

"Tet" Offensive Emphasizes Medical Needs in War-Torn South Vietnam

By Jess Holm, M.D., Medical Director, Saigon Adventist Hospital

The medical needs of Saigon, South Vietnam were forcefully and tragically emphasized during the now-famous "Tet" Offensive. It was 1:30 in the morning when the first Claymore mine exploded just two blocks from our compound, taking the lives of 19 military police.

Within an hour we began five hectic days of concentrated attention to the wounded. Our inadequate facilities were glaringly evident.

Since we were closely surrounded by areas of fighting, pitiful remnants of families made their way to our busy corner, seeking not only treatment, but a refuge as well. During the offensive Saigon alone had more than 200,000 refugees,

Even though a European influence has been in Vietnam for nearly 100 years, I was not personally prepared for the shock of extremely low health standards and superstition complicated by the pressure of war for many years.

Acupuncture, blood-letting, spot burns, dermal scrapings, and assorted remedies and uncontrolled medicinals are common for both adults and children. In this atmosphere Adventists started medical work in 1955 with seeds of local opposition, but it remains as a candle in this gross darkness.

At first a clinic was conducted in a house. When the house was finally purchased the small group of medical workers converted it into a small hospital.

The medical program grew and expanded. Vietnamese were trained to take major responsibilities in the hospital program. The war brought new complications.

Even today—day and night—mortars fall with fearful regularity, both inside and outside the city. Victims of the war come to the hospital every day. The hallways are always crowded with cots because we never have room to accommodate all of the patients.

Early every morning the small clinic waiting room is jammed with people. Our patients present a real challenge with gross evidences of war, epidemics, disease, and fear. We select patients carefully for admission to our too-small hospital with a pleading from many more for admission. We refuse more than we are able to admit,

The needs are great and the only thing that will solve the problem is a new hospital building. Our outpatient department needs expansion. Our School of Practical Nursing needs more hospital beds for training purposes. Every department is crowded.

The eyes of the world are on Saigon, South Vietnam. The Seventh-

GIFT. The Saigon Adventist Hospital has provided immunization for many orphanages in the area. A representative of the government's Ministry of Health was on hand as Dr. Jess Holm, center, Medical Director of the Saigon Adventist Hospital, makes a presentation to the director of a Catholic orphanage in Saigon.

Help Me! This little Vietnamese orphan, a victim of the war, is sad because she has no mommy or daddy. Many war victims are treated at the Saigon Adventist Hospital.

OVERCROWDED. The facilities OVERCHOWDED. The facilities are limited and the needs are great, so the hallways are always crowded with cots at Saigon's Adventist Hospital in Vietnam. The 13th Sabbath Overflow Offering on Sabbath, September 27, will provide funds for a new hospital building which will alleviate this overcrowded.

Browsing With Books

Just as some people seem to stand out in a crowd, there are books that stand out in the avalanche of available reading. From Immigrant to Emissary is one of those books. Doris Holt Haussler tells the story of Dr. William Landeen with a flair for capturing the vivid and exciting moments that go to make up the thrilling story of a dedicated life.

This morning a letter from a friend reached my desk with this beginning: "Last evening I finished reading From Immigrant to Emissary and surely enjoyed it. I think the influence of the book will be worth a lot to our denomination in encouraging our youth to endure hardship, stand true and firm in time of storm and really get a lot of joy out of life also. He was a real man and the author did a wonderful job in telling about him. This is one of the best books I have read for quite a while."

Your copy of From Immigrant to Emissary awaits you now at your Book and Bible House and is well worth the $5.95 price.

A new DESTINY book entitled Invisible Escort by Rose Christensen tells the real story of mission service under trying circumstances. Jerald and Rose Christensen served in China and Taiwan. This is a $1.65 paperback.

If you are one of those who has struggled to keep a hymnal open on the organ or piano you will be happy with the news that a Loose-Leaf Church Hymnal is now available. The cover is vinyl and it is priced at $7.95.

There are some new Chapel Record releases that cannot go by without mention. When Tears Hide Tomorrow features the lovely soprano voice of Marilyn Cotton, backed instrumentally by the Chapel Ensemble. In stereo, it is number 138.

