One billion people on earth suffer from chronic hunger. Don't miss the cover story:

ADRA Fights Hunger!

All of us get hungry from time to time. Some of us may even have gone a day or two without food. But finally our appetite becomes so strong that we go to the refrigerator, grab something to eat and then the hunger is gone. But for hundreds of millions of people in the world, hunger is not something that goes away after a quick trip to the freezer; it is a minute-by-minute, day-after-day aching need. Chronic hunger is an obsessive, all-consuming experience that can be intensely painful. It keeps people from thinking clearly and working productively. It increases the risk of disease and can result in permanent physical and mental damage. And ultimately it kills.

A woman from Boston describes her experience with hunger in a book, Starving in the Shadow of Plenty:

For days I had had nothing but water. I knew I needed food... I saw the mailman and told him I thought I was starving. He brought me food and then he made some phone calls and that's when they began delivering these lunches. But I had already lost so much weight that five meals a week are not enough to keep me going.

I just pray to God I can survive. I keep praying I can have the will to save some of my food so I can divide it up and make it last. It's hard to save because I am so hungry that I want to eat it right away. On Friday, I held over two peas from the lunch. I ate one pea on Saturday morning. Then I got into bed with the taste of food in my mouth and I waited as long as I could. Later on in the day I ate the other pea.

Today I saved the container that the mashed potatoes were in and tonight, before bed, I'll lick the sides of the container.*

Every day 35,000 people die from hunger and more than one billion suffer from the hunger described above. Most, however, do not have the luxury of a kindly mailman who can arrange to have meals delivered to their doors.

With so many having little or no hope of ever getting enough to eat, the Adventist Development and Relief Agency (ADRA), places a strong emphasis on food programs. But more than simply giving food away, ADRA looks for a long-term solution to hunger.

For example, in the Ethiopian famine of 1984-85, not only did ADRA set up feeding centers, but also started an agricultural training program which taught people improved gardening skills and dry-farming techniques. It is estimated that as a result of this program almost 100,000 gardens were started.

Much of the world's hunger and malnutrition result from a poor understanding of proper nutrition and health care. In several countries around the world ADRA is training mothers to better care for their children. At many of these Mother-Child Health clinics ADRA offers gifts of food to encourage the mothers to participate. Without this incentive, many of the mothers would not be able to come because the time spent at the center would have to be used in working for their families' survival. The gifts of food help free the mother to learn important health principles, have her child vaccinated and to have its growth monitored. In some instances she also learns improved gardening techniques.

Food aid in Bolivia is helping subsistence farmers, who previously could barely feed their families, become self-sufficient and produce enough to create a small profit. ADRA provides the farmers with seed, fertilizer, pesticides, and technical assistance. For this service ADRA requires 50 percent of the crop. While this may seem like a lot, it is important to point out that through the program the farmers harvested up to four times their usual yield.

With its part of the harvest, ADRA sells some of the produce to raise funds to support the program. The rest is kept as seed for next year's planting. Thus, once the first group of farmers become established, ADRA can expand the program to more farmers. Many are now waiting to join the program.

In over 70 countries ADRA is working on behalf of the poor and downtrodden, striving to make their lives a little better. The work is not easy. But whether it is drilling wells in Sudan, building dams in Mali, equipping a medical van in Thailand, teaching farming in Zimbabwe, or running medical launches on the Amazon, each program has the same aim: "Is not this the fast that I choose: to loose the bonds of wickedness, to undo the thongs of the yoke, to let the oppressed go free, ... Is it not to share your bread with the hungry, and to bring the homeless poor into your house; when you see the naked, to cover him, and not to hide yourself from your own flesh? Then shall your light break like the dawn... Then you shall call, and the Lord will answer; you shall cry, and he will say, Here I am." Isaiah 58:6-9, Revised Standard Version of the Bible, copyrighted 1946, 1952, 1971, 1973.

