Letters

KGTS ... the Rest of the Story

In January you featured a story about Walla Walla University's KGTS, now a half-century old. I sensed the writers (Loree and Kevin Waite) did an especially good job of marshaling five decades of facts and memories. What some of us forgot to tell them was crucial. The people who really started the station with abundant vision were people like Bob Brown, then vice president for student administration, and Glenn Masden, professor of engineering. Brown, a physicist, had the vision for a college FM [station]. He took that vision and uncovered a low-power transmitter in a U.S. naval surplus yard in Virginia. Masden had the engineering smarts to understand the fragile transmitter. Often it was he who virtually at any time of day or night rushed to the studios to tweak and cajole the errant machine back to its assigned frequency. There would not have been a KGTS without these two unsung heroes. Finally, with an unusual streak of good fortune, KGTS has had just four managers in 50 years. The most recent are Dave Bullock and Kevin Krueger. Clarence Wood, a communications professor, was interim manager in the mid-60s. Thank you for featuring the story.

Loren Dickinson, WWU professor emeritus, Colleje Place, Wash.

Embarrassed by the Ad

The back covers of the February and March issues were an embarrassment to all members. The heading, "Can you love him/her as Jesus would?" is such an insult to our gay members and to all members. Of course I love her/him, as I would any of my friends, cousins, brother, sister, mother, father, son, daughter — why would I care/love any differently? I cannot figure out why we are spending church financial resources and time on a no-brainer subject. People are people and deserve the same respect, and care and love. I'm really disappointed in my church, if this negativity is truly the policy.

Mary Kathryn Myers, Kent, Wash.

The GLEANER responds:

We are glad, Mary, that you would give the benefit of the doubt to any child of God. We should do the same for the sponsors of the April 5-6 Gays in the Family event mentioned in the ad. This was an educational seminar to help members see all people, regardless of identity, as fellow children of God, worthy of His love and our love. Many members have struggled to practically apply the church's biblical stance on homosexuality with the rapid changes in societal norms. The event website, gaysinthefamily.com, sponsored by the North Pacific Union Conference (NPUC) family life department, deals with this more thoroughly and contains archived presentations from the event so anyone can ponder these issues for themselves.

NPUC Stumbles With Ordination Inaction

Sadly, NPUC leadership has once again sacrificed its women pastors for the sake of organizational dysfunction. If NPUC is not willing to implement the principles of ordination without regard to gender that it says it holds, is NPUC willing to apply without regard to gender its decision not to extend ordination?

Brent Stanyer, Spokane, Wash.

Spectators or Participants

Suppose God came to you and me one day and said, “I have a task for each of you. It will require everything you have. Are you willing?”

How would we respond? The truth is, it’s not just a theoretical question. God has given our church a task, and each of us, you and me included, have a challenge before us. Our everyday choices will lead us to become either spectators or participants in the mission of our church.

The North Pacific Union Conference mission statement begins by saying, “The Seventh-day Adventist Church in the North Pacific Union Conference will prepare people for the imminent return of Jesus Christ . . .” This is our mission — to preach the everlasting gospel in the context of the Three Angels’ Messages.

Historically, our church has followed that mission through thick and thin, through prosperity and poverty, and always with the strictest focus on careful and prayerful stewardship. Ellen White reminded us, “The good news of saving grace is to be carried to every place; the warning must be given to the world, but economy must be practiced if we move in the spirit of which Christ has given us an example in His life-service” (The Upward Look, p. 319).

Currently our church’s mission is moving forward in spite of the ripple effects of the recent years of economic uncertainty. More church members than ever are on fixed retirement incomes or have experienced lower investment income or even unemployment.

Yet I am constantly humbled when I see how many, in spite of personal challenges, are still making faithful stewardship a top priority.

It makes me doubly careful as I think about how we should focus our highest priorities as a church movement here in the Northwest. If there was ever a time to clearly put our best resources of time and money toward those efforts closest to the core of our mission, now is the time. It means we look closer at every dollar and how it translates to reaching people for Jesus. It means a commitment in our North Pacific Union Conference (NPUC) office to direct more and more resources to the front lines of ministry through local conferences and churches.

It doesn’t mean we lower our vision for what God wants to accomplish in our midst. No, indeed. Our conference evangelism coordinators met recently and decided to raise our vision, to set a target of 3,000 accessions to the church in 2013. To support this faith-stretching focus, the NPUC will continue to downsize its own office needs in order to provide evangelistic subsidies to the local field 30 percent greater than they were in 2009.

But money, by itself, will not reach the target. It comes back to the choices you and I will make — whether we’ll be spectators or participants, whether we invite someone to church or an evangelistic meeting, share a Discover Bible School enrollment card, distribute Steps to Christ or The Great Hope missionary books. In light of this month’s feature, perhaps connecting a friend or neighbor with an Adventist broadcast ministry like Better Life Television will be the key. Make friends in your community. Volunteer at a homeless shelter or get involved in prison ministry. Take a leadership role in disaster preparedness or support a literacy project.

When it comes right down to it, our church’s mission won’t be accomplished until you and I are ready to answer the question, “Lord, what would you have me to do?”

“Lord, what would you have me to do?”

NORTH PACIFIC UNION CONFERENCE PRESIDENT

Making Friends for the Kingdom

BETTER LIFE BROADCASTING NETWORK

Imagine what you would have thought if back in 1993 someone told you that in just two decades more than 80 percent of the population of Oregon would be able to view Seventh-day Adventist programming 24 hours a day, seven days a week — in their own homes. It would have seemed a pipe dream. But a progressive series of miracles have made that dream a reality through Better Life Broadcasting Network, based in Grants Pass, Oregon.

And the dream and the miracles continue to grow. Better Life is also broadcasting into a portion of Washington State, with big plans to tremendously expand its reach into California soon.

But the miracles aren't really about technicalities and broadcast towers. Look beyond the cables, transmitters, cameras, computers, lights and studios, and you'll find people — volunteers and visionaries whose time and talents are invested in something with eternal consequences.

These committed folks have seen a dream become reality beyond their wildest imaginations, for there's another group of people even closer to the core of this ministry's mission. You'll find them in local Adventist churches throughout the Better Life broadcast area. Each one at some point has walked through church doors on a Sabbath morning because the television ministry had first made them a friend.

Dan McCulloch, recently retired as senior pastor in Medford, Oregon, says the impact of this outreach is incomparable with anything he's ever experienced before. In recent years, he says, "Better Life has played a part in virtually all the adult baptisms at the Medford

Church. People will watch two, three or four evangelistic series on Better Life, and then when they walk in the door of [the] church they are already philosophically Seventh-day Adventists.”

Marvin Clark, who served for 15 years as the Grants Pass Church senior pastor, agrees. “Better Life is our number one source of new church members. We get more new members from the television ministry than we do from public evangelism, family member contact or anything else.”

In just these two churches alone, more than 400 enthusiastic new members have been added due to the 24/7 influence of the Better Life ministry, currently the largest affiliate for Three Angels Broadcasting Network (3ABN).

