

Springtime

By J.R. Obregon

Last November, my daughter and I planted garlic, tulip, crocus, and daffodil bulbs. They were dry and hard and gave no signs of life at all. The whole winter they lay in darkness, entombed in the hard, frozen earth. They lay seemingly dead.

But today, five months later, my eyes can hardly believe the tremendous change. They exhibit exquisite beauty; they are a riot of colors, smiling, beckoning. How great and wonderful does God splash His brush in diverse colors on every petal of the blooming flowers for man to behold and enjoy! Plus a bonus of aroma from the bowers.

Spring — what a time of resurrection and rebirth! Daffodils, tulips, crocuses press through the soil. Even animals in hibernation return to life. Other kinds of life also undergo a metamorphosis — moths emerge from their cocoons, multi-colored butterflies from the chrysalis come out dancing in the sunshine. There is pristine beauty all around.

The same is true on that "springtime" of the resurrection. Because Jesus rose from the dead, our corrupt bodies "must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality" on that blessed morning. Life restored, not for years, but for eternity!

Our imperfections and flaws will be gone forever; our physical defects removed. The Prophet Isaiah asserts: "Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. Then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb shall sing" Isaiah 35:5, 6.

Dwarfed minds become giants; weaknesses made strong; human limitations replaced with new powers and capabilities. Life reckoned in milleniums instead of years. Troubles, pain and sorrows are now alien to humans. The Seer of Patmos declares: "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain for the former things are passed away" Revelation 21:4.

We will all greet that golden morning with expectancy and joy. That "springtime" will be sooner than we think.

Fellow Christian, are you preparing for that day?

J.R. Obregon writes from Canby, Ore.

Emotion and Feeling

... I would like to see an emphasis upon the completion of the Christian duty — feeling or no feeling. "If you love me, you will keep my commandments" John 14:15.

What we as Christians still need to learn is that

What we as Christians still need to learn is that the occasional gush of emotion that we feel for and about God is far different from Christian responsibility and duty to God.

In Gethsemane Christian responsibility and duty required Jesus to make the ultimate sacrifice, one I don't think He felt like making, since He prayed, "Let this cup pass from me."

I'm glad Jesus in this instance chose not to follow His feelings and instead did the right thing, regardless of how He felt.

While it may be true that "expression deepens impression," there comes a time when feelings and emotion give way to principled decision making and action.

Michael F. Bishop Portland, Ore.

Side Issues

We have our beliefs whether or not wedding rings should be worn or whether or not there should be women ministers. We all believe in what kind of music, what kind of worship and what kind of people we should have in church. We believe in miracles or coincidences. No matter what it is we all believe, we all have our opinions.

I am wondering though if we aren't getting left behind by holding on to our opinions? Are we aware that Christ is coming soon and that the end for all of us may be sooner than we realize?

Are we believing enough in the power to get us through these last days that we can drop these side issues and come close to our God? Are we studying to prepare ourselves for the Latter Rain of the Holy Spirit? When I go shopping with my kids they often get caught up with certain things around them. I've learned the best way to deal with the side trips is to keep on going about my business. They have all learned to stay with me or get left....

Like my kids, though, we often get caught up with certain issues. Each of us has a special want, a standard upheld or a wall broken down, regardless of the business that our Father has. He is going about His business with or without us.

Are we going to be left while we are busy with our side issues? Are we going to stay divided while the work is given to others? Let's work in unity to proclaim our God-given message to the world. Edwina Doud Elma, Wash.

The Final Word

Editor's Note: While we had discontinued further letters on the topic of makeup and had so notified several who wrote letters on the topic, we couldn't resist printing this letter. It is the last one on the subject.

Believe me some of us would scare you off the back 40 acres if we didn't do a little cover-up job. I'm preparing for translation, not for cremation. Some may be 39 and holding but I'm 66 and nothing holding.

For those dear folk who are uptight about makeup, I would suggest volunteering at the nearest wife and child abuse shelter. Now there's something to get uptight about and it's guaranteed to get your mind off of makeup!

FROM THE EDITOR

Operation Bearhug has stirred the interest of Northwesterners, one of the reasons being the proximity of Alaska to the Soviet Union.

In response to Operation Bearhug we have heard of many people offering financial help for the evangelistic meetings that are being planned as well as for Bibles.

As an example, there is the program initiated by the Portland Rockwood Earliteens. A report of this appears in the feature section of this issue.

Alf Birch, Operation Bearhug coordinator, is visiting Russia to get firsthand information as to the needs and possibilities. We will carry a report of his findings upon his return.

If your church or group has plans for Operation Bearhug, we would like to hear from you. Send the information along with pictures to GLEANER Editor, Box 16677, Portland, OR 97216.

Two More TV Ministries

I received my GLEANER this which is always a first in my week's reading. I enjoyed George Vandeman's article on the television ministries. I was disappointed that two of them weren't mentioned Amazing Facts is an outstanding fundamental Adventist program. Also LaVerne Tucker's Search telecast. We should support all of these good programs whenever possible. They are doing a wonderful work in preaching the gospel to hasten the Lord's return.

Frank Gray Baker City, Ore.

We certainly agree with reader Gray's commendations for Amazing Facts and Search. They are excellent programs. However, they are completely supported by listener donations while an annual church offering benefits the four denominationally sponsored television programs.

A year ago, Mark, my grandson, came to visit me and to build a new fence in my backyard where it was needed. . . . We had it all finished with the exception of the south side when Mark received a phone call to return home as soon as possible.

A Modern Miracle

By Tom Hooper

 $oldsymbol{I}$ am writing this to say that our Lord is still alive and answers prayer and performs miracles the way He did while here on earth.