The Message of 1888 and the Caring Church

TOPIC 1 OF 5

The Challenge of 1888

By George R. Knight

Editor's Note: Much emphasis is currently being given to the fact that 1988 marks 100 years since the historic 1888 Minneapolis General Conference session. To help put the matter in perspective, and show its significance to the church today, the Record will publish a series of articles by George R. Knight, professor of church history at the Seventh-day Adventist Theological Seminary of Andrews University. The author of several books, his two latest are From 1888 to Apostasy: the Case of A. T. Jones, and Myths in Adventism. This is the first of five articles, which will be presented as space is available, not necessarily in consecutive issues of the Record.

The 1888 General Conference session in Minneapolis shook the Adventist Church of its own day and it has been rocking it ever since. For 100 years the "problem of 1888" has never been far from the center of Seventh-day Adventist theological discussion. That is good, because something happened at Minneapolis that the Adventist Church needed (and still needs) to place at the very center of both its everyday experience and its theology.

Speaking of the 1888 General Conference session, Ellen White wrote: "The Lord...sent a most precious message to His people through Elders Waggoner and Jones... Many had lost sight of Jesus. They needed to have their eyes directed to His divine person, His merits, and His changeless love for the human family," Testimonies to Ministers, pp. 91, 92.

Unfortunately for the church, however, that "most precious message" was not as fully accepted and applied in daily experience as it needed to be. Mrs. White would look back at the 1888 General Conference session as the "most incomprehensible tug-of-war we have ever had among our people" (Letter, 82, 1888) and as "one of the saddest chapters in the history of the believers in present truth" (Letter 179, 1902).

Thus, in 1888 the church received a most precious message, but it somehow failed to fully appreciate that message. In this article we will examine the historical reasons for the 1888 "problem" and hint at possibilities in the context of the caring church, as an earthbound people seeks to prepare for the great victory of Christ at

His Second Advent.

Perhaps the major reason for the 1888 debacle was that Adventists of that era were contented to preach a message in which Christ and His saving righteousness had too often failed to be at the center. With a little thought, the problem can easily be understood.

Adventist theology is made up of two types of related truth. The first category includes those doctrines that we share with other Christians, such as salvation by grace alone through faith, the importance of the Bible, the historic role of Jesus as the world's Saviour, the efficacy of prayer, and so on. The second doctrinal category includes those teachings that are distinctive of Seventh-day Adventist theology, such as the seventh-day Sabbath, the second coming, the perpetuity of the Ten Commandment law, conditional immortality, and the judgment messages of Daniel 8 and Revelation 14.

Since nineteenth-century Adventists lived in a largely Christian culture, they tended not to emphasize those beliefs that they shared with other Christians. After all, why preach saving grace to Baptists and Methodists when they already believed it. The important thing, so the logic ran, was to preach the distinctively Adventist truths so that people would become convinced on such issues as the Sabbath. Forty years of such preaching by Seventh-day Adventists had led to a kind of disjunction between Adventists and basic Christianity. By 1888 the issue had grown to problematic proportions. The "most precious message" of A. T. Jones and E. J. Waggoner was seen by Mrs. White as a corrective to the difficulty.

Such a doctrinal adjustment, however, was viewed as a major theological earthquake by many of the denominational leaders who were quite happy with a law-oriented, as opposed to a Christ-centered, Adventism.

As a result, when Waggoner and Jones began emphasizing the righteousness of Christ in their preaching, teaching, and writing, the stage was set for a major confrontation between two different Adventist theologies. It should be realized, however, that the Christ-centered message of Waggoner and Jones might have found easy entrance (actually re-entrance), into Adventism if it had not come packaged in the explosive wrapper of the controversy over the nature of the law in Galatians.

The Adventist old-guard leaders (George I. Butler and Uriah Smith), in their need to fight off all arguments against the perpetuity of the law, had interpreted the schoolmaster law of Galatians 3:24, 25 as the ceremonial law. From this viewpoint, the Old Testament ceremonies led to Christ, and became obsolete after He died on the cross. Waggoner shocked his hearers at Minneapolis by telling them that the schoolmaster law was the Ten Commandment law. As a result, Smith, Butler, and their colleagues saw Waggoner's message as a "new theology" that would destroy the heart of Adventism. Thus they were ready to fight to the death to block the acceptance of the truths being preached by Jones and Waggoner.