This amazing growth didn’t all happen at once. It began as a mustard seed, a persistent dream of southern Oregon businessman Delmer Wagner and his prayer-warrior wife, Evelyn.

In the late 1980s, Delmer’s globetrotting business left him with little spare time. But he had discovered the impact of satellite television and felt it was the ideal way to reach the world. So he and Evelyn wrote letters to every Adventist college, university, hospital and conference in North America, stressing the importance of establishing church-operated stations in every community. The response was underwhelming.

So, with little widespread encouragement, Delmer began his plans closer to home. He applied for licenses to build two television stations, one for Grants Pass and another for Rogue River, Oregon. Pastor Bob Heisler added his energies as the president of the fledgling Better Life Television nonprofit corporation. They began collecting money and gathering a cadre of valuable volunteers.

This small but mighty volunteer army was on hand with trucks and shovels, ropes and boots, to help get those first two stations on the air in 1990.

Studio and office space was found at the Grants Pass Junior Academy. David and Ann Reed added their talents as station managers. The mustard seed had sprouted.

And the sprout grew. Delmer and Bob visited Merlin Fjarli, a Medford layman. Merlin encouraged them to continue expanding by setting up a third station in neighboring Medford as well. “Order the equipment,” he said. “The Lord will provide the funds.” And so they did ... and He did. And shortly afterward, the Medford transmitter began broadcasting.

More than 400 people have become members after watching Better Life.

The most exciting advancements may still lie ahead.

Dennis Kamberg, Better Life production manager, oversees the technical side of putting local programs together during and after recording.

That mustard seed continued to grow. From its small quarters at the junior academy, Better Life was able to transition into spacious studio and office space on the campus of the Grants Pass Church, through the combined efforts of Maranatha and other volunteers.

Over time, more and more stations have been added, along with cable systems and satellite outlets. Douglas Garcia, Better Life creative director, estimates that Oregon may be the only place in the United States where the state population is so well covered by the Adventist message, including nearly every city along the state's Interstate 5 corridor.

But some of the most exciting advancements for the ministry may still lay ahead. Soon new stations in Santa Rosa and San Francisco, California, are expected to go online, boosting Better Life's coverage from 5 million up to an astonishing 24 million people.

Chare Gallimore, Better Life marketing and development director, says the anticipated growth will bring a new challenge — that of funding. The proposed expansion to San Francisco will potentially double the current annual budget to $2 million.

It won't be the first time that faith has been stretched. Several years ago, when the opportunity to buy a station in Roseburg, Oregon, came along, a series of "impossible" events occurred that made another miracle possible. Read the whole story in the accompanying article, "God Must Love a Bargain."

Ron and Marta Davis are two of Better Life's success stories. Today they are baptized members of the Seventh-day Adventist Church because of this ministry's influence. And now they are paying that blessing forward as they oversee the entire operation to thousands of new viewers.

Ron, who ran his own software company for years, has learned to depend on something far greater than business acumen. "Better Life is counterintuitive to what I would have thought from my previous experience," he says with a smile. "We don't beat the bushes for opportunities; they come to us. Here God gives the directive, and you step out and go." The economy has been up, and it's been down. But in the midst of it all, Better Life continues to spread the gospel to a growing audience.

Nearly every church within the Better Life broadcast area has experienced new conversions because of the television ministry. Here is just a sample of some who have joined the Grants Pass Church through a connection with Better Life.

Ron also points to inspiration from Ellen White, who once penned words that continue to direct the vision for Better Life. In Life Sketches, chapter 34, she refers to the message going to all parts of the world, specifically emphasizing Oregon and California. And then she encourages, "Go forward. God will work with great power if you will walk in all humility of mind before Him. It is not faith to talk of impossibilities. Nothing is impossible with God" (pp. 208, 209).

While Better Life has taken seriously the challenge to reach Oregon and northern California through television, another opportunity has presented itself — a license for a full-power AM radio station in Grants Pass. This new station is expected to cover 45,000 square miles, reaching from Grants Pass north to Roseburg, south to Yreka, California, west to Brookings on the Oregon coast and east to Klamath Falls, Oregon.

Beyond the traditional broadcast realm, Better Life is reaching out to the world through YouTube and online streaming. In fact, if the total amount of estimated minutes people spend watching Better Life via YouTube during a 30-day period were added up, they would be equivalent to someone watching Better Life continuously night and day for three months.

Delmer Wagner, Bob Heisler and others who were around from the beginning smile now at the recollection of all the hard work, the long hikes up rugged mountains and the perilous work on icy towers. They see clearly how heaven's blessings have enabled those long hours to bear a bumper crop of good fruit, as viewer after viewer has embraced the Adventist message.

The staff and volunteers at Better Life Television wouldn't want it any other way. And neither would those who continue to step inside an Adventist church for the very first time — all because of a tiny mustard seed of faith and an Adventist television ministry that says 24 hours a day, seven days a week, "Let's be friends."

God Must Love a Bargain

Ron Davis

It was 3 a.m., and Ron Davis, manager of Better Life, had been seeking God's will for the television ministry and had not slept all night. As he continued in prayer he was strongly impressed by God with the directive to "go ye into all of Oregon and further into California, reaching as many as you can as quick as you can with the saving message of Jesus Christ." Little did he know what power lay behind that command.

Soon after this Ron learned of a pair of TV stations for sale that were in Roseburg and Eugene, Oregon. The full-power Roseburg channel would not only broadcast over the air but by law would also have to be carried on Dish Network, DirecTV and basic cable in Benton, Coos, Douglas and Lane counties. The stations would have a great reach, but the asking price was a whopping $4 million.

Better Life had no funds to take on such a large endeavor. However, seeing the impact of television in southern Oregon, coupled with God's command to go forward, compelled them to proceed. After consultation with the board and much prayer, Better Life stepped out in faith and made an offer of $2.7 million.

Amazingly, the seller accepted, and Better Life began in earnest to raise the funds. Over time they received donations and commitments totaling about $1.3 million. Then, right in the middle of fundraising, the unthinkable happened — the seller sold the station to another buyer.

In unbelief and disappointment, Better Life returned the funds and released those who had made commitments. However, prayer continued in the belief that this station was meant for God's work and that God could somehow bring it back.

Then in September 2008, the seller contacted Better Life saying, "The buyer has withdrawn his offer. Are you still interested?" Needless to say, they were ecstatic at this providential turn of events. God had answered their prayers. After more prayers and meetings, they decided to offer only $1.9 million for the station. The seller reluctantly accepted.

Again, fundraising began in an attempt to meet a looming deadline, but the economic downturn had taken its toll and money was tight. Then suddenly and unexpectedly the seller filed bankruptcy. They were stunned and wondered, "Now what do we do, Lord?"

Better Life was informed they would now be negotiating with the bankruptcy court. Negotiations began, and finally a purchase price of $975,000 was agreed upon. They could see God's fingerprints all over these amazing events.

With only one day left, two church members offered loans totaling $200,000. Better Life asked their attorney to make an offer of $900,000. The attorney felt sure it would be rejected but went ahead. The offer was accepted.