In June of this past year, while living in New Mexico, I became so ill I went to the doctor. He put me on some medication but after a few days instead of feeling better I felt worse. I continued to get worse to the point I could not walk or sleep and I could barely breathe. My feet and ankles swelled up to one and a half their normal size. I felt that I was dving.

This went on for some time and I finally called my folks in Idaho and asked if I could come home and of course they said, "Yes." I learned that my folks and my church family had been praying for me. The first miracle was my being able to drive myself home alone. The 1,000 miles from New Mexico was a long drive and I was exceptionally tired and worn out when I got home, but I made it.

The second night I was home I was having trouble breathing so my father took me to the emergency room. The doctor there did not know what to do to help me. The next morning I called to see if I could get in to see my old family doctor and I got an appointment for that very afternoon. This was another answer to prayer because they were booked solid. However, there had been a cancellation that morning, so I got

The doctor checked me over and they ran several tests. Then he told me that he knew what was wrong with me, that I had experienced a bad heart attack and that I should not even be alive. As he put it, my lungs were gone, my kidneys were of no use and he gave me only seven days to live at the most. He admitted me into the hospital.

While I was in the hospital my parents and church family prayed for me and I started to do some pretty serious thinking. I had been a church member for many years but had lost my way and my faith at best was weak. I started to earnestly pray and I told the Lord if He would heal me I would work for Him the rest of my life. I was in the hospital nine days. When I left, I was confident I was going to live.

It has been several weeks now since I left the hospital and I am walking four to six blocks a day and I feel good. The other day my doctor said that I am doing great but he confided to me that I was in the worst shape of any 32-year-old patient he ever had. While I was in the hospital there were spots on my lungs and my heart was not working right at all and it was quite enlarged.

Recently he had a couple of tests redone along with x-rays. When I went in to see him he told me my heart size has shrunk, the spots on my lungs were gone, and that my heart is pumping fine so I wouldn't need the heart surgery. He told me this never happens this fast, but the results were right there in front of him. He said to keep up the good work.

I don't know why the Lord spared my life or why the healing happened so quickly, but I am not questioning His judgment. He knows what He is doing. I am just grateful that He did spare my life and I want to lead as many as I can to the One who answers prayer, who hears us and does perform modern miracles.

Tom Hooper writes from Twin Falls, Idaho.

Before Mark left he called a contractor and was assured that he would come the following day. He didn't come so I called him and he told me he was unable to come that day, but would come the next day. This went on for a week and he never came, so I called many people only to find there would be a waiting period of three weeks to a month before anyone could do the job. Vivian Harper, a friend of mine, stopped by and saw my problem and said she might be able to help. The next day four men came: Bill Wacker, Joe Milicia, Robert Parks and Steven Walker. They told me they were from the Santa Clara Adventist Church and would like to help me with my problem.

was amazed to have anyone do this for me.

They told me they were building a new church and invited me to come and see it. They wouldn't accept any pay for their work and they had my fence up in a very short time. Their enthusiasm and pride in what they were doing made quite an impression on me.

I went to see the church and was welcomed by such loving, friendly people that I kept going and I found the church to be just what I had been looking for in my life. I'm grateful that my grandson wasn't able to finish the fence and that God sent these special people to help me.

Take Heart Retreats Help Women Overcome Painful Memories

By Kay Kuzma

There is a prison that is worse than being behind bars. It is the prison of one's past, it is the walls of isolation and defense that have been built up by people to protect themselves from the memories of a painful childhood.

And the most debilitating and destructive memory of all is the memory of sexual violation.

It has been estimated that one-fourth of the women in this country have been the victims of sexual abuse — and if we really knew the truth, the actual figure might be close to one-third.

Coming from a sheltered background I could hardly believe these figures. But over and over again when I ask, there is a knowing nod of the head, and the accompanying comment that sexual abuse appears to be the highest in conservatively rigid homes.

Could it be that children living in Christian homes are at risk? Yes. And the result is that thousands of women sitting in the pews of our churches are suffering in their own silent prisons, afraid to tell anyone for the shame it might bring on themselves or their families.

Afraid to Trust

Instead they find it difficult to believe they have any value. They are afraid to trust others. They have difficulty relating to a marriage partner and too often pass their hang-ups and abuse on to their children, or they try to drown their pain in alcohol, deviant behavior and attempted suicide.

Janis Vance will be a guest speaker at the Take Heart Retreat. She will be joined by her sister, Nikki Allen, director of nurses at Shawnee Mission Hospital.

I wasn't concerned about his problem until two women attending my Designing God's Women seminar pleaded with me to hold a similar retreat for those who have suffered from incest and sexual abuse. I prayed that God would provide someone to lead out in this work. He did.

Within 20 minutes I met Janis Vance and was impressed to ask her to plan a retreat for sexually abused women. After two days in prayer, Janis told the Lord she needed a sign that this was the work she was to do. So she asked Him to bring someone to her who needed healing in this area. Within 12 hours Janis had her answer.

Janis had found healing in her own life, not through secular theory and psychotherapy, but through prayer and by attending a spiritually led support group. Therefore, an intense year of prayer followed, as Janis found a Spirit-filled friend, Anne Barcus, and began planning a retreat.

Freedom Found

Would anyone come? Would women be afraid to admit they had been violated and abused? No one knew the answer. But on a weekend in 1990, 70 women known only by their first names came to Southeastern California's Pine Springs Ranch to experience the truth in the text, "Therefore, if the Son makes you free, you shall be free indeed."

When a new memory bubbled to the surface or the emotional grief was too much to bear, a prayer intercessor was there to guide, hold and support — and the Holy Spirit comforted.

Before that weekend I had no idea of the deep pain suffered by victims of sexual abuse. At the same time I began to realize what a difference a weekend spiritual retreat could make in helping women break down the prisons of the past. I saw incredible changes take place.