It did not help, of course, that the young righteousness by faith preachers tended to be a bit on the confrontational and even abrasive side, or that Jones and Smith had been locked in debate over the identity of the ten horns of Daniel 7 for some years. Nor did it soften the attitude of the embattled Adventist defenders of the law that the first national Sunday bill in a half century was on the congressional docket for that very year. It hardly seemed like a propitious time to change the denomination's teaching on the law of God. (The background of the 1888 conference is covered in From 1888 to Apostasy, pp. 23-24.)

These and other problems led to an unchristian spirit among the ministers at the Minneapolis meetings. There was a great deal of criticism against Jones, Waggoner, and Ellen White—who attempted to support the "new theology" of the young men from the West Coast. Mrs. White was astounded that the ministers could exhibit such unchristian attitudes in defending Christian orthodoxy. If their doctrines, she exclaimed, produced such a pharisaic spirit in them, she wanted to be "as far from" their "understanding and interpretation of the Scriptures as... is possible." (Letter 83, 1980).

The bitter conflict at Minneapolis demonstrated that Adventists needed to place Christ at the center of their theology and at the focal point of their daily lives. That was the problem of Minneapolis, and that is the challenge of 1888 to Adventists living in 1988. God is still calling for Adventists to become a Christ-centered, caring church in the fullest sense.

Seventh-day Adventists Experience Outstanding Church Growth in Greater Houston/Bay Area

During the past ten years the number of congregations in the Greater Houston/Bay Area have increased from 25 to 51, while membership has grown from 3,011 to 5,613, which represents an 86 percent membership increase. Church growth specialists acclaim this to be a very high level of member growth, since any religious organization is "booming" or "exploding" if it doubles every ten years.

Our outstanding Houston area church growth has occurred because our loyal members have ventured for God and God has greatly blessed. I highly commend their vision, commitment, and sacrifice, exercised to make this possible. Literally scores of evangelistic crusades and hundreds of Revelation Seminars have resulted in adding thousands of new members to our Houston/Bay Area congregations.

Also, our excellent church growth record in the Greater Houston/Bay Area is largely due to swarming 26 new churches which have 2,164 members today. If these new congregations had not been organized, our total membership growth would have been considerably less. Why? Because the average church group tends to stop growing when they reach a certain Sabbath attendance level.

This leveling off or "plateauing" varies with: 1. the size, quality, and location of the building, plus 2. the personality mix of the congregational leaders and member families, and 3. the frequency and intensity of evangelistic outreach. We call these "internal growth factors." When a congregation tops out due to these internal growth factors, it is extremely difficult for that particular church to grow above their regular Sabbath attendance level.

Usually, a very dramatic phenomenon occurs when the same congregation swarms and starts a new congregation. The mother church will normally fill back up to its former Sabbath attendance level in a relatively short period of time.

As before, when this happens, it will stop growing again. On the other hand, the new congregation will continue to grow toward its own Sabbath attendance potential according to its internal growth factors.

As you study the Greater Houston/Bay Area statistics below, consider whether your congregation has topped out in its growth and whether swarming or acquiring a new church facility in a new location might help you to start growing again. Why not invite a church growth consultant to come and help you evaluate your church and project its potential through strategic planning? We can recommend one if you desire professional assistance.

Altogether 15 new church buildings have either been purchased or constructed by our Greater Houston/Bay Area congregations during this 10-year period.

Another 15 of our new Houston congregations are renting Sunday churches since they do not own church buildings. This is due to the very high cost of real estate in Houston. What will happen when all of these congregations have their permanent church homes and really begin to grow toward their Sabbath attendance potential?