Finally, three years later, in July 2009, they purchased the stations for less than a quarter of the original asking price. Today, God is using KTVC and KAMK to broadcast the transforming truth of God's word to more than half a million potential viewers, with many visiting and joining area churches.

Time is short, but there is still much work to do. Reaching people through mass media is imperative as God continues to open doors and windows of opportunity. Better Life's outreach is like placing an evangelist in every home, providing an amazing opportunity to reach the lost and dying in these last days.

No Hay Nada Imposible Para Dios

Mis amigos me llaman Leo, pero mi nombre es Rosalío Díaz. Llegué de México a éste país a la edad de 13 años, vivía en casa de mi hermano mayor, quien llego a ser un ejemplo a seguir en ausencia de mi padre. Él quería que yo estudiara, así que ingresé a la high school, pero sólo por siete meses, pues de un momento a otro dejé de interesarme en los estudios. En vez de ir a la escuela, me escapaba con mis amigos a jugar soccer, hasta que un día mi hermano me dijo, si no estudias, tendrás que trabajar. Así que me conseguí trabajo en un taller de carpintería en el cual trabajo hasta el día de hoy. Allí aprendí a fabricar todo tipo de muebles.

Mi estilo de vida cotidiano era ir a trabajar y los fines de semana salía con mis amigos a divertirme a la discoteca, en bailes y fiestas. Conocía algo de Dios, pero no tenía un conocimiento amplio ni mucho menos una vida espiritual constante.

Así viví hasta la edad de 32 años cuando conocí a Xiomara, quien ahora es mi esposa. Me impactó como ella hablaba de un Dios vivo, quien para mí ya había muerto. En varias ocasiones me invitó a ir al grupo pequeño que tenían los viernes con amigos y familia para cantar y estudiar la Biblia. Todo eso era nuevo para mí así que inventaba alguna excusa para no ir, pero a tanta insistencia, al poco tiempo visite la iglesia.

Me sentía fuera de lugar. Mi forma de vestir era muy diferente, sentía que no era parte del grupo. El tipo de música que yo escuchaba no era la misma, así que no quise aceptar ningún cambio en mi vida. Después de dos años, la hermana mayor de Xiomara me preguntó si me gustaría estudiar la Biblia, y sin pensarlo le dije que sí.

Estudiábamos la Biblia una vez por semana, y al conocer más de Dios y del sacrificio tan grande que hizo por mí, empecé a sentir mucha necesidad de saber más y más de Dios, poco tiempo después decidí bautizarme. Hoy puedo decir que es la experiencia más grande y maravillosa que pueda existir para un ser humano. Sin saberlo, Dios me estaba preparando y se estaba anticipando a mis necesidades, pues en esos días mi padre enfermó gravemente y falleció. En esos momentos de tanto dolor, sentí que Dios llenaba mi corazón de paz, algo que nunca antes había experimentado.

Al conocer a Dios gané una hermosa familia espiritual. Mi esposa y yo estamos muy agradecidos a Dios porque nos concede el privilegio de ser padres. Ahora comprendo el amor que Dios tiene para mí como su hijo.

También estamos muy agradecidos a Dios por nuestro amigo y pastor, Oswaldo Villalobos, porque ha estado a nuestro lado animándonos y orando con nosotros en momentos difíciles en nuestra vida, y porque podemos contar con él en todo momento, especialmente cuando el enemigo ha querido literalmente destruirnos. Ahora comprendo y entiendo que el mismo Dios ha estado a mi lado para fortalecerme y enseñarme grandes lecciones de fe.

Aunque mi pasado haya sido turbio, Dios siempre me ayudará a vencer cualquier obstáculo y tentación que pueda tener, y me confirma aún más cómo se interesa por mí. Ahora veo mi pasado, y me doy cuenta cuán vacía era mi vida sin Dios. También puedo decir que hoy mi vida es completa, gracias a la misericordia que Dios tiene conmigo día con día. Mi deseo es seguir creciendo espiritualmente para honrar y servir a Dios en todo lo que haga.

Anímo a todo joven que dedique tiempo cada día para alimentarse de la palabra de Dios. Solo Él es el único que puede sacarnos del fango en el cual nos encontramos. Si acudes a Dios pidiendo ayuda, yo sé que Él te ayudará, pues lo hizo conmigo.

Empowered Elders Meet for Summit

The Seventh-day Adventist churches in Alaska have, in many cases, been led by a team of elders or a single elder. We believe the biblical model of multiple elders, who move together in agreement and harmony, provides a great recipe for a healthy church.

About 60 elders met Jan. 4–6 to pray and discuss topics about shepherding and servanthood to the church through:

- General oversight of the church;
- Teaching the church;
- Protecting the church;
- Praying for the church;
- Equipping the church;
- Modeling godliness to the church.

Ken Crawford, Alaska Conference president, broke the ice in the mentoring process as he shared the “Four Essential

Dozens of Alaska’s church elders gather for a church leadership training workshop.

Ingredients of Church Leadership” on Friday evening, Jan. 4. He emphasized the term elder — “presbuteros” or “episkopos” in the Greek New Testament — and how elders have a number of biblical functions and expectations based on 1 Tim. 4–5 and its definition of an elder. He further pointed out the critical functions and serious responsibilities that can sometimes overwhelm a non-balanced church leader.

Several modules simultaneously met with clusters of elders, where facilitators guided discussions on spiritual leadership and organizations, shepherding of congregations, and church planning. Pastors of the conference also participated in the training pool.

The Alaska Conference ministerial department invited Doug Tilstra, Andrews University School of Religion outdoor leadership and education programs director, to provide instruction on leadership and nonprofit organizations. Carl Cosaert, Walla Walla University biblical studies professor, presented his thesis on Philippians and facilitated small-group discussions on church planning.

“The emphasis on servant leadership in Philippians 2 was extremely valuable for me,” says Harry Banks of Wasilla. “I hope we can have these meetings on a yearly basis.”

Church leadership training is another serious step forward in equipping local Adventist church leadership in Alaska, where the church is blessed with its leaders.

Remote Sabbath School Blesses Many in Alaska

Members in outlying towns who find it impossible to get to Sabbath School can participate in a remote class via telephone each Sabbath morning.

How would you operate a Sabbath School when 80 percent of your towns and villages are only accessible by air or boat in the summer?

How would you operate a Sabbath School when many church members live in these remote areas and have little contact with other Adventists?

How would you operate a Sabbath School when those members have slow and unstable Internet access and rarely get to see the church in operation?

Alaska is unique in this area, so under the original vision of Thearon Staddon, a remote Sabbath School class was developed. Members from around Alaska and even from some remote areas in the rest of the country call an 800 number and spend an hour in an interactive, audio Sabbath School class. Every Sabbath morning at 9:30 a.m. Alaska time (10:30 a.m. Pacific time), people dial the number (800-920-7487) and enter the access code (53383143#), then the warm, cheery voices of facilitators Paul Kildal from Glennallen and Richard Dennis from Red Eagle Lodge in Chis-tochina welcome them to Sabbath School and a lively, stimulating discussion of the week’s lesson.

