Time to Change

A few months ago, at the funeral of a lovely young friend, the pastor continually spoke about what God had done for "man," "men," and "mankind," leaving me to wonder if he really knew what lay in the casket before us. I wanted to cry out, "Please include her, and us, her friends and family, in the shelter of God's care and love."

This was not a unique experience. The invariable use of male-dominated language is common in our churches. It is time for people in our denomination at every level to take a good hard look at the prevalent use of sexist language in the metaphors used to express theological insights, in worship services, in prayers, in hymns and songs, and in books and other publications.

The pervading patriarchal bias which represents God in exclusively male language is an indication of a consistent human tendency toward idolatry, the creation of narrow images of God that reflect themselves.

It is generally recognized in our culture and society that the words "men," "man," and "mankind" are no longer generic, and increasing numbers of women are unable to turn the mental somersault necessary to make sexist language meaningful. Regularly, in worship services, women and men are offended by the exclusively male-dominated language.

I believe that Jesus was referring to a problem like this when he said, "It were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and be cast into the sea, than that he offend one of these little ones." (Mark 9:42)

How can we change sexist language in hymns, prayers and theological statements? One way is to use feminine images of God as well as masculine, or words that do not denote sex. We can substitute words for Lord (e.g., God), for King (e.g., Ruler), and for Father (e.g., Mother, Parent, Creator).

When speaking of Jesus, Son of Man is more correctly translated as Child of the People or Son of Humanity. These may seem awkward at first, but without some conscious effort sexist language will not go away. In songs, prayers and readings we can remove the ever-present he, his and him when referring to God and when used generically to refer to all human beings.

Some other suggestions for eliminating sexist language; instead of brothers use brothers and sisters or, better yet, God's people; change men to folk or people, man to one, and mankind to humanity or all. Carefully review the hymns chosen and select those that include all the congregation. If a favorite hymn is offensive, change the exclusive words to inclusive ones.

The need for these changes is being faced in many denominations. Inclusive language is being recognized, accepted and used in the secular world. The time has come for change in the use of inclusive language in the religious world, in general, and the Seventh-day Adventist Church in particular.

Oregon Education

Adventists in the Oregon Conference and the delegates that attended constituency meetings earlier this year should be interested in how Plan F has affected the education of Adventist youth in our conference.

A year ago, our two boarding schools, Milo and Laurelwood, had a combined enrollment of 481. Under Plan F, which designated Milo as the main boarding academy and limited the enrollment at Laurelwood, the combined enrollment has dropped to 425, as of Sept. 19, 1983. That is 56 fewer students than a year ago. These students are not in our day academies, as Portland Adventist Academy is down seven from last year, and Columbia has an increase of only three.

Where are the youth of the Oregon Conference going to school this year? A few could be at Auburn, as 22 from our conference are enrolled there, but that is only about 10 more than usual. Where are our young people? Many must be in public school.

A sobering facet of our educational program in the Oregon Conference is that academies in neighboring conferences in the North Pacific Union Conference are experiencing increased enrollments this year. Auburn is up 50 students, and the other three boarding academies also enjoy a larger enrollment than the previous year.

Recently, material sent from the conference with the purpose of promoting the One Percent Fund for Christian Education called attention to the sad fact that 50 percent of our youth were not in denominational schools. It seems regrettable that Plan F has contributed to this situation. Instead of planning to educate fewer of our youth in our own schools, should we not follow the advice of the Spirit of Prophecy:

"Our youth should be permitted to have the blessings and privileges of an education at our schools, that they may be inspired to become laborers together with God. They all need an education, that they may be fitted for usefulness, qualified for places of responsibility in both private and public life." Counsels to Parents and Teachers, p. 44.

Dedicated Service

It is exciting to read the account of Arthur Lickey's service and success for the Salem optometrist. Our GLEANER readers should be reminded, however, that this is not exceptional, but that Lickey is giving us the same service, blessed by God, six days a week the year-around.

Censure

Thank you for "Thoughts on Censure." I had written a letter which lay on my desk dealing with just this subject. Dr. Hamilton said it well. I have been trying to deal with this censoring attitude in our churches and even though it is usually the minority, it is always louder.

I have with much heartache watched as part of our body has been turned away as it "blights and darkens his very life." God forgive us as we repent and seek His love and mercy in our lives, that others, by seeing we love each other, will be drawn to Christ.

Adventist Image

I am concerned about the image that other people in the world have of Adventists. Many people out there do not know who Adventists are and if they have heard of them they get them mixed up with Mormons (LDS is almost the same as SDA), Presbyterians, Episcopalians or other Protestants. If we are true Christians, why does the world not know about us?

I am not sure I have all the answers, but I would like to give some possible explanations.

First, I think that many of us as Adventists have gotten the idea that we are God's "chosen people" and therefore the only ones God really cares about and will save. This idea leads us to view others as beneath us, common sinners so to speak, and we do not associate with them like we do our fellow Adventists.

Another reason could be that we get so busy with our every day cares that we do not take time to help our neighbors. A simple thing such as helping him rake his leaves, or change his tire, or maybe just a smile and a hello, would show that we really care.

Or could it be that some of us really do not know Christ? We know all the rules and we can quote verses but do we really know the person behind them? I think the reason people "out there" do not know who Adventists are is because we as Adventists do not know our God. We need to put all our prejudices and feelings of being "better" than others aside. We need to take time to be a friend to everyone around us. Let's take time to really get to know our God. If we really know Him then everyone around us will know Him too because we will be demonstrating His character. As Adventists this should be our purpose, to let the world know that God is real and we have a relationship with Him and can help them to develop that kind of relationship too. After all is that not God's purpose for His church?

I'm Not Sure About It

I would like to comment on the article "Ingathering Reaches People" in your Nov. 21 issue, and Ingathering in general.

The season for Ingathering has come again, and with it the nauseous feeling I get whenever an elder gets up front and makes an appeal for members to go out soliciting in order to reach a goal. What is the purpose of Ingathering? Why do people dislike it?

I have problems justifying asking others for financial help when it is our duty to help them. That is why I was glad to see that the Eagle Church is making friends with their neighbors, and not turning some of them off by asking for donations.

I sincerely believe that when Ingathering the emphasis is on reaching a monetary goal, and not on reaching souls. It is true that many needy people are helped by the funds collected, but our responsibility should first be to our personal mission field, then to those elsewhere. Even though they didn't go door-to-door, the Eagle Church nearly tripled their goal through free will gifts, the members contributing their personal goal, and the usual business solicitations. It can be done!

Ingathering is a good thing and should not be done away with, but perhaps a few refinements would increase its effectiveness. The faculty here at Walla Walla College, which I attend, have come to the conclusion that merely caroling and associating with the public does more for the image of Adventists and the message we have than does the traditional method of Ingathering. The Eagle Church is a prime example. Could this new method work for other churches?

I Enjoy Ingathering

I thoroughly enjoy Ingathering: first of all, because I get to meet people and I love people. It challenges me to exercise the Lord's counsel, "Bless them that curse you. Pray for them that despitefully use you. (Matthew 5:44) Aren't we to live by every word that proceeds from the mouth of God? This is what I call spiritual growth. Physically I may be stunted, but wish not to be spiritually dwarfed. I've had this opportunity to exercise the Lord's word, and it's fun!

At one house a huge man bent over me in boisterous tones declaring, "No! I won't give anything to the Adventists!"

I meekly but cheerfully replied, "Well, God bless you anyway." He was so taken aback that I hadn't cowered under him, that he backed off with "A-a-well, God bless your efforts, anyway."

In turning away with a thank you, I prayed, "Lord, he blessed me. You will please execute it." I knew my Jesus!

At the second house from his place who had stammered the blessing; a young woman with an infant met me at the door, declaring, "I believe in your work. I'll get you some money." It was $10. . . .

Two special Bible texts intrigue me . . . " . . . the abundance of the sea shall be converted unto thee, the forces (margin — "wealth") of the Gentiles shall come unto thee." Isaiah 60:5 " . . . men shall call you ministers of our God; ye shall eat the riches of the Gentiles. . . ." Isaiah 61:6.

I sincerely believe this applies to our Ingathering work just as much as that same book of the Bible declares that the isles shall wait for God's law. Here is our message — the final acts of the Protestant Reformation to build the old waste places, to raise up the foundation of many generations; and be called a repairer of the breach, a restorer of paths to dwell in."

What better path is there to dwell in but God's Sabbath path that leads to eternal rest in Him who died for our sins? "The faith of Jesus" (Revelation 14:12) is full trust in God. We can have that rest and peace in our hearts every moment of every day — making each of us a peaceable person. Ingathering has helped give me this peace of satisfaction.

Visiting my missionary son and family in the Orient has enhanced my joy of Ingathering — in seeing the need. I believe God's greatest business is founded upon NEED. I greatly enjoy doing my part in His business. Jesus won't come until it is finished, but He will make a quick work in the end, cutting it short in righteousness. May we all be ready for that glad day!

From the Editor

Color slides for the 1984 GLEANER covers have been selected from the 768 pictures submitted by 115 photographers. Purchases were made from the following individuals:

Ken Albertsen, Bozeman, Mont.; George L. Beckner II, Billings, Mont.; Les Colburn, Adelphi, Md.; Mrs. Cecil Cutler, Hood River, Ore.; Dick Duerksen, Gresham, Ore.; Kent Griswold, Helena, Mont.; Jerry Henderson, Auburn, Wash.; Henry Hochstetter, Portland, Ore.; Gary Lackie, Anchorage, Alaska; Steve Lackie, Palmer, Alaska; Eugene Lambert, Gaston, Ore.; Tom and Pat Leeson, Vancouver, Wash.; Goral LaPorte, Milton-Freewater, Ore.; Jim Moor, Gresham, Ore.; Acynthia Sanford, John Day, Ore.; Jeffrey L. Torretta, College Place, Wash.; Vern Wehtje, College Place, Wash.; and Jean Wilson, Hayden Lake, Idaho.

We didn't feel the overall quality of the slides submitted was as good as last year. However, the slides selected are excellent. One photographer in an accompanying letter said, "Please treat these with care and respect."

We did give care to all of the slides but some didn't receive as much respect as we didn't purchase them. If you are thinking about taking some slides for future GLEANER covers, here are some suggestions based on this year's observations.