Congratulations, Greater Houston/Bay Area congregations! We salute you for your aggressive efforts to reach every sector of our nation's fourth largest city with the everlasting gospel and the Three Angels' Messages.

Canales Called to Union Post

The Southwestern Union executive committee has appointed Eddie Canales to serve as associate publishing director for the Southwestern Union. Elder Canales comes from the Arizona Conference where he has worked during the past three years. He is known as an outstanding soul winner as well as a tiptop inspirational sales leader of literature evangelists in the states of Arizona and California.

Last year Canales conducted four evangelistic crusades and baptized 60 persons with the support of his literature evangelistic team. The Canales family will be moving to the Burleson area in the near future.

1989 Camporee Includes Southwestern Pathfinders

About 1,250 Pathfinders from all five conferences of the Southwestern Union will join more than 10,000 who are expected to participate in the Friendship Camporee at Agape Farms in Pennsylvania in 1989.

It will be the largest gathering of Pathfinders since Camp Hale, according to Ron Stretter, Columbia Union church ministries director and coordinator of planning for the event.

The Pathfinders will come from seven unions throughout North America—all but those on the west coast.

A major feature will be work on a replica of Noah's ark, authentic to the latest archeological information. A character portraying Noah will work on the ark—and preach every day. Other people will portray other Bible characters throughout the week, August 7-12, 1989.

Agape Farms is about 45 miles north-east of Breezewood, Pennsylvania, in the Allegheny Mountains. The Christian camp routinely hosts from 5,000 to 10,000 young people for Christian events.

"We'll be one of their biggest events in 1989," says Stretter, "but they should have no trouble handling us with adequate space and toilet and shower facilities."

Cost for the camporee is $65, and includes camping space and all the programs and events.

Cummings Heads Texas Hospital Cluster

Des Cummings Jr., president of Huguley Memorial Hospital, has been appointed chief executive officer of the recently organized Texas Cluster of Adventist Health System/Sunbelt, according to Mardian J. Blair, Sunbelt president. The cluster includes Hays Memorial Hospital in San Marcos, Huguley Memorial Hospital, Fort Worth, and Metroplex Hospital, Killeen.

The cluster arrangement of AHS/Sunbelt hospitals was initiated one year ago when the corporation decentralized its management function, and reduced corporate staff by approximately 40 percent. With the recent formation of the Texas Cluster and an Appalachia Cluster in the Southern Union, Sunbelt now consists of four groups of hospitals with the president of one hospital in each cluster as the chief executive officer.

The reduction of corporate staff and decentralization of management initiated last year represent an annual savings to the health system of approximately $2 million.

Ardmore Hospital Adds Diagnostic Tool

Ardmore Adventist Hospital has added a powerful new tool to help doctors in diagnosing illness inside the human body.

Magnetic Resonance Imaging (MRI) is one of the latest developments for finding out what is inside a person, without actually going inside. And Adventist Hospital is the first to offer this testing in the north Texas/southern Oklahoma area.

Magnetic Resonance Imaging is similar to a CAT Scanner, in that it compiles cross-sectional images of body parts. However, it produces clearer images of the body's soft tissues such as the heart, brain, and spine, than does a CAT Scanner.

Another advantage of MRI is the absence of radioactivity, since it produces its images by a strong magnetic field.

The pediatric nurses, through special training and experience are especially capable of relieving the fear and uncertainty associated with hospital stays for small children.

HMH put a $740,000 CAT scan unit in operation on February 1. CAT scans are cross-sectional images that enable the physician to diagnose a wide variety of medical conditions which affect organs and structures of the body, according to Barbara Nogales, registered technologist at the hospital.

Constituency Elects Officers

The Arkansas-Louisiana Conference held its 26th Conference Session on April 10, 1988, in the Shreveport South Church.