Furne Retires After 41 Years of Service

The Nampa Church celebrated with Ervin Furne his retirement after 12 years as the Nampa pastor and 41 years of service overall. It was the happiest and the saddest of times as the Nampa congregation, many visitors and past members gathered Jan. 19 for a Sabbath full of activities, despite near-zero temperatures.

Church services began early at 10:30 with Furne and his wife, Sue, being treated to a children's program. Each Sabbath School department had a chance to sing and recite Bible verses or play a game.

Columbus Candies, head elder, welcomed everyone and introduced David Prest Jr., Idaho Conference president, and Don Klinger, Idaho Conference secretary, who both gave words of appreciation, after which they joined the local elders in a dedicatory prayer for the Furnes.

Then it was Furne's turn. The congregation had anticipated his thoughts after word leaked that he was going to tell all he had learned in 41 years of ministry. It was a pleasant surprise when Furne encapsulated all that learning into one short sentence: "Jesus loves me, this I know, for the Bible tells me so." He then exhorted the members to continue in agape love and living by the words of Col. 3:12-17. Lastly, he gave an encouraging note by saying this congregation would continue to do well because it has so much love.

The service ended with an ovation of appreciation and was followed by an Italian dinner (Furne's favorite) in the fellowship hall.

After the dinner, the congregation returned to the sanctuary for an afternoon of celebration and praise, including congregational singing, special musical numbers and music by the church choir. A slide presentation covered Furne's time pastoring in Nampa, and members read Num. 6:24-26 in the eight languages represented in the congregation.

Gift presentations were interspersed into the afternoon program. Mementos of appreciation included a fishing hat, a large quilt from community services, and a memory book with special messages from the church family. The entire membership contributed to one grand gift, a Gaither cruise to the Caribbean for the Furnes — something they had on their "bucket list."

Prayer Conference Shares Solution for Unquenchable Thirst

Montana Conference welcomed Ginny Allen as their prayer conference speaker Feb. 1-2 on the theme “Unquenchable Thirst.” The multitude of personal stories Allen shared made every sermon highlight a principle to embrace. She challenged everyone to get serious about what they listened to and read and to be serious about spending time in God’s presence.

The Sabbath appeal encouraged young and old to come forward in complete commitment. It quenched their thirst and directed their life search in the right direction — straight for the open arms of Jesus. The attendees can say, “We will pray, Ginny Allen; memorize Scripture, Corleen Johnson; create small groups in our homes and churches, Dea Hustwaite; and remember Jesus loves us the way we are now, Kimberly Paulien.”

Participants prayed together, coming to God with their most life-changing prayer requests. They celebrated an agape feast, listening for God’s voice and developing

Donna Wagner, Montana Conference prayer ministries coordinator, planned the well-organized, Holy Spirit-filled prayer conference, which emphasized that you are encouraged to turn a distraction into prayer, ask God how much time He needs with you and satisfy your unquenchable thirst at

Tabernacle Church Pastor Retires

After serving the Tabernacle Church in the center of the Portland metro area for more than 12 years, Henry Zollbrecht retired from full-time ministry at the end of February. March 2 saw a packed church for his last sermon. The service included three baptisms, one profession of faith, a baby dedication and a special song service featuring Zollbrecht's favorite songs.

After the service, Henry and his wife, Mary Jane, greeted each person in the lobby, as was their tradition each week. Then they headed downstairs for a special fellowship potluck.

The day was just beginning,

Henry Zollbrecht tells the children's story.

as their retirement party and dinner was coming up at 6:30 p.m. in the fellowship hall. The evening proceeded with dinner and a dessert potluck followed by a talent program. Members provided original written tributes, vocal songs, children's choir music, instrumentals, family groups and a video presentation of Zollbrecht's years of service.

The Zollbrechts took home a scrapbook and are looking forward to heading to Norway this summer as a gift from the congregation.

Henry Zollbrecht's ministry included many visits to members and shut-ins and inviting new people to lunch almost every week. He visited Rivergate Adventist Elementary and gave kids Bible studies. Following his wife's recovery from breast cancer, he attended and supported a group for pastors whose wives faced serious health issues. He was also actively involved with worship services at Portland Adventist Community Services (PACS).

Each Christmas, Zollbrecht would come to church in his tuxedo and red bow tie to sing in the choir and deliver special Christmas stories to a congregation that anticipated this annual Sabbath worship time.

Mary Jane put the children's choir together and has led the kindergarten Sabbath School for years. She is retiring in May from the Oregon Conference, where she works as the membership clerk and junior accountant for the trust department.

Young and old, married and single, all found a special place at Tabernacle Church during the Zollbrechts' tenure. Now the congregation hopes and prays the Zollbrechts will embrace and enjoy their well-deserved retirement with long walks, wonderful trips and time with their grandchildren.

PAA's School Paper Makes Comeback

After 20 Years

Staff members of The Résumé include (from left) Haley Howard, editor-in-chief; Mindy Robinson, news writer and advice columnist; and Tali Paez, news writer.

After a 20-year absence, PAA's school paper, The Résumé, made a modern comeback online, while building community and growing skills.

For the last 20 years, students in PAA's publications class focused all their energy on Revista, the school's annual yearbook, and The Glimpse, a staff and student directory. But their teacher, Stephen Lundquist, saw they were ready for more challenges.

"They are used to working with deadlines," says Lundquist, "and the skill sets of creating a yearbook and school paper publishing are very similar."

Yearbook deadlines also come in waves that offer free time. The final deadline comes months before school ends. Lundquist saw the chance to resurrect the The Résumé.

Adding to the motives to bring back The Résumé was modern technology not available 20 years ago. Haley Howard, The Résumé editor-in-chief, says the online version allows for quicker updated news. "We [can also] have color photos, videos and online polls," she said in her introduction of The Résumé. "And it's more environmentally friendly and less costly than a paper newspaper."

Howard says her ultimate goal was to create "a place where students, faculty and parents alike can be informed and express their opinions."

The evidence is in. The student body participates in contests, they submit art and poetry, and they share their thoughts and opinions. With the school year soon coming to a close, it's safe to say The Résumé is a community-builder.

Grants Pass Welcomes New Senior Pastor

The Grants Pass Church welcomed Christian Martin and his family with open arms as he accepted a new role in the Grants Pass/Cave Junction district.

The Martins were called from Michigan to minister in Oregon. Along with his wife, Heidi, and children, Elijah and Moriah, Martin has become a blessed part of the Grants Pass and Cave Junction church families while serving as their associate pastor.

Ten months after the Martins arrived, Marvin Clark, senior pastor, announced his retirement. In his final sermon at Grants Pass Church, he stressed the importance of letting God lead in all things. With that attitude, a pastoral search committee assembled to select a new senior pastor.

The committee held prayerful and heartfelt discussions, and Martin soon became the unanimous choice of the committee.

Even so, more prayer was given to the matter before a final decision was made. During the final week of February, just about one year to the day after his first sermon at Grants Pass, Martin officially accepted the position of senior pastor.

