heppner, Ore.; and former teacher, Anita Dietrich Molsted, Sandpoint, Idaho.

The highlight of the Saturday night program was a slide presentation, given by June Dorner, showing the Bock boys with their parents from babies through graduations and weddings and finally pictures of Dick and Marg's grandchildren whom they never had the privilege of knowing. Jim and Rod Leiske gave a history of the auditorium and school, telling of the dedication Dick and Marg had to the school and young people. The school annual of 1962 was dedicated to Dick because of his work on the newly finished auditorium.

Dan Clark, former employee of Dick's, could not attend the program but wrote the following letter which Jim Leiske read. Excerpts follow:

"I worked for Dick almost 17 years so I grew to know both him and Marge about as well as anyone would their own family. . . .

"There is one incident that has always stood out in my mind and always will and I believe really tells what type of person Dick was and you could say the same about Marg. . . .

"We were working in Sunnyside, laying brick on an apartment building. It was about 3:30 p.m. and school had just let out. I was working along with my head down, not paying too much attention to what was going on around me, when I heard Dick say, 'Look!'

"There was a boy around 10 years old coming from the direction of the school. He had just come onto the property where we were working. It was a sight you wouldn't believe possible, especially around this part of the country. His clothes were nothing but rags. He had on an old man's-size suit coat that was full of holes, ragged and dirty. His pants and shirt were just threads and he had on an old pair of men's work boots, probably about a size 10.

"You can imagine the agony a kid would have to go through at school looking like this. When Dick saw this, he didn't hesitate. He called the boy over and the first thing he did was empty his pockets of all the money he had and handed it to the boy and naturally he didn't let me off the hook. The boy just looked at Dick a little confused and mostly in unbelief. I don't imagine he had ever been treated this way. . . ."

Pastor Frank Wyman stands before the re-named auditorium.

Green Lake Church Plans Three Soloists' Recital

The Music Committee of Green Lake Church invites you to a recital of music for violin, harp and piano on Saturday evening, April 23, at 7:30. Soloists will be Dynell Weber, violin; Jeanna Weber, harp; and Arthur Peterson, piano. The program will include music by Brahms, J. S. Bach, C. P. E. Bach, Tchaikovsky, Piere, Debussy, Pescetti and Calzedo.

The Weber Family is well known throughout the conference, having performed in many of our churches. Dynell is currently studying violin with Ed Seferian at the University of Puget Sound and previously studied with Serge Kardalian. Jeanna studies harp with Pat Wooster of Bellevue. (LeRoy Weber, father of four talented daughters and manufacturer of violin and cello cases, plays the viola; Marlene, cello; Cherié, violin.)

Arthur Peterson has studied with Victor Smiley, Adventist piano teacher in Seattle, and is a graduate of Andrews University where he received the Bachelor of Music in Piano Performance, with honors. He has taken post-graduate work in education at Eastern Washington University and Walla Walla College. He was the recipient of a Board of Regents scholarship for two consecutive years at Arizona State University, where he graduated with a Master's of Music in Performance-Pedagogy, summa cum laude. He has given concerts in Arizona, California and throughout the Northwest.

You are cordially invited to join us for this evening of classical music. A freewill offering will be received to help with expenses of Green Lake Church concerts. The church is located at 6350 E Green Lake Way N, Seattle, WA 98103. (206) 522-1330.

Career Guidance Continues Through Four Years at AAA

Career Education is an important part of the school curriculum. By the time students reach their junior or senior year, they may already be looking for part-time off-campus jobs. If students choose not to go on to college, they are faced with finding a job they can be happy with immediately after graduation. Even if the student does choose to go on to college, knowing what kind of career he wants can save wasted time and money in college classes.

Choosing the right career is not a decision to be made quickly; it takes a lot of thought over a period of time. In order to give students the needed time to think over career options, Auburn Academy begins working with students to explore career options during their freshman year. Each year's unit builds on the previous, so by the time students graduate they have had plenty of opportunities for actively exploring career interests.

Ninth-grade students receive their initial exposure to career options during a one-week unit in which they are first given an interest test. They then explore the skills necessary for working in those fields in which they have indicated an interest.

At the tenth-grade level, students receive another one-week unit; they are given another interest test and fill out an occupational workbook which explores four job areas in which they have indicated an interest.

In the 11th grade, students participate in a one-week unit covering job applications and résumés as well as further exploration of specific careers.

At the 12th-grade level, a nine-week unit is taught by Orlin Mclean in his senior Bible class. During this time students continue in-depth career exploration already begun in previous years. They also discuss how to make decisions regarding careers and choosing among college options.