This was a special session as the celebration of the 100th anniversary of the Arkansas Conference is taking place in 1988. The membership in 1888 was 226 members when the conference organized at the Springdale, Arkansas, camp meeting on May 21, 1888. In 1932 Louisiana joined with Arkansas to form the conference organization that today has 8,180 members in 81 churches and three companies. The tithe income now stands at $4.5 million and the past triennial period had an 8 percent gain over the previous triennium.

In 1987 more than 200 Revelation Seminars were conducted along with many outreach evangelistic activities. During the triennium 1,111 persons were baptized into the churches in the conference.

One of the larger per capita educational systems operates in this conference with 33 church schools. Ozark Adventist Academy is enjoying an excellent school year and has added a chaplain to the staff to bring spiritual guidance to its students.

William L. Woodruff was reelected to serve as president of the conference for another triennium. The nominating committee extended a call to Duane McKey of Pendleton, Oregon, to serve as conference secretary, to fill the vacancy left when Lee Thompson was elected president of the New York conference just prior to the session. Elder McKey prayerfully considered the call, but was unable to accept at this time. Michael Jamieson, undertreasurer was asked to serve as treasurer and stewardship director, since Marshall Chase was recently elected treasurer of the Rocky Mountain Conference. The conference executive committee will fill the position of conference secretary at its meeting on April 28.

All of the departmental directors were reelected: Kenneth Jameson, ABC manager; John Bridges, associate director of church ministries for adults and young adults; Joe Watts, associate director of church ministries for youth and children; W. L. Woodruff, ASI and communication; Dale Kongorski, educational superintendent, and Floyd Eccles, assistant; Merrill Caviness, publishing and religious liberty; and Pete Kostenko, director of trust services.

The conference executive committee elected for the three-year period is composed of: W. L. Woodruff, chairman, Michael Jamieson, Beverly Amlaner, Ben Boggess, Delmer Cook, Lucas Diaz, Alva Dixon, Harold Harris, Joycelyn Hess, Ed Holton, Betty Lewins, Geneva Matthews, Randall Murphy, Dennis Nooner, Arthur Stumpf, and William White.

The new General Conference model of the constitution and bylaws which had been sent out to all the delegates by the Constitution and Bylaws Committee, was approved.

Parenting Seminar Held in Shreveport

Bob and Betty Forbes of the West Shores Medical Clinic in Hot Springs, Arkansas, presented a Parent-Child Enrichment Seminar sponsored by the Shreveport Junior Academy Home and School Association.

The seminar stressed the responsibility of parents to their children, and the importance of manifestations of gratitude, love and trust in parent-child relationships.

As they dealt with some of the difficulties in successful parenting, they compared three common family management styles that determine to a great extent the success parents may have in reaching desirable goals in bringing up their children.

1. Authoritarian management places emphasis on power and control. Authoritarian management may communicate the message of not caring how children think or feel.
2. Permissive management offers little or no leadership in the home. There will be numerous power struggles. There will be many threats, but little follow-through.
3. Relational management emphasizes sharing and working together. It gives choices and consequences in the process of learning to accept responsibility. Kindness with firmness and guidance is the principle of relational management.

Conflicts will arise. What is important is how conflict is handled. Children may be either discouraged or encouraged by the way conflicts are dealt with.

The Forbes seminars are aimed at helping parents succeed in providing a happy, healthy home for their families.

Gentry School Attacks Illiteracy

Adult illiteracy is a growing cause for concern. According to the U.S. Department of Education, there are 27 million adults in the United States — one in five — who cannot read beyond a fourth-grade level.

The Ozark Elementary School in Gentry, Arkansas, has launched a plan to eradicate such illiteracy at its roots. A remedial reading program for grades 1 through 8 has been introduced to provide assistance at the learning level for students who are experiencing difficulty in reading. The long-range goal is that such students, as they continue their education into secondary and higher education, will develop reading and comprehension skills to enable them to function at an optimum level.

The plan was sponsored by the Home and School Association, endorsed by David May, school principal, and developed under the guidance and supervision of LaVeda

Gay. With a master's degree in education administration and 23 years teaching experience, Mrs. Gay is using a one-on-one technique with an adult volunteer tutor for each participating student.