Al Reimche, Oregon Conference president, visited the Grants Pass Church on March 16 to have a prayer of dedication for Martin and his family. The Cave Junction Church congregation was also present for this blessing and sermon from Reimche.

Following the service, a fellowship dinner was held at the Grants Pass Adventist School as members welcomed Martin as senior pastor. They also had an opportunity to ask questions of and speak with Reimche.

Oregon Disaster Response Leaders Respond to Hurricane Sandy

Sam Pellecer and Dale Ziegele, Oregon Conference Adventist Community Service Disaster Response (ACS DR) leadership team members, carried the flag of compassion from Oregon to some of those suffering from Hurricane Sandy's devastation by serving in multi-agency warehouses: Pellecer in Islip County, N.Y., and Ziegele in Robbinsville, N.J.

Ziegele, an Oregon Conference ACS DR area coordinator, previously participated in Maranatha projects, but those experiences had not prepared him emotionally for devastation of this magnitude. Whole blocks of homes torn from their foundations left folks homeless and without life's necessities. He feels it was a privilege to be God's hands in helping to relieve the suffering and want of these victims.

Pellecer, Oregon Conference ACS DR coordinator, was amazed at how a life can be changed in a moment by a natural disaster. He purposed anew to have his emergency escape route planned, his family communication plan organized, and his five-day emergency supply kit, stored water and food supplies all in order.

Both Pellecer and Ziegele were glad they had received forklift training through Oregon ACS DR, as they spent most of their time using forklifts to load and unload trucks with emergency supplies. Ziegele also used New Jersey Conference trucks to deliver emergency food, clothing, blankets and, yes, even some donated skateboards for the youth in the area.

Pellecer's group of volunteers became known as the "Frozen Chosen" because they were working and living in an abandoned building with all utilities disconnected, including all forms of heat. After several days of this, the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) brought a tent that they pitched inside the building and heated with portable generators and heaters. "It took several days for our toes and noses to thaw," Pellecer says.

When asked if they would do it again, Ziegele summed it up for both of them: "In a heartbeat."

Both volunteers recommend this service experience be a way of life as we follow Jesus' command to "do to others what you would have them do to you" (Matt. 7:12, NIV). This may mean taking time now to get the training necessary to respond at the time of a natural disaster such as Hurricane Sandy.

HVJA Holds Student Week of Prayer

Hood View Junior Academy (HVJA) in Boring, Ore., attempted something super scary: student week of prayer.

Scary for the students in kindergarten through sixth grade? No ... exciting! Scary for the teachers? No ... inspiring! Scary for the students in seventh and eighth grade? Yes ... they were the speakers!

Each seventh- and eighth-grader prepared and presented a short week of prayer talk March 4–8. Each day, a few students spoke to the rapt attention of 110 classmates. The relevant and meaningful topics included faith, prayer, trust, obedience, responsibility, preparation, miracles and more.

It was one of the most significant, compelling weeks of prayer that HVJA students had ever experienced as their peers gained practice to be leaders of their church and school.

Three Sisters Celebrates Reading Day

The students of Three Sisters Adventist Christian School in Bend celebrated Reading Day on Jan. 16. Students came to school in their pajamas and brought blankets and pillows to build reading “forts.” The entire day was devoted to reading, sharing and experiencing the joy of books. Special guests from the community came throughout the day to read stories and poetry and share their own writing with the students. Students also received awards for reaching their reading goals and were given special prizes donated by Pacific Press.

Grants Pass Students Plant Trees

Grants Pass Adventist School (GPAS) students participated a second time in the annual Youth Tree Plant on Feb. 22. They were bused with students from 20 other area schools to county-owned forest in southwest Grants Pass, where they planted two-year-old seedlings.

Since the first Youth Tree Plant event 24 years ago, 18,000 young people have planted 75,000 trees through the program. Metal tags marked with students’ names help track seedling growth over the years.

Some of the older GPAS students held an unofficial competition to see who could plant the most seedlings, and a few planted as many as 10. The GPAS home and school committee provided hot chocolate and snacks for the students, who returned to school with a sense of helping our Creator keep His forest beautiful.

Milo Walks ‘In Their Shoes’

It's not often that you find teenagers volunteering to go a full day without food, but that's exactly what happened recently at Milo Adventist Academy in Days Creek. And it wasn't just a few students; it was 22, to be exact.

Victoria Roesener, Milo senior, wanted to do something for world hunger. She knew of World Vision's 30-hour Famine and asked Darla Milam, a Milo teacher, if she would help sponsor such an event.

Milam had been interested in running the Adventist Development and Relief Agency (ADRA) In Their Shoes teen experiential learning event since hearing about it at the North American Division Teachers' Convention in Nashville, Tenn., last summer. This sparked the idea to combine the two events.

That's exactly what Roesener and Milam did.

They planned an event for March 15 and 16 at Camp Umpqua on Milo's campus. Students and staff could volunteer to participate in the In Their Shoes program, which was combined with a 24-hour fast.

Participants packed their gear and walked the mile to the camp. Once there, students randomly selected new "passports" with new identities they assumed for the remainder of the event. They were asked to give up luxury items such as electronics, perfumes and extras.

Sleeping conditions varied based on the poverty index included in their passports. Some had mattresses, some had thin mats, and others slept on the floor. Water was handled in a similar way, with some students having access in the lodge while others had to walk to get water or carry it back to camp.

The program included prayer, Bible study and activities designed to raise awareness of world hunger and poverty. The 22 students and four staff participating completed the 24-hour fast on Sabbath afternoon by walking back to campus and participating in a communion service and an agape feast led by Steve Behrmann, Milo pastor, and attended by the rest of the student body and staff.

"Lives were changed by this event," states one staff member.

In Their Shoes participants will be selecting and sponsoring projects from the ADRA gift catalog. As one participant says, "We want to make a difference now."

Colville Valley Junior Academy Celebrates Centennial

Colville (Wash.) Valley Junior Academy (CVJA) recently celebrated its centennial with an alumni homecoming at the Colville Church.

Adventist pioneers in the Colville Valley purchased land near Kettle Falls, Wash., in 1890. After seven years of work, they opened a boarding school. Few schools in the area offered secondary classes, so it was well attended by both Adventist and non-Adventist youth. Unfortunately, the school closed after seven years.

Members secured land in Colville, Wash., in 1911 and built a one-room school, which opened in 1912 with one full-time and one part-time teacher for 24 students. A wood-burning stove heated the room, two buckets provided drinking and wash water, and two outbuildings served as bathrooms.

Tuition cost $3 a month by 1919, and only six students attended. By 1928, enrollment had risen to 17. In the 1930s, ninth and 10th grades were added, along with a second room and an upstairs apartment. The 1950s brought indoor restrooms, and more land was deeded to the school.

The school burned to the ground in the fall of 1967, although many furnishings were saved. School continued in the basement of the church until a new building, finished in 1973, opened its doors with one teacher. A second teacher was added in 1974, and the board purchased a rubber mat-making machine in 1975 so students and parents could produce mats to defray some tuition and other expenses.