During the ninth-grade career unit, each student receives a folder in which his or her interest test and other assignments are kept. This folder is kept on file in the Career Information Center and the material from each successive career unit is added to it. When students graduate, this career folder goes with them. Thus each student takes with him the results of the interest tests he has taken, in-depth exploration he has done on various careers, and his own résumé which he can now use as is or revise as needed for jobs he is applying for.

In order to bring together information on careers, the Career Information Center has been established as part of the library. All books on specific careers and how to choose careers are kept in this location. Computer programs dealing with careers are available, as well as college bulletins and financial aid information. There is also a resource person file listing names of people who have indicated a willingness to share information about their careers with the students.

A Career Fair was held in March at Auburn Academy. During that day, students had a chance to talk with representatives from many different job areas and gain firsthand knowledge of what is involved in the different jobs represented. Other schools from the conference were also invited to come and share in this event.

If any of you would like to know more about our career development plan, please address your inquiries to Auburn Academy Career Center, 5000 Auburn Way S, Auburn, WA 98002. We will be happy to share with you more detailed information.

Green Lake Church Lectures

A spring lecture series will be held April 29 and 30 at the Green Lake Church, 6350 E Green Lake Way N, Seattle, Wash. Raymond Cottrell will be guest speaker for the weekend. The subject series title is "A Seminar on the Current State of the Church." Fri. 7:30 p.m.: "Assets and Liabilities — "What's Right and What's Wrong with the Church?" Sabbath, 11 a.m., "How to Keep Our Balance in a Time of Change." Sabbath at 2:30 p.m., Forecast: "What the Future Holds in Store for the Church."

Auburn Teacher Presents Papers on Computer Use

A recent issue of MICRO magazine carried an article on "Chemistry and Computers" by Judy Toop, Auburn Adventist Academy science teacher. The article detailed student reactions to the computer in the classroom. It also introduced the concept of the computer as a tutor, assisting students who have missed some class time or are having trouble with a concept being presented.

The "computer as tutor" idea was the basis for two convention presentations by Miss Toop. She gave her first address at the 12th annual convention of the Northwest Council for Computer Education being held at Oregon State University in Corvallis, Ore. Then on May 9-13 in Portland, Ore., the Association for Educational Data Systems is inviting her to present a similar topic.

The audience is composed of science and math teachers in Corvallis; and the group in Portland includes computer vendors and software authors.

An Aug. 10-12 meeting at the Vocational Studies Center in Madison, Wis., is in the preliminary application stages.

It would emphasize computer use in vocational and health education.

The opportunity to share understanding and meet fellow educators is prized by this science teacher. If you wish to make suggestions or ask questions, or share materials, feel free to write Judith

L. Toop, Auburn Adventist Academy, 5000 Auburn Way South, Auburn, WA 98002; or call (206) 939-5000.

Baker Member Leads Out in Weekly Story Hour Program

When Dorothy Williams joined the Baker Church more than four years ago, she did not assume the role of a "hearer of the word."

A strong worker in her former church, thrilled with her newfound faith, she turned her energies and talents in a new direction.

Musically talented, she immediately began serving as pianist or organist wherever a need arose. If there is a song to be sung, Dorothy is willing and able. For two years she was pianist for Tom Carter's singing group, "The Children of the King."

A busy mother of three, Dorothy spends her days working as a nurse's aide at Baker's St. Elizabeth Nursing Home and her evenings giving piano lessons in her home.

This avocation led to her acquaintance with Adventism. As she taught piano to the pastor's daughter, Karen Zollbrecht, she began to ask questions about Adventist beliefs. She became interested enough to attend the last of a series of meetings with Bill Truby. Studies followed and soon she was baptized.

Last summer, following Vacation Bible School, Dorothy, who had long entertained the dream of holding a story hour in her home on Sabbath afternoons, felt that the time was right. Combing her neighborhood, she gave out handmade invitations to the children and talked with the parents.

"At first," Dorothy said, "attendance was low, with only four or five. At one time last fall, it fell to its lowest ebb when on two consecutive Sabbath afternoons, only one child showed up."

Discouraged, Dorothy, whose faith is practical, decided to "put out a fleece." Praying about it, she asked the Lord to show her His will in the matter. "At once," she says, "attendance began to pick up." Dorothy and her helpers decided to continue through the rest of the year.

At a recent party, 20 happy boys and girls, some of them guests of the regulars, turned out to enjoy the stories, games and refreshments in Dorothy's home. Of these 20, between 10 and 15 often attend the story hour, some of them always. Many of them are from non-Adventist homes. Three of these are now attending Sabbath school.

More recently, the children, whose ages range from 4 to 11, were entertained at a birthday party at the home of Ray and Deanna Clark in Haines. "Since the parties," Dorothy says, "attendance has been better."