One young woman, who not only had been molested in her childhood, but had recently escaped from an abusive marriage, at first sat alone between sessions, listening to her Walkman and holding a stuffed toy dog. But by the next afternoon she had experienced a release from her burden of guilt and bitterness and was joyfully leading the group in song.

Take Heart Retreat Planned

Do you need healing? Do you know anyone from your church, a friend at work, or next door? If so, won't you consider the Take Heart Retreat sponsored by the Oregon Conference Women's Ministries Department on April 26-28?

An Agnostic Helped

Another, an agnostic, had no idea she was coming to a spiritual retreat. She had been an incest victim and a recovering alcoholic and had tried to find healing in everything from metaphysics to five years of therapy.

During the second day of the retreat she sought out one of the prayer intercessors and began asking questions about Jesus. She never before experienced the love she found at the retreat and she had to discover that made the difference. At the end she said, "God is the only answer to incest."

She went home and threw away her crystals and New Age books, bought a Bible, gave her life to the Lord, and told the owner of the mental health clinic where she was manager, that she was turning it into a Christian treatment center.

We can send these women to counselors and we can pray for them, but I sincerely believe that isn't enough. Something special happens when a group of women meet and pray together in a spiritual setting where there is time for the Spirit to speak and to heal.

Small Group Worships Growing at Walla Walla College

By Melodie Parks

Students on the Walla Walla College campus are getting excited about worship. Small group worships are a growing part of student life on campus as each week groups of eight to 10 students gather to study the Bible, pray and share their insights with each other.

The idea for small group worships began four years ago during a time when many students were dissatisfied with the worship options available to them. Many students found a more meaningful experience in a small group setting than they did in the large worships on campus. That first year there were six small groups, a number that has grown to more than 26 over the past four years.

These groups meet each week for one to two hours of scripture study, discussion, prayer and sharing with each other. Many small groups plan other activities together such as cross-country skiing trips, camping and Sabbath picnics. Once a quarter all group members have the opportunity to meet together during a weekend retreat.

Exciting Groups

"These groups are exciting because the students have been able to use the matrix of the worship groups to help support each other in their personal lives as well," says Walt Meske, dean of students, "and that can be just as important as the worship function of the groups."

Each group is led by one or two leaders who prepare a curriculum of study for the meetings. The leaders frequently meet together for soup suppers and retreats to talk about what is happening within their groups and gather new ideas from other leaders.

The Small Group program is coordinated by Milton Adams, a junior theology major, and Bonnie Glantz, a senior Spanish major. Last summer Adams worked with Kurt Johnson, personal ministries director of the Oregon Conference, in writing a small group study guide for group leaders. The manual, which is scheduled to be published by Pacific Press, outlines suggested activities and topics for weekly study as well as mixer games that are used before the worship begins.

Student Program

"I'm happy that this program has been able to get past the student missionary crowd to the student body as a whole," says Adams. "It is also unusual in that it is a student organized program and I'd like to see it continue that way."

Some small groups focus on specific challenges that students may be facing. One group's focus is "Dealing with Difficult Family Situations."

Other groups have taken on special projects. Last year one group sponsored 10 children overseas. Three groups this year have joined together to form "Students for the Children." Some groups are active in presenting branch Sabbath Schools for children of low-income families in the valley.

Lavelle Whitehouse, a freshman business education major, is a small group leader. She says that the small group has been a help to her and the other members.

Answers Questions

"Small group is something that has helped us to answer some of the questions that we have about God, the Bible and ourselves," says Whitehouse. "I think the group has socially helped several members as well."

Kimberly Brackett is a freshman music education major and a member of Whitehouse's small group.

"I like meeting with the same group each week," says Brackett, "I've been able to get to know people I wouldn't have been able to otherwise and the worship is more personalized than other worships on campus. I would definitely encourage any student to become involved with a small group."

"God has blessed in so many ways," says Adams, "not only have group members been blessed, but they have been able to be a blessing to others and that is the most exciting aspect of the small group program."

Union Constituency Session Scheduled for May 10-12

The North Pacific Union Constituency Meeting will be held at the Portland Sunnyide Church May 10-12. The purpose of the session is to hear reports for the past five years and to elect a president, secretary and treasurer as well as Executive Committee members.

As a preliminary to the Constituency meeting, the Union Executive Committee, which is the Nominating Committee, will meet in Seattle April 12 to nominate the three officers.

A.C. McClure, president of the North American Division will chair the Nominating Committee. None of the officers will be present. The Nominating Committee recommendations will be voted on by the delegates at the Union Constituency meeting.

Department directors will be appointed by the new North Pacific Union Conference Executive Committee which will have its first meeting on May 23. Local conference executive committees will select a slate of names to be sent to the Constituency session. Delegates from each conference will caucus and select their representatives for the Union Executive Committee. Each conference will have a pastor on the committee and one or more lay members depending on the membership.

... To a great extent every person is the architect of his own character.

Members Can Contact Servicemen Through Adventist Chaplains

By Richard Lee Fenn

Want to be involved in Operation Desert Storm in a supportive role? Want to contact some Adventist men and women now serving the country in the Persian Gulf War?

National Service Organization Northwest recommends you work through the Adventist chaplains presently assigned to ODS. Pick one or more from the following list. Find out what our people need and/or want from home. Cheery cards, loving letters, cassette tapes of church services, music, and local events and interviews will keep them "in touch" and tell them you care. (You don't have to send Bibles. The American Bible Society is generously supplying that important need.)

Wonder why the Marine Corps isn't listed? The USMC does not have a chaplaincy. The spiritual needs of Marines are met by Navy chaplains.