After selling that school building, church members moved classes into the basement of the new church in 1980 and began building today's building, which opened in January 1988.

As enrollment increased, a large covered play area was added in 1992. The next year, an addition provided a library and two more classrooms, including space for a computer lab. Enrollment exceeded 50 that school year, and a work-study program gave students valuable experience plus help with tuition.

Tenth grade and a fourth teacher were added for the 1994-95 school year, and the school's name changed from Colville Valley Adventist School to Colville Valley Junior Academy. As enrollment hovered between 60 and 80, finances were short, but community, church and parental support aided in the school's success. During the early and mid-2000s, a school store was established, the school recarpeted, the bathrooms redecorated and a vocational training building constructed.

With the more recent economic downturn, enrollment at CVJA fell, and grades nine and 10 were discontinued. In the last two years enrollment has risen to 26 students taught by three teachers.

Many people contributed to CVJA through the years. Visit mycvja.org to read a more detailed account.

Newport Church Member Sews for Service

Ginger Brockman's sewing ministry includes making quilts for Newport Adventist Community Services.

Hobbies can be a great source of personal satisfaction, especially if one takes advantage of retirement to use hobbies as service.

Sewing comes naturally for Ginger Brockman, Newport (Wash.) Church member and retired music teacher. Her love of sewing came at an early age as she learned the basics on an old Singer treadle machine. Through the years, sewing came in handy as she made clothes for her growing family and later for the grandkids.

As Brockman began hearing of needs for children's clothes in various mission fields, she told the Lord she could help fill that need if He supplied the fabric. As people have heard of her mission, her fabric supply, like the widow's meal and oil in Elijah's day, has never run out.

Brockman estimates she has sewn 2,500 garments for orphans around the world since 1997, including those in Bangladesh, India and Africa. She wore out five Wal-Mart sewing machines in the process, prompting her husband, Earl, to buy her a quality Bernina.

She also keeps busy locally by making quilts for Newport Adventist Community Services and Newport Hospital's long-term care facility. Some days the Bernina whirrs from dawn to dusk.

Someone has said that retirement years are the best of a person's life. Why not explore ways to use part of that time in service for God? Could it be that the vibrating noise of a working sewing machine is one of the many sounds pleasing to the Lord's ears?

Teen Pathfinders Serve Others

During Spring Break Mission Adventure

The first Sunday of spring break, more than 100 teen Pathfinders and their adult sponsors convened at Upper Columbia Academy in Spangle, Wash., to begin a week of service to the Cheney, Airway Heights and Spokane, Wash., communities.

Monday morning found eight teams, each comprised of 12 teens, traveling to many locations. They set out to re-roof a house, sort food at a food bank, make a hot meal for the homeless men at the mission, sort clothing at a secondhand store, build a greenhouse for a ladies' shelter and pick up

workers said the kids did such a great job. She asked the kids how long they had known each other because they had such a good camaraderie. When they told her they had just met on Sunday night, she was amazed.

At each location the teens worked so hard and fast that they also had time to rest and be interviewed by a roving video camera.

This is the 17th year for the Teen Mission Adventure, and 94 teens participated this year. They accomplished an amazing amount of good for the community in just one week.

Rogers Hosts Reading Day

Students enjoy the Party-in-a-Box Reading Day at Rogers Adventist School in College Place, Wash.

Reading Day gives students a chance to enjoy reading together with their friends.

What's better than a party? How about a Party-in-a-Box Reading Day? The fifth- and sixth-graders at Rogers Adventist School in College Place, Wash., participated in an all-day reading event on Feb. 6 inspired by the Party-in-a-Box program from Pacific Press.

The teachers set aside the other curriculum for the day to allow students to enjoy and practice the life-long skill of reading. Throughout the day the teachers drew student names for prizes such as "Reading is Fun" T-shirts, Frisbees and free books, all included in the box from Pacific Press. Other items in the Party-in-a-Box were snacks, pencils, magnets and a catalog for each student. The teachers' hope was that this would be a fun day for their students.

Lauren thought Reading Day was awesome. She loved the fact that students could bring pillows and blankets. "We could also do puzzles like crossword puzzles or Sudoku," she says. "I really liked that too."

"It was fun to have peace and quiet," Calin says. "I was able to get caught up on my reading. I finished one and a half books."

Sydney enjoyed being able to lie down and read all day.

She also liked the fact that they could choose to sit anywhere they wanted. "I also liked the prizes," she adds.

"It was fun to have something different," Justin explains. "I liked that we could be with our friends more."

Reading Day was also a way to encourage students to read good, character-building material and to continue to develop a life-long interest in reading and learning.

Outreach Ministry Leaders Share Ideas

Each spring, Washington Conference hosts an outreach ministry meeting to connect creative ministry leaders with individuals who want to be involved in ministry.

“We came together to talk about how we can work together for God,” says Byron Dulan, Washington Conference outreach ministries director. “We sometimes think we need to work with the resources in our own little church, but God has the resources everywhere for us to use.”

John Freedman, Washington Conference president, opened the outreach networking event with a devotional message about ministering from the heart.

“We need to grow relationships with each other,” Freedman says. “Ministry is a matter of the heart. Do your work in faith and love. Trust in God, who has all the power and resources of the universe.”

Sixty participants from 15 churches attended three breakout sessions featuring 11 creative ministries in western Washington. After lunch, they examined stories, examples and experiences of outreach ministries from across North America. The afternoon session closed with an interactive session during which churches shared their dreams for ministry.

Evaluation forms included comments such as “I found so many resources” and “I’m surprised that the church is involved in so many things!”

“We’re here to empower you in ministry,” says Dulan. “We encourage members who feel the call of God on their heart to contact us to discuss their ideas and get direction on how to lay a strong foundation for their new ministry.”

Auburn City Hosts First Ministry Fair

Auburn City Church spent time at the beginning of the year coaching its members through a spiritual gifts assessment, provided an evaluation class and concluded with a Ministry Fair.

“The Ministry Fair was designed to help people find their niche in church ministry,” says Gary Fogelquist, senior pastor. “We want to help people discover their spiritual gifts and allow them to see what ministry options are available.”

The purpose of the fair, according to Julie Campbell, fair coordinator, was twofold: to raise awareness and educate members about active local church ministries and to show members ways to be involved and find their niche in ministry. The church also wanted members to be aware of ministry options before the nominating committee process began and allow ministries to recruit new participants.

The Ministry Fair was coordinated by the church’s empowering committee, which has a mission to “discover, place and grow spiritual gifts” among members. Each ministry had a display table with informational materials, photo galleries, samples and sign-up sheets. The fair was open throughout the morning until church began and then again after church.

In all, 15 ministries were represented at Auburn City’s Ministry Fair, including children’s ministry, Full Plate Living, Adventist Christian education, community services, disaster relief, women’s ministry, men’s ministry, Northwest Mission Institute, street mission, Pathfinders, Adventurers, prayer ministry, religious liberty, SAGE senior ministries and Sunset Lake Camp.

