Likes the Book

This letter is written to second the urging of George Slater, (July 18) relative to the purchase of the book Creeping Compromise by Joe Crews. I believe that if every Adventist were to carefully, thoughtfully and prayerfully peruse this book, great changes would be wrought in the Adventist Church and Christ's coming would be hastened.

The last sentence in Brother Slater's letter needs clarification. I trust he meant it differently than it came out. We are not counted worthy in God's sight by studying His Word or reading Ellen White. It is only as we accept the precious blood of Jesus Christ and His robe of righteousness that we can be counted worthy.

1935 Graduates Still Active

I have just read the letter in the Aug. 1 issue referring to the first college commencement exercise held outdoors and your reply suggesting a "mild slap" on the wrist is in order because Emma Cox has written about the class of 1935 graduating outdoors.

Your statement that possibly not many 1935 grads are still around the college these days is a very good reason why I'm answering your remarks.

There are several of us "old" 1935 grads around the College Place area: a practicing dentist, a college writing teacher, a city council member, and others doing worthwhile work.

I suggest instead of a "mild slap," a very vigorous one is in order.

Irene Pannett Lottman
Secretary, Class of 1935
College Place, Wash.

We didn't want to injure our typing hand so we have retreated to our foxhole until the 1935 WWC graduates get off the warpath. We humbly acknowledge the existence of 1935 graduates. They seem to be a rather feisty bunch so we'll keep a watchful eye out for them.

Water Dowsing: Yes and No

Sing or find water, both are talents! God gave to each of us different talents and different body chemistry which can be used as a talent. If we look into why some can find water while others can't, we will find a difference in body chemistry.

Also, if further studied we will find that if the kidneys are covered with foil, that person can't find water as a chemical reaction is prevented. We are quick to label things "occult" if we don't understand them, which may or may not be good. But let us study further, keeping in mind that God has made each one different with the instructions for each one of us to use our God-given talents or differences for the benefit of others.

Sandra Thobois

... I think there is a difference between using a willow or green forked stick to find water and playing with an Ouija board. ... In Genesis 30:37-43 Jacob used green sticks to place before the cattle so they would bear speckled or straked calves. Do you think this was of the Devil?

I knew a man who divined or witched wells in foreign countries and even public wells in eastern Oregon, California, Idaho and Montana. He did it for money and his talent was well in demand. I understand that the water vein draws the green stick to turn.

I've tried it myself to feel how it works. I think this is a scientific action and has nothing to do with sorcery or witchcraft.

... In the book, The Early Elmhaven Years — 1900-1905, on page 366 it tells how the wizard stick was used when deciding where to dig to get water for Paradise Valley Sanitarium.

I wonder, do we over react at things we don't understand? A television or radio is just as mysterious to me.

Helen Rabun
Redding, Calif.

... My question is: why do we sometimes have a tendency to assume that physical phenomena which we have no explanation for are manifestations of the occult? The more superstitious among us once believed that electricity was the work of the devil. Mr. Whitney, do you have electricity in your home?

Greg Jones
College Place, Wash.

Charles Whitney has some good points and I admit I have mixed feelings on this myself. I heard of a man who witched water for an island that had to ship in all their water. He did this from his hotel room in the U.S. over a map of the island. ...

But I can't discount the story of the Paradise Valley Sanitarium found on pages 365-66 of the Early Elmhaven Years ... in which Ellen G. White recommended they use a good Adventist well digger of her acquaintance, Salem Hamilton, to do the well. They surveyed the ground and tried the wizard water stick and discussed the possibilities.

Here we have an acquaintance of Mrs. White whom she relied on to find water (bringing him from Nebraska) and he uses a wizard water stick as one of his methods.

Ron McCormick

... If dowsing is a natural phenomenon or a gift from God, then it should be used for man's benefit, and church members should be educated about it. But if it is the work of Satan, it is a hazard, and should be discarded by God's servants.

Deuteronomy 18:10 says, "There shall not be found among you any one that maketh his son or his daughter to pass through the fire, or that useth divination, or an observer of times, or an enchanter, or a witch."

"Diviner" is defined as "one that practices divination: soothsayer, oracle; specific: one that seeks to discover the location of water or minerals underground with the aid of a divining rod."

The foregoing references seem to indicate that the use of a "divining" rod to locate water is prohibited by the instruction in Deuteronomy. But is the modern art of "dowsing" the same as the biblical phenomenon of "divination"?

What do dowzers actually do? The usual method used to locate water is to carry a forked twig, metal rods or a pendulum across a field, and the location of underground water is marked by an abrupt movement of the dowsing device.

Many dowzers determine the depth and flow of the stream they have located. Rods are used to locate items other than water, such as ore, pipes (not necessarily metal), hidden tunnels, people, oil, precious stones, telephone or power wires, corpses and hidden money. ... present understanding is well stated by Elder George Vandeman: "Scientists have not yet been able to explain the phenomenon, but somehow I expect that we may eventually find a scientific reason, perhaps related to the area of electromagnetism."

Can a natural force, presently unknown, account for the movement of the dowsing rod? Robert H. Brown, director of Geoscience Research Institute (Andrews University) says, "There is absolutely no physical basis for water witching."

The idea that there is physical attraction between the rod and the water is accepted only by the most casual observer. It is inconsistent with the fact that many dowzers use the same technique for finding a large variety of materials. And it would not explain "map dowsing," where the dowser indicates the spot on a map without visiting the geographical area under investigation.

If the rod is not moved by a natural attraction between it and water, what is the cause? It is possible that the dowser has a subconscious idea where the water is, and subconsciously moves the rod. This idea is generally accepted by investigators of the dowsing phenomenon, but is not acceptable to practitioners. . . .

When considering the kinds of things that dowzers do, most Christians will agree that at least some involve spiritualism or fraud. The pertinent question is where to draw the line between the good and bad. Since all serious investigators of dowsing agree that the movement of the rod is not caused by any natural force, all uses of the rod should be considered "divination," as used in Deuteronomy 18:10. . . .

* The material above has been excerpted from a lengthier article prepared by Mr. Mahn.

. . . Years ago an old German taught me to witch with a hickory, peach or willow forked stick. He could tell where the water was, the direction of the flow, the rate of the flow and the amount, also the depth, to the foot.

About 22 years ago, our neighbors had a lady from the church come out to witch water for the location of their well. She made three piles of stones where there would be water, with a special pile where there would be the most water.

When I came home from work and heard about it, I went over to check to see if my witching would agree. Sure enough, she was "right on." There had been a question in my mind for some time about whether it was right to witch for water, so I prayed and asked the Lord for a sign; if it was not right for me to witch, do not let it work. So I went around again. It did not work! Absolutely nothing!

I was so astonished that I started around the third time. It started working again, so I broke the stick and never witched again. I had asked the Lord for a sign and then tested Him to see if He meant what He indicated. Now, I know for sure that it is not right for me to witch for water.

I was one of many who did not believe God would ever permit sinful man to step on the moon, but I have learned to be very careful in speaking about things I do not understand.

God uses great forces in nature that man cannot explain. The moon seems to lift the ocean several feet, plants turn to the light and tree roots toward the water. A regular 2x4 will twist clockwise north of the equator and counterclockwise south of the equator. A salmon returns to the place of his birth. Fasten a tiny magnet to the body of a homing pigeon and she is lost. A stork hatches four babies in the nest in Denmark and later the babies leave the nest and fly to South Africa. Two weeks later the parents leave for a family reunion with their babies. Is this all by the devil?