1. Quite a number of photographers submitted slides shot on 5247 film. The color on almost all of these was inferior. We feel the best film for color slides is Kodachrome 25 or 64.

2. Use a tripod. It isn't hard to tell a handheld picture from a razor-sharp one which was taken with a tripod.

3. After you have taken your pictures, send them to a quality developer. We recommend sending Kodak film to a Kodak processor.

Several photographers are repeaters from previous years and the reason is simple — their slides are superior. We note that about half of those who had slides chosen this year were new to the GLEANER.

Project Canvasback Notes Progress on Construction of Ocean-going Catamaran

By Bonnie L. Paddock

Canvasback Missions has two major targets for evangelism. The first is America's modern youth. The vessel, Canvasback, will be used as a platform for Christian character building and leadership training. Each summer, a series of two-week youth training curriculum will be conducted in safe, sheltered bays and inner passages.

Canvasback's second mission target is the isolated Micronesian island people who are in great need of qualified medical help. These people will be served by volunteer physicians, dentists and nurses. Young student missionaries will reach the islanders with direct grass-roots evangelistic programs.

Project Canvasback was started by Jamie and Jacque Spence three years ago before the couple was even baptized or had become Adventists. The Spences had spent six years sailing their 31-foot trimaran across the Pacific Ocean. In the quiet solitude, they found time to seek answers to some of life's important questions. They learned that a knowledge of Christ provides those answers. They also found people in real need and felt compelled to plan a way to reach out and help.

The Project Canvasback staff wants to shout praises to God. And, in a more subdued manner, share with fellow believers the encouraging manifestation of God's continued blessings on His people. "Give thanks to the Lord, call on His name; make known among the nations what he has done . . . tell of all his wonderful acts." (Psalm 105:1, 2)

We love to tell how the Lord is blessing the work of Project Canvasback. In April, an expensive hydraulic press worth $10,000 was needed to form the ship's aluminum hull plates. Upon hearing of this need, Al Bakke, a millwright from Sandy, Ore., offered to build the heavy-duty framework, and Mike Klass, a machinist from Rickreall, Ore., volunteered to build the hydraulic cylinder. It would cost only $2,400. But first the means had to be acquired.

Our prayers were answered in short order. One thousand dollars were donated by a lady who said, "We were going to use this for home improvement, but the Lord told me to give it to the Project instead." With that seed money, material was ordered and Al got busy. He says, "I may be 70 years old, but I've still got a lot of life in me."

The Lord continued to anticipate Project Canvasback's needs. Owning a powerful press did not guarantee that we would use it skillfully. In May, another answer to prayer came by way of a phone call. "Do you need help with that mission ship?" asked Arlen Bohnke of Tillamook, Ore., an experienced welder and aluminum fabricator. Arlen commuted to Hammond for three months in order to "work on Jesus' boat."

By mid-October, when the starboard hull of the 71-foot catamaran was nearing completion, Mike Klass, a machinist from Rickreall, Ore., took a week's "vacation" from work to finish the hull welding. Mike easily passed the tough Coast Guard welder's certification test.

Soon materials would be needed to finish the second hull. As secretary-treasurer, Jacque Spence was scowling at the bank ledger in anticipation of headquarter's costs and expensive aluminum hull plating.

As funds dwindled, faith in the Lord increased. As a matter of policy with Canvasback workers, when things look bleak, you can expect the Lord is planning something wonderful.

Wednesday, Oct. 19, a $10,000 check came in the mail from two physicians in Richardson, Texas. This man and wife medical team first heard about Project Canvasback on the It Is Written telecast. The couple are non-denominational Christians who had never before watched the program. They caught the last four minutes of the Project Canvasback Prayer Alert and it seemed to them like an answer to prayer for involvement in mission work. In August they flew out in their twin-engine Baron to visit the Spences and see the boat. A wonderful Christian relationship developed and we look forward to having them on our medical team as well.

Sometimes progress on the boat goes slower than we would like. Frequently people are excited about Canvasback's mission goals, promising to help — sometime. In September, one such promise was made good in three days. An Alaskan fisherman was visiting in Astoria and, like most boat users, was drawn to Project Canvasback. When the Christian gentleman had investigated the boat under construction and spoken with Jamie Spence, he expressed his desire to do missionary work. He also mentioned that he would "like to help out." We hear that a lot, too.

A few days later, we received a call from the fisherman who said, "I've figured out a way I can help you. Let me donate some recreational property I have on the Ugashik River." The property deed was received in three days.

The land is on the Alaska Peninsula, south of Bristol Bay, in an area thriving in seasonal low-bush berries and wild fowl, trophy grayling and other sports, fishing, moose, bear and caribou. Access to the remote vacation site is by boat or float plane. Canvasback is taking steps to market the property for approximately $14,000.

On Oct. 21, the first 71-foot hull was moved out of the boat shop to make more room for continuing construction of the second hull. Plans call for the two hulls to be turned upright, returned to the shop and connected by the bridge deck structure. The vessel will then be a 32-foot wide, exceptionally stable, ocean-going catamaran. Canvasback is licensed by the U.S. Coast Guard to carry up to 49 passengers. Her accommodations sleep 16.

Progress with Canvasback Missions is now moving at a rapid pace with three full-time self-supporting volunteers on the executive staff, three full-time self-supporting volunteers on the boat building staff, and many occasional workers. The Board of Directors of the non-profit corporation keeps a watchful eye on all phases. When the Project needs a special skill or is ready for specialized materials, we can depend upon the Lord to fill the need. "He does not treat us as our sins deserve or repay us according to our iniquities. Praise the Lord." (Psalm 105:10)

Canvasback workers have a joy in the Lord and a wonderful communion of Spirit. We encourage you to "look to the Lord and his strength; seek his face always." (Psalm 105:4) 🌿

Pacific Press Board Approves Plans to Move to Boise, Idaho, Area

By Morten Juberg

The Pacific Press Publishing Association, Mountain View, Calif., a major printing and marketing arm of the Adventist Church, has announced plans to move its operations and plant to the Boise area.

Bruce Johnston, Boise, president of the Idaho Conference, said the announcement was made Dec. 8 at a meeting of the board of directors at the home office.

"A site committee surveyed many areas in the western part of the United States this fall," Johnston said. "Locations in Arizona, California, Idaho, Washington and Oregon were visited by the study group. They finally narrowed the selection to two areas, Boise and central California."

Several locations in the corridor between Boise and Caldwell are being considered for the plant site, according to Johnston.

Johnston noted that the skyrocketing cost of operating in the Silicon Valley area of California was one of the factors that led to the move.

"The plant has been located in Mountain View since 1904 and is spread out over a 20-acre area," he said. "Efficiency would call for the construction of a new publishing facility, but the cost of rebuilding and operating is prohibitive. Also, the firm has had difficulties in bringing in editors and other administrative personnel because of the high cost of living, primarily due to housing expenses."

"I would expect construction on the factory to begin sometime this spring after the location has been settled," Johnston stated. "They say that about 30 acres of land is desirable. The plant itself will cost about $3.5 million, while equipment will add another $1.5 million to the total."

The plant now has more than 200 employees, and it is estimated that about 100 families will transfer to the Boise area with the moving of the factory.

"We have worked for a number of months on our proposals for the Press to move here. The addition of these new families will have a salutary effect on our churches and parochial schools in the Boise Valley," he added.

The Pacific Press Publishing Association is one of two printing and marketing plants for the church in the United States, the other being located in Hagerstown, Maryland. It does no commercial work, but does the printing and marketing for the denomination in the area west of the Mississippi River. It also has a Canadian subsidiary plant in Oshawa, Ontario.

Johnston said the publishing company focuses its operations in two main areas for the denomination — books and periodicals.

"We regard the publishing department of our church as an evangelistic agency," the president said. "Everything that is printed, whether it be a tract, a magazine or a book, has but one purpose, and that is to introduce the reader to Jesus Christ." 🌿

Liberty Setbacks Underscore Increased Need for Liberty Magazine

By G. M. Ross

January is Liberty month, and the timing could not be more auspicious for a campaign to promote Liberty — the magazine that monitors church-state separation in the United States. This historic practice, which really is nothing less than the American version of the Biblical principle of religious liberty, is clearly in jeopardy.

Supreme Court Rulings

For example, a variety of Supreme Court rulings during the past year suggest — or so it could be argued — that this august body no longer functions as the automatic bulwark of religious freedom. It ruled on legislative chaplains in Nebraska without invoking the traditional tests for determining violations of the First Amendment's establishment clause.

It sanctioned Minnesota's tax break for the payment of tuition on grounds of its availability to parents of both private and public school students, despite the fact that tuition and fees are minimal or nonexistent in the public schools of the state.

The Court construed the privilege of tax exemption, which of our schools and churches enjoy, as "a form of subsidy" from the federal government that has "much the same effect as a cash grant to the organization." Then, perhaps assuming this latter proposition, the jurists upheld IRS' revocation of the tax exemption of Bob Jones University, saying that tax exemption presupposes conformity to common-law standards of charity — the serving of a public purpose, and compliance with public policy. Where such elusive expectations might lead, and whether they can be contained to educational institutions, are appropriate — and ominous — questions.

Constitutional Convention

Another disquieting development in 1983 was the growing prospect of a national constitutional convention for the purpose of attaching a budget-balancing amendment to the Constitution. Already 32 of the requisite number of 34 state legislatures have petitioned Congress for such an assembly. Even without reference to the merits of a balanced federal budget, however, the problems with such an idea are enormous. For instance, the only precedent for a convention is the first one, the Philadelphia convention in 1787 that exceeded its mandate and substituted an entirely new Constitution for the charter then in force. Could "runaway" conditions happen again? How well would the cherished guarantees of the First Amendment with respect to religion fare under such circumstances?

That things could unravel thusly is suggested by the extremely brief and vague amending procedure that the present Constitution specifies. Article V offers only the rudiments. Congress may propose a Constitutional change by two-thirds vote and then submit the amendment to the states, three-fourths of which must ratify. Or, two-thirds of the states may petition Congress to convene a constitutional convention, the work of which would then require ratification by three-fourths of the states.