Near to the Heart of God is the title of a new King's Heralds album, number 144. In addition to the always superb quartet sound, this recording fairly vibrates with instrumental accompaniments. There are the bell ringers, trumpet trio with drum, celeste, guitar, brass choir, accordion and a string quartet. The songs are old favorites with a new dimension of sound.

Our Offering Ratios

Recently it was the opportunity of the writer to counsel with one of his local treasurers regarding the tithe and missions offerings in that particular local conference. After discussing not only one conference, but all four of the conferences in the Union, we noted some interesting statistics and we wish to pass a little information on to the readers.

Our tithe is on the increase from 5 per cent to 15 per cent and more in various churches. On the average one conference shows a 12 per cent gain and another a 9 per cent gain in tithe receipts during the period under review.

However, dear reader, our missions offerings do not show the same marked increase. In one conference which has a 12 per cent tithe increase the missions offerings only increased by less than 4 per cent.

We cannot help but wonder if Uncle Sam is getting more of our income dollar. If we believe in the soon-coming of our Saviour, surely we must increase our weekly offerings in direct proportion to our tithe increase which, in turn, results in the blessings of God to His people.

For many years the ratio between the tithe and offerings has constantly declined. May I urge the reader who has been giving less than a dollar to Sabbath School to raise his sights to at least that level and those who have been giving that to increase their offerings to a greater amount. With the needs of the mission field, surely this is the time for us to respond and do more to hasten our Lord's return. God will take cognizance of the contribution and use it to find souls for His L. H. NETTEBURG kingdom.

Hot Springs Vacation Bible School

The Vacation Bible School at Hot Springs held during August 11 - 15 with Mrs. Lillian Holmes as leader, had an enrollment of 34. About half were from non-Adventist homes.

Friday evening a representative group of parents, grandparents, and friends heard the children give their memory verses, tell interesting things they had learned about "God's Heroes," and sing their happy songs. Each child was presented with a certificate of award. Special music was given by Elder and Mrs. R. Patzer and by J. B. Gray.

The guests were invited to view the display of crafts and art the children had made under the leadership of Gladys Halls.

Several children came a distance of forty miles to attend,

Mrs. Jay Darnell was in charge of the Kindergarten group with Lillian Jensen as afternoon helper. Ethel Robinson had the Primary group and Fern Wyatt was leader of the Juniors.

Other members helped in various ways. The earliteen-age girls were most helpful in every activity.

Progress at Flag Mountain

The offerings received for Flag Mountain Camp have been put to good use. You ought to see what has been done! I know you would like our "finished log" type cottage and the beginnings of another. Everything is "buttoned up" for the winter months, but as soon as it begins to warm up in the spring, we will commence where we left off. Our goal is to have two cottages ready for occupancy by camping season. Meanwhile, each of us ought to remember our camp needs, especially on those Sabbaths when the offering is designated for this particular work. If you had been with us this last summer during Teen Camp, you would surely have acknowledged a need for a roof over the campers. One night during a rain storm the wind blew one side of two tents down. Several of us experienced the adventure of repairing poles and braces in the darkness of a stormy night while campers endeavored to keep dry. In spite of bad weather this year we were proud of the young people whose spirits were always good.

Sabbath, September 27, is the day to remember our Flag Mountain Camp with a special offering. Then watch for improvements being made

13th Sabbath Offerings Need Your Support

On Sabbath, September 27, we have the privilege of giving a large 13th Sabbath offering, the overflow of which will strengthen our work in the Far Eastern Division.

If we believe the Spirit of Prophecy, we must also believe that our liberal offerings will advance the work in South Dakota. "To show a liberal, self-denying spirit for the success of foreign missions is a sure way to advance home missionary work; for the prosperity of the home work depends largely, under God, upon the reflex influence of the evangelical work done in countries afar off." Counsels on Sabbath School Work, p. 136

During the cold, snowy months of last winter many were not able to attend Sabbath School regularly. The warm summer months have encouraged travel to vacation spots, Europe, and other places of interest. All this has caused irregular Sabbath School offerings resulting in a $2072.97 drop in our offerings for the first seven months of this year.