A neighbor who has a farm was worried because his three wells were not giving enough water for his irrigation. He asked me if I would try to find a spot where he could dig another well. For two days I searched the land and I found six veins of water that all came together at one central place. The neighbor questioned because it was only 12 feet from one of his wells. He dug and put in a 10 horse power pump that gives 150 gallons a minute. This kind of work takes great skill and effort. Yet, if I step into my heavy rubber boots, the magnetic field is entirely cut off. Is this of the devil?

Our minister who had been a missionary in South Africa told of an incident while there. The church had been offered a piece of excellent land if they could find water. The conference president witched for water and found a good supply. Today there is a school established on that piece of property.

I repeat: We must be very careful of speaking of things we do not understand.

After a while letters on any subject tend to become repetitious and so we will draw the curtain on the topic of water dowsing, except for some closing comments next issue.

We have received from Charles H. Rentfro, Grand Terrace, Calif., five tapes, two letters and a number of clippings relating to dowsing. We hope to digest this material and give a further report.

God Watches Over Us

My wonderful Christian grandmother read in the Bible about the Sabbath truth. She had heard of the Seventh-day Adventists and when one came to her door with a tract she exclaimed, "This is what I have been waiting for! Where is the Seventh-day Adventist Church?" She learned that a church was located seven miles away.

She drove to church with horses and wagon. That was going 14 miles on Sabbath over bad roads. (You older ones can remember the roads in those days.) And, Grandmother believed in being on time for Sabbath school, too.

Grandmother's husband did not want her to attend the Adventist church and he was mean and disagreeable. One time he made the bolts loose on the four wagon wheels, thinking they would come off before his wife got to church. But God watched over Grandmother while she drove to church and on the way home.

The next day grandfather decided to drive to the store to buy the Sunday paper. His daughter got in the wagon with him. Grandfather had forgotten all about the loose wagon bolts. They had not gone far before the wheels came off and the horses tried to run away. In the excitement Grandfather blurted out to his daughter that he had made the wagon bolts loose when he thought Grandmother would not make it to church. His dirty trick had backfired on him.

One reason I am in the church today is because of my grandmother's faithfulness. I love the church as she loved it.

Appreciation from Thailand

We want you to know that the GLEANER reaches us in a remote village in Thailand and it is like a letter from home. We appreciate so much being on your mailing list. We used to go to the South Side Church in Tacoma and the GLEANER keeps us up to date.

We work in Cambodia — on the border — on a SAWS medical and feeding team. The Khmer people have experienced immense difficulties and we feel it's a privilege to help them with the basic things like food. The prayers of those in our home conference are so much appreciated because sometimes the going gets rough.

Camp Meeting, 1983

Oregon Session Is a Family Tradition

Editor's Note: During the past few weeks the GLEANER editor has attended several camp meetings held in the Northwest. The following three articles represent some of the jottings from his notes, as well as pictures from his camera.

The Oregon Camp Meeting is unlike any other similar session in the Northwest. Long ago it moved from the normal meeting to a tradition. Many who have ever lived in Oregon make the annual trek back to Gladstone if for nothing else than to renew acquaintanceships.

Visitors come from neighboring states to enjoy the excellent, though often jam-packed, program. There seems to be something for everyone at this convocation.

Its popularity is seen in the overflow audiences that throng the grounds on the weekend. It is impossible to get an accurate count of Sabbath worshipers, but estimates place the attendance in the range of 15,000 to 16,000.

This is no place to come at the beginning of Sabbath school hoping to get a good seat. Long before the 9:15 a.m. hour the benches and chairs inside the huge tent are filled. Latecomers spill over onto benches under the trees.

Visitors come in all ages, shapes and colors. Koreans held their own meeting while Vietnamese members joined Blacks and Orientals in the main pavilion. Hispanics had a separate session in their own language.

This year for the first time young adults met in the nearby Gladstone Church, with a shuttle bus furnishing transportation. Senior citizens from the Village Retirement Center came by bus also.

Oregon Camp Meeting is a showplace for Adventist musicians. They come from throughout Oregon as well as nearby states, recording artists with records to demonstrate their abilities, as well as the homebred variety with top talent hoping to get notice.

The same holds true for speakers. Where can an Adventist speaker find such a large audience for his message?

The theme this year, "Our Adventist Heritage," centered about the history of the church and the contributions of the pioneers to the message. A morning series on the Spirit of Prophecy was augmented by an afternoon sequence of programs that centered on specific areas of heritage such as education and the printed page.

Barbara Huey from the Hood View Church brought some week-old chicks to show children in the kindergarten division. Grant Hanchett is fascinated with one chick.

In a recreation of a familiar Adventist historical happening, Roger Dondino from Beaverton, dressed as Joseph Bates, visits with Pastor James Gaul who took the part of blacksmith David Hewitt, "the most honest man in town."

The staff from Big Lake Youth Camp provided the music and program for several divisions on the two camp meeting Sabbaths.

Nineteen Years for Northern Idaho

On a beautiful Sabbath morning, visitors to the Northern Idaho Camp Meeting enjoy the preaching service by Donald G. Reynolds, Upper Columbia Conference president.

If Oregon has the largest camp meeting in the Northwest, then the Northern Idaho session is one of the smallest of the regularly scheduled meetings.

There is no discernible difference in the music, the preaching or the dedication of those who attend. Size is the only differential, with the Idaho session having about 350 people present on Sabbath.

This is primarily an outreach of the Weippe and Orofino churches in the Upper Columbia Conference and lasts one weekend. Nineteen years ago Eldon Hutchins had the idea for a camp meeting, and during the Sabbath school session he gave a report of that initial get-together.

"We went out that first Sabbath, three members of our family and the dog. We sat under a shelter that August day and watched the large snowflakes come down."

Undaunted by the early snow on the high plateau, Hutchins was joined by other members who moved to a lower elevation at an earlier time in the year. The annual meeting continued to grow in size, constantly shifting locations until six years ago.

At that time they settled on the present site, Frazer Park near Weippe. Here amid towering Ponderosa pine and fir trees, members, under the direction of their pastor, Elwood Boyd, put up six large plastic tarps as a shelter.

Visitors came to the camp meeting from many churches in the Upper Columbia Conference and also from the neighboring Idaho Conference. For a large number of those in attendance, this was the only such session they had an opportunity to attend this year. Many of those present brought tents, trailers or recreational vehicles for the campout.

Guest speaker was Donald G. Reynolds, president of the Upper Columbia Conference, who presented a series of messages on Personal Salvation using John 3:16 as the basis of his devotionals.

Special music for the camp meeting was furnished by "His Witness," a group of students from Upper Columbia Academy.

Weippe and Orofino Pastor Elwood Boyd coordinated the camp meeting program.

Guest speaker Donald G. Reynolds presented a series of studies on John 3:16.

West Coast Tongans Hold Camp Meeting

"You're invited to the Tongan Camp Meeting."

With this assignment, my first task was to locate Tonga on a map, and I found it to be one of the Friendly Island group northeast of New Zealand. I learned later that many Tongan Adventists live on the U.S. West Coast.

As I entered the lower level of the cafeteria in Gladstone on a Sabbath morning, I heard the sound of a brass band, reminiscent of the Salvation Army variety. Here were nine men serenading the arriving visitors.

Sabbath school opened with the theme song, "When We All Get to Heaven," but with a Tongan addition. Everyone circulated about the auditorium singing and shaking hands with everyone they could get to.