Beyond this, the Constitution offers no guidance. Is every state petition for a convention automatically valid despite its date, terms, and format? May that petition limit the subject matter of the proposed convention? Must Congress immediately call a convention when requested by 34 states to do so regardless of dissimilarities among the requests? After issuing such a call may Congress through some "oversight" mechanism exert an influence on the convention that precludes its becoming a mysterious and independent fourth branch of government? Evidently the only certainty of this whole matter is the uncertainty that surrounds it.

Vatican Ambassador

Nothing preoccupies church religious liberty directors more than the so-called Vatican issue and the unexpected apathy of the American people towards it. On Sept. 22, in an amendment to the State Department Authorization Bill, the United States Senate lifted an 1867 ban on the federal funding of an ambassador to the Holy See in Rome. During November this amendment, together with the other elements of the bill, was reported by a House-Senate conference, voted by both houses of Congress, and signed by the President.

Whatever the motives of this action, and they are debatable, the action itself flew in the face of church-state separation as traditionally conceived and practiced in the United States. The Vatican is fundamentally a religious body. To recognize it diplomatically is to accord it preferential treatment over other religions. Rome's expected response, the dispatching of a papal nuncio to Washington with special White House access, would skew, distort, or compromise the religious pluralism that our nation's architects intended. Yet the general public has been woefully unaware of this issue; when made aware, it has been reluctant to see the relevance of the Vatican question to religious liberty.

Liberty Speaks to Thought Leaders

There have also been some positive developments involving Liberty magazine. The praise of its readers has continued undiminished. The target audience is also being enlarged: The National Priority List, funded from the annual Liberty offering, now includes not only all members of Congress and officials of federal departments and agencies, but virtually every trial or appellate judge in America, in both federal and state courts. The editors plan vigorous efforts to see that Liberty is received by the thought leaders of North America.

But, clearly, much has happened that deserves the attention of Adventists who foresee a prophetic diminution of liberty in the last days. In the words of President James Madison, "It is proper to take alarm at the first experiment on our liberties." Liberty magazine is the best monitor in the field of journalism. Often our only contact with decision-makers, it is also an indispensable part of the outreach ministry of the church.

Sabbath, Jan. 21, 1984, is the day the church in North America will focus on Freedom by making commitments for Liberty magazine. Will you insure Liberty's expanded circulation by increasing your commitment this year?

G. M. Ross is a member of the staff of the General Conference public affairs and religious liberty department.

Oregon Pathfinder Leaders Hold Annual Training Session

By Terry Bolton

At the Pathfinder Leaders' Convention at the Gladstone Campground recently, Grandma Ivy Hockley teaches a class in basketry, a trade she learned in New Zealand.

Gordon Bolton teaches a class in mountain climbing for Pathfinders.

Fay Ziegele, left, club director of the Hood River Pathfinders, and Adele Platner of the Grants Pass club received their 30-year service star awards.

About 450 Pathfinder leaders and staff gathered at the annual Pathfinder Leaders' Convention in Gladstone for a weekend of training, fellowship and recommitment.

Gary Gray, pastor of the Scappoose-Vernonia churches, spoke Friday evening for vespers. He recalled the influence of Pathfinding in his life as a young person and the bonds of friendship formed then are still strong today.

Two special guests were Jess and Ginnie Nephew, Pathfinder directors from the Washington Conference Youth Department and caretakers-directors of Sunset Lake Youth Camp. Nephew again reemphasized our continued dedication to Jesus and to the young people.

More than 40 classes filled the weekend and offered to each participant a wide variety of areas to choose from — camping, nature, spiritual witnessing, club administration, hobbies and crafts and more.

Loretta Seibert of the Forest Grove Pathfinder Club and George Hunt of the Springfield Pathfinder Club receive a charge from Terry Bolton, assistant conference youth director, as newly invested Master Guides.

Those taking a class from Gary Rust, conference youth director, heard 50 ideas in 50 minutes.

Terry Bolton teaches the class, "The Spiritual Role of a Counselor."

Camporee was shown. This event will be a highlight in the lives of Pathfinders and staff alike. More than 14,000 are expected to attend.

Another big highlight of the weekend was the investing of two new Master Guide candidates. Loretta Seibert of Vernonia and George Hunt of Springfield both received this highest award achievable in the Pathfinder program of the Adventist Church.

Too soon the weekend closed. The leaders returned to their clubs and another year of ministering to young people continues.

The Inexhaustible Store of Blessings

Thoughts on Stewardship

By Mel Rees

Things

The Man stood looking across the brown hills. He was hungry and tired. Suddenly before His eyes the landscape was transformed into a shimmering world of beauty: cities with stately buildings, parks and marketplaces — rolling farmland with cattle feeding beside peaceful rivers.

A voice said, "All these things will I give thee. . . ." He looked intently; they were so desirable — so easily obtainable. At the moment He could have used some of these things, but He knew they would fade away just as the scene dissolved into the barren hills.

On the surface it would seem like an ideal arrangement: the devil offers things; people seek things. But every junkyard with its collection of rusting things should be convincing evidence that things are so temporary, so unsatisfying. And yet.

Things are not bad. God has provided things in abundance: things to eat, to wear, to enjoy. Why is it then that the very things essential to life appear to possess the elements for destroying it? It must not be an inherent danger, but rather one of desire and promise. Happiness, success and security (the common goals of life), are usually associated with the possession of material goods.

And, while tangible things are essential for the accomplishment of worthwhile objectives, their possession can multiply problems of storage and protection — their loss can be traumatic.

Mel Rees, "Mr. Stewardship" for the Adventist Church, writes from Woodland, Wash.

Obviously, the only safe approach and attitude toward things is to assess them according to their actual worth — their eternal value.

In 1948, Paul Emile Victor (the famous French explorer), landed at Disko Bay on the coast of Greenland with an expedition whose purpose it was to wring the secrets from this enormous refrigerator. Among their goals was a geodetic survey of the icecap and the island beneath. They would conduct measurements of gravity, study terrestrial tides, atmospheric electricity, and optics, meteorology and geology. They would make mechanical and thermic borings.

To accomplish this task, a shipload of supplies was assembled on the dock: from 90 tons of dehydrated food to surgical instruments, from typewriters to snow vehicles, from glue to seismographs.

Because the expedition would remain for two years, it was essential that all equipment be classified so it could be transported, stored and cared for in accordance to its importance to the ultimate objective. This was done by marking each box and crate: red for essential, blue for useful and green for desirable.

First they loaded the little ship with all the boxes and crates marked red, then those marked blue — but they had to leave many of the ones marked green for there was no room.

Each of us is preparing for a journey of far greater significance and importance than any scientific expedition, but on this trip it will be impossible to transport anything from this old world — essential, useful or desirable. All the things of earth can only be used in preparation — then discarded. Shouldn't we consider them in order of their importance to the ultimate objective?

The world is filled with things. Some of them are so desirable that who hasn't said, "Oh, I wish I had one of those!" But how careful one must be not to allow the desire of the eye to outweigh the value of the soul. Jesus asked, "What is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?" Matthew 16:26

Things are not bad in themselves; it is the desire for them and the dependence one places on them that causes the problem.

Why not consider the eternal value of things: books, medicines, clothing, food, transportation — all the things that make it possible to emulate the example of Christ in ministry to a world wrenched by violence, hunger, disease and ignorance of God's plan for a perfect universe.

Things is what stewardship is all about. Without them our lives would be useless and unproductive. However we must be constantly aware of God's ownership; we are only His stewards. With this realization, we will desire things, not for the sake of possession (or self-indulgence), but for the good they can do. We will regard them in reference to their importance to the ultimate objective. With Spirit-filled eyesight we will view them as essential, useful and desirable — and know the difference.

Thus we will be protected from an inordinate desire for things and never place our dependence upon them.

Livingston Members Build New Sanctuary 'The Montana Way'

By Morten Juberg

Can a church be built for $10 a square foot in the inflationary '80s? Most people would say "No," especially when building costs range as high as $40 a square foot.

Apparently members of the Livingston, Mont., congregation and their pastor, Bob Ash, haven't heard the news that it can't be done. They are building their new church with 7,200 square feet of floor space for about $72,000.

How did this group go about the construction, which will be completed this month? Pastor Ash gives the answer: "We did it the Montana way. We rolled up our sleeves and went at it."

Of course, not everyone has the varied abilities of the pastor. He drew the plans for the church, got the approval from the state offices in Helena since the church is outside the city limits, and led out in the construction project.

His philosophy has inspired the members of the church, who have spent many years in a small church on a dead-end street.

Pastor Ash says, "When the horizon is clear and there is nothing in the way, nothing happens. We've moved ahead even though we didn't have all of the answers, and God has blessed."

The new church is located on the well-traveled main highway going south from Livingston to Yellowstone Park. For a congregation accustomed to small rooms in the past, the new sanctuary is the realization of a dream come to actuality. They are making certain there is ample space in their new structure.

In the basement are three large Sabbath school rooms, a fellowship hall, kitchen, Community Services area and storage space. The upstairs will seat 120 on the main floor, and additional seating for 80 more is provided in the balcony.

The Livingston members were able to sell their old church for $20,000. In addition to this, they have saved and scrounged in every way, even resorting to a garage sale when funds ran low. A preliminary test sale brought in $900, and the group planned to have a bigger one to bring in more funds. With a membership of only 69, they've had to struggle, but the way seems clearer now.

Those entering the new church come through a cathedral entryway with a 38-foot glass window. The interior ceiling members are large cedar poles finished natural.

According to Pastor Ash, we planned it "with as little Sheetrock as possible." In fact, members have done almost all of the work with the exception of the Sheetrock. The pastor is adamant on this subject. "We don't do Sheetrock."

It should be noted that some members of Maranatha Flights International gave some help in the building during the summer. They were overbooked on projects, according to the pastor, so only a few showed up, but their help was appreciated.

The members of the Livingston Church are justly proud of their new sanctuary, a testimony of the fact that the "Montana way" of building is a good direction to go.

PEOPLE IN TRANSITION

Oregon

The Oregon Conference youth department has two Taskforce workers this 1983-84 year. Denny Hood, a member of the Estacada Church, is assisting in the department functioning as an assistant to Gary Rust and Terry Bolton, directors of youth ministry. He has been a Pathfinder for six years and is serving as a deputy director in his home club in Estacada.