Won't you take an inventory of the Sabbaths you have missed this year and make up for any lack of giving this 13th Sabbath? Perhaps the following quotations from the Quiet Hour Echoes will challenge us to greater giving:

"It was not till the widow gave to Elijah that her barrel became bottomless and her cruse inexhaustible."

"If you are not made better by giving what you give now, double your gift."

"It is hard for God to take a man into His arms who is already hugging a bag of money."

"Some people never find out that 'it is more blessed to give than to receive,' because they are afraid to try it."

"The size of your offering does not depend upon what you take out of your pocket, but what you leave in it."

"The devil has always been puzzled to know just what to do with the man who is religious with his money."

After the hustle and bustle of beginning a new school year, the Sabbath presented a welcome interlude for the students of Oak Park Academy. As the sun dipped low in the west that first Friday night the chapel filled rapidly.

After some meditation in the form of poems and organ music, E. L. Marley, Iowa conference president, arose to speak. His first remarks dealt with his joy over the record enrollment and how God had worked to bring young people to Oak Park. Following this he presented a very inspirational challenge. He asked us to always do right, even if it meant earning the title of a so-called "square." Many of our hearts were touched and faces reflected the new determination to serve God in all things.

On the bright clear Sabbath morning, August 30, Elder Marley pre-

Bomb The Country! -Hit The Farmers!

The above title was used simply to get attention and remind Iowa Adventists that rural residents are perhaps the most neglected of all people when it comes to evangelistic contacts, and to suggest a way to correct our negligence.

In most churches there are shelves or boxes with many tracts, Junior Guides, Little Friends, Signs, etc. In one church I visited recently I saw three full boxes of tracts one filled with "Six Secrets", and one with "Wondering" and one with "Wake-up America." It appeared that none of these tracts had been handed out.

May I suggest that literature "bombs" be made of these tracts and papers. Wrap them in colored cellophane or plastic. Use one color for small children's literature, another color for teen-age literature and another for adults.

Take Juniors on tours through the country each Sabbath, and let them toss the bombs in front of farm homes,

Rural Ingathering—an even better suggestion is for teams of adults to cover rural territory on Sunday, not only giving out literature, but making World Service appeals as well. In one church in which I pastored in Indiana two women brought in around $50 Ingathering each week for many weeks each fall, but their most treasured memories were the visits made in these farm homes,

Ingathering Objectives

The Ingathering program is a Seventh-day Adventist presentation to the general public.

ITS PRIME PURPOSE IS EVAN-GELISTIC CONTACT:

TO ACQUAINT people in house-tohouse and business contacts with the worldwide medical, educational, evangelistic, and welfare program of the church.

TO ASCERTAIN their interest in Bible Study.

TO FURNISH them an opportunity to enroll in a Bible correspondence course.

TO PROVIDE further information about our church.

TO PRESENT a yearly report on our humanitarian work, inviting people to contribute to its continuance.

-1968 Autumn Council

AN EXPERIENCE: "One bitterly cold and stormy evening last December a young man made an Ingathering call at my door, 'You shouldn't be out on such a cold night!' I scolded him. He looked me straight in the eve and said. 'Mister, when you are working for Jesus it doesn't seem so cold." Thank God for boys who have a testimony like that for Christ! Because of his interest and devotion I enrolled in the Bible Course he offered and recently joined the Seventh-day Adventist church along with other members of my family."

Let's make Iowa churches ring with praises like the above one, as we go out this year in bringing cheer and blessing to the people of Iowa whom we contact regardless of the weather conditions.

Baptism at Maple Plain

Early this year Mr. and Mrs. Art Swaningson and Danny Bucy, grandson of the pastor, were baptised and united with the Maple Plain church.

This report was held up temporarily for the Swaningsons launched right out in lay work and it seemed there would be an early report of sheaves for their hire. However, as the interest is still developing the full report will come later.

The Maple Plain church had been praying for Art's conversion for many years. Truly a miracle of God was performed in this family. The family foundation was teetering on the brink of disaster. Art was making two weekly trips to Chicago with his big "Semi," but tobacco and liquor were taking their toll. As the situation worsened Pastor and Sister Bucy were invited to the home for counsel. Bible studies were arranged. After the second study Art pointed to the pack of cigarettes in his pocket. Sister Bucy in turn pointed to her husband, and the cigarettes were surrendered. During the studies the engagement and wedding rings came off. Next they gave up flesh foods, and each subsequent study brought new surrenders for Christ.