I got acquainted with Ika Tamefuna, a court interpreter from Auckland, New Zealand. He translated the Sabbath school proceedings for my benefit.

Some 200 or more Tongans had come to this fourth annual meeting from Riverside, Culver City, Hawthorne and San Francisco, Calif., as well as from Reno, Salt Lake City, Portland and Seattle.

As I glanced about, I noticed many of the men wearing what I called a skirt. Tamefuna explained it was called a "tupenu" and that the outer covering called the "taovala" was a symbol of respect and humility.

Later in the day I queried Portland member Asipeli Poulivaati about the wisdom of such garb. Fingering his tie, he told me, "If you're smart enough to tell me the usefulness of this, I will explain the skirt."

I decided not to pursue the topic any further.

Since there are few pianos in Tonga, the Gladstone convocation followed the island custom of singing a cappella. And such singing! Chills of ecstasy raced up and down my back as I listened to the convocation singing "Wonderful Love of Jesus" in the Tongan language.

Those attending the annual meeting go to a great deal of expense. In addition to traveling long distances, they pay for the expenses of the guest speakers. In this case, two came from the Tonga and Niue Mission. They were John R. Lee, mission president, and one of the pastors, Siokatame Tupou.

It seems as though every Tongan has some musical ability. During the Sabbath school and church service, as well as in the afternoon songfest, group after group presented special numbers. Interestingly, while the hymn singing was in Tonganese, almost all of the special numbers were sung in English.

As I listened to the singing and the Australian-accented preaching of Pastor Lee, it was reassuring to me to hear the same gospel, the same familiar message I would hear in my home church.

A number of Tongans attending their annual camp meeting display their native dress.

Not to be outdone by male singers, a women's group gets together to unite their voices in song.

A men's quartet from Salt Lake City furnished several musical numbers during the Tongan Camp Meeting.

Weekly Services Held in Idaho Correctional Facility

By Ed Schwisow

Few Americans would list the federal or state penitentiary as their preferred place of worship. We value our freedom, and specifically, our freedom to practice our religious convictions as we choose.

For hundreds of men in the state of Idaho, however, there was no option to attend Seventh-day Adventist services — that is, until two years ago this past June when members of the Meridian, Idaho, Church organized their first worship service in the confines of the Idaho State Correctional Institution.

And for this committed group of Adventists, spending Sabbath afternoons in prison with their fellow Christian friends there has become a way of life each weekend.

This volunteer group, under the direction of Chuck and Delmarie Null, for most of the past 27 months have been conducting, not one, but two separate worship services at the correctional facility. One takes place in the medium security area, while the other is held in an annex at the "farm" or minimum security area.

During the first months of their weekly visitation, the Nulls confess that they wondered if it was all doing any good. "We had no idea that anyone here was thinking of joining the church, at all," says Chuck, a husky, smiling man with a firm handshake.

"So it was a total surprise when one Sabbath we realized that one of our friends, Floyd Noel, had been impressed to join the church through baptism."

Noel, at this writing, remains in the minimum security unit of the correctional institution, and faithfully attends services held there each Sabbath.

But, in a spiritual sense, he has gained his freedom, and since his baptism last autumn in a nearby river with Pastor Stan Beerman and the Meridian Church members, Noel has been an active witness.

Lest it be said that the Meridian Church retains exclusive control of the prison outreach, it should be noted that members of the Kuna, Eagle, Meridian, Boise and Payette, Idaho, churches join frequently in the weekly ministry.

Ed Schwisow is assistant editor of the GLEANER.

Floyd Noel (in robe, holding towel) stands next to his baptizing pastor, Stan Beerman. Delmarie and Chuck Null stand third and fourth from the right.

Of the dozen or so inmates who attend most Sabbath meetings, several are avid Bible students in their own right, says Null. Eldon Leach, a Christian friend of Noel's, and himself a resident in the minimum security section, helped Noel prepare for baptism.

According to Pastor Beerman, when Noel came forward to request baptism, he was already well acquainted with Christian teachings, due, in many respects, to his study with Leach.

"This is a ministry we feel very strongly about," says Chuck Null. "These men behind bars need to hear of Christ in a very special way. We're happy to be a part of this outreach."

Each service accentuates the love of Christ, without a great deal of emphasis on doctrinal minutiae, says Null. The gospel talks are meant to help create an interest in spiritual matters, and a desire to study more of the nature of Christ.

With the constant inspiration of their friend and brother Floyd Noel and the joy of other inmates in seeing them each Sabbath afternoon, the weekly trek to the Idaho State Correctional Institution has become a very special part of each Sabbath day.

Eldon Leach, a committed Christian friend of Floyd Noel, dedicates a song to the Lord on the Sabbath morning of Noel's baptism.

On the dry, bleak landscape several miles from Boise, Idaho, the state Correctional Institution is a home for hundreds of men who, until two years ago, were virtually isolated from any Seventh-day Adventist personal ministry.

Inside the meeting hall of the minimum security section, services are held each week. A similar session is conducted within the higher security portion of the facility. Photos by Jim Gray and Ed Schwisow.

Walla Walla General Hospital Uses Mobile Unit for Community Outreach

By Stephen Tucker

Walla Walla General Hospital's Mobile Health Resource Center, which was officially opened in early May, will make the hospital's Health Education programs more accessible to the public.

"Staying well is better than getting well" is a philosophy held by Walla Walla General Hospital. As an outgrowth of this philosophy, the hospital recently began operating a Mobile Health Resource Center in conjunction with its hospital-based Health Education programs.

The Mobile Health Resource Center, a 10 by 32-foot trailer, consists of an all-purpose classroom, a private examination room, a kitchen and a restroom. Currently the unit can serve the local community in areas where special power hookups are available. When funding for a generator becomes available, the unit will become even more versatile.

Equipment from the hospital or from the offices of professionals involved in various screening programs is used for the testing.

The goal of the mobile unit, like the hospital itself, is to reach and heal the whole person. This means ministering to the patient's spiritual and physical needs. "Our goal," says Arlene Whitney, director of the mobile unit and a co-worker with her husband, Ron, in the hospital's Health Education Department, "is to reach and heal physically while remaining attuned to spiritual needs." "The unit," adds Ron, "can be a 'bridge' between the hospital, the community and the church."

The hospital's mobile health unit forms a community-to-church-bridge through a variety of programs. Thus far the Mobile Health Resource Center has hosted health fitness evaluations and glaucoma screening at Walla Walla's Eastgate Mall and nutritional analysis, body fat composition testing and blood typing during Walla Walla College's Collegiate Adventists for Better Living Week.

During the college's alumni weekend a glaucoma examination was offered and at the local senior citizen's center, participants were given free foot examinations and health age appraisals. A recent pulmonary screening offered in cooperation with the American Lung Association drew more than 150 participants, while 20 Upper Columbia Conference camp meeting attendees participated in an extensive cardiac risk and fitness evaluation.

In addition to these types of programs, the mobile health unit is designed to accommodate health seminars for all ages, counseling services and medical screening.

Program plans for the new unit include health screening and testing offered in cooperation with the American Cancer Society, the American Lung Association and the American Diabetes Association. The programs offered in partnership with local health agencies demonstrate the hospital's commitment to cooperate with community professionals to meet the residents' needs. This approach results in high-quality programs being taught by competent professionals.

Operating costs of the unit are reduced through the use of volunteers. At the Upper Columbia camp meeting in mid-June, several of the professionals staffing the unit, including two physicians, were volunteers.

The use of volunteers helps to draw the Adventist community together by bringing together a team of professionals from the hospital, Walla Walla College and local churches.