Denny Hood

Roger Henderson

The second Taskforce worker's home is at Big Lake with his wife, Debbie. Roger Henderson is the assistant ranger at Oregon's youth camp at Big Lake. Both he and his wife have also been members at the Estacada Church. In the past he has been involved with Oregon Pathfindering and continues to provide his services in this area. He works with Bruce Christensen, the camp ranger, in maintaining the camp during the winter months, and assists the steady stream of camp user groups in having an enjoyable experience.

Reuben Hubbard has begun a new health ministry specifically for the metropolitan Portland, Ore., area. He has come to Oregon from Loma Linda University where he was conducting a similar health educator and Bible worker program for students.

The program is being supported through the Oregon Conference by a private grant specifically for this project. Through this program a team of volunteers is being trained for services relating to a city-wide health program.

A Walla Walla College alumnus, Hubbard earned a Master of Arts degree at Andrews University, a Master's degree in public health from Loma Linda University, and is currently a candidate for a Doctor of Ministry degree from

Reuben and Ramona Hubbard

Fuller Theological Seminary.

He entered the ministry in Oregon in 1960 and subsequently served in Idaho and northern California before taking education leave in 1973. Since 1974 he has served at LLU where he was an assistant professor of health education.

Hubbard and his wife, Ramona, have four children, Lorita, Richard, Lester and Lawrence.

Health education evangelism in the Eugene, Ore., area has entered a new phase with the arrival of John and Georgie Allen.

Coming from the Carolina Conference where John was a pastor from 1980 to 1982, the Allens have elected to put all their efforts into a health education evangelism approach. Their plan has a three-part emphasis.

Using Eugene's The Vegetarian Restaurant as their base of operation they will offer health training to lay members for personal health evangelism involvement. They will also offer a training school for college-age youth for health education activities which can be used in their home churches.

Allen was a Baptist minister in the 1960s and received an undergraduate degree from Howard Payne College in 1965. In the 1970s he worked as a data processing systems programmer and analyst in Texas. After becoming an Adventist he attended Andrews University and received a Master of Divinity degree in 1981. Georgie's training is in business management.

Upper Columbia

A number of pastoral moves have been announced by the Upper Columbia Conference.

Marlo Fralick, formerly of the Milton-Freewater, Ore., Church, is now pastor of the Spokane Central Congregation. He replaces Charles Brown who is now the pastor of the Milton-Freewater Church.

Dan Meidinger who has been pastoring the Othello and Ritzville, Wash., churches is the youth pastor of the College Place, Wash., Church. He takes the place of Jim Appel who transferred to the Florida Conference.

With the retirement of Annamary Farnsworth as Bible Instructor at the College Place Church, her place is being taken by Leila Davidson, formerly of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho.

Diane Forsyth will be working half-time with Recreation Unlimited while still maintaining half-responsibilities as associate pastor of the Walla Walla College Church.

Steve Beerman, associate pastor in Hermiston, Ore., becomes associate pastor in the Milton-Freewater Church.

Several who have been attending the Theological Seminary and more recently participating in the Ninth Quarter program at the Northwest Ministries Institute have been given assignments. They include:

Don McKay to the Othello-Ritzville District; Ron Bacon to associate pastor at Hermiston; Joe Kidder to associate pastor at Spokane Central; Steve Blotzke to Pendleton as associate pastor; and Jeff Kinne to Colville-Northport-Ione, Wash., as associate pastor.

Ellis Miler, who has been the Colfax and Endicott, Wash., pastor, moves to Coeur d'Alene as associate pastor.

Mike Preas, who has been a minister of lay evangelism in Pasco, Wash., has accepted a call to pastor the Kodiak, Alaska, Church.

Dan Nelson from Walla Walla College has joined the Spokane Central Church as a Taskforce worker.

Hugh Santillana from Cuba is working with the Wenatchee Church in contacting Spanish members and interests.

in curriculum and instruction at the University of Washington, has been invited to become a member of Pi Lambda Theta, a National professional and honorary association in education. This organization recognizes men and women of outstanding achievement and leadership qualities and works to promote excellence at all educational levels.

Professors nominate graduate students who have shown outstanding ability in their chosen fields. The names are then received by the local chapter and the individuals are informed of their selection and invited to become one of many Pi Lambda Theta members across the country.

Faith For Today

Jeffrey K. Wilson has been appointed to serve as director of development and public relations at Faith For Today.

Besides serving as editor of Telenotes magazine he will be responsible for display advertising and general news articles to church and non-church magazines and newspapers.

For the past seven years Wilson has served as youth communication and health and temperance director of the Illinois Conference.

Beginning his ministry as associate pastor of the Tucson-Benson District Church in southern Arizona, Wilson went on to build churches and establish church schools in Kingman and Lake Havasu City, Ariz. For three years he served as youth and communication director of the Arizona Conference.

Wilson is married to the former Sharon Hurtig of Ney, Ohio. The Wilsons are the parents of three children: Kimberly, 10; Kevin, 8; and Kari, 1.

Andrews University

Joseph G. Smoot, president of Andrews University, has announced his resignation. He has been at the school since 1968 and has been president for the past seven years. A successor is expected to be named early this year.

Yakima Church Has Several Revelation Seminar Classes

The pastors and workers of the Yakima Church have been conducting the Revelation Seminar meetings.

Since Oct. 2 the people from all walks of life have been faithfully coming out each Sunday, Tuesday and Thursday evenings to hear, as well as participate, in the well-organized meetings of the Revelation Seminar.

In conversation with those attending the Seminar, it was said, "We would

News From the Upper Columbia Conference Board of Education

The Milton-Stateline School, located in the lush apple orchards of the Walla Walla Valley, hosted the October meeting of the Upper Columbia Conference Board of Education. As logic would have it, homemade apple pie did indeed top off a half-hour lunch break. However, except for that brief respite, the Board deliberated steadily for four and one-half hours on various, disparate topics.

Witness:

Opening Enrollments. Opening enrollments from all schools were reviewed. The two senior academies, Walla Walla Valley Academy and Upper Columbia Academy, both reported enrollment gains. The largest increases in elementary schools and junior academies were in the first and second grades, suggesting that a "bulge" of students may be moving through the system. The three new schools have enrolled 10-16 students per school.

Video Camera. In responding to the need to help teachers be more effective in the classroom, the Board approved a proposal to purchase a video camera and a video recorder. Teachers will be able to see themselves in action, gaining insights into the success of various methods of teaching.

Classroom Computers. Meeting during the lunch hour, a committee of the Board recommended and approved the purchase of a computer and printer for classroom use in schools where computers have not yet been introduced.

Additional Meeting. Because of the large number of items coming before the Board and Executive Board, it was decided that an additional meeting should be held in 1984.

Field Trips. The Board approved Maranatha-type trips to the Navajo Mission School and to Mexico by Upper Columbia Academy and Walla Walla Valley Academy students. They will be assisting in construction projects at these schools, traveling at their own expense.

Code of Conduct. The Board put a final stamp of approval on a Code of Conduct for themselves and for school board members in all Upper Columbia Conference schools.

Scope of K-12 Board and Flow Chart. The Board approved the Executive Board recommendation calling for a line responsibility between all K-12 schools and K-12 Board, while at the same time ask the Executive Board to do some additional fine tuning of the flow chart.

Teacher Expenditures. The Board reviewed a treasury office report of individual teacher costs for the school year ending June 30, 1983.

Attendees at Local School Board Meetings. When the Conference Superintendent meets with local school boards to review personnel, and recommend reemployment for the ensuing year, a member of the Board of Education who lives nearby will be invited to join them as an observer.

Mobile Classroom. The Pend Oreille School, Newport, had an unexpected enrollment increase this fall and requested conference cooperation in purchasing a 12x40 foot mobile classroom. The Board voted to repurchase it from them at a time that would be mutually agreeable, making it available to other schools in similar circumstances. The Newport school plans to build a regular classroom soon.

New Schools. Acting on the concept that new schools should not overlap or duplicate existing facilities, the Board approved a plan whereby new schools (not existing schools) must be located more than 25 miles or more than a 45 minute drive from an existing school and have at least eight students.

Curriculum Development. Several new textbooks and other instructional materials are being introduced this fall, all of them Seventh-day Adventist produced and published. Included are a K-6 Cooking Manual, New Bible materials for grades five and six, a K-12 Curriculum guide in computer usage, and a new reading program for the middle grades. The denominational investment in the reading program alone is several million dollars.

Curriculum Committee. The new K-12 Curriculum Committee under the chairmanship of Associate Superintendent Ernie Schaak reported on its first meeting, also asking for authorization to meet an extra day. This was granted.

Financial Report. The Financial Report came under study, showing costs to be within the budget adopted last February. Teacher costs have not increased from the previous year.

traveling distance could be minimized as well as to make the meetings more accessible to all areas of Yakima. After three weeks of study the meetings were then moved to the church for convenience.

Three nights a week the people came out to learn what Revelation, as well as the Bible, had to say to them. With Bibles in hand they found their way down the halls to the youth chapel, library and other rooms made available for this purpose. They sat with Bibles and lessons waiting for the class to begin and were sorry when it was over.

The dedication of the laymen, as well as the Lord's blessing, made this seminar a real success. Of course the skill of Pastors J. Fred Hughes and Loren Fenton is an ingredient to make for success at such an undertaking.

Without the expert help of Dr. William Robinson and Lew Hersh, Loren Price and other helpers, half of the work would not have been accomplished. In an age when good dedicated help is a premium, these workers and their helpers have been a real lift to God's work in Yakima.

New Pastor Assumes Duties In Spokane Central Church

Marlo Fralich has assumed his duties as pastor of Spokane Central Seventh-day Adventist Church. He succeeds Charles R. Brown, who transferred to the Milton-Freewater, Ore., Church.

SCHOOL PROJECT. Goldendale Church School students are shown with the dried fruit they are selling as a school project. The profits from this sale will be used to purchase a computer system for the school. The students are excited about learning to use their new computer, which will be purchased in the near future.

Fralich was born in Crawford County, Ohio, and graduated from Columbia Union College with majors in religion and Biblical languages. He did graduate work at Andrews University in Mich., and the Seventh-day Adventist Theological Seminary. He began his ministry in West Virginia and has pastored in Pennsylvania and Ohio. The past eight years he has been in Milton-Freewater, Ore.