Finally, two suggestions:

(1) Each North Pacific Union Conference church would do well to name a military service liaison officer. (We used to call him or her the servicemen's secretary.) We think the church's religious liberty leader or the youth ministries specialist would be an appropriate pick.

(2) Check all news items with your local conference NSO chaplain-director or the North Pacific Union Conference's NSONW chaplain-director. You see, a lot of the news that's purported to be authentic has, on second look, turned out to be mere rumor.

Klamath Falls Woman Cited as 'Special Mother'

A recent color cover page for the Living section of the Herald and News, Klamath Falls, featured Adventist member Susan Reid as a special mother of a special family. The following is taken from the article, written by reporter Rita Backa, and sent to the GLEANER by Pastor Michael Petricko.

"For single parent Susan Reid happiness is sharing and caring for fellow human beings. With an extremely strong religious background, she feels she is doing God's work as she shares her life and time with 'special' people."

She explains that as she was growing up her mother was a nurses' aide and her parents took in foster children which she feels contributed to her deep love and concern for those with special needs.

After graduating from Milo Adventist Academy, Reid spent three years at Walla Walla College studying to become an elementary school teacher. Then she and her college roommate, Susan Wagner, a nursing major, moved to Klamath Falls, where they started providing a home for mentally handicapped adults.

Since 1984, Reid has adopted four children, three of whom are afflicted with cerebral palsy — Amber, age 8, Latasha, 8, and Nichol, 7. "Aaron, 3, born in Belize, Central America, is a lively, healthy, energetic boy who keeps his three sisters entertained with his antics and activities. He is also a lot of help to his mother."

Susan Reid

In addition to the children, Reid "shares her seven-bedroom home with four mentally handicapped adults, which provides her with the income she needs to care for her 'family' of 10 people.

"The immaculate home is filled with convenience apparatus that double as training and therapy devices for the three girls. Each girl has a chair designed for her special need."

A major task is transporting the girls and their chairs to school and medical appointments.

The four foster adults are employed by REACH Inc., and the three young girls attend special education classes, giving the two Susans — Reid and Wagner — time to shop, run errands, clean house and do laundry and cooking.

Ms. Reid recently spoke at the Klamath Falls Church worship hour, sharing her experience and her convictions on adoption. She says, "People who want to adopt should be able to adopt.... There are children and 'special children' who desperately need homes and families."

She adds, "A physical/mental/emotional impairment does not make a child less lovable or less capable. . . . To deny them a chance and a family is wrong. . . . I feel humbly grateful that God has put it in my heart, and given me the means and health to be able to do what I am doing."

Sequim, Wash., Couple Devise Unusual License Plate

By Charlotte Syphers

Seattle's KING-5 TV's helicopter brought newsmen to the house of Ken and Jay Richmond in Sequim, Wash., on a recent Friday afternoon. The news segment filmed that afternoon showing the Richmonds processing orders for their Desert Shield license plates aired on national TV Monday, Jan. 21.

The plates, designed by Ken Richmond, owner of Motor Age Images in Sequim, mount easily above or below the regular state-issued license plates and display the words, "Loved One in Desert Shield."

After seeing a list of servicemen and women from this area stationed in the Persian Gulf, and recognizing names of former schoolmates, Richmond realized how the Gulf Crisis affects people at home, too. The idea of a license plate to identify families of service people surfaced.

Orders have come in from all over the U.S. The couple donate a major portion of the proceeds to the Salvation Army, designated for use to give comfort and increase morale among those in the war area.

Charlotte Syphers writes from Sequim, Wash.

Poland Native Learns Desk Top Publishing

Wictor Kuczek, Podkowa Lensa, Poland, is getting a course in desk top publishing as well as many phases of printing while staying at the home of Jeff Reich, St. Maries, Idaho.

Last year Reich and a friend in New York City discussed the feasibility of inviting Eastern Bloc residents to America to learn desk top publishing. The friend knew Mr. Kuczek's brother who was studying in the U.S. The 28-year-old Pole accepted the invitation.

Wictor Kuczek, right, is getting a course in printing from Jeff Reich, owner of LMN Publishing. The 28-yar-old Pole plans to return to his native land to continue printing for the Adventist Church.

He is staying with Reich who owns LMN Publishing. In his native land Kuczek works for radio "Voice of Hope" which is an Adventist shortwave station that covers Poland with broadcasting facilities in Portugal.

Kuczek has a small printing facility at the Polish Spiritual Seminary located near Warsaw. He has been printing handouts for the Polish Union for evangelistic meetings held there.

He has also worked with the Eastern European Division evangelist Mark Finley in audio recording and the circulation of tapes in Poland.

In his stay with Reich, Kuczek is getting a full background in all phases of printing.

"By the time Wictor leaves he will know how to do everyting from typeset work, laying out by computer in producing camera-ready copies, making printing plates, doing the printing on the press, collating and binding, and finally trimming the booklets and tracts," Reich says.

Reich has received legal papers to invite a young man from Russia to come to St. Maries for the same type of training. Features

Our Roots

The Story Uncle Arthur Got Wrong

By Doug Johnson

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is one of a continuing series of articles by Doug Johnson, pastor of the Blue Mountain Valley Church near Athena, Ore. In this series he explores the early beginings of the Adventist Church in the Northwest.

For those of us who have grown up as Seventh-day Adventist Christians, Uncle Arthur is a special person. He was the adult who took the time to write the exciting bedtime and Bible stories that provided us with hours of pleasure.

Who can forget the suspense in "Caught by the Tide" or the love in "The Stowaway" or the kindness in "Unlucky Jim"? These stories caught our imagination and molded our thinking as they are still doing for our children today.