Dorothy, excited by the success of her project, loves to talk about it. She is particularly grateful to her helpers. "It would have been impossible to do it without them," she says. Muriel Gray and Marcia Van Cleve, Sabbath school workers, storytellers and all-around good workers, are important to the program. Marcia, who lives at Haines, a

Emmett Church Is Host to Area World Day of Prayer

The Emmett, Idaho, Adventist Church hosted the World Day of Prayer in Gem County recently.

Eight other denominations participated in the program with an attendance of 78 in spite of the rainy weather.

Ruby Stafford, pastor's wife of Ontario, Ore., and New Plymouth, Idaho, churches, was the speaker. She is on leave from the African Mission and will return in August, taking their two sons. She is a Bible worker and a religion major who graduated from Walla Walla College in 1968. She spoke about "New Creatures in Christ," citing her introduction, courtship and marriage to her husband as an example of our relationship with Christ.

Sisters Sharon Spiker of Ola and Sheral Foland of Kuna shopped and prepared the fresh vegetables and served them most attractively. Pam York and Cheryl Stelzried assisted.

The floral arrangements were green and white and professionally done by our own Edith Jackson. The men were also included. They rallied and laid new carpet and installed kitchen cupboards in the multipurpose room in the same week.

Thanks to Virgil Dean for the lights, heat, door opening, cleaning and his sister Emma Hinton for altering the drapes. Archie Jackson leveled the parking area. Bulletins were courtesy of Newton States.

Sharon Spiker and Sylvia Owens offered nursery care.

Our receptionist, Sally Clark, and usherette, Margaret Rogers, were friendly and efficient.

Lourabelle Odermott was program chairman and announcer with Lennis Maybee as assistant.

Branch Sabbath School in Caldwell Is 25 Years Old

Twenty-five years ago in March 1958 a Branch Sabbath school was started by Fay Peterson and Mrs. Sam Blakely in the Blakely Nursing Home in Caldwell. Now it is called the Caldwell Convalescent Center.

Over the years the Branch Sabbath school has grown and now it is a regular church service.

Services are held each Sunday morning. Several of the residents of the home have become members of the Adventist Church. Also some of the relatives of residents have joined the church.

Three charter members still attend

MOUNTAIN HOME PATHFINDERS HAVE SABBATH SERVICE. Recently the Mountain Home Pathfinders had the Sabbath services for the first time in more than 15 years. The club is composed mainly of non-members, so a large number of parents and relatives attended.

The club began with six members and two staff. Now there are 14 Pathfinders and a staff of five.

'Evening for Sweethearts' Sponsored by Cove Church

During February the Cove, Ore., Church held an "Evening for Sweethearts." Games were played and the children made hand-created Valentine cards. Couples in the church brought pictures of their weddings, which were put on display. Participants then tried to guess what year the couples were married.

Couples who had been married the shortest and longest time were honored. Steve and Paula Fincher, of Union, were married in 1980, and George and Gertrude Butterfield spoke their vows in 1936.

Revelation Bible Seminar Begins in Eagle Church

A Revelation Bible Seminar packed with exciting learning opportunities through Bible studies began at the Eagle Church on March 11. More than 100, including some 30 non-Adventists, have registered for the seminar, which is conducted three nights weekly in the church sanctuary.

Telephone Evangelism Being Used Successfully in Eagle

A new program has been developed in the Eagle Church using the telephone and the power of the Holy Spirit in a system that can bring about church growth. "Reach Out and Touch Someone" has greater implication for the church now than ever before.

The telephone ministry, which has given members of the church an exciting new concept in telephone outreach, helps the church prepare a people to live creative Christian lives and prepare them for the soon coming of Jesus.

The clear message of God's love can be more effective through the telephone ministry, which is a viable force in reaching the Eagle and surrounding communities with the gospel of Jesus Christ.

In most cases people will respond more favorably to the spiritual approach over the telephone than in a face-to-face confrontation. Selecting names at random from the telephone directory is one way to reach the public as you call concerning a church survey or an It Is Written questionnaire.

Other ways to reach them are to contact those whose names appear on an It Is Written card request for literature or someone receiving the Signs, These Times or other publications.

At the conclusion of each contact opportunity is given to become involved in a series of telephone Bible studies which consist of mailing a series of study guides to the interested contact and then correcting them weekly over the telephone. A set of 11 Bible studies are sent, two each week. The last lesson is delivered in person if an interest developed during the five weeks of studies.

Usually a friendship develops between the two through the sharing of answers with each other, so as the series of Bible studies come to an end the student is encouraged to take additional studies and is cordially invited to attend church with the instructor. Individuals are getting a new lease on life because those who cared reached out and touched someone.

MONTANA

MONTANAN IS TOP LADY LITERATURE EVANGELIST. 1982 has been a good year for literature evangelist Roxanne Schram of Great Falls.

It marked her first full calendar year of selling Adventist books, and she took honors as the top female salesperson in the North Pacific Union with sales of $34,000. Earlier this year she was also named "Literature Evangelist of the Year."