Skagit Students Learn Lessons in Generosity

At Skagit Adventist Academy in Burlington, even elementary students learn they can be the hands and feet of Jesus for people in need.

The academy recently continued a tradition of raising funds for Adventist Development and Relief Agency (ADRA) and expanded the fundraiser to include elementary students.

Students set up a tree in the high school commons room and an additional tree in the elementary school. Students and faculty were invited to purchase lights for $1 apiece to put on the tree. Every dollar donated to ADRA was matched by $7.

Many children were eager to purchase lights to decorate the tree and help needy people. One fourth-grade girl even emptied her piggy bank to purchase several lights. Likewise, another elementary student gave eight $1 coins he earned as a spelling test reward. The elementary students raised $112 total.

The high school students were also happy to give generously. One high school student donated $60 of his own money.

The high school raised $180, and the school community contributed $350.31. The final count of $642.31 made a total gift of $4,496.17 with the ADRA matching funds.

Skagit Adventist Academy is blessed to have students and faculty that strive to be like Jesus in their everyday lives and to serve others — not just in Skagit County but all around the world.

Bellevue Hosts Full Plate Diet Class

Most people hate to diet because they hate food restrictions and they hate to exercise.

But according to one plan, you can diet and still have a full plate. That's why they call it the "Full Plate Diet," and it seems to be gaining in popularity. The drawback for some is that you do have to exercise.

Elsa Rojas is a member at Bellevue Church where a class on the new diet was offered earlier this year. She says, "What makes this program different is that you really don't have to stick to a strict regimen or buy expensive specialty items."

Laurelee Misseghers, a registered dietician, led the class, which provided practical tips and diet advice. The class brought 12 Bellevue Church members and four visitors who met faithfully on Tuesday evenings for eight weeks in January and February.

Participants at Bellevue Church's Full Plate Diet class show off their certificates at the end of class. The class attracted both members and friends from the community.

Each member received a workbook, a student guide and a fiber guide with ideas on how to "power up" their lifestyle. An official website is available for more information, tips and diet ideas at fullplateliving.org.

"The program is meant to improve your current lifestyle, no matter what your current level of health is," says Rojas. Did she lose weight? "I sure did!"

Rojas says having the group support is important when it comes to achieving consistency and making conscientious decisions about food and exercise.

Education Dean Writes Book About Retirement

Julian Melgosa's recently published book, Enjoy Life, is an illustrated book about retirement written for the lay person from the perspective of a psychologist. Melgosa, Walla Walla University School of Education and Psychology dean, wrote the book to help people add quality to the "third age" of their lives.

According to the publisher Safeliz, Ltd., in Madrid, Spain, the book "offers a complete investigative tool full of practical advice that is specifically designed to help the reader achieve optimal health and find enjoyment in this stage of life."

Melgosa has a personal interest in the topic of retirement, and the publisher decided it was relevant, as the elder population sector is growing in both developed and undeveloped countries.

The book, published in English, Spanish and French, can be purchased from the Review and Herald Publishing Association, as well as internationally. Find more information at bit.ly/YY6ka6.

Engineering Professor Honored for Leadership

Curtis Nelson is the recipient of the 2013 Peter J. Bosscher Faculty Advisor for Outstanding Leadership awarded by the national organization Engineers Without Borders USA (EWB-USA). Nelson, engineering professor, founded the Walla Walla University chapter of Engineers Without Borders (EWB-WWU) in 2006.

Nelson has led chapter trips to Honduras, helping assess, design and construct schools in underprivileged communities. Co-faculty advisor of the 70-member chapter, Nelson is interested in the development and implementation of undergraduate courses and programs, particularly relating to service learning and engineering design for developing countries.

Nelson traveled to Peru in March to evaluate a location that may be the site of the next project. The group recently completed its work on a Honduras school. During an 18-month period, members of the chapter made several site visits to survey, take soil samples, make agreements with local communities and ultimately construct a five-classroom concrete structure to replace the deteriorating building. The new structure accommodates approximately 250 students per year. The total cost of the project was $53,000, which was acquired through fundraising and donations.

According to EWB-USA, the award "recognizes faculty advisors who provide outstanding leadership and mentorship to their student chapter. It is named for the late Peter J. Bosscher, who was an EWB-USA faculty advisor at the University of Wisconsin-Madison and was actively involved with the national organization."

Nelson was nominated for the award by members of the EWB-WWU chapter.

Rural Health Clinics

Meeting Health Care Needs in Underserved Areas

Beautiful scenery, a relaxed lifestyle, enhanced recreational opportunities — for many people, living in the country beats city life hands-down. But the trade-off often is less access to health care, especially specialty and emergency services.

Tiny Manzanita, Ore., for example, sits on one of the most scenic areas of the Oregon Coast, but the nearest hospital is 22 miles away. Residents have driven as long as two hours to get the care they need.

Rural health clinics, such as Tillamook (Ore.) County General Hospital's clinic in Manzanita, help fill the gap. The hospital and its five clinics, along with ambulance services and home care services, provide a coordinated continuum of vital health care services throughout rural Tillamook County.

Expert health care close to home makes a difference for individuals like George.* George came to the Manzanita clinic soon after it opened in Northwest Regional Heart Center cardiologist Ronald Chelsky provides specialty care for patients through Tillamook's rural health clinics, eight days each month.

January 2012 with heart attack symptoms. His family said that even though he had chest pain and other symptoms, he only agreed to seek help because the clinic was nearby. George wouldn't have gone to the hospital because it was too far away — at a time when every minute counted toward saving his life.

The newest addition to the hospital's rural health network farther south along the Oregon coast is Bayshore Medical, with locations in Pacific City and Lincoln City. In Pacific City, residents are 22 miles from the nearest hospital. Seeing a specialty physician, such as a cardiologist, has required a long drive. Now, local patients will benefit as the specialists from Adventist Health's Tillamook network provide services at this clinic several days each month. In Lincoln City, which does have a hospital, residents and visitors now enjoy expanded access to urgent care services.

"The rich health care heritage that Adventist Health brings to rural communities uniquely equips us to create healthier communities," states Larry Davy, Tillamook Hospital CEO. "As national and state health care transformation initiatives focus on enhancing wellness and decreasing medical costs, carrying out our healing mission of whole person care is more important than ever, especially in underserved areas."

Systemwide, Adventist Health has 38 rural health clinics providing care to more than 191,000 individuals who might otherwise be without access to local quality services. Besides Tillamook County, rural health clinics are also located in Walla Walla, Wash., and 32 California locations. In addition, Adventist Medical Center has 36 medical clinics that serve the Portland, Ore., and Vancouver, Wash., metropolitan area.

Hart 70th

Lewis and Ruth (Swanson) Hart were married in Fallon, Nev., on Aug. 20, 1942, shortly after Lewis graduated from Walla Walla College (now Walla Walla University). They taught at Campion Academy in Loveland, Colo., before moving to Loma Linda, Calif. There Lewis received his medical doctor degree in 1949 and subsequently practiced in Troy, Idaho, and Roseburg, Ore. They served short mission terms in Quito, Ecuador, and Kingston, Jamaica, before going on regular mission service to Blantyre, Malawi, and Nairobi, Kenya. Upon returning from Africa, Lewis joined the Loma Linda University anesthesiology department for 10 years before retiring to Roseburg, then College Place, Wash., and eventually to Loma Linda.