Because of volunteer work, subsidization from Walla Walla General Hospital and direct contributions, the hospital's Health Education programs can be offered free or at a substantially reduced cost. The foot examination and health age appraisal for the senior citizens were offered free, while the extensive testing offered at camp meeting was available for about $175 less than comparable testing in a hospital setting. This means Walla Walla Valley residents receive quality health appraisals by skilled professionals at a greatly reduced or nonexistent cost.

"Ministering to the whole person involves more than just health screening," says Health Education Director Ron Whitney. That's because "screening is not of much value without education." He takes his own advice seriously by planning numerous health education programs each year.

Volunteer Margaret Trautwein, a nursing instructor at Walla Walla Community College, prepares to draw a blood sample from Walla Walla College engineering professor Dr. Robert Cuffel. Cuffel is one of 20 Upper Columbia Conference camp meeting attendees who participated in on-location cardiac risk and fitness evaluation testing offered by Walla Walla General Hospital through its new Mobile Health Resource Center.

Stephen Tucker is a senior communications student at Walla Walla College and is currently serving as public relations intern at Walla Walla General Hospital.

Last year's attendance figures show 17,000 participants attended 80 health programs offered by the hospital. This education process — a bridge between the hospital, the community and the church — is continuing, bolstered by the addition of the Mobile Health Resource Center. Programs planned for this year deal with a wide range of topics under the general categories of Family and Personal Life Programs, Children and Youth Programs, Health Management Series, Nutrition, Diet and Foods, Senior Citizens Education and Clinical Education Seminars. In addition the hospital reaches the community through a Health Information Telephone Tape Library, and a Travelers and Campers Series.

Ministering to the total person is the mission of Walla Walla General Hospital. And through its health education programs this ministry grows by showing the residents of southeastern Washington a better, more fulfilling lifestyle.

Idaho Church Uses Illuminated Sign to Catch Eye of the Public

By Ed Schwisow

An old hospital exit sign has begun a new life as a 24-hour, year around advertiser for a rural church in Idaho.

As the pastor, Shane Dresen, asked his church board, "How can we catch the public eye?" his first elder, Phil Deiter, suggested using an illuminated sign.

"We're located right on the main thoroughfare, and people from Rupert, Burley, Paul and Heyburn use this road," says Dresen. The board responded with enthusiasm to the idea that a sign be located in plain view to motorists passing in either direction, day or night.

Durable, illuminated signs do not come cheap, but Deiter knew of an old four-foot by six-foot hospital sign in storage. He and the pastor negotiated with the owners to put it to use near the church, and it was donated.

The total cost of buying letters for the sign and of inscribing the name "Seventh-day Adventist" in white letters came to $800, says Dresen. Members welded the sign to a six-inch well casing pipe and set it in concrete. The post was then sided with boards similar to those on the church exterior.

The most important news about the sign, says Dresen, is not the fact that it has been installed at a savings, but that it works so well.

"It's our best advertiser for nutrition seminars, stop smoking clinics and evangelistic meetings," says Dresen.

The sign may someday become bilingual, as an avenue to Hispanic people who have migrated to the area, he says.

"The secret to this sign is to keep coming up with new messages about once every four days," he adds. During a recent Revelation Seminar series, Dresen posted each topic as it was scheduled for presentation.

"Never let the message get stale," he cautions. "In fact, I'm now coming up with a series of statements and slogans that will outline the full message of our beliefs."

The sign has come a long way since it marked the exit of a hospital parking lot. Today, situated on its 10-foot mast, it has become the most effective entry point for the hundreds of passers-by near the Heyburn Church.

"It's not our only means of communication," says Dresen. "We are using newspaper and radio, too, because not everyone in the area uses this road. But this sign is still our most effective lead, because it starts a chain of word-of-mouth advertising. And besides, once it's installed, it's virtually free advertising."

For $15 worth of electrical current each month, the Heyburn Church feels it has an advertising bargain.

Since its first message was posted last January, this sign has become the Heyburn Church members' best advertising.

Young Jewish Lady Finds Hope In Accepting Jesus Christ

By Mary K. Walter

The work of evangelism is full of joys, surprises, victories, heartache and beautiful experiences. It strengthens your patience, your love for God and love for your fellow humans. It is a program that every member of the church can take part in.

"I am not ashamed of the gospel because it is the power of God for the salvation of everyone who believes; first for the Jew, then for the Gentile." Romans 1:16 NIV

I want to share with you a beautiful story as related to me by Lori. It was an experience in which our evangelistic Walter-Paulson team took part.

"I was born into a Jewish family. My mother was an Orthodox Jew and observed the Sabbath when I was a child. From grades 1-12 I attended Hebrew school twice a week where we learned to read, write and speak Hebrew." Lori paused as childhood memories came back to her.

I glanced up from my notebook. There on the daveno nearby sat a petite, vivacious brunette. Her fair complexion and dark brown eyes were a pretty combination. No wonder Randy was dating her.

"In our school we studied about some of the patriarchs and prophets. We used a prayer book but not the Bible."

"Lori, tell me some more about your family," I urged.

"Well, my father was born in Portland. He was never a devout Jew. My grandfather came from England. He went to Russia, met and married my grandmother who was a young dentist in Davinsk. They came to America soon after they were married.

"My maternal grandmother came to the U.S. strapped under a car that was being shipped. My grandfather came dressed as a woman. A Jewish-American doctor helped them and many other persecuted Jews escape from eastern Europe. Two of my great aunts died during the persecution in Auschwitz and one in Dacheau. One uncle dug out of Auschwitz with a teaspoon. It took him four months."

The phone was ringing now and as Lori hurried to answer I thought back a few days to our first meeting. Our evangelistic team had begun a series in the Mount Tabor Church and Lori came every night her work allowed. We had come to know and love her.

"Lori, tell me how you became interested in Christianity."

"I grew up knowing very little of Jesus. The only time I heard His name mentioned was over the radio when Christmastime approached. From hearing the carols I wondered why I did not hear of or learn more about Him. Mom always said 'We just don't talk about Jesus at this house.'

"When I was 21 my mother and I traveled in Europe. We made an agreement. If I would go to a Shakespeare play with her she would go with me to hear Jesus Christ Super Star." Lori paused and then added, "Does it seem possible I would learn of Him that way?"

"I felt utter happiness. I had found the church family I had been seeking."

"I am sure your Lord knew you were ready and that was the beginning of better things for you. What was the next step in your life?"

"It is so exciting how the Lord watches over us and leads us as we are ready. I worked at St. Vincent's Hospital and a friend there talked to me about Jesus.

"But wait a minute. I am getting ahead of my story. I was married to a fellow who was a former Catholic and a good husband. We had two little boys. One was a miracle baby who was premature, had a stroke, lost a kidney, his lungs collapsed and he had high blood pressure. He's now four-and-a-half and doing beautifully! Praise the Lord!" The young woman glanced at me, pain showing in her eyes.

"Yes, Lori, do you want to share any more?" I asked.

"Only to say that my husband became an alcoholic and that finally led him to become an irresponsible person. Our marriage failed — something I could hardly handle. Everything in my life seemed to collapse at this time. My father was diagnosed as having cancer, money for my education was gone, my husband had been unfaithful to me. I became angry with God, with Judaism and Christianity."

She had indeed been through trauma. I waited for her to go on.

"I started praying. My Christian friend Annie talked with me and showed me Christian love. At this point I gave prayer a chance and Christ became my Savior.