When Miss Schram became an Adventist about three years ago, she worked as a secretary, but she desired something different to do.

"I wanted to work full time for the Lord, to have a little more freedom and to be able to witness to people," she said. This led her to decide to become a literature evangelist.

Basically shy in nature, Miss Schram credits her work with deepening her interest in others and overcoming her timidity. "I have learned to love people," she noted.

After joining the church she sent literature to her brother, and he now plans to do the same work as his sister. In addition to the brother, Miss Schram has seen others baptized from her work.

Reduced Time Period Set For Montana Camp Meeting

Before the 1982 Montana camp meeting convened last year, plans for the 1983 encampment were well under way. But as the familiar saying goes, "The best laid plans . . . oft go astray." Because of budgetary concerns for 1983, the Conference Committee recently felt it necessary to take a careful look at plans for this summer's program.

It was felt by the committee that this midyear time of revival and fellowship was so vital to the conference program that everything possible should be done to keep it in the schedule. So in order to effect some savings and yet maintain camp meeting, the time period has been reduced.

Montana Camp Meeting 1983 will convene Wednesday night, June 22, and run through Sabbath, June 25. The ABC's annual book and food sale will be Sunday morning, the 26th. Every hour will be filled with inspiration and education.

Roland Hegstad of the General Conference religious liberty department will be the speaker the first two nights. Dr. and Mrs. Warren Peters of Spokane, health educators, will conduct health seminars and demonstrations Thursday and Friday. Dr. Peters is a vascular surgeon and his wife is a registered nurse.

Attorney Lewis Walton will have several speaking appointments on the weekend, along with Paul Heubach and guests from the General Conference and the North Pacific Union Conference.

Plan to share in this highlight of 1983 on the beautiful campus of Mount Ellis Academy, Bozeman, Montana!

Mount Ellis Academy Plans To Reopen Nearby Ski Hill

Mount Ellis Academy will soon have its ski hill open and functioning again, thanks to some interested lay people and a hardworking student body.

Under the supervision of Gary Andregg (K-12 board member), a T-bar has been purchased from White Fish for a real bargain — $20,000. It is estimated that another $20,000 will be needed to get it running.

A lay Ski Hill Committee has been formed with Steve Duffy, a local Bozeman resident and a Mount Ellis graduate, as chairman. Gary Andregg is serving as co-chairman. The committee is responsible for the raising of funds, along with the installation and operation of the Bear Canyon Ski Hill, working directly with the school. However, none of the school's operating funds will be used on the hill. So far the committee has raised $16,000 to use toward the ski hill.

In addition to this, the academy student body has been hard at work on their ASB campaign. The students raised more than $10,000 during the first semester of this school year for the ski hill. A big "thank you" goes to all who helped support this campaign.

Under the supervision of Joe Wagner, the Industrial Arts teacher, MEA students will begin to double-check all the T-bar equipment so that it will be ready to install this summer. Students will also begin to dig postholes.

After completion, the ski hill will be used primarily for the academy students and local church groups. It will not be a commercial operation. Night skiing will be available to those students with good citizenship and a high GPA. Mount Ellis is planning to have the ski hill open for the 1983-84 school year.

GENERAL NEWS

Quiet Hour Annual Report Shows Good Year

You are the salt of the earth. God created you for a special purpose, and, in 1982, part of that purpose was helping us at The Quiet Hour recognize how personally God cares for us. Your concern and support have kept our broadcasts on the air, our literature moving and our mission projects growing . . . in short, they have given us our best year on record. We'd like to share a backward glance at 1982.

We thought you'd like to know that of the eight union conferences in the United States, the North Pacific Union Conference made the second-largest financial contribution to The Quiet Hour, and that was in spite of the fact that it has the fourth-largest number of supporters. Thank you!

Your contributions have kept our radiobroadcast airing on 325 stations across the United States and our SEARCH telecast on 10 channels, including three new ones in Florida and one in Washington, D.C.

You'll also want to know that you have kept the overseas projects booming. In 1982, you sent $1,252,229 for mission projects, and we've already distributed $1,160,932 to the places you've designated. Because of your gifts, God's word has reached new corners of the world.

NORTHWEST DENTISTS MEET. The Northwest chapter of the national Association of Seventh-day Adventist dentists held its seventh annual winter meeting recently at The Big Mountain, Whitefish, Mont.

Participants in the program included, from the left, Dave Walters, principal of Tri-City Junior Academy, Pasco, Wash.; Ed Gienger, pastor of the Walla Walla City Church; Dick Coughren, and Stanley Shepherd. Another speaker was Jack Irvine from the Boeing Aircraft Corporation.