But impossible as it may seem there is one story that our hero, Uncle Arthur, got wrong. Now it was not entirely his fault. He heard the story from another individual. Still the story as recorded in his book is not accurate.

I discovered the real story while doing research in some old Review and Heralds. As you will see the real story is more amazing than Uncle Arthur's version ("The Flooded River").

In 1894 the United States was in the midst of a terrible depression. On top of this the farmers of eastern Washington had also experienced a crop failure the year before. So times were real tough.

Camp Meeting

The Upper Columbia Conference Camp Meeting for that year was scheduled for May 30 through June 6 in College Place. The main speaker was a man who had been bapized in Walla Walla just 20 years earlier. About a year after his baptism he had been given a license to preach and had spent the next 10 years of his life establishing churches in the Northwest. Now he was coming back to his old stomping grounds. So despite the tough times, every member wanted to hear their very own A.T. Jones preach on righteousness by faith.

That winter there had been a heavy snowfall in the mountains which had caused the rivers to run higher than any of the Whites could remember. As a result bridges had been swept away and train tracks washed out.

In May the Adventists in the Palouse hills began traveling toward College Place for camp meeting. When the various groups arrived at the Snake River ferry they discovered that the water was too high for the ferry to run. The operator of the ferry considered the river to be unsafe.

No Ferry

Before long there were several Adventist groups gathered at the ferry landing. They realized that if the water did not subside they would miss camp meeting. So these believers knelt down and asked God to help them.

The ferryman was on the other side of the river from the Adventist groups. So there was no way for them to talk with him.

Soon several of the Adventist men noticed that there was a small boat on their side of the river. After some talking they convinced the owner of the boat, an Indian, to take one of them across the river so that he could talk with the ferry operator.

When they arrived on the other side the ferryman would not budge. He insisted that the river was unsafe. So the Indian began rowing the Adventist man back to his group. Part way across the river they looked up and saw that the ferry was passing them.

When the ferry operator arrived at the other side he said to the Adventist groups, "You need not thank me, but thank your God; for the water has fallen two feet since I talked to the man you sent over."

After the Adventists were safely across the river they again knelt down and prayed. They thanked God for solving their problem.

Getting People Involved

By Chad McComas

Being involved in church office and mission is vital to each member's spiritual health and growth! Church research and statistics document that member involvement is a must to keep new members in the church.

Challenge 1 = Lack of Opportunity

With a yearly election of officers many are left out if they move into the area just after the election or if they are not well known by the election committee. Besides, some church members believe that a new member should not be rushed into office, so by the time the new member is given responsibility, often he has lost his early spiritual zeal.

Challenge 2 = Lack of Skill

Even when the church wants to put new members into office it is faced with an unskilled person walking into a skilled job. The result can lead to frustration and sometimes loss of the member. There are some jobs that can be shared with new members, but they are often too few to deal with the challenge of getting people involved.

So how can the local church get more people involved?

I'd like to suggest three solutions to help get people involved in ministry and leadership in your church. In this and the next two columns I will deal with:

- 1. Leadership Coordinator
- 2. Leadership Apprentice Program
- 3. Year-round Personnel Committee
- 4. SEED Ministry (An every member ministry)

The Leadership Coordinator

One way to get new members involved in church office is to find out their:

- 1. Skill
- 2. Interest
- 3. Spiritual Gifts

The local church Leadership Coordinator office can interview and collect data on all members of the church. This data will be used in the election process to make sure that people are put to work on the basis of their ability and gifts. The collection process can involve a questionnaire and a spiritual gifts test. The results will be filed for church reference.

When a new member joins by transfer, baptism or profession of faith the Leadership Coordinator will get the necessary information and endeavor to match the person to positions in the church.

Of course, the Leadership Coordinator becomes an automatic member of the nominating committee to make sure that the committee takes advantage of the gathered information.

The Leadership Coordinator can also schedule training events for current leaders and potential leaders to teach them the skills they need to hold a certain office.

For example: The local church may need a Pathfinder Leader. There may be several people willing to help, but no one ready to lead. The hesitancy may be due to being unsure about what is expected. The Leadership Coordinator can invite skilled Pathfinder Leadership to come hold a training seminar on how to be a Pathfinder leader. The training will help those willing to move into leadership.

The potential and opportunities are unlimited. A good Leadership Coordinator can greatly strengthen the local church in building leaders and getting members involved.

Rockwood Youth to Raise Money for Russian Bibles

By Morten Juberg

The Earliteen Sabbath School class of the Portland Rockwood Church has begun a project to raise money to buy Bibles for Russian children.

Under the direction of their leader, Shirley Jordan, the boys and girls have a goal of $1,000 to purchase 200 Bibles as a part of Operation Bearhug.

"They had the option of raising $200 or $500 but they chose a goal of $1,000. We're really proud of them," Mrs. Jordan said.

The Earliteens will be selling food at an upcoming amateur hour, holding a car wash and soliciting funds from relatives, friends and church members.

Alf Birch, who is coordinating the program for the North Pacific Union, met with the group recently and commended them for their efforts.

"I'll be visiting Russia soon and I'll be telling them about your interest in them," he told the group.

Morten Juberg is editor of the GLEANER.

The Rockwood Earliteens are enthusiastic about their plans to buy Bibles.

KGTS Receives Gift For Night Broadcasts

Walla Walla College's radio station, KGTS, recently received a $4,000 gift toward "Project Overnight" from the Clara and Art Bald Trust. The Balds were a sister and brother who were farmers near Touchet, Wash

"Project Overnight" will equip KGTS for 24-hour automated broadcasting, specifically during the nighttime hours from 11 p.m-6 a.m.