"I am an LPN working to make a living and also going to nursing school. One day Annie said to me — 'I believe you are accepting Christ. You glow.'"

"I have seen you and Randy at the meetings, Lori. Tell me some about that friendship."

"I met Randy in October of 1982. We became friends. During lunch together one afternoon we talked about my being a vegetarian. The conversation led to the theory of his faith and dietary laws. Then one thing led to another and we started talking about God, Christ and the love of knowing Him. Soon after that we talked regularly about Jesus and began studying the Bible together Sabbath evenings.

"Now I was searching to find a church. I wondered if there could be one that worshipped on the Bible Sabbath. One Sabbath I asked Randy to go to the synagogue with me. We were disappointed with the lack of spiritual presentation and with the presence of opulence. It was similar to a fashion show.

"Then, Mary, I attended Mount Tabor Church with Randy. I felt so close to Christ. I felt utter happiness. I had found the church family I had been seeking."

It was time for my visit to end. I collected my keys and purse. "Is there anything else you want to say, Lori?"

"Mary, I have found that the Seventh-day Adventist faith is an honest religion. Everything is in the Bible. I look forward to the Sabbath and Christian fellowship. And the health message of the church gives us the best possible life."

It was an exciting day for many when Lori Herbrand was baptized by Pastor Harvey Corwin. Her total commitment to God was an inspiration to all who know her. God had led her step by step. There were those who were willing to be instruments in His hand to influence her life and she was willing to follow where He led.

A CHALLENGE

The church in Alaska became a conference on January 1. But there is still the vast northern region called the Alaska Mission Territory, which presents a tremendous challenge for evangelism.

Nearly as large as the combined area of the other North Pacific Union Conference states — Washington, Oregon, Montana and Idaho — its total membership of 114 is scattered among seven far-flung congregations. Working in this territory are three regular pastors, based in Nome, Kotzebue and Bethel. In addition, two Task Force pastors are located at Savoonga and Gambell.

Pictured is the recently completed combination church/parsonage in Bethel. To help conserve heating expenses, as well as building costs, the sanctuary is located on the lower level, while the pastor's living quarters are on the upper floor.

Your gift in the September 17 unionwide offering will help make other capital improvements throughout the territory.

From Covered Wagons to Rockets

By Aileen Andres Sox

My grandmother, whose parents traveled from Iowa to Washington state in a covered wagon just before she was born and who herself used that mode of transportation, has lived into the jet and space age. She has taught me that a person can live fully in the present, yet respect the past and look forward with eager anticipation to the future.

Her stories about her pioneer childhood enthralled me when I was young and continue to do so. They have made me aware of my family's heritage as well as that of my country. And, although she is nearing 87, she continues to have more activities planned than she will ever be able to complete. I am convinced that these plans help keep her young.

Yet, and perhaps most importantly, Grandma always has known how to live in the present. Her letters to me record the daily moments that give her pleasure — canning the garden's harvest, the accomplishments of a child, grandchild or great grandchild, the abundant blooms on her 40 or so rose bushes, the antics of the family dog.

Her deep involvement with life — past, present and future — seems to me to closely parallel my work on the Adventist Review staff. A magazine that began in 1850, and was put together by the pioneers of our church, it has a rich heritage that is never far from the present staff's minds.

I sometimes remember as I am proof-reading galleys or writing an editorial on a Sunday afternoon at home so that I can meet a deadline Monday morning, that Uriah Smith, James White and others not only proofread or wrote into the early morning hours, they also folded and mailed the magazines and later printed them as well, tasks we have a whole publishing house to accomplish today.

We continuously plan for the future. Recently the staff talked about the special issues and articles we are planning for you, our readers, in 1984. Topics we plan to cover include: A look at George Orwell's 1984 from an Adventist perspective; how to plan an Adventist wedding; Adventists and fine arts; Adventist health care; entire issues dedicated to a discussion of the Adventist family today and the church in North America.

Aileen Andres Sox is assistant editor of Adventist Review.

Important as is understanding our heritage and making plans for the future, it is in the present that we produce the Adventist Review. During this past year William G. Johnsson became editor-in-chief, assuming office following the retirement of Kenneth H. Wood, editor for 26 years. Along with that change came several other changes in editorial positions.

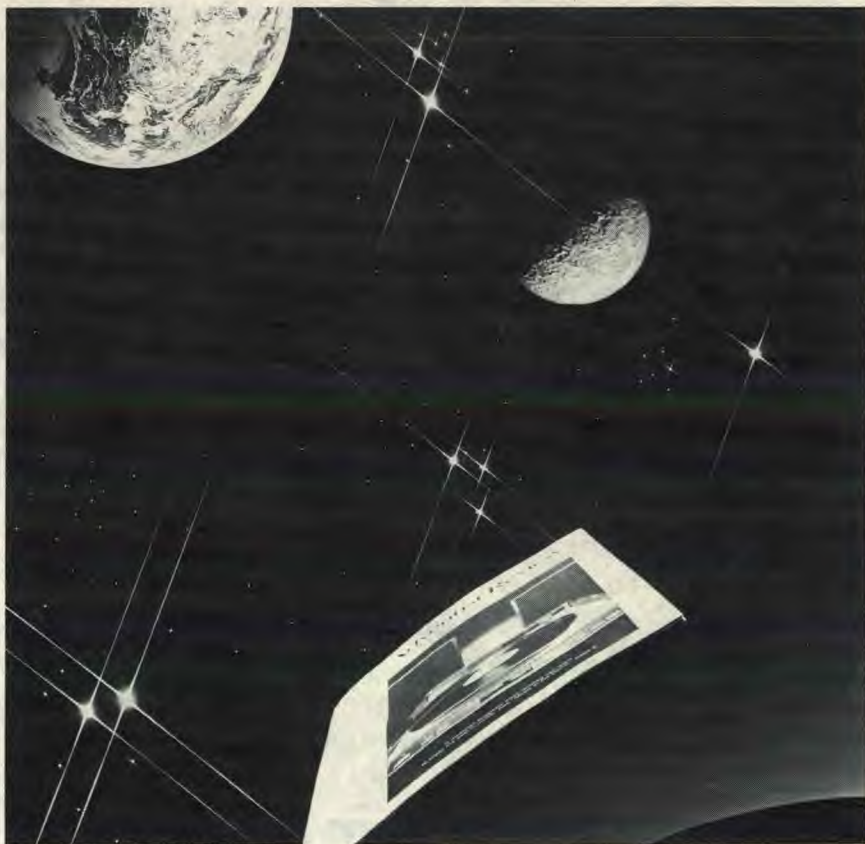

The new team under Dr. Johnsson's leadership have put some features into this year's Reviews that are bringing compliments and comments from readers everywhere: Perspective, a column that probes the personalities of church leaders; Adventist People, a feature that focuses on some of the many people who make up the fabric of our church; Review and Comment, a bi-weekly column that comments on news in the secular and religious press, frequently with a humorous bent; Single Life, a monthly feature that provides practical ideas for living for the singles in our church; "Dear Miriam," an advice column by popular Adventist author Miriam Wood; and more.

Besides these regular features, special reports during 1983 have examined the church's publishing work, health food industry and Seventh-day Adventist World Service (SAWS). Still to come is an issue on Adventist history.

We go on, week by week, putting together a magazine that informs readers about church issues and news, that discusses relevant theological topics, that tells stories to inspire and inform, that seeks to continue being a means of drawing Adventists around the world into even closer fellowship, that plans in every issue to demonstrate God's love and care and share the rewards of serving Him.