Art informed his company that although it might mean his job, he would have to sacrifice the Saturday run. Again the Lord moved marvelously. The company retained him and honored him for accident-free driving.

Although Sister Swaningson was a member of the church, she felt the need at this time to be rebaptized. It was a happy Sabbath for the Swaningsons and the Maple Plain church as these folk yielded to the sweet persuasion of the Holy Spirit.

New Choir Robes

The Rochester church choir composed of its junior and teenage young people recently purchased new robes. In order to do this these young boys and girls, under the direction of Mrs. Myron Krueger, music director of the church, sold candy and held numerous film benefit programs. Some private donations were also made toward this purchase. The robes are gold in color with eggshell stoles.

Rochester Vacation Bible School

This past spring the choir members were the guests of the Dodge Center church for the morning service. In the afternoon they sang at the Winona church service and at the evening evangelistic meeting.

We indeed feel fortunate to have Mrs. Krueger with her musical talents to work with the young people of our church. This is a wonderful way for the young people to be an important part of the church program.

Vacation Bible School

The Rochester Seventh-day Adventist Church was the scene of an active and successful Vacation Bible School August 4 through the 14th under the direction of Mrs, Donald Miller. The total enrollment was 81 of whom 55 were non-Adventists. Thirty-one children had perfect attendance and 52 were present five days or more.

To begin the day the children were led in song service by Nadine Jones. After the opening exercises of prayer, welcome, pledges, songs, and stories, the children met in separate divisions. Well-illustrated Bible lessons on characters of the Bible were presented each morning. The children especially enjoyed learning new songs, working in activity books, and listening to stories. The primary and junior-age children made outstanding crafts which consisted of bird houses made of popsicle sticks, burlap-covered wall plaques, and wastepaper baskets covered with bright-colored plastic straws.

Interested parents and friends filled the church to capacity for the closing program. The divisions presented a small portion of what they had learned during Vacation Bible School, much to the delight of the audience. Crafts and activity books were on display following the program, and refreshments were served.

As a followup to Vacation Bible School, 12 junior-age children were enrolled in the Junior Voice of Prophecy Bible Course with the consent of their parents. The children from two non-Adventist families have been attending Sabbath School and worship services regularly. Vacation Bible Schools do pay!

WHY I BELIEVE

service only confirms my conviction that I am as intensely religious as any man I know. Nobody goes through six years of war and two terms of the presidency without faith. And, although I have seldom displayed or discussed my religious philosophy with anyone, a deep Bible-centered Christian faith has colored my life since childhood, Devout Evangelical parents, who loved the Bible as dearly as life itself, made sure of that, Indeed, before I was 18, I had read through the entire Bible and discussed it, chapter by chapter, with my mother.

Recalling the long years and the cascade of crises through which we have passed, I realize that a strong spiritual experience has literally been the staff of life to me. Back in Abilene, Kansas, my mother, who was never happier than when reading the Bible, and my father, who balanced his career as a mechanical engineer with the study of scriptures in the original Greek, stressed one truth over and over again: Religion, placed in man by God, is most natural to him. How often, both in war and peace, was I to rediscover this changeless truth.

With equal fervor I believe that faith in God and the Judaic-Christian ethic inspired the founding fathers of the United States. These remarkable men-Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Hamilton, Franklin, Paine, John Adams, John Hancock and Patrick Henry, to name a few of themwere men of deep religious conviction and in the new world they were trying to establish an entirely new form of government. They succeeded because during that fateful decade of deliberation and decision, the 1770's, they put their final trust in almighty God and his moral law. We are a religious nation today because in the Declaration of Independence they stated their full reliance on "the laws of nature and nature's God" and because they published before the world "these self-evident truths: that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. . . ."

In contrast with this concept of the sacredness of life, modern atheistic dictatorships treat men as nothing more than animals or educated mules. How many materialistic psychologists and smart-alec professors sneer that men invented God in a childish search for security; vet. I have noticed that these same men in the fox-holes or at the moment of death turn to some higher power for comfort and courage. Thus, it is that I believe there is nothing wrong with America today that the faith, love of freedom, intelligence and energy of her citizens cannot cure.