Marky Bazzy, a senior mass communications major, wrote and submitted the proposal to the Bald Trust. She is currently working on a second $4,000 proposal for submission to the George T. Welch Testamentary Trust. If granted, these funds would also be used toward the completion of "Project Overnight."

Approximately $5,000 has already been spent to enable KGTS to receive nighttime broadcasting via satellite from the Skylight Network, based in St. Paul, Minn. When the project is completed KGTS will be able to broadcast to the Eastern Washington listening area with overnight broadcasting that uses station announcers to provide news and weather information and the station's own music selection.

Kevin Krueger, KGTS station manager, says that the completion of the project will give the station much more control over the nighttime programming.

"With this recent contribution from the Bald's trust," says Krueger, "KGTS has received a total of $19,000 of which $5,846 was used to buy the satellite set-up and equipment for monitoring the overnight programming."

Part of the funds raised to date are in an interest-earning account and have accrued $820 in interest. More than $5,000 is still needed to meet the $25,000 goal for completion of the project.

Art Professors Work Being Shown in Spain

Ken MacKintosh, professor of art at Walla Walla College, has been notified that three of his prints were accepted and exhibited in the Miniprint International Cadaques Tenth Anniversary show in Spain from July 1 through September 15, 1990.

The Catalan Government, in collaboration with the show's sponsor, Taller Galleria Fort, has agreed to organize a special traveling exhibition to all museums in Cataluna. Situated in the northeast of Spain bordering France, Cataluna is a significant artistic commercial and political center.

The traveling show concludes in September 1991 and is exhibiting the following MacKintosh prints: "VanGogh," woodcut (4 %cm by 4 %cm), "Freud," woodcut (5cm by 4½cm), and "Durer with Helmet," woodcut (710cm by 10 %cm).

The Culture Department of the Catalan Government will print the official color cataalog containing one print from each artist. MacKintosh's "VanGogh" was chosen for the catalog. (1990 was the 100th anniversary of the death of Vincent VanGogh.)

Drama Club Provides Outreach for Students

Stage left! Stage right! What was my line again? These are all concerns of the Livingstone Jr. Academy (Salem, Ore.) drama club, the Master's Crew.

Led by Marilyn Gantz, ninth grade homeroom and English teacher, the watchword is practice, practice, practice.

With 17 students involved, Mrs. Gantz, who has worked with drama students for four years, has her hands full. Helping students prepare and practice skits about Bible characters and moral stories keeps her busy one night after school each week.

The Master's Crew performs for churches and school programs seven to 10 times a year. They also plan two tours to senior academies and churches in the Oregon Conference. The tours are paid for by student's fund-raising projects.

Participating in the drama club takes personal effort and time but there are rewards gained that can be obtained no other way. According to Mrs. Gantz the first performance is a stomach knotting experience.

Complete Church in Mexico

By Dan Kittle

The challenge of missions became a reality for the ninth and 10th-grade students of the Kirkland, Wash., Adventist School as they departed from Sea-Tac Airport. Letter-writing, magazine sales, label applications, and personal solicitation of funds were now in the past and they were ready to "lav a block for God."

Deboarding the plane in Monterey, Mexico, that evening they were assailed by the sights, sounds, and smells of a different culture. Housed in a church member's home, the 23 students and 13 adults struggled to develop a management program that would allow each person in the group access to the single bathroom. One popular solution was the garden hose shower that developed into an evening ritual of screams and gasps as cold water hit warm bodies.

Ten days were spent mixing mud, hauling and laying block, building forms, wiring cages, pouring cement, sanding pews and sucking sodas as the group donated more than 3,500 man-hours toward the completion of the Adventist Church in Apodaca. Exposure to the life of the everyday mason was only one of the many learning experiences encountered by the members of the group. Other lessons were learned in biology (insects), Spanish (Where is the bathroom), and religion (We are members of the body of Christ).

Impacted by the time spent in Mexico, Carrie Carter wrote, "Right now I certainly thank God for letting me be here. The main thing I wanted to do in life was to make a difference in someone else's life and by building this church I feel like I'm succeeding."

Monroe Center Busy In Outreach Projects

The Monroe Community Services Center is a busy place. The six to eight workers never find a dull moment. There don't seem to be enough hours in the day for washing, drying and repairing clothing along with the sorting and packing.

The workers enjoy the 40' x 40' building with a complete upstairs where they can work on quilts in a well-lighted area. The main floor houses the display racks and shelves as well as the sewing machines, washer, dryer and sorting tables.

With the floods and the frigid cold in December, people in the community have been helpful in donating clothing, bedding and shoes.

Street people in Seattle have been given clothing to keep warm. This past year three of the ladies made 138 quilts, many of them given to needy families.

Also this past year 938 boxes of clothing, each weighing 40 pounds, have been shipped to the ADRA Center at Watsonville, Calif. The center also helped 7,335 people with 36,879 garments of clothing.

North Creek Members Have Unusual Outreach

The North Creek Christian Fellowship presented a living nativity drive as a part of their outreach to the community at Christmas.

Drivers were given a tape which began "Welcome to the living nativity drivethrough presented by the North Creek Christian Fellowship. Travel back with us to the Holy Land. Your first destination is Herod's Palace."

The tape told the story of the three wise men visiting King Herod and the car passes by Herod on his throne being fanned by a slave girl and guarded by a Roman soldier. Three wise men walk past the massive pillars of the palace and act out their part. The magi leave and Herod is in a rage when he hears the news of a Savior for the Jews.

Other tableaus present other aspects of the Christmas story concluding with an invitation to pet animals and to have a picture taken by the manger. The tape ends with a message from Pastor Karl Haffner inviting visitors to the church services.

In the four hours of the outreach, more than 1,800 people visited the program. Every car received a gift of a copy of Steps to Christ.