Mrs. Fralich is a graduate of Atlantic Union College with a major in elementary education. She has taught in the elementary grades in West Virginia and Ohio.

The Fralichs have two children, a son, Ron, residing in the Milton-Freewater area, and a daughter, Ruth Englehart, a senior at La Sierra College in Riverside, Calif.

Fairview Sabbath School Has Class for Handicapped

Because of the love and dedication of Roger and Sherry Pryor several handicapped children were enrolled in the cradle roll and kindergarten divisions of the Fairview Church in Yakima.

This proved to be frustrating, not only for the leaders but also for the children who were unable to communicate. Two of the children could only make sounds and this was distracting to other children in the classes.

This past summer Sherry Pryor held a sign language class in her home. Several members enrolled and learned how to "talk" to the handicapped children.

Now Fairview has a "handicap class" for the little ones who can't communicate. Sherry Pryor is the leader with Bonnie Reiter and Diane Wiese helping.

GOLDENDALE EVANGELISM. Les and Jeffie Marie Fowler, an Upper Columbia Conference evangelistic team, opened their Revelation Panorama series on Sept. 10, to a packed church in Goldendale. At the first meeting, nearly half of those attending were non-members. Through the entire six weeks the attendance held up very well. More than a dozen people have committed or re-committed their lives to Jesus. On Oct. 22, the series concluded with a five-person baptism.

The above picture shows the five persons who were baptized, with their families and friends, a number of whom also made commitments for baptism. A follow-up class is being held for those who want to continue to study.

Revelation Seminar Has Results in Irrigon Church

On the seventh lesson of Revelation Seminar at Irrigon, Ore., came a request for baptism!

Rene had not previously been attending the Adventist Church, but had some knowledge of it through Ruth Prather of the Hermiston Church. Evelyn Mitchell of the Irrigon Church was responsible in bringing Rene to the Seminar classes. You can be sure that Rene's four small children will be enrolled in Sabbath school, too. Already, Rene has two people that she plans to hold a seminar with.

There are six non-members who are taking the lessons, either in attendance or at home. Two others attended the first sessions. Many of the church members are enjoying the classes, too, taught by Pastor James Stevens.

WASHINGTON

Study of Many Religions Leads Searcher to Adventism

The path that led Stephen Newdell to baptism in the Elma Church has been a long and torturous way.

In his early childhood he learned about Santa Claus and the Easter bunny. To him God was just a concept and as he grew older he said, "God was left on the shelf between the other two members of this unholy trinity."

During this time evolution and science became an important part of his life.

"Living in a community where Jews, Roman Catholics and Protestant groups polarized, I saw them all as blind, superstitious fools who wouldn't see the logic of man's august science," he said. "With time I as an atheist began to question. I had prayed once, 'God, if you exist, help me now.'"

The atheist became a searching, wandering agnostic exploring the world of black and white magic. His heart and mind kept crying out, "Where are you God?"

Unsatisfied Steve kept searching and his studies led into Buddhism, Taoism, Shintoism and Hinduism which only caused further confusion.

About this time he entered chiropractic college and studied embryology, physiology and orthopedics. These studies astounded him and he recognized the body was too well planned to be just an accident, an act of evolution. Excitement surged through him. "I can't deny any more. Only a fool could ignore God here. I am a Christian!"

But this was just the beginning for Steve. Satan enshrouded him with doubts. Surely the Bible couldn't be 100 percent true. The Lord was watching over him and led two ladies from the Elma Church, Carol Keller and Sybil Logan to him. They learned of his search for Christ and Bible studies were arranged.

Great was their joy and victory a few months later when they were able to witness Steve's baptism.

Steve says, "No longer do strange forces tug at me toward two opposing masters. Now there is only one. The Christ is my King. Though my troubles aren't over, my King gives me direction.

Two Buena Vista Classmates Baptized by Grandfathers

Michael Willison and Alvin Wolcott, fifth-grade classmates at Buena Vista Adventist Grade School, were baptized by their grandfathers at the Auburn Academy Church.

Clark Willison, retired educational superintendent of the Northern Union, came from Michigan to baptize Michael.

R. A. Wolcott, Bremerton Church pastor, baptized Alvin.

Willison and Wolcott were classmates at Emmanuel Missionary College.

AAA Seniors Spend Retreat Helping Construct Center

The plan for the Auburn Academy senior retreat was a weekend at Fort Casey with the sand, the surf, and, with hope, some sun. When the senior sponsors broke the news that we were going to Casey, yes, but only for an afternoon, and that we were going to build a community center/meeting house for the Lummi Indians for two days, well, more than a few eyebrows were raised. But the plan caught on. Besides, it would be a free trip. But building an Indian center? A lot of us weren't sure what to expect.

It's funny, but spirits were high until about 6:30 a.m. Sunday morning, the first building day. When we arrived at the building site, we were greeted by an absolute sea of mud encompassing the whole area. That didn't scare us too badly, but for a couple of hours there didn't seem to be a lot that we could do. There were 73 of us and at least 50 other workers were there already.

Some were fortunate enough to start the landscaping under the direction of David Allen. A surprising amount was accomplished what with the mud and occasional mud-slinging contests.

Those who were walking around with hammers found work as soon as the walls were up. Two large groups formed, one putting up the trusses and the other tacking down the roof. By the afternoon's end, the building had grown from mere foundation to a complete structure with a roof intact. Even the outside was painted.

Low spirits? Not a chance after all we had accomplished. Most of us were ready to have at it the next day and get the job done.

At around 2 p.m. the next day the landscaping was done. The walls, the roof, the siding, the painting, the hammering and hoeing, were completed. We gathered for a group picture, and on our walk to the busses, nothing could have felt better than to take a look back at what we had helped to build.

It would have been easier to spend a couple of days at Casey and goof off with friends and have "fun." But everyone agreed that the fun we had together and the satisfaction we gained far outweighed the benefits of our original plan.

Dedication Services Held For New Pe Ell Church

The Pe Ell Church has an interesting story. It actually began with Ingathering contacts. One contact led to another until there were a number of people, some related, that Steve McCulloh, the local Bible worker, was studying with. In a few months a group was formed that enjoyed studying together and from that group was formed a company on May 16, 1981. At that time they were meeting in the United Methodist Church in Pe Ell.

Soon the question was asked, "Why not an Adventist church in Pe Ell?" A search was made for a building site and one that looked good was finally found at the junction of the Mauerman Road and Highway 6 just east of Pe Ell. Financial arrangements were made with Washington Conference, and with additional financial help from the Chehalis Church, the site was purchased. Now they were ready to build a church. This was begun in September 1981. The Maranatha Group had a part in building the church up to doing the roof, which was not quite finished when they had to leave.

Services began in the church in the winter of 1981-1982. The trim was not finished but the church was sound and warm. The trim has been added since. Also nice comfortable pews and pulpit and communion table have been donated and installed by anonymous persons.

On Sept. 25, 1983, an open house and dedication service was held both for the building and the company of believers.

Conference President Glenn Aufderhar had the morning service. Lenard Jaecks, conference secretary, and Roy Wesson, treasurer, were present. Pastor Gareth Ellis of the Chehalis Church, in whose district the Pe Ell Church was then located, had a part in the program. Steve McCulloh has been the local elder.

Lenard Jaecks gave the dedication sermon and led out in the dedication prayer.

Many Aid Landscaping Project at Kitsap School

Does God answer prayer? Does He care about His children? Does He reward our faith in Him? Do miracles still happen?

The grounds of the Kitsap Adventist School are a living testimony of His goodness.

On Sept. 23 of this last year the grounds were nothing but weeds, rocks, dirt and mud puddles after a rain and thus they have been for five years. The funds had run out. There was no money to do anything.

In June, tragedy struck the family of the school principal, Jerry and Linda Rickaby. Their seven-year-old daughter, Cara, died of cancer. It was the desire of Jerry and Linda to see a Memorial Garden at the school in her memory.

They talked to David Allen of Auburn Adventist Academy who agreed to do the landscaping. He drew up a sketch of the grounds of the school and plans were sent to the Rickaby family.

There was still only the small amount of money in Cara's memorial fund. The garden couldn't be put in until all the preparation work on the grounds was complete. Linda Rickaby looked at the grounds, thought over the situation existing with the building project and said, "If anything is going to be done I am going to have to do it." So with this determination she started the back-breaking task of killing all the weeds.

Topsoil was needed. Where was the money to come from? She decided to use Cara's money for this and trust God to replace it when it was needed to plant the garden. Upon checking around she found a construction company that had exactly 48 tons to get rid of, the same amount it was thought that was needed at the school.

The company agreed to donate the soil and deliver it to the school if we paid for the hauling and the employees' wages. They delivered the soil and Mrs. Rickaby with the help of Doreen Radke and school students, who gave up their free time and recesses, helped spread the soil.

Lanny Olson, parent of two students, came by and asked if they could use some help. He brought his tractor and completed the job of spreading the soil. They were still 36 tons short of soil and to the amazement of the company which donated the first 48 tons, they had another 36 tons to get rid of. So it too was donated.

Day after day, from early morning until dark, six days a week, the two ladies worked — raking, leveling, moving soil and picking up rocks. Each evening they went home exhausted to face the chores of caring for their families' needs. Linda has two preschool age boys to care for and Doreen does medical transcription in her home for several local doctors. The hours of sleep were very short indeed for these two.

The underground sprinkler system was needed next. Cara's money was gone. What now? The school board voted to continue the project in faith, as the money was not on hand to do the job.

Then Linda and Doreen, with the help of the students, dug the ditches for the system. Their constant companion and friend was God. They talked to Him without ceasing, asking His guidance on the progress of the project. Again, He heard their prayers. Money began to come in. Lanny Davis, a Bremerton Church member, volunteered his services in installing the system.

Now the decision had to be made on planting the grass. Should it be done now or should it wait until spring? It was already past the growing season but it was decided to go ahead and plant. God rewarded them with beautiful, warm, dry, unseasonable weather. The grass grew.

On Oct. 23 David Allen came to do the work of planting the trees, shrubs and plants and spreading of the beauty bark. Sixty men, women and children answered the call to a work party and were waiting with rakes, shovels, wheelbarrows and muscle to do the work.

At 6:30 that evening the job was complete. The grass was green; the trees, plants and shrubs blew gently in the breeze. Cara's garden was in and the flowers were blooming.