NEW LITERATURE EVANGELISTS GET TRAINING. Shown with publishing directors who are kneeling in the foreground are new literature evangelists from throughout the North Pacific Union Conference who attended a recent training institute held in Portland.

Back at the office, we've watched and prayed as the Tuckers travelled with the Good News. In May, LaVerne and Alma Tucker spent two weeks preaching in an all-nation Korean crusade. In the words of ministerial director Kim Sang Do, those weeks were "very wonderful. The result was more than we had expected."

September they spent south of the border. The Tuckers spent a month preaching and baptizing in the South American Evangelistic Marathon while they marvelled at the incredible results of laymen devoting themselves to presenting Jesus.

At home, Pastor Bill Tucker held evangelistic crusades in Loma Linda, Calif., and in the Cleveland, Ohio, area and assisted Pastor LaVerne Tucker with a series in Downey, Calif.

In retrospect, the varied blessings of the year have more than balanced the tenseness of our financially precarious summer. We on The Quiet Hour staff praise God for nurturing us through a triumphant 1982, and we thank Him for you who allowed Him to use your concern and support to make our triumph possible.

And now, in the timeless words of founder J. L. Tucker, "Have faith in God, and keep looking up."

Health, Temperance Radio Spots Win Coveted Award

Jay Cormier, left, of UNDA-USA presents a 1982 Gabriel Award to producer Sherrrie Thomas and engineer Steve Hudgins for the "Serving the Total Person" radio spot campaign.

Association for Broadcasters and Allied Communicators.

The series, "Serving the Total Person," was released last fall to 1,000 radio stations in North America. It was also sent via satellite to an additional 1,500 stations.

The eight spots, each 30 or 60 seconds in length, deal with some aspect of health and temperance, including alcohol, smoking, fresh air, and the value of water. They have been designed for use by churches in their local markets, according to producer Sherrrie Thomas. The spots are available for purchase in three different forms.

Even though the spots have been released nationally, many local churches will be able to take advantage of them. "Many stations prefer to air only local PSAs," says Thomas. "They have written back to us saying, 'These are great spots, but we can't use them.' So now is the time for local churches to get to know their stations' program directors."

How can a pastor know whether his local station has already received the spots? "Either call the radio station and ask them," says Thomas, "or contact my office. This is an excellent opportunity for a church in any case — if the station hasn't received or aired the spots, the church has some first-rate PSAs to offer them. And if they have broadcast them, they'll already be familiar with the Seventh-day Adventist Church and more likely to broadcast future PSAs."

For more information, or to order the radio spots, write or call Sherrrie Thomas, General Conference Health and Temperance Department, 6830 Laurel Street, NW, Washington, DC 20012. Phone: (202) 722-6754.

PAMC Uses Mobile Unit to Promote Community Health

A 35-foot van designed to take Portland Adventist Medical Center's health programs out to the community has been rolling the roads for three months now.

Deanna Glindmeyer, RN, health educator, schedules the van and has already booked it at several Portland-area shopping malls, U.S. Bank's headquarters, the Multnomah Athletic Club, and a number of schools, athletic events and fairs.

"We offer a variety of health screening programs inside the van — computerized stress and nutrition profiles, health-age appraisals, blood pressure screenings, personal fitness evaluations and heart check screenings. The van may eventually be used for glaucoma, diabetes and dental screening as well," says Glindmeyer.

Modular panels make it possible to re-design the interior to meet the needs of each program. A sound system and IBM microcomputer are part of the van's equipment package.

The hospital's health education department is frequently called upon to provide health services at Portland-area functions. Facilities and electricity have sometimes been a problem as they attempted to provide these services. Now, they're self-contained and can take many of their health programs virtually anywhere.

The Healthvan has received the endorsement of two Portland foundations. The Collins Foundation awarded a grant of $5,000 for the equipping of the van, and the Clark Foundation gave another $500 toward furnishing the vehicle. Other foundations are currently reviewing invitations to participate in the project.

The van was purchased from the Polk County, Ore., health department. The hospital's plant services department remodeled the interior, and the central processing department director, Don Wiest, designed the van's exterior graphics.

A recently acquired Healthvan is now taking the message of good health from the Portland Adventist Medical Center to community areas.

Church Entity Employees Support United Way

The employees of Portland Adventist Medical Center, Tillamook County General Hospital, Walla Walla College and Walla Walla General Hospital were among those at 50 Seventh-day Adventist colleges, hospitals and other church entities in North America who gave $440,600 to the United Way in 1982. Employee contributions to the United Way in 1981 stood at $420,000. Combined contributions from these four institutions in the North Pacific Union Conference totaled $24,300 last year.

By supporting the community-wide campaigns, the employees and their institutions are joining forces with other leaders in their communities to show their interest and commitment to help alleviate the health and welfare needs of the less fortunate in their areas. This also gives each institution an opportunity to develop a two-way street in the area of voluntary support — giving, rather than just asking from the community.