The success of the living nativity drivethrough goes beyond its outreach to the community. It was also a challenging and rewarding collective effort by the church family.

Though Struggling, Scappoose School Impacts Community

By Morten Juberg

Like many other small Adventist church schools, the survival of the Scappoose school is linked directly to the dedication of the church membership.

Because of dwindling finances, the school was closed for a couple of years. However, Pastor Kevin Wilfley didn't like the idea of an attractive plant sitting idle.

"Pastor Wilfley was largely instrumental in getting the school going again," says Anita Molstead, Conference associate superintendent of education. For this he was named "Education Pastor of the Year."

Debbie Dietrich, the head teacher, has a master's degree in reading from Pacific Union College and imparts the love of books to her students. Mrs. Molstead speaks highly of the reading and writing skills of the Scappoose students.

"I would put these students up against any public school students in their writing and reading abilities and comprehension," she

Working with Ms. Dietrich is Penny Smith, who also has a master's degree. She works half time teaching grades 4-6. There are 18 students in the school.

The school benefits from the volunteer help of Rita Barrett, one of the Scappoose Church members. Twice a week she comes in for curriculum enrichment, teaching the students Spanish.

On those days the school doubles its enrollment as home school students from the community join the church school pupils. Parents who accompany their children have the opportunity to watch the school in action.

After the Spanish class, the school gym is opened up to the home schoolers for recreation.

"We regard the Spanish class as an outreach for our school," Ms. Dietrich says. "We want the people to know we are here and that they can use our facilities." The result has been that three non-member families send their children to the school.

The pupils visit area nursing homes as a part of their outreach activities. Also, students in the Spanish class have put together a Christian program.

"We visit area churches on Sunday and the children sing and tell how they are learning Spanish to reach out to Spanishspeaking residents," the teacher added.

Twice a week Scappoose member Rita Barrett volunteers her time to teach Spanish. The school doubles in size as area home schoolers come in for the curriculum enrichment classes.

As can be seen the education process isn't limited to the classroom. The students take a number of field trips during the year, including a visit to the Oregon Symphony in Portland.

Mrs. Molstead says the small schools like Scappoose are always dealing with financial problems.

"As an example, the Scappoose School was $6,000 behind in their commitments to the conference," she states. "But they met and faced the problem. They are meeting their budget and are whittling away on the deficit."

"This is a wonderful example of what church members can do to keep their children in a church school," she concludes.

Penny Smith, a half-time teacher, works with the upper grade students.

Head teacher Debbie Dietrich joins her younger students in a reading class.

Juneau Members Help Feed the City Hungry

Juneau Adventists were recently featured on the front page of the Capital City Weekly for giving a helping hand to the hungry in the state capital.

"Falling through the cracks of society is easy when you are hungry and you don't know where to turn for help," wrote reporter Louise Crites. She went on to tell where help could be found, at JACS (Juneau Adventist Community Services).

"JACS has the largest supply of emergency food in Juneau," says JACS spokesperson Diane Bigness, "but only because we have actively pursued it."

The center receives much food from Juneau grocers in the way of milk, bread and tinned goods. Perishable items are picked up three times a week. This is distributed on a one-time basis to tide people over for several weeks while assistance arrives from other channels.

"We also provide them a checklist of community services designed to assure that they don't find themselves in a second bind by the time food runs out," says Joan Merrill, director. Community services workers also provide assistance in applying for these programs. Often recipients have never heard of the social programs which could have averted their problems in the first place.

The Tlingit and Haida Central Council as well as the City Health and Social Services Department refer people to JACS on a regular basis.

JACS has fed 300 hungry families in the capital city since it began in January of last year and helped nearly 4,000 individuals. These figures represent hundreds of hours of volunteer labor on the part of Juneau members in soliciting food and answering calls.

A five-room, 1,100 square-foot center is now under construction, most of which will be used to store donated items. Currently JACS food is scattered around the city in the pantries and freezers of church members, making the assembly of a food package a time-consuming operation.

Verne Snow began meetings in February which are scheduled to run through March 9 at the Northside Church in Anchorage. Assisting him are Jim and Roberta Osborne.

Eldon Walter began meetings in Juneau in February assisted by Mike and Barb Preas. They will continue through March.

Emelio Gomez, North Pacific Union Native evangelist, spent January and February in Alaska with his family conducting revival meetings in Togiak, Aleknagik, Kotzebue, and Nome. In Togiak and Aleknagik, Gomez was assisted by Rollin and Kathleen Hixson. In Kotzebue he worked with Roger and Diane Merrill and with Len and Barb Tatom in Nome.

Don and April Barnt are spending four months in southeast Alaska holding meetings at Petersburg, Wrangell and Safe Harbor. Mark and Deanna Dekle are working with the Barnts in Petersburg and Wrangell. Bob and Beth Elliott will assist them in Safe Harbor.

St. Maries Members Read the Scriptures

1990 was a milestone for some in the St. Maries congregation who accepted the pastor's challenge. Pastor Mark Pekar challenged each church member from the oldest to the youngest to read their Bible through during the year. It was rewarding as well as interesting to see when and where one could fit it into one's day. It was neat to see how nicely it could fit into "spare time" slots all through the day.

Comments like, "I finally got past all the laws in Leviticus," and, "This is the first time I have ever attempted reading the Bible through," were heard during the sharing time in church.

Pastor Pekar offered a book entitled Precious Bible Promises to all who finished. The first to finish was Loretta Morris, the oldest active member, at 79. She read eight to 10 chapters a day finishing in August. She commented, "I never liked to read! But years ago, even before I was baptized, I had read the Bible through probably three times—not because I wanted to or liked to, but because I was challenged to. This time I did it because I wanted to. I enjoyed reading the Psalms and I tried to get interested in all those kings. The New Testament was my favorite. I like it the best."