The new Pe Ell Church has been dedicated.

In a period of less than five weeks the eyesore of the grounds turned into a triumph of beauty — a living testimony to a wonderful God who does answer prayer, who does care, and who remembers His faithful children. And, yes, miracles still do happen.

OREGON

Kelso-Longview Church Has Church School Dedication

The Kelso-Longview, Wash., Church was recent host to 300 visitors for a 60th Anniversary Homecoming and church school dedication. First of the weekend events was an organ vespers concert by Leonard Venden.

Sabbath school and church services were conducted mainly by former members and pastors. Key speakers were: Ralph Jones, Roger Worley, Kenneth Fleck and Andy Running — all former "hometown boys." The church was full to overflowing, the weather was beautiful and a spirit of friendship and family was felt by many in reunions and the coming home of hundreds of family and friends.

At dinner time 600 persons were fed at the school which is four miles from town in a wooded area near the Cowlitz River.

At 5 p.m. the school dedication service was held in the auditorium. Ministers from the Oregon Conference, former pastors, teachers and students voiced their appreciation of Christian education.

One highlight of the event was that numerous people from the very early church school of 1923-1930 had come long distances to revisit. The Bohlman, Gearhart, Running and Hackett families were first students in 1923.

The earliest record of the church is of evangelistic meetings held in 1895 in Kelso when a company of believers met in homes until a church was built in 1923. The same year a church school was formed and has continued through the years. Both the church and school members have outgrown their buildings and new structures have been built.

In 1979 the present new school was completed. It consists of three large classrooms, gym-auditorium, kitchen, workshop and offices. The total cost was $425,000. The setting is rural with 10 acres of land, giving space for a large baseball field, play yard and parking area with landscaping and play equipment. Grades 1 through 9 are taught by three teachers and one aide.

The church congregation is proud of the school and members have been faithful in paying off the heavy indebtedness of the building. They have learned through experience that Christian education is truly rewarding and have been shown by the response of the many students who returned "home" for the weekend that they are thankful for the efforts of the members.

NEWSPAPER HELPS SHARE FAITH. When our neighbors moved in and we got acquainted we discovered they did not take the daily paper. Usually on Monday mornings I would slip a Life and Health or Signs magazine in with the morning paper.

Later on I gave my neighbor, Loretta Fisher, Steps to Christ, then Early Writings. Other books and papers followed and one day when she was fixing my hair, she suddenly surprised me with, "You know, I think Saturday is the Sabbath."

Later, when Evangelist Cliff Walter held a series of meetings in the Armory in Salem, we invited her to attend. She attended 14 out of the 21 meetings and made her decision for Christ. Then Pastor John Ford visited and studied the Bible with her. You can imagine what a happy day it was for both of us when she was baptized by Pastor Ford.

District 4 Pathfinders Use Exhibit to Get Interests

How does one measure the success of a missionary endeavor? By the number of contacts one makes? By how many pieces of literature one gives out? By how many response cards one receives?

The Pathfinders of District 4, Eugene, Springfield and Veneta, Ore., asked themselves these questions at a meeting following the 1983 Lane County Fair.

The six-day fair had a record attendance in excess of 300,000 people. The Pathfinder booth was in the main convention center building and involved an outreach to young people from 10 to 15 years of age. The United States flag was on display along with the District 4 Pathfinder flag and the Pledge and Law banners. There were photo enlargements of Pathfinder activities, a continuous slide show, a daily raffle of Big Lake T-shirts, and, as a grand prize, a sleeping bag was given away at the end of the week.

Each youngster who entered the drawing filled out a slip of paper with their name, address, phone number, size of T-shirt, and checked a box whether or not he or she would like to know more about the Pathfinder Club in their area. What a tremendous response we received! We had 195 young people check that box.

Our efforts this fall have been concentrated on getting this information to these youngsters in our community. We feel the Holy Spirit is working strongly to lead these young people to seek the right paths.

The essence of comments from people of all ages was, "We need more programs like yours to teach our youth responsibility!" Others told us, "We are glad your church cares enough to provide this kind of character developing program for its youth."

The fair preparations and operation included more than 200 hours of effort from our District 4 Pathfinders and staff. Our staff members are committed to helping our young people see Christ's plan for their lives more clearly. We pray that through these efforts whole families will come to Jesus.

Public School Students Attend Bible Conference

In an effort to provide spiritual leadership and an opportunity for fellowship the Oregon Conference youth department held a Bible conference for Adventist students from public high schools and public colleges at the Gladstone Campground Nov. 11 and 12.

The event drew 226 young people who represented 40 Oregon churches. Gary Rust, conference youth director, GRANTS PASS DISASTER VAN. Dreams of establishing a community disaster aid program neared realization recently when Grants Pass Adventist Community Services workers took delivery on a new 22-foot, one-ton van.

CSC Director Les Byars said the van cost more than $12,000, with $11,000 of the tab picked up by an anonymous donor.

The van will be equipped with facilities for mass feeding, including a refrigerator and stove, and a door will be cut in one side of the vehicle for dispensing meals. Clothing and bedding will be stored along the other side of the van.

It will also have a two-way radio, its own power plant to be used when temporary shelters have been set up at a disaster site.

In addition to Byars, the committee includes his wife, Lois, who is in charge of bedding and clothing; Harriet Smith, who will assist Mrs. Byars; Doug Creek, radio communications; Joe Verstappen, disaster service coordinator; and Elizabeth Verstappen, who is in charge of emergency food services.

says he had expected about 100 to attend.

Guest speaker for the event was Dick Duerksen, North Pacific Union Conference youth director. Change of Heart, a musical group headed by Brett Barry, was featured.

The youth participated in a series of discussion groups Sabbath afternoon. Discussion leaders included Rust, Duerksen, Barry, Doyle McFarland, Joe Galusha, Wes Rogers, Rosalynn Dewey, Luke Fessenden and Bruce Moyer. They dealt with such subjects as personal spiritual growth, how to relate to God's Word, sex and dating, creative dating, values of today's youth and other topics.

Members of the Covenant Players, a Los Angeles based Christian acting group, presented several brief plays to stimulate spiritual interaction Friday evening and Sabbath morning. The Sabbath morning message was presented by Joe Galusha, Walla Walla College biology department head.

Rust says he expects the conference to become an annual event.

Students Are Featured In Molalla School Open House

On Sunday, Nov. 20, open house was held at the Molalla Adventist School, as a Thanksgiving event.

After a supper served in the gym, there was a program in the upper grade room. Two of the upper grade students, Susie Hickenbotham and Teri Nicholson, gave a Bible study using the Dukane projector. Following that the lower grade youngsters presented a dramatization, using puppets to depict the Pilgrims planning their trip to America.

All students gave the Pledge of Allegiance in sign language, which had been taught them by a person skilled in signing.

Academy Bible Conference Held for Juniors, Seniors

Secluded in the Cascade foothills east of Lebanon, Ore., 160 students from Oregon's four academies joined in the annual Academy Bible Conference recently.

Enjoying "perfect" clear fall weather the academy juniors and seniors participated in a series of study sessions, music and recreation at Camp Tadmor. Speaker for the conference was Roger Bothwell, pastor of the Pacific Union College Church.

Bothwell's messages dealt with the conference theme: Jesus Is Sufficient for All Our Needs. The activities of the Assisting Rust in presenting the program were several students from Walla Walla College, his assistant director, Terry Bolton, and the four academy principals, Ed Norton, Jim Blackwood, Floyd White and Hal Hampton. The WWC students were headed by Gary Parks and Doug Simcock.

Among high points of the weekend to which the students reflected were Bothwell's messages, interaction discussions, a three-minute birthday party for two of the students, the Friday evening walk around the lake, and recreational activities Friday afternoon, Ruth Davis and her food service staff prepared a special banquet for the young people Friday evening and it was served by the WWC students.

ALASKA

Interesting Contact Found In Thanksgiving Visitation

Halloween evening saw the small Ketchikan Pathfinder Club, of six, out can collecting for Thanksgiving food baskets. Arrangements had been made with the Salvation Army to supply 15 baskets with a note inside telling the person receiving the food who the real giver was. Thanksgiving Day was almost here. The food had been delivered, and we could now relax with the feeling of enjoyment in a job well-done. The canned goods and the fresh baked items the ladies in the church had prepared had made a nice basket of food, and the 15 families who received them would have a nice Thanksgiving dinner.

The day before Thanksgiving, a woman called asking if our church would consider helping others in need. Assured that we would, she was told that someone would be by to see her that same day. Being the newly appointed Community Services leader, my wife Sally made plans for the visit. Taking the pastor's wife Lynn along, they left to make the contact. The story they brought back was enough to make anyone's Thanksgiving one to remember.

When they arrived at the address they found a young mother of two starting the slow recovery from hepatitis. They had recently moved from Washington, but because of her illness she had lost her job and was showing the signs of frustration in being in a town and not knowing anyone.

As they talked it became apparent that her real concern was not in food and clothing, but in the safety of her younger daughter. She attended kindergarten and got out at 11. Since the girl was too small to walk home, and with her other daughter not getting out until 3, she worried about what to do.

Ideally, she said, she would like to find a day care that would pick her daughter up and then take her back at 3 to catch the bus. But she was sure that no day care would even consider that, and anyway she never had the money to pay for it.

When she paused, Sally said, "Well, it just so happens we own The Toddler House Day Care."

"But would you be able to pick my daughter up and return her at three?"

"No. But we just happen to be located right across the street from the school," was the reply. With this matter taken care of, they asked the lady how she had happened to call our church. She said she had first contacted the local church she used to attend in Washington. She was told they would help only their own members.

She remembered about seven years ago when she was married and they were building a new home in eastern Washington and were living in a small shack on the building site. A neighbor lady came by and asked if they would be offended if she asked some of the members from her church to come by and do a little work to help. She was told that would be fine.

What took place was a real show of Christian love. They weren't prepared for what happened. The lady brought a crew of 20 men, and they finished the house for them. Afterwards the ladies came by with one of the best dinners they had ever eaten. These fine Christians were from the Deer Park Seventh-day Adventist Church. She had never forgotten what they had done.