The Adventist Review holds a special place in our church's history. Yet, I believe it has changed with the times, perhaps even more gracefully than has my grandmother. I believe it can be of inestimable value to the Adventists of today who must live in and cope with the space age, while they maintain ties with their unique heritage and look forward to a future that is bright with the promise of Jesus' soon coming. I urge you to subscribe for the coming year.

Visiting Couple Gives Aid To Academy Repair Projects

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Harris are a retired couple who are truly special. Although they have retired, they aren't about to rust out. They purchased a travel trailer and keep on the move with Maranatha projects. Even though Harris had a heart bypass operation a couple of years ago, he is determined to lead an active life and make the world a better place. Getting into a physical fitness program, he began jogging and last year successfully completed the Honolulu Marathon.

I met him recently when he walked into my office and offered to help while he was in the area visiting his son, Monty Perry. He started by finishing the installation of dividers and shower curtains in the girls' dorm showers. Then he went to work repairing toilets, and his wife joined him and started cleaning.

Sensing more help was still needed, he continued to work and volunteered to install new sink counters. Having done so much, he was determined to see the job done right. The Harrises then donated money to help purchase new faucets and went to work to complete the project. They became so involved they were late to their next Maranatha project.

Volunteers are wonderful. They help stretch the dollars, they bring a great deal of happiness, and they model the spirit of Christ.

Lots of good things are happening at Mount Ellis Academy because of the Harrises and others dedicated to service.

Stevensville Church Has Successful Five-Day Plan

We have just concluded a very successful Five-Day Stop-Smoking program at the Stevensville log church.

Eight people registered, and every one of them came each of the five nights. At the close, seven had definitely conquered their smoking habit, and the eighth had cut down from about 50 cigarettes per day to six, and he is confident that he will be able to quit entirely very soon. Their habits had been nurtured for 15 to longer than 40 years.

The Stop-Smoking Clinic was held by Pastor Roland Shorter, and Dr. J. B. Swafford, a non-Adventist chiropractor who offered his services. Both he and his wife had stopped smoking through one of the Five-Day Plans several years ago. We were grateful for his assistance. Pastor Shorter, with the help of Dr. Swafford, put on an effective program, which was well supported by the church.

Three of those taking the course were people who had attended the recent Joe Maniscalco meetings here, and we look forward to their baptism very soon, along with another couple who had also attended those meetings, but who were already non-smokers. Those meetings attracted capacity crowds at the church the last several evenings.

Baptism Climaxes Revelation Seminar in Hopewell Church

For one of the oldest churches in the Oregon Conference, June 4th was a first! The first baptism held in the Hopewell Church! There had been other baptisms when churches at Newberg or McMinnville were borrowed for the occasion.

This time, Pastor Paul Haynes brought a portable baptistry and set it up in the junior room building for the baptism of Robert Frederiksen and Kristina Colomb, the first fruits of the Revelation Seminar held at Hopewell during the months of March and April.

Clyde Payne was the speaker and on June 4th witnessed the first fruits of His work.

Hopewell Pastor Paul Haynes prepares for the first baptism in the church. A portable baptistry was used.

Hopewell was first organized into a company in 1902 and a church built in 1904. There has been church here at Hopewell every year since.

Fifty-Three Baptized After Church Campaign

A recent evangelistic series at the Rockwood Church has resulted in the baptism and rebaptism of 53 individuals, and several others are studying in preparation for baptism.

The six-week series was conducted by John VanDenburgh, evangelist for the Southern California Conference, and his wife Clara.

The series was a real inspiration for the church members as well as the approximately 450 non-Adventists who represented the 235 families who attended.

During the five evening meetings per week, the VanDenburghs presented a mini-concert in music of contemporary, gospel and old-time favorite hymns.

Each evening the lecture was illustrated on a large 12-foot rear-projection screen. Everyone who attended was given a Bible along with a red marking pencil so they could mark the text as the page number and text were given.

Many of the people commented that these were some of the very best meetings they had ever attended. Especially appreciated was the happy, vivacious, friendly atmosphere that was radiated by John and Clara VanDenburgh.

Some of the interest for these meetings was generated through a weekly series of classes conducted by the church prior to the evangelistic series. These classes covered such topics as bread-baking and nutrition, family living, childbirth preparation and Bible study. In addition several of the Rockwood Church members and Bible workers had Bible studies in progress

Please Dial Carefully

When you phone the Oregon Conference office, be sure you are dialing the correct number: (503) 652-2225. Those who dial incorrectly are causing considerable distress to an elderly lady with a similar number — only one digit is different, a 5 instead of a 2. She keeps getting our calls, all hours of the day and night. In three months' time she has received 400 calls meant for the Conference!

The church members supported the meetings faithfully with their attendance as well as greeting visitors, compiling lists of those attending, serving as ushers, videotaping the lectures, and providing child care for children up to the age of 10 years old. All the meetings were videotaped for follow-up work with those who missed meetings or wanted to review lectures they had already attended.

If you drive past 1910 182nd Avenue by the Rockwood Church you will notice a new, beautiful appearance, thanks to the 62 members and volunteers who donated their time to lay sod and complete the landscaping. In one-and-a-half hours these 62 people laid 18,300 square feet of sod, thereby saving $400 by doing it all at one time. This also included fertilizing and grading the ground before the sod was laid.

The landscaping was coordinated by John Hill, head deacon, and Wendell Swick, church elder and chairman of the church maintenance committee.

This Sept. 16-18 will be another special weekend of spiritual emphasis in Portland with Emilio Knechtle. Sponsored by the Rockwood Church, Knechtle's meetings will address the lateness of the hour and the closeness of Christ's coming, as well as the need of personal preparation for the last days.

Knechtle, a General Conference revivalist and lecturer, is a former coordinator with the Billy Graham Crusades and he is in demand the world around to speak to groups large and small.

The weekend will begin at 7:30 p.m. on Friday at the Portland Adventist Academy. Sabbath morning Knechtle will speak at Rockwood Church services at 8:10 a.m. and 11 a.m. In the afternoon at 3 p.m. and 7 p.m. the meetings will shift back to the Portland Adventist Academy Gym. Finally on Sunday at 9 a.m. there will be a concluding meeting with a question-and-answer time. Everyone is invited to share this weekend with our Rockwood Church.

Ridge Dell Church Adds Three Members by Baptism

The fellowship at Ridge Dell Church increased by three members through baptism in June. Mike and Marilyn Troxel have been married only one year and during their growing relationship with one another, there has been a growing love and dedication to Jesus Christ.

growth in their faith and love toward Christ. Mike and Marilyn were baptized together by Pastor Dave Snider.

One week after the Troxels were baptized, Omar Roby confessed his new life in Christ through immersion by baptism. Roby attended the first meeting in a Revelation Seminary series but was unable to continue because of prior commitments. Cecil Hughes, a Ridge Dell member, and then later Pastor David Blough took the lessons to him at his request. He continued the Bible lessons even during a hospitalization for a back fusion.

One week before his baptism, Roby asked for and was given one-on-one assistance to stop smoking from Pastor David Blough. Since then he has taken literature and is assisting three acquaintances in stop-smoking programs.

The Dalles Church Sponsors Series of Health Classes

In the middle of the 1,000 Days of Reaping, The Dalles Church is busily preparing the soil and planting the seeds. As outlined by the church's Master Planning Committee, we recently completed a six-program sequence of health classes for the community. Newspapers and radio were alerted, posters went up in area businesses and pamphlets were placed in offices.