Since the funding of a community drive began among Adventist institutions in Loma Linda, Calif., in the mid-50s, employees have contributed more than $3 million to the community-supported campaigns.

WALLA WALLA COLLEGE

Library to Focus Attention On Parenting Education

The State of Washington granted $12,600 to the sociology/social work department at Walla Walla College for its development of community-based projects.

The Washington Council on Child Abuse and Neglect selected the sociology/social work department's proposal as one of 15 community-based projects to be funded in 1983.

According to Dr. Wilma Hepker, chairman of the sociology/social work department, the grant will be used to promote the prevention of child abuse and neglect.

Through the project a parent education resource center will be developed, along with a parent information library.

"There is a current lack of parenting skills in society today," said Hepker. "Parents are asking for help. What we want to achieve is a library of materials available for anyone's use, covering a wide range of subjects."

Along with the printed resources to be made available will be the establishment of individual parenting education.

"Many people are hesitant to go out to a seminar or a group meeting, but they really enjoy having someone come to their home to offer individualized help. We have purchased a DuKane projector and will be able to start in-home training by the first of February," said Hepker.

Although individual education will be available, group education will also be part of the program's offering. The group sessions will feature discussions, lectures and films. In addition to this will be a parent support group.

Summer School Registration

Walla Walla College's summer school registration is scheduled for Sunday, June 12, from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. in Kellogg Hall. Summer school classes begin the following day and will run through Aug. 6.

This summer, Walla Walla College will once again offer Smart Start, a free tuition program for incoming freshman. The Smart Start student can take four to 12 credit hours without charge. However, the student must pay for dormitory accommodations as well as for food costs, books, activities and personal expenses.

For more information about summer school or Smart Start, call Walla Walla College at (509) 527-2395 or call toll free within the continental United States at 1-800-541-8900 (1-800-572-8964 in Washington state.) Or write to Summer Session Director, Walla Walla College, College Place, WA 99324.

Philadelphia Firm Awarded Contract for Food Service

As a result of its commitment to provide high-quality, good food to its students at a minimal cost, Walla Walla College has recently announced some modifications of the food service operation on its campus.

The college has entered into a management contract with ARA, a Philadelphia-based food management firm, to provide consulting services for the school food service located in Kellogg Hall. The school will retain full control of the cafeteria, and management and control of the on-campus food service will remain exclusively Adventist.

The contract with ARA, who presently provides food service to Battle Creek Sanitarium and to scores of other institutions, including colleges and universities, will allow the school to take advantage of the firm's increased purchasing power, research and test kitchens, and considerable expertise in the area of food service.

Along with this change in management, the cafeteria will begin charging a minimum rate to dormitory students, a common and widespread practice in colleges and universities. Dormitory students can choose one of two options: a light-eater rate at $214 per quarter and normal-eater rate at $274. After exceeding $274, students will be charged per item at a 60 percent discount. Unused portions of the minimum charged will be transferred to the following quarter of study.

These changes were suggested and made after considerable study by a committee established by the college board. The committee included students, trustees and college administrators. Altogether, the committee considered five separate proposals, including one by present food service management, before deciding on ARA.

ARA plans to commit $40,000 to renovation of the cafeteria and other items. The firm also plans to provide a varying weekly ethnic food line, an in-cafeteria bakery (students will be able to purchase against their minimum charge loaves of bread and other bulk items), as well as a modification of the eating environment.

WWC to Offer Two Summer Courses in 50-Plus Program

Walla Walla College will offer two classes this summer at the Upper Columbia Conference's 50-Plus program at Camp MiVoden July 17 to 24.

Assistant Theology Professor Henry Lamberton will teach a class on the Christian disciple and the church's mission. The other class, a field study in biology, will be taught by former Walla

Walla College Biology Department Chairman Dr. Ernest Booth. No college credit will be given for the courses.

Participants in the 50-Plus program can also attend classes on water skiing, canoeing, sailing, swimming, sail surfing, mountaineering and crafts. The program is open to residents of the North Pacific Union Conference who are 55 years old or older. The cost for the week is $80 before June 10 or $85 after June 10. (The fee includes room, board and tuition.)

This year, Adventist author Josephine Edwards will serve as camp pastor and will lead out in morning and evening devotional meetings.

Camp MiVoden is located at Hayden Lake in northern Idaho.

Additional information about the 50-Plus program is available from the Upper Columbia Conference, P.O. Box 19039, Spokane, WA 99219. Attention Clayton Child.

Fourteen WWC Students Get Acceptance for Medicine

Fourteen Walla Walla College students have been accepted by Loma Linda University's School of Medicine. They are: Kent Brusett, Barry Donesky, Dan Dunn, Richard Elloway, Allan Ho-A-Shoo, Laurens Johansen, Kaarsten Lang, Mona Messinger, Jana Miller, Yasuhiro Nishiura, Muffy Piper, Kevin Sargeant, Tammi Thomas and Jo Ann Toop.