As Sally and Lynn were leaving, this newfound friend said, "By the way, we received a food basket from the Salvation Army and inside we found a note that said, We love you. From the Seventh-day Adventist Church, Jani, Joi, Lissa, Shelly, Jim and John."

This contact will be nurtured as the Holy Spirit desires. Please be praying that an eternal decision will be made. Then I can write again and say, "Thank you, Deer Park. Now you know the rest of the story."

Television Reporter Films Pocatello School Interview

The Jessie Clark Elementary Church School was filmed, along with two other schools in the Pocatello area, by KID TV News and was shown on Nov. 23.

Due to the many reports released warning about the crisis in public education, news reporter Steve Saunders, who covers education in Bannock County, took a look at schools offering alternatives to the public school system.

Lisa Sprague, principal, stressed that with fewer students they could give them "more individual attention and we can keep track of everything they are doing."

Saunders noted, "What they are doing is receiving an education with as much emphasis on spiritual well-being as academic achievement. . . . That the school is open to children of all denominations. . . . And because it is a private school there are no restrictions on the Bible in the classroom."

Saunders inquired of Mrs. Sprague, "Say a parent comes up and was think-

Baptism Held in Idaho Correctional Institution

The Sabbath following Thanksgiving the group gathered in the chapel of the Idaho State Correctional Institution found it a special time for giving thanks. Dan Miller, a 27-year-old young man, was being baptized. He was allowed to have a few members of his family present for the service — his mother and father, grandparents and a brother.

To the eight members of Adventist Prison Ministries who had all had a part in witnessing the change in Dan's life, it was indeed a special occasion. Dan had personally invited a number of inmates who don't ordinarily attend the Adventist service to be present to witness his baptism.

The group joined in singing a few songs before Pastor Stan Beerman gave a sermonette on the meaning of baptism. Dan was given an opportunity to give his personal testimony before entering the baptismal tank. Special music was brought by a ladies trio, wives of three of the Adventist volunteer chaplains, and by Chuck Null, coordinator of Adventist Prison Ministries, and his son, Ken. Bob Moore, volunteer chaplain, gave the benediction.

CHURCH PARTICIPATES IN FAIR. The Ontario Church decorated their booth at the Malheur County Fair, with a felt scene of an old-time Adventist camp meeting in keeping with the fair theme, "An Af-Fair to Remember." A rear-view projector showed selections from the "Search for Survival" filmstrip series.

Salmon News Notes

● The Community Services Center, directed by Mrs. Charles Goodman, is participating with other churches in the area in the provision of food and shelter for indigent and homeless.

Funds received by Lemhi County will facilitate this program to be carried out by private voluntary organizations under a local board.

● Earthquake reports from the Salmon Church family indicate a "scare," but all are well. Slight damage consisted of two broken windows and a cracked ceiling, in two homes.

● Salmon church school students enjoyed an overnight outing at Lost Trail Hot Springs Resort, about 50 miles north of Salmon. Facilities of the lodge and pool were reserved for one day. Church members and friends made the trip possible.

The children took their lunches. The evening and morning meals were prepared by the sponsors, directed by Ronda Evans.

Swimming instruction was given by Pastor Denny Evans and Linda Lile, a parent. The majority of the youth completed requirements for honors in beginning swimming, and some for intermediate and advanced swimming.

MONTANA

Lewistown Youngsters Get Food for Needy Families

This Halloween, the Lewistown Adventurer's Club did not go around asking for the usual Halloween fare. Instead they knocked on doors asking for food to share with needy families in the Lewistown area, collecting more than 170 non-perishable food items for Thanksgiving baskets.

The Adventurer's club is a "pre-Pathfinder" organization. The children who gathered food items and prepared Thanksgiving baskets are probably the youngest group to do so in the Montana Conference, perhaps in the North Pacific Union Conference. The members range in ages from four to nine years.

Prior to Halloween pickup, the children took around notices to the neighborhood areas where they were working. The notes identified them, the church, and their objective. Then Monday evening, the group gathered for supper at Pastor Dennis Seaton's home. Following supper, they practiced their canvasses and their smiles, and they were on their way.

Most of the people were ready for them, and several families had prepared bags of food. Ryan McLain and Nichola Seaton, the two youngest members, not only talked at the doors but carried the heavy boxes as well. Sam Fallang finished his territory and was ready for more.

One of the goals of the Adventurer's Club is to encourage members to take part in neighborly deeds and community service projects. Part of the club's pledge is "I will be a servant to God and a friend to man."

At the Adventurer's Club meeting the Monday before Thanksgiving, the children got together once again for service. This time it was to bake pumpkin pies. They divided the food into four large baskets, decorated them, and with the help of some parents and adult friends added homemade french bread, whole-wheat bread and fruit. The homemade pies crowned the gift boxes.

One of the boxes was delivered personally to a single parent with two junior high boys. She had just gone to work and had no money until after the first of December. She was pleased and appreciative of the children's efforts. The homemade items particularly touched her.

The other three boxes were delivered to the welfare office, who had picked out three needy families. The News Argus was there, took pictures of the children and printed a Thanksgiving feature. Sara McLain and Chrissy Stomm want to plan to do it again next year. Benjamin Seaton sized it all up at the end of the evening, "I feel like I'm doing for others what Jesus would do."

WALLA WALLA COLLEGE

SENIOR CLASS OFFICERS ELECTED. Officers for Walla Walla College's June graduating class were recently elected. Seated are president Gary Parks, religion major from Boring, Ore.; vice president Don Schafer, mathematics major also from Boring; and standing are chaplain Curtis Rittenour, theology major from College Place; historian Wendy Andregg, English major from College Place; treasurer Albert Crook, business major from Othello, Wash.; secretary Deanna Carr, social work major from Aloha, Ore.; and advisor Dr. Alden Thompsen.

Students to Speak During College Week of Prayer

"Be a Doer" is the theme of an Associated Students of Walla Walla College-sponsored week of prayer slated for Jan. 8 to 14. Walla Walla College students will present the 8 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. meetings, which will be in the College Church.

The sermon topics and the theme for the week are drawn from Richard Foster's book Celebration of Discipline, reports ASWWC spiritual co-vice president Monte Torkelsen, who along with co-vice president Mike Cook is coordinating the week.

During the week of prayer, three dimensions — inward, outward and corporate — of Christian discipline will be examined. Inward deals with meditation, prayer, fasting and study; outward looks at simplicity, solitude, submission and service; and corporate examines confession, worship, guidance and celebration.

All of the meetings are open to the public.

Three Students Spend Holidays Working in Brazil

"I'll be home for Christmas" is a song that many sing as the holiday season approaches.

But for three students from Walla Walla College, "only in my dreams" was a more appropriate line this past December. They hardly expected to find "... snow and mistletoe and presents on the tree ..." in Central America.

Jonathan Fish, Mark Horsman, and Brett Robinson flew south to Progresso, Belize, to join representatives from five SUCCESSFUL PHONOTHON. Walla Walla College students Greg Dickinson, freshman communication major, and Deirdre MacVarish, junior psychology major, received complimentary T-shirts from Richard Beck, vice president for development, for their work in the college's third annual phonothon. Among the students participating in the phonothon, Dickinson attained the highest dollar total of pledges in one evening; MacVarish completed the most telephone calls.

The phonothon ended in success Dec. 10 with pledges totaling $116,626, an increase of $30,000 over last year. Money raised from this year's phonothon will be used primarily for student aid.

other North American Adventist colleges at a training seminar.

On Dec. 16, the trio began study and work for two weeks on a Maranatha Flights International project.

Last year the Andrews University chapter of Maranatha Flights International built a church in the northern Belize town.

This year the Walla Walla College delegates joined the Andrews' group on the second week of a project to build an elementary school and a new staff house for the mission station located in the small, coastal town of about 900 residents.

To Jonathan Fish, a sophomore biology major from La Grande, Ore., it is no surprise that all three delegates from Walla Walla College are former Student Missionaries.

"Being Student Missionaries has whetted our appetites," Jon said. "You say, 'I've experienced it . . . ' and you're ready to go back again."

Jon observed that often students in America hear about the needs of humanity, but when they go as Student Missionaries they not only see the needs, they feel them.

"The whole Student Missionary call is centered around service," Jon explained.

It's a call to service that is still being answered by Walla Walla College, Student Missionaries, and Maranatha Flights International.

It's a call that announces, "Joy to the World, the Lord has come. Let earth receive her King."

Communication Professor Gets Award for Directorship

Jim Hannum, associate professor of communications at Walla Walla College, has received the Golden Hale Award from the Southern California Motion Picture Council for his directorship of Westbrook Theater's "So Near So Far."

The Golden Hale is the highest award given by the Motion Picture Council for a media project contributing to the betterment of mankind.

"So Near So Far," a one-hour dramatic TV special, is a composite of two dramatic films produced earlier and edited into a single multi-story feature. The program premiered in Los Angeles and Washington, D.C., last spring and is the first of the Westbrook presentations sponsored by Faith For Today television. Such projects are, as Hannum says, "different ventures of Faith For Today into various kinds of market places."

The plot seeks to examine family relationships and acceptance in view of conflicting lifestyles. The first portion deals with a young medical intern ashamed of his "salt of the earth" father. The second portion deals with two sisters, one a homemaker and the other a women's magazine editor.

"The Harvest," a one-hour film production shown on prime-time television in Los Angeles last Oct 30, was also directed by Hannum. The production was re-packaged, re-timed and the format and continuity re-written by Hannum from tapes and equipment in the WWC Communications Department.

Hannum served as executive producer and director of television programming for Faith For Today for seven years before coming to WWC this fall. He continues to serve as a consultant for Faith For Today television.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Health Programs in Springfield

Monday and Thursday evenings from 7 to 9:15 p.m., Feb. 2 to 27, the Springfield Adventist Church is sponsoring Experiment in Better Living classes.

This is a total health and happiness program, directed by James A. McHan, M.D. The program will help participants learn to control: weight, stress, diabetes, blood pressure, cancer. It will help prevent: heart attacks, stroke, cancer. It will give principles of proper nutrition and exercise, and how to maintain the proper balance in life.

Those in the area should plan to attend and invite others to come with you. For information or to register, call (503) 746-5568 or (503) 746-4108. Early registration is urged.