The first class commenced in mid-February with a Five-Day Plan to Stop Smoking. Class attendance averaged 20-25 participants with most successfully completing the course. Dr. Paul Lim and Pastor Charles Liu conducted the class.

Following the Stop-Smoking Clinic was a Wa-Rite Seminar in weight management, a two-week course presented by trained leaders Marge Foster and Alice Pfaff. Again the attendance was good and generated much interest in the community.

Nutrition school came next, demonstrated by Myrtle Age and Marge Foster. The class emphasized preparing balanced meals with vegetarian menus. As this two-week course came to a close, the interest was transferred to a hydrotherapy course, conducted by Ann Snyder and Melinda Stewart, both certified instructors. Methods of treating illness by water were demonstrated.

During the sequence of classes, a special one-day cardiopulmonary resuscitation class in emergency first-aid was squeezed into the schedule. David Larsen, MPH and a specialist in CPR, taught a small but enthusiastic group the effective methods of saving lives with CPR training.

Our health series concluded with a highly successful and well attended stress seminar, conducted by Frank Baker, health and temperance director of the Oregon Conference.

It takes many dedicated people to present a comprehensive program such as this, and The Dalles Church members were up to the task. The ground has been tilled, the interests are being cultivated, and the church members are working fervently to care for the plants and fields. A followup to the health seminars will be a series of evangelistic meetings with Jon Johnston in September and October. This will successfully complete the first-year cycle in a five-year plan for church nurture and growth.

Health Work Gets a Good Boost in Cottage Grove

The health work has been going along at a good pace in the Cottage Grove area. It began this year with a Five-Day Plan at the Cottage Grove Hospital. Dr. Stanton Oberg and Leon Plueard led out in the program in which 15 persons successfully kicked the smoking habit.

Some of these were unable to attend the group meetings, so they went through the program in their homes with the help of other lay volunteers. Two follow-up sessions were held after the initial five days. These were helpful toward insuring the continued success of the graduates.

Then a stress management program was held at the local high school, directed by Alicia Plueard. There was an average attendance of 20 people during the six-week program. Some of these were recent graduates of the stop-smoking class.

Each night there was a guest speaker from the community. This helped make it an interesting and well-rounded program. The students were directed toward their need of a Savior in order to eliminate the stress problems that result from the guilt of sin in their lives.

The mobile health van spent the day at one of the busiest shopping centers in the area and was visited by 96 people. Each of these was invited to the Prophecy Seminar being held by the Cliff Walter-Bernie Paulson evangelistic team that began the next evening. Many attended these meetings because of the contacts made through the health work.

Series of Four Cooking Classes Held in Newport

Twenty-four people attended the low-sugar, low-fat cooking classes at the Newport Adventist School, including 14 non-Adventists, two of whom were men.

The first two demonstrations were given by Karen VanSanten from East Salem Church. She has had four years' experience in giving the cooking classes.

Evan Allen from Newport gave the last two demonstrations and it was her first, pursuant to 40 hours of classes on nutrition at Portland Adventist Hospital.

The demonstrations were well received. There was good harmony and lots of laughter between teachers and classes.

The food was enjoyed by those attending each night.

Two fishing vessels, one the Edna M. owned by Leonard Slyter, and the Columbian, owned by Bill Benson, were blessed by Pastor Kevin Wilfley on a Sabbath afternoon in April. The blessing was attended by several of the members of the Newport Church.

Newport Student Wins First Prize in Poster Contest

Deanna Winter, age 15 and an eighth-grader at the Newport Adventist School, won first prize and an award of $25 in the Oregon Lung Association elementary school poster contest. Air Pollution and Smoking and Health were the two categories for the posters.

Deanna's poster won in the Air Pollution division for eighth graders. Her poster depicted fingers of smoke issuing out of factory smokestacks, tightly gripping the neck of a man.

Other Oregon Adventist students winning awards in this contest included Kelly Sanford of the Mid-Columbia School, Hood River. She placed second in the seventh-grade division. In the sixth-grade winners was Lisa Mari Larios of the Coquille Adventist School, who placed third.

Evans Valley Church Uses Cooking School as Outreach

The Evans Valley Church has been searching for ways to reach out to the many people in this area. In the past the church and individuals have mailed Signs of the Times to entire rural routes in an effort to reach the people.

Many of the people in this southern Oregon area are retired. Some of these retirees are Seventh-day Adventists and we have appreciated their ministry and the talents they have brought into our small church.

Recently a very successful cooking school was held in the Rogue River VFW Hall. The coordinator, Marjorie Greene, was grateful for the excellent help provided by the church family.

Forty non-members attended the evening classes. A film, lecture and demonstration showing how to prepare low-fat, low-sodium, low-cholesterol foods were presented each evening. Samples of the foods being discussed in class were prepared by church members and served before each class.

There was such an enthusiastic, positive response to the classes that an extra evening session was held to provide a hands-in-the-dough bread-making experience. Each participant prepared her own dough and took it home to bake in her home oven.

The gentleman that takes care of the hall commended the church for the excellent clean-up job after each meeting. He said, "That's the best anyone has cleaned it. Anytime you need a meeting place for classes, etc., you are welcome to use the VFW Hall." His mother has since attended the evangelistic meetings that were held in our church by Pastor George Wright.

A stop-smoking class, coordinated by Gordon Hewlett, was scheduled in the City of Rogue River Middle School library.

The Evans Valley Church intends to get acquainted with those who live in this area and invite them to fellowship with us.

Ventriloquist Uses Talents In Springfield Evangelism

A series of evangelistic meetings given by lecturer and ventriloquist Dennis Crabbe was held in the Springfield Church. There was a good turnout, with attendance remaining steady throughout the meetings. Approximately one-third of those attending were non-Adventist.

At the end of the series six people who had been previously studying with the Springfield Church's pastor, Olav LaBianca, were baptized. Fifteen more individuals requested baptism on the final night.

One of those individuals who had attended the meetings and made a decision for baptism was Clara Marrs. Clara had attended the Adventist Church many years before, but had since left the church. Recently, however, she had wanted to come back to God. One Sabbath morning in March, Clara felt led to pray for some type of contact with Dr. James McHan. Dr. McHan was one of the members of the Springfield Church whom Clara knew from her previous attendance.

That afternoon, leading out in an outreach program, Dr. and Mrs. McHan were trying to locate one of the people whose name was on a list of church contacts. After several unsuccessful attempts to find this person, the McHans came to one more house. The person they were trying to find wasn't there, but Clara Marrs was. It was after this that Clara once again started attending church.

If we can help you with your weekend plans, write or call: Rockwood Seventh-day Adventist Church, 1910 S.E. 182nd, Portland, OR 97233, (503) 661-4100, or Vernie Clark, lay ministry coordinator, (503) 632-7038.

Dennis Crabbe attributes much of the success of an evangelistic series to the groundwork done by the laymen in a church: "Laymen are the key to success in an evangelistic series. I see myself in a minor role."

Crabbe is himself thankful for God's recent guidance in his life toward a new career. Last summer Crabbe, a layman, was out of work, living with his family in the woods of Edgemere, Idaho, when he received a letter from the Washington Conference youth director asking him to come to the Washington camp meeting to do the children's story as a guest speaker.

Crabbe had previously used ventriloquism as a hobby and for a part-time income. It was at this time that he built the three figures he now uses in his sermons — Rusty, Granny and John the Revelator. Crabbe had almost finished making the last one when he ran out of money. His wife prayed that God would send them $20. Later, Mrs. Crabbe opened dry can of beans. Among the beans was a $20 bill. The Crabbes had received the can 10 months earlier.