Pastor Mark Pekar handing out the book Precious Bible Promises to the nine members who read their Bible through in one year.

The youngest reader, Kara Wetterlin, at age 10, also finished before many of the rest of the membership. When asked why she read her Bible through she answered, "To find some verses to make me feel better." She found her special comfort in Psalm 34:4-5. "These help me like during a thunderstorm when I'm scared." And, like many girls, her favorite book was Esther.

Feel the Pulse!

Can God really love me? What makes campers at Camp MiVoden feel free to ask questions like this? Gordon Pifher, Camp Director, speaks about feeling the heartbeat of Camp MiVoden's staff.

"You don't find the pulse of Camp MiVoden at 3:30 on the waterfront. There are fun events, but not the pulse. Neither will you find it at 5:30 in the cafeteria. That's necessary but not the pulse. Is it found at 9:15 during the campfire program? No, that's inspirational but not the pulse. The real pulse of MiVoden can best be found at 7:15 a.m. during staff worship. There excited staff exclaim, "Tim prayed for the first time last night!" or, "Julie said that she really thinks God is fun now. She's really making friends and happy." Then you see the staff holding hands and praying together for the kids that the Lord has sent there that week. Maybe that is where the pulse of MiVoden can best be felt."

Give your child or teen a chance to be touched by the pulse of MiVoden. To make your child or family a part of the MiVoden Miracle, write or call Camp MiVoden.

Thursday, March 21, 6:30 p.m.

Walla Walla General Hospital will offer infant CPR training, a one-night class in infant and child CPR and blocked airway. Emphasis is placed on injury prevention and safety.

Due to limited space, registration is recommended for all seminars. For more information or to register, call Ask-A-Nurse at (509) 522-2424 or 1-800-525-0480, ext. 506.

Portland Adventist Offers Sleep Disorders Services

By Michael McDonald, M.D.

One third of all U.S. adults complain about their sleep. For most it may be only a minor irritant. But for millions of others, sleep problems present a daily burden that can cripple lives, end marriages, disrupt careers and even lead to death.

The investigation of sleep disorders is an important field of study; unfortunately, research in this area is only in its infancy. The pulmonary medicine department at Portland Adventist Medical Center has recognized this need and consequently started offering sleep disorders services.

Sleep disorders range from an irresistible urge to sleep, an affliction called narcolepsy, to insomnia, the inability to achieve adequate or restful sleep. Other problems include:

- "Restless leg syndrome," the jerking and twitching of the lower limbs during sleep
- Snoring, which may be habitual for almost half of all adults
- Sleep apnea, a breathing disorder that may lead to death.

The sleep disorders lab can test for all these disorders, but their specialty is sleep apnea.

"Eighty percent of all tests are done to identify sleep apnea," says Terry Boyd, assistant director of pulmonary medicine. Sleep apnea usually occurs during what is commonly known as rapid eye movement (REM) sleep, which is the deepest level of sleep. During this sleep, most of the body muscles relax, including those in the throat. In the case of sleep apnea, soft tissue no longer supported by the throat muscles relaxes and obstructs the airway. In minor cases, this merely causes snoring.

If more significant blockage occurs, the body does not get enough oxygen and the person will suddenly jump back into a light sleep and take a breath. They then slowly subside back into a deeper sleep.

"This uneven cycle of light and deep sleep can occur 300 to 400 times a night," explains Boyd. "As a result, the person does not get enough deep sleep during the night. They do not feel rested when they wake up in the morning."

Once diagnosed, a person suffering from a sleep disorder can be helped by use of continuous positive airway pressure (CPAP). With CPAP, the person wears a mask which provides pressure to help keep the throat open. Oxygen may also be provided CPAP.

After only three months of operation, sleep disorders services at Portland Adventist is expanding to include a second observation room.

"We are pleased to see the schedule for the first room quickly exceed capacity," says Gary Haynes, director of pulmonary medicine. "Our volume has doubled the projected levels."

In addition, the hospital has recently acquired a computer assisted sleep system which assists in evaluating the sleep study results. Another piece of equipment recently added to the sleep lab is a Poly-G a portable model of the same equipment used in the sleep lab.

"The Poly-G allows us to go into a patient's home, if necessary, and do sleep studies. We can also do testing in other areas of the hospital, such as a patient room or the nursery, if need be," says Haynes. "Our sleep disorders program is a valuable tool to better define the problem at a lower cost, because it allows the physician to treat the problem, instead of the systems."

Michael McDonald, M.D., is medical director of the sleep disorders program.

DRUGS ALCOHOL TOBACCO

They want to take you to exotic places.

May we recommend a different travel agent?

Drugs, alcohol, and tobacco promise to take the people you care about on some great trips. To luxury. Escape. Adventure.

But the real destination is more likely to be an emergency room or even a quiet place called something like Eternal Heavenly Gardens of Memory.

Maybe for the next year, you could offer the services of a far better travel agent: LISTEN magazine. It blows the lid off the false advertising of the drug, alcohol, and tobacco agents.

Just think. You can sponsor a gift subscription of LISTEN to a young person or other friend you care about for only US$10.95/Cdn$17.45.

It isn't often that an opportunity comes along to give a gift that can literally make the difference between life and death. This one can.

GIFT SUBSCRIPTION

Order Form

☐ Please send a twelve-month gift subscription of LISTEN to each of the people listed below. I have enclosed US$10.95/Cdn$17.45 for each gift.

Order from your Adventist Book Center or ABC Mailing Service, P.O. Box 7000, Boise, Idaho 83707. Or, call toll-free 1-800-447-7377 with credit card orders.

Please attach a separate sheet of paper with additional names.