Addresses Needed

If anyone knows the address of any of the following persons, please write to: Clerk, East Salem Adventist Church, 5575 Fruitland Road N.E., Salem, OR 97301: Mark Dale, Kathryn Haley, Charlotte (Strickler) Noble, Kelley Strickler, Lavonne Merklin and Sandra Welty.

Your Input Is Desired

The Governance and Management Committee established by the Union Executive Committee has met and organized. Further sessions are scheduled early this year.

A special Union Constituency meeting is set for September 1984. This time frame puts limitations on the deliberations. Individuals desiring to have input with the committee are invited to do so. However, this should be done as soon as possible.

Address any communication relative to the Governance and Management Committee to its chairman, Morris Brusett, 761 S., California, Helena, MT 59601.

College Music Groups to Tour Austria and Hungary

The 23-member Walla Walla College Brass Choir and Percussion Ensemble will tour Austria and Hungary in June under the sponsorship of Friendship Ambassadors, reports group conductor Dr. H. Lloyd Leno. Friendship Ambassadors is a New York-based program that sponsors international tours by American performing groups.

The three-week tour will cost $1,628 per student, two-thirds of which must be raised by the individual student. The remainder of the trip's funding will come from group fund-raising and record sales.

While serving to spread good will through their concerts, the Brass Choir and Percussion Ensemble will be able to visit with Adventists in the two nations.

The Brass Choir and Percussion Ensemble toured Romania in 1977 and Poland in 1979.

Oregon MFI Meeting

Annual meeting of Oregon Chapter of Maranatha Flights International will be held March 9 and 10 at the Canyonville Church. Guest speaker for the event will be Chet Damon, MFI chaplain, of Berrien Springs, Mich.

The chapter meeting arrangements are being coordinated by Clyde and Vernita Marriott of Canyonville. Dean Campbell, chapter president, reports that there are many new members with whom he and other members would like to become acquainted and hopes that they will attend this meeting.

Oregon chapter is sponsoring two projects in early 1984. The first will be March 13 and 14, at Lone Creek, Ore., about 40 miles north of John Day on U.S. Highway 395.

The second project will be a church building to be erected in one week at Castle Rock, Wash. It is located adjacent to the I-5 freeway.

Anyone interested in participating in any of these upcoming MFI events is welcome to participate, Campbell says.

Mt. Tabor Daniel Seminar

The study of Bible prophecy is the focus of attention on many people's minds. Following the showing of "The Day After" on ABC television, many people are searching for answers to what lies ahead for the future of this old world.

Because of this the Mt. Tabor School of the Bible is offering a seminar in the study of the Book of Daniel. This will be held on Monday and Wednesday evenings beginning Jan. 9. It will run for 10 nights. The class will be conducted in the Mt. Tabor Seventh-day Adventist Church balcony, 1001 S.E. 60th, Portland, Ore. To cover costs there will be a registration and materials fee of $10 per participant. To register, phone (503) 233-7606. Encourage others to attend.

Knechtle to Speak

Emilio Knechtle will speak at the Ballard Church, 2054 NW 61st St., Seattle:

Sunnyside Film Series

The Portland Sunnyside Church invites everyone to view the Joni Eareckson film series Blessings Out of Brokenness. These films are free and will be shown Jan. 11, 18 and 25, and Feb. 1 at 7:15 p.m. at the new church.

Hale and Wilder Concert

Robert Hale and Dean Wilder, well-known vocal duo, will present a concert of sacred and secular music at the Walla Walla Valley Academy Auditorium on Jan. 21, 8 p.m. There is an admission charge.

Hale serves as leading bass-baritone with the New York City Opera Company. Wilder is director of Vocal Studies at William Jewell College, Missouri. In addition to their individual performances in opera, oratoria, recital and with symphony orchestras, Hale and Wilder have toured together internationally, appearing in nearly 3,000 concerts since 1966.

The concert is being sponsored by Walla Walla College's KGTS radio.

Riverside Evangelism

Evangelistic meetings will be held at the Riverside Church, Jan. 7 to 28, at 7 p.m., with Dennis Crabbe and his friends. Meetings will be on Sunday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday nights. Child care will be available. The church is located at 29516 S.E. Shepherd Rd., Washougal, Wash. Send names of interested persons in the area to Pastor Verne Hyland at the church address, ZIP 98671. Come and bring others.

GSA Senior Recognition

Gem State Academy class of '84 invites you to Senior Recognition on Jan. 20 and 21. Friday evening vespers — 7:30; Sabbath school — 10 a.m.; worship service — 11:30 a.m.; Senior Benefit "Gifts of an Eagle" — 8 p.m. All meetings in the gymnasium.

Washington Dialogue

Once again the president, secretary and treasurer of the Washington Conference will spend an evening in seven different areas of the conference. The seven host churches will welcome members from surrounding churches to come for an open town-hall-type meeting. This type of meeting has proved to be especially popular in the past since it has given members an opportunity to ask questions, make suggestions and give observations on a more intimate level than at a large constituency session.

In the 1984 sessions, President Glenn Aufderhar will concentrate particularly on the general thrust of the church, with secretary Lenard Jaecks giving emphasis to evangelism and church planning, while treasurer Roy Wesson will give a simple but comprehensive financial picture through handouts. Members of the Washington Conference are urged to attend the meeting in the host church listed below that fits their schedule and geographic location.

Graduate Classes

"Philosophy of Health," a study of the physical, mental, social and spiritual nature of man, is scheduled to be offered in the North Pacific Union Conference Feb. 5 and 6.

"Principles of Administration in Public Health," a study of organizational and managerial concepts with application to health care organizations, is scheduled for Feb. 6 to 9. Both classes are offered through Loma Linda University's Master of Public Health off-campus degree program. It is co-sponsored by the North Pacific Union Conference and classes will be held at the Gladstone Park Campground, Portland, Ore.

This MPH program is offered in Portland once per quarter (every three months) and is open to all health professionals, with a bachelor's degree, desiring to continue their education in public health.

If you are interested in the classes and/or program, contact: North Pacific Union Conference, (503) 255-7300; or Office of Extended Programs, School of Health, (714) 824-4595 or toll free 1-800-854-5661.

PAA Alumni Sabbath

Portland Adventist Academy Alumni Sabbath, Feb. 25, 1984, with guest speaker Laverne Tucker of the Quiet Hour. If you have not been receiving the Alumni Newsletter, please send your current address to: PAA, P.O. Box 16098, Portland, OR 97216.

New Organization Formed

Several southern Oregon Adventists have formed a non-profit organization to help composers and arrangers of gospel or sacred music and lyric writers. It has been named ACAP, Inc., (Adventist Composers, Arrangers and Poets) with membership open to anyone who desires to improve skills in these areas.

The only prerequisite to membership is to have composed or written at least one gospel or sacred song or have written one verse of poetry.

"Many Adventists have written original gospel music or spiritual verse," said ACAP's president, George V. Davis, in offering the organization's services.

Some of these include seminars, a newsletter, publication of one original gospel song and one original spiritual verse selected by an ACAP committee, free critique of one original composition and one original poem and assistance in presenting a program of spiritual music and poetry in a church or community facility.

In addition to Davis the officers include: Corleen Johnson, vice president, and Eleanor Davis, secretary-treasurer. For further information, contact Davis at Route 1, Box 8A, Days Creek, OR 97429, or phone (503) 825-3647.

Literature Wanted

Literature is needed for racks in southern Idaho, mainly Burley and Twin Falls. We can use health magazines, These Times, Signs of the Times, Guides, Primary Treasure, etc. We can't use church news papers such as the Adventist Review and GLENER. Literature also needed in Spanish. This is an ongoing ministry and a steady supply of literature is needed. Reimbursement for postage can be arranged. Send literature to Donald L. Robinson, P.O. Box 418, Eden, Idaho 83325 c/o Seventh-day Adventist Church. UPS address: Rt. 1, Box 156, Hazelton, Idaho 83335.

Psychologist to Speak

The Loma Linda University Medical-Dental Auxiliary in Portland, Ore., is sponsoring Dr. Richard Nies, an Adventist psychologist from Glendale, Calif., to speak at the Gladstone Campground Convention Center in January. Meetings are scheduled for 7:30 p.m., Friday, Jan. 20, and both morning and afternoon Sabbath, Jan. 21.

His topic: "Is God's Will a Blueprint or a Sketch?" Non-Auxiliary members are welcome! For registration and meal information call or write: Shirley Hethong, 2011 S.W. 29th, Gresham, OR 97030; (503) 255-9733 (office), (503) 677-4875 (home).

A Place of Special Need

Are you praying to witness for God in a place of special need? The coastal community of Reedsport, Ore., may be that place. The attractive new church, dedicated in 1982, seats 85. There are visiting tourists, but regular attendees are needed, people who will move into the community, find employment and help to build up the church there. Mild coastal climate. Population 5,000. Pleasant environment, walking on beach, also lakes, sand dunes and wooded hills. Possibility of church school when needed. Contact Lawrence E. C. Joers, M.D., 547 Evergreen Loop, Reedsport, OR 97467, (503) 271-4066.

Friends of Canada Reunion

The 1984 Friends of Canada reunion will be held at the La Sierra College cafeteria, Riverside, Calif., on Saturday, March 10 from 4-9 p.m.

1951 Class, Lynwood Academy

Members of the 1951 class of Lynwood Academy are asked to contact Mitzi Wiggle, 11785 Quiet Lane, Riverside, Calif., for details on the 33rd annual class reunion. Phone (714) 653-3265.

PERSON TO PERSON

Advertisements for this section are accepted from North Pacific Union Conference single adults only. Each ad must be accompanied by a letter from an NPUC Adventist pastor indicating that the person is an NPUC member in good standing.

The charge for each ad is $12 per insertion for 50 words or less, 35¢ for each additional word. Payment must accompany the ad. There is no billing.

If you wish to respond to an advertisement, the following rules apply: You must be an NPUC member in good standing and must attach a letter from your pastor indicating this. These letters are kept on file. If a person has advertised or responded to an ad in the past, it isn't necessary to send an additional pastoral letter of approval.

The GLEANER assumes no responsibility as to the marital status of respondents or advertisers except that they are North Pacific Union Conference members in good standing.

Put your letter to the individual in a stamped, sealed envelope and place the identification number on the outside. Put this letter in another envelope and mail it to Person to Person, GLEANER, Box 16677, Portland, OR 97216.