Men's Satellite Housing to Be Eliminated in New Plans

As a result of its commitment to efficient use of the school plant and to hold down costs to students whenever possible, Walla Walla College recently announced changes in the operation of student housing on its College Place campus.

The changes will represent the consolidation and centralization of single-student housing. Eliminated in the change will be satellite housing for men dormitory students, an arrangement that included several houses, a converted motel and some apartments. That housing, all owned by the school, will revert to rent-charged housing for the school's married students (with a phasing out of Vet's Apartments), and a small motel.

On campus, Conard Hall will be divided into two separate entities. The division will be made between the front and rear portions of the dormitory; the front will be walled off and used for men dormitory students, and the rear portion, which will be connected to Foreman Hall, will be used for women dormitory students. The change will not represent any sort of coeducational living arrangements, and reflects an adherence to school and church standards. In some ways, it is similar to dormitory housing arrangements offered by the school when all students were housed in the North and South Hall wings of the administration building during the first years of school operation.

From an economic point of view, the changes represent a potential for holding dorm costs at their present levels instead of increasing them, as was earlier voted by the college board.

County Grants College Funds To Manage Social Service

Walla Walla College has recently been authorized to coordinate the programs for the developmentally disabled in Walla Walla County.

County commissioners have authorized payment of $12,000 to WWC to coordinate five county agencies. Beverly Buckles, an instructor in the sociology/social work department, is supervising the program. Before joining the faculty this year, Buckles was the county coordinator for the developmentally disabled services.

Wilma Hepker, chairman of the sociology/social work department, said the county is paying WWC to coordinate the agencies and as a result the county will cut down administrative costs.

"When Bev decided to join the faculty here, I think the county was upset about losing her. We made a proposal to the county in which WWC would be allowed to coordinate the agencies. This would benefit us, as the students would gain valuable experience; this would benefit the county in that under Bev's supervision, they could count on the programs being well run and their administrative costs would be cut," explained Hepker.

The new arrangement provides many opportunities for student involvement in the county's agencies for the developmentally disabled. Students will be involved in the daily operation and management of the agencies.

John Andrews, a senior social work major, will be working under Buckles as the coordinator of the five agencies, which have an annual operating budget of $300,000.

Unrestricted Grant Given By Retailers' Foundation

Walla Walla College recently received a grant of $2,200 from Sears-Roebuck Foundation. The gift brings to $32,325 the cumulative total the foundation has given the school through its annual program that aids private higher education.

The funding is unrestricted and thus may be used at the college's discretion.

An Adventist singles retreat will be held May 6-8 at the Environmental Learning Center Lodge, located across from Brooks Park on Highway 97 approximately 10 miles north of Goldendale, Wash., or 40 miles south of Toppenish, Wash. Watch for signs.

Guest speaker will be astronomer Luther Clendenon. A trip to the Goldendale Observatory is also planned. Programs are being prepared for children. Bring sleeping bags.

For further information, contact Myrtle Finlayson before April 23 at Rt. 1, Box 65, Mabton, WA 98935; (509) 882-2319.

PUC Prep Homecoming

The PUC Prep Alumni homecoming is scheduled for May 7 at the Pacific Auditorium beginning at 9 a.m. Potluck picnic lunch at 1 p.m. Special afternoon program.

RJA Homecoming

The Santa Rose, Calif., Redwood Junior Academy Homecoming Weekend is set for April 29-May 1. The class of 1983 will start the weekend program with Friday evening vespers. All former students, teachers and friends are invited to come renew old friendships. RVs are welcome. Names and addresses are needed. Contact Chairman Claire Snider, PO Box 946, Healdsburg, CA 95448. Phone (707) 433-9032.

Mail Order Meat Substitutes

Finding a good supply and variety of meat substitutes can mean hours and hours of driving for those of the vegetarian persuasion living in distant areas.

Loma Linda University's La Sierra campus market decided to do something about the situation and has established a mail order service for meat substitutes from several food companies. Shipping is by United Parcel Service.

The market carries a complete line of Loma Linda Foods and Worthington Foods in addition to Millstone and Cedar Lake products. The only meat substitutes that can't be shipped are the frozen ones.

A price list that includes all costs can be had by writing: La Sierra Market, Loma Linda University, 11550 Pierce St., Riverside, CA 92505.

Worthington Adds No-Salt Products

Worthington Foods, a major supplier of meatless, vegetable protein products for more than 40 years, announces the expansion of its product line to include two no-salt-added products.