Thus, in hope and eternal vigilance, I recall again for America my favorite biblical lines: "Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it; except the Lord keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain."

(Ed. note: As an example of President Eisenhower's strength of character learned through religious precepts, we all recall the time when he immediately and suddenly gave up smoking when the doctor told him it was undermining his health. Upon being told he could cut it out a little at a time, he determined to cut it all out at once, and he did. Following his recent death, when they were showing on television flashes of his past life, we also remember that we heard from his own lips the story of his first heart attack-how it resulted from getting angry when he was unnecessarily called from the golf course the second time to receive a message that had already been relayed to him. Furious at such inefficiency, he expressed himself in angry tones, and promptly had his heart attack. When the doctor told him another attack of anger would probably bring on another premature attack, he made up his mind right then and there to keep himself under control.

and a New Beginning

If he had not, his life would doubtless have been shortened. Thus we see the force of character one of our truly great men possessed, due to his early training in religious principles. Would that all of us would be as true to our guiding beliefs.)

Why I Believe

BY DWIGHT DAVID EISENHOWER

(General Eisenhower wrote this article shortly before his death. It was published for the first time in the Sunday Star of Washington, D. C. on April 6, 1969, and will be included in Roland Gammon's new book, "All Believers Are Brothers," to be published in June by Doubleday.)

Of the many instances when faith and Christian prayer have sustained

President Eisenhower in his prime.

me in life, the first came when I was a teen-ager and marked a turning point in my life. I had fallen, skinned my left knee and, when a painful infection later became so bad I couldn't do my farm chores, my parents discovered my swollen and discolored leg. Old Dr. Conklin, the family physician, took one look at the poisoned limb and immediately advised amputation to save any part of the leg or even my life.

When the horror of this prospect swept over me, I raised my 14-yearold frame from the bed to shout, "Not me! I won't allow it! I'd rather die!" Later I made my older brother Edgar promise not to let the doctor cut off my leg no matter what happened and he literally stood guard duty outside my bedroom. At the same time my parents, probably recalling my River Brethren grandfather and his belief in miracles, began a prayer vigil at my bedside. First, father and mother prayed, taking turns in leading one another; during the second night, Edgar-and finally my other four brothers—would kneel from time to time and join the prayers.

The next morning Dr. Conklin's experienced eye noted that the swelling was going down and the discoloration fading. Later in the day I was able to sleep soundly. In two weeks I was out of bed and able to walk. To me, this demonstration of the power of prayer did more than save my leg; it strengthened my faith for life.

Often during World War II, I turned to God when I had no one else to turn to. Two such crises involved our paratroopers, One night during the invasion of Sicily an armada of American aircraft was reported off course and there was an imminent danger that thousands of our sky troops would be dropped into the sea. I remember praying, "Save them and deliver them, O God, For they are in Thy Almighty Hand." Incredibly enough, the lead plane later regained its bearings and the drop was successful.

Similarly, on the eve of the massive D-Day assault on Europe, the soul-wracking problem arose as to whether to send two American airborne divisions against the Nazifortified Cherbourg Peninsula. British Air Chief Leigh-Mallory himself advised against what he termed "this futile slaughter," and yet to cancel the airborne attack would endanger the whole critical invasion of Utah Beach. I could only go to my tent to think and pray, to review every step of our elaborate planning and to ask God's guidance in making the right decision. I finally decided that the aerial attack would go as planned and, with what seemed to be the Almighty's blessing, the paratroopers accomplished their dangerous mission with comparatively light casualties.

When in peacetime it became my high honor to serve the nation twice as President, I tried to ensure that the government and every person in it was dedicated to honesty and moral principles. To a large extent, I believe, we succeeded. Personally I tried to set the new administration's tone before delivering my inaugural address when I asked all present to bow their heads and I offered a prayer. . ., "Give us, we pray, oh, God, the power to discern clearly right from wrong and allow all our actions to be governed thereby and by the laws of the land. Especially we pray that our concern shall be for all the people regardless of station, race or calling." During the ensuing eight years I never opened a cabinet meeting or made a major policy decision without a minute of silent prayer.