Their sons and daughters-in-law, Kenneth and Dee Hart and Richard and Judy Hart, are also associated with Loma Linda University. The Harts have 5 grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren. They celebrated their 70th anniversary in Loma Linda with most family members present.

Klein 50th

Ed and Bev Klein celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on Aug. 5, 2012, with a picnic in the park at Fort Walla Walla, Wash.

Edward Eugene Klein married Beverly Jean Bretsch on July 22, 1962, in College Place, Wash. Ed and Bev both graduated from Walla Walla College. Bev graduated in 1962 with a Bachelor of Science in nursing. Ed graduated in 1966 with a Bachelor of Arts in industrial arts. They immediately accepted a call to Blue Mountain Academy in Pennsylvania, where they served for five years before return to the Northwest. They spent four years at Upper Columbia Academy (UCA) in Spangle, Wash., before moving the family to Manila, Philippines, to serve at Philippine Union College for seven years.

Ed built the industrial arts program at the college while Bev served as an assistant librarian in the theological seminary on campus. They returned stateside in 1982 to UCA. While Ed taught industrial arts, Bev returned to her nursing career. In 1993, they accepted a call to the Oregon Conference to be plant director for the facility. They remained in Portland, Ore., until their retirement in 2003.

They are happily residing in Milton-Freewater, Ore., on a small acreage planted in apples. Ed loves to work in his shop. Bev enjoys caring for the home and entertaining guests. They have many family and friends in the valley. They love their church family and enjoy many opportunities to volunteer and be of service. Their commitment to God, each other, family and fellow travelers on this journey is a wonderful example to others.

The Klein family includes Scott and Michele Mastroianni Klein of Newport News, Va.; Sandi and Gregory Phillips of Oregon City, Ore.; and 5 grandchildren.

Poisel 50th

Surrounded by their children and church family, Eldon and Gina (Balzer) Poisel celebrated 50 years of marriage and God's blessings on Sabbath, March 31, 2012, at the Hayden Lake Church in Idaho. Six months later, the celebration continued with an Alaskan cruise.

Eldon and Gina met as seniors at Wapato (Wash.) High School. While dating, Gina took Bible studies, accepted Christ into her life and was baptized. One month later, they married in 1962.

From their wedding in Wapato, they moved to Seattle for work. Later, back in the Yakima, Wash., area, Eldon took up roofing while Gina cared for their two children. Eventually Eldon pursued a career as a dental technician, so the family moved to Portland, Ore., for his education. During this time they juggled child care, studies and work at United Medical Laboratories.

Eldon and Gina moved to Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, in 1971 to set up shop in the basement of a dental office. In 1976, Eldon became a certified dental technician, a certification he has maintained for 36 years. Their small start grew to a thriving business employing 13 people. Through this, God made it possible for them to put two children through a total of 28 years of Adventist education. While Eldon still works, the family business is being transferred into the capable hands of his son, Trent, who has worked alongside him for more than 30 years.

Eldon and Gina Poisel

Over the years, the couple has volunteered at their churches, led a supportive ministry, and enjoyed camping, hiking and traveling. They also designed, built and landscaped three homes. Gina continues to use her interior design talents, creating warm atmospheres in both her home and local church. Eldon is quite active and regularly hikes on Mount Rainier, planning to summit it this year.

The Poisel family includes Trent and Pam (Williams) Poisel of Rathdrum, Idaho; Tara and Michael Demma of Sumner, Wash.; 6 grandchildren and a great-grandchild.

Time

“A thousand years in thy sight are but as yesterday when it is past ... .” Psalms 90:4

I and the toddler are unified in an urge to squirm.

With apologies to fine physicians everywhere, sometimes it feels as though prophetic time was birthed in a doctor’s office.

On this particular day I can’t help but note the relentlessly expanding length of my eye appointment. The waiting room is aptly named. The scheduled time I rushed to meet has long since expired. So, here I sit in a passive trance with fellow sufferers at our own private Pool of Bethesda, waiting anxiously for the magical moment when an angel stirs the water.

But the angel isn’t showing up, at least for now. I scan the room for something of interest, recalling too late the book I had thought to bring. A phone rings, a fly buzzes stubbornly against a window, a toddler squirms on his mother’s lap. An elderly couple sits across from me, pleasantly at rest, one absentmindedly caressing the other’s hand.

“Mr. Vistaunet?” calls a nurse from the front desk, and I rouse expectantly. Has the water stirred? Is the miracle at hand? No it is not. “We need you to complete these forms,” she says with a professional smile.

The sign at the front desk — did it say “patients check in here” or “patience check in here”? This patient’s patience is ebbing. So is my watch, which has inexplicably slowed down. Every 10 minutes I am incredulous to find it has only ticked off 90 seconds. I and the toddler are unified in an urge to squirm.

But the door to the inner sanctum finally opens. I am ushered to a darkened room and graciously granted additional time to ponder eternity and anything in between. In my imagination the doctor has likely just texted into the office — “Snow conditions awesome on last run down the mountain. Headed back to the office. Dilate Mr. Vistaunet’s pupils and tell him to wait.”

We often seem to be at odds with time — there’s either too much or too little to do what we want. Time crawls as we await a hoped-for event. Time runs swiftly toward dreaded confrontations. In this deadline-driven society our usefulness is often measured by how much we can produce in a shrinking span of time. More quantity, less quality.

It’s why Sabbath is such an interruption — a divinely intentional interruption — to our headlong pace. The command of our Father to put work aside is not a punitive demand but a loving opportunity for rest, healing and health. It’s a gift card of time that can be redeemed only in His presence.* His companionship becomes everything when time ceases to be anything, when we’re just happy to be together.

The doctor breezes in with a suspiciously ruddy glow. He’s delighted to see me and my ongoing financial support. Ten minutes later, I’m done.

As I pass back through the outer waiting room, my dilated eyes see them once again. The older couple is still there. Pleasantly at peace, at rest in their own company, with their own thoughts.

In no hurry to do anything, but be together.

\ I’m fully aware that parents of toddlers and teenagers sometimes need a rain check on this.*

Celebrating

51 years of serving Adventists and their families

When you join Northwest Adventist Federal Credit Union, you join fellow Seventh-day Adventists from across the Northwest in a financial cooperative that betters the lives of all its members.

- Credit Union membership gives you access to attractive rates on loans and savings accounts — and relief from high bank fees.
- You'll also discover a variety of free services that put your accounts at your fingertips. These include free online banking and bill pay, free telephone banking, and free ATMs.
- Perhaps most important, you'll be doing your banking with folks you can trust to look after your financial interests.

In over five decades of service we have grown to embrace more than 5,000 members — and each one is family to us! We think you'll feel right at home here, and we welcome you to your Credit Union!