After the Washington camp meeting, Crabbe was invited as a guest speaker to other meetings. The series held at the Springfield Church was the first time Dennis Crabbe has been the main speaker. Some men in the congregation in this series were impressed by the Lord to pay half of his salary if the conference or union will pay the other half so he can continue these unique and inspirational meetings in other churches.

Dennis Crabbe says he doesn't see using ventriloquism in his meetings as mere entertainment. He employs the ventriloquial figures as visual aids to hold the interest of the congregation. He also believes it helps him reach a larger age group. This technique has helped him develop a vital ministry for the entire family.

Northwest Amateur Radio Operators Have Annual Meet

The 11th annual Northwest Adventist Radio Association (NARA) was held at Auburn Adventist Academy July 29-31. These shortwave radio operators are otherwise known as "hams."

The featured speaker on Friday evening was Wes Parker, who was on furlough from Rwanda, Africa. After relating some of his experiences, he showed pictures. Before going to Rwanda he was on the faculty at AAA and active as a "ham." He is now active in Africa, with his call being 9X5WP.

Paul Cole from Walla Walla WB7TZX (formerly CE4) gave the sermon. He has been a missionary in South America.

Sabbath afternoon was spent doing a walking tour in the Tacoma zoo at Point Defiance Park. Dave Martin W7TPF had made prior arrangements with the zoo officials so that no fee was charged on Sabbath to our labeled members and families.

Sabbath evening vespers began with a rousing song service and then Fred Mason W7OVN, who has to spend all his days in a wheelchair due to an accident many years ago, gave one of his inspiring and thought-provoking talks. His devotion to God is a great blessing to all who know and meet him.

The members and families enjoyed outdoor potluck meals both dinner and supper on Sabbath.

Sunday morning was spent with the usual "bunny hunt" (hidden transmitter) and technical lectures. The Ham Fest then adjourned at noon.

New Church School to Open This Fall in Deer Park

Members of the Deer Park Church have long looked forward to having a church school once again in Deer Park. That dream has now become a reality.

When the debt on the new church was retired late last year, it was decided that funds once allocated to pay off the mortgage would be set aside to help finance a church school. In just a few short months, conference approval, Health Department and county approval were obtained. Then the search for a teacher began.

Lawrence Rogien agreed to be the first teacher. He had been teaching at the Adventist school in Libby, Mont. He received his B.S. degree in elementary education at the Dr. Martin Luther College in New Ulm, Minn. He spent two years at Western Michigan University at Kalamazoo, Mich.

He obtained his Adventist denominational certification and Montana state certification in 1978. He has spent the last two summers at College Place, Wash., working toward his master's degree in education. He taught elementary education for six years, grades 1-8, 10 years coaching and teaching sports, one year in industrial arts, and has had 16 years' experience in all phases of building construction.

Rogien believes that students should be trained in practical skills and that this should be a part of any educational program, as it promotes discipline and gives students a sense of accomplishment. He tries to instill in his students the principles of truth, obedience, and honor so they may become a positive force for the stability and uplifting of society.

His interests include practical Christianity, family, education, flying, outdoor sports, photography, woodworking, mechanics and music.

Lawrence, his wife Francis and children, Jennifer, Lisa and Jason, will be residing in Deer Park.

Pendleton News Items

The Pendleton Church would like to report about some recent blessings which the Lord has poured out upon the congregation:

● A special baptism recently surprised the congregation when Tim Hayward recommitted his life to Christ.

● A group of church members and Pastor John Davidson used a great deal of hard labor, and our church has a new kitchen and fireside room. The sanctuary is newly painted; 131 gallons of paint were applied!

APPRECIATION FOR EVANGELISM. Dick Rentfro, Upper Columbia Conference evangelist, and his wife Rose, and Bible worker Edie Powell beam their approval at the cake they received from church members at a surprise party given them at the end of their recent evangelistic series at the Omak Church. As a result of their efforts in the area, six people were baptized and several more are studying.

BAPTISM IN ELLENSBURG. Lawrence Folino shared his joy of commitment to Christ with Lara Lee Thoreson as he was recently baptized into the Ellensburg Church. Lara Lee's parents, John and Lynn, spent time sharing the truths of the Bible with Lawrence. Before joining the Adventist Church, Lawrence had no interest in religion. But by seeing the realities of prophecy in his studies and readings he felt convinced the Bible was Truth. Now he feels a deep desire to serve his Lord by sharing his faith and serving his church family.

● A recent Tuesday night found the church filled with not only beautiful faces, but the delightful sound of music provided by the Heritage Singers. The concert was inspirational and a tremendous witness of God's love for the membership.

Unusual Offering Device Used for Spokane Primary

For the primary division of the Central Spokane Church, the emphasis on building children's chapels in Africa, with the help of the overflow offering the 2nd quarter of 1983, took on new interest and vitality as large pieces of painted masonite were cut to fit the front elevation framework of an actual, reasonable facsimile of such a building. There were added week to week as the primaries reached their offering goal.

In this division only the offerings of the children are counted toward reaching their predetermined offering goal. It is hoped by this means the children may learn to be faithful in this part of the worship service.

The division is capably led by Elaine Varga and Sandra Wolfson.

Mrs. Carl L. Smith

Nate Niles fits in a piece of masonite to finish off a building used for an offering goal in the Spokane Central Church for the primary division.

Elgin School Has First Graduation for One Student

Eighth-grade exercises were held at the Elgin Adventist Fellowship Hall recently. The only graduate, Angie Cuelar, has the honor of being the first graduate of the first year of the new school's operation.

Floral arrangements of lilacs and apple blossoms formed a beautiful setting for the platform. Beneath the class motto, "Forever Up — Living for Jesus," was a scene of an old-fashioned arched bridge, a painting by Kim Kelsay.

After the processional, played by pianist Clinton Dickerson, for the seventh and eighth graders, the teacher, Mrs. Hansen, welcomed the houseful of friends and relatives who gathered for the occasion. Chuck Williams had the devotional. Clinton and Lynette Dickerson entertained with some vocal duets.

In his address, Pastor Garey Gantz used the text found in Proverbs 22:6: "Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it."

Before presenting the diploma to Angie, Mrs. Hansen said in all her 15 years of teaching, she has had six graduating classes and, strangely enough, all graduates have been girls."

BAPTISM IN EAGLE. Henry DeBoer, right, began attending the Eagle Church with his friend, Patty Mason, and her children. After taking a series of Bible studies he felt the doctrines of the church were true. He enjoyed the friendship of the church members and felt more contented and happier when attending church. He felt his studies led him to a closer relationship with his Savior, making him a better person through his close connection with Jesus Christ and other Christians. He said, "I am glad I began attending church and was baptized by Pastor Al Heitzmann because it was something I missed all my life."

Five Generations Present For Party

Sarah King, Battle Ground, Wash., recently celebrated her 94th birthday with five generations of her family present.

Originally from Good Thunder, Minn., King taught school until she married Ellis King in 1908. After the birth of their first child, the couple moved to a homestead in Montana. In 1917 they moved to College Place, Wash., and later to Deer Park, Wash.

Since there was no church in Deer Park they started a Sabbath school in their home.

Since moving to Battle Ground 57 years ago, King has been active in church and community affairs. She has exhibited her canning, flowers, bread, cookies and fancywork at the Clark County Fair.