Promoted as the "Salt Shakers," the two vegetable protein products include no added salt MSG Vegetable Skalops and no added salt MSG Vegetarian Burger. With the number of Americans suffering from hypertension estimated at anywhere from 35 to 60 million, these two popular and nutritious foods will fill an important need in the health food market.

Both the popular selling Vegetable Skalops and Vegetarian Burger, along with the new no-salt-added counterparts, are readily available in 20-ounce cans at many health food stores.

Plainview Academy News

Notice! All who are interested in the annual PVA alumni meeting of the Northwest Chapter, before you set a date for your 1983 vacation trip, please note that the Oct. 28-30 weekend is already scheduled! We are counting on you and your family joining us for a special weekend. This yearly event will take place on this same weekend every year until further notice.

Every year our group gets larger. If you have been with us in the past, please pass the word to others who have not. If you have not been here before, make this year your "first."

We'll be looking for you at Gladstone Campground near Portland, Ore. Meals and lodging available.

Gideon H. Haeger, president, (503) 746-0749. Carolyn Stotz Devitt, secretary, (503) 665-3290.

HSI Becomes HSI

For 22 years it was Fireside Correspondence School and for 52 years it was Home Study Institute. As of March 2, the church's major correspondence school with eight overseas branches, thousands of students around the world, and offering kindergarten through college, became Home Study International.

School at Monument Valley

Long to get away from the rat race? There are still a number of vacancies on the teaching staff of the new Monument Valley High School to open this fall, 1983. An English and Foreign Language teacher, English, Music Humanities, Business, Industrial Arts and Title VII are all needed.

If you are qualified to teach on the high school level and can be certified in Utah, Monument Valley needs your support.

We have a fine eight-grade church school operating on a sound financial basis. A hospital is an immediate part of our mission. Our church is large enough to be really enjoyable and not too large to be friendly.

If interested, contact Bill Long, Principal, Monument Valley High School, San Juan School District, Box 219, Monticello, UT 84535.

For further information regarding the church, church school and other mission related information, write to Pastor W. T. Morris, PO Box 124, Monument Valley, UT 84536, or call (801) 727-3281.

Mount Ellis Homecoming

The Mount Ellis Academy Homecoming is set for April 22 and 23, and is honoring classes of 1973, 1963, 1958, 1953, 1943 and 1933.

Support your alumni association by keeping in touch!

PERSON TO PERSON

Advertisements for this section are accepted from North Pacific Union Conference single adults only. Each ad must be accompanied by a letter from an NPUC Adventist pastor indicating that the person is an NPUC member in good standing.

The charge for each ad is $10 per insertion for 50 words or less, 25¢ for each additional word. Payment must accompany the ad. There is no billing.

If you wish to respond to an advertisement, the following rules apply: You must be an NPUC member in good standing and must attach a letter from your pastor indicating this. These letters are kept on file. If a person has advertised or responded to an ad in the past, it isn't necessary to send an additional pastoral letter of approval.

The GLEANER assumes no responsibility as to the marital status of respondents or advertisers except that they are North Pacific Union Conference members in good standing.

Put your letter to the individual in a stamped, sealed envelope and place the identification number on the outside. Put this letter in another envelope and mail it to Person to Person, GLEANER, Box 16677, Portland, OR 97216.

#190

Gentlemen, are you tired of being alone, eating your own cooking all the time or dining out? Would you like a reasonably attractive lady, 44, 5'11" tall, slender build, good personality to share your interest and a Christian relationship? I'm waiting for you to reply! I love people, times alone with the person I love; I have different kinds of interest, open to new things. I'm an excellent homemaker, cook and have a good job. I have one dependent, a teen-age daughter, who lives with me. Would like our home complete as God planned. All letters answered. (18)

#191

The calendar says I'm past 50 but I don't look or act that "old." Like to meet a dedicated (tall) man to share life with while we wait for our Lord. If you enjoy the out-of-doors and are a serious Christian, why not write, enclosing a recent photo? (18)

#192

A not real attractive, not real thin, 49-year-old lady wants to provide TLC to male person. I like to work, like to play. Enjoy country living. Want to have a direct part in hurrying our Lord's return. Qualifications needed to apply: kind, neat and fairly intelligent. (18)

#193

Hard-working, 19-year-old farm boy, 5'9", 155, would like to meet slim young lady of good character, 18-21, 5'-5'7", who likes to ride horses and motorcycles, camp out, swim, play volleyball, softball, etc. Must be outdoor type. Please send a picture with first letter. (18, 2)

#194

Understanding gentleman, 5'11", age 59, easy to look at, young at heart and active. Would like to meet and share with a warm person. Do you have a burden to work for lost souls? I need a companion to help me visit and give lots of Bible studies, in a personal and meaningful way. Are you a thin, healthy person, who is loving, sensitive, patient, and intelligent in the Scriptures? If so, then won't you please write to me? (18)