The program has 25 students with about 20 adult tutors participating. They spend 35 hours a week in 45-minute individual daily sessions. This is an all-volunteer program requiring no budgeted educational funds. The tutors are concerned members of the Gentry church, the Home and School Association, and the community.

David May reports, "This volunteer tutorial program is an attempt to reach the need of every young person at his or her learning ability. The blessing may not be just academic growth; there may be a relationship develop between the tutor and the student for a lifetime friendship."

Conference Staff Reelected

Robert D. Rider was voted a new three-year term as president of the Oklahoma Conference by the 340 delegates attending the 61st Regular Session on March 27, 1988. Confidence in Rider's leadership was evidenced by an overwhelming majority voice vote. Deryl Knutson was returned to office as secretary-treasurer.

The session, held at Wewoka Woods Adventist Center, was directed by Cyril Miller, C. R. Pritchett, and Max A. Trevino, officers of the Southwestern Union Conference.

All departmental directors were reelected. The structure of the departments and titles of the directors had previously been voted by the conference executive committee to follow the new General Conference Church Ministries Department alignment. The departments will be as follows:

Church Ministries Department — Robert D. Rider, director; Jerry Schnell, associate director for adults; Don Fortner, associate director for youth and young adults; Joyce Fortner, associate director for children; and Rodney Grove, associate director for stewardship.

Robert and Hattie Lee Rider following his overwhelming endorsement as conference president.

Deryl and Linda Knutson accepting his reappointment as Secretary-Treasurer.

Elder Rider introduces Tulsa Spanish Church delegates, Ciro Castillo and George and Trinnie Trujillo, following the acceptance of the congregation into the Oklahoma Sisterhood of Churches.

Other departments — ministerial secretary and evangelism coordinator, Jerry Schnell; Communication Department, Rodney Grove, director; superintendent of schools, Gary Affolter; Publishing Department, John Altsman, director; Adventist Book Center, Don P. Deisch, manager; Health and Temperance Department, Sam C. Loewen, director; Trust Services, Alfred C. Schnell, director; and Community Services, Vera Wolfe, director.

The members of the conference executive committee for the new triennium will be: Dorice Allen, Rollin Bland, Beth Carlson, Hubert Cisneros, Claudio Consuegra, James East, Paul Hoover, Dan Jensen, Jim D. King, H. L. Meister, Ina Reese, Palmer Steinert, Ernest Wolfe, and the conference officers.

A revised constitution and bylaws prepared by the standing Constitution and Bylaws Committee of the conference, was unanimously voted by the delegates. Oklahoma will be in line with the new model constitution and bylaws of the General Conference.

Significant areas of progress during the triennium were emphasized in Rider's report and through an audiovisual presentation entitled "Our Oklahoma — a Family Portrait." Woven through the stories of Oklahoma people, representing the 6,105 conference members, was the report of 801 baptisms, a tithe increase of $33,243, a gain in the Oklahoma 2% Fund from .62 percent to .72 percent, almost one-half million dollars in trust maturities, and Silver Vanguard Ingathering victories for 24 consecutive years.

Progress at Summit Ridge Retirement Center was reflected in $400,000 in capital development. A portion of this went to build a new wing for residents needing intermediate care.

On January 30, 1987, the conference resumed management of Ardmore Adventist Hospital. A substantial operating gain has been experienced since that time. Construction of Phase I of a new facility is on the drawing board.

Wewoka Woods Adventist Center continues to be the hub of the conference program, providing spiritual, educational and social activities for all ages. Expansion and improvements are made on a regular basis.

Parkview Adventist Academy and Tulsa Adventist Academy, the conference's two day academies, made plant improvements during the triennium as well as being strengthened academically.

A second audiovisual program reported on the work of the Oklahoma Lay Commission in the development of an overall conference program for the ensuing triennium. These objectives, to be implemented through the departments, were enthusiastically voted by the delegates.

The final agenda item had a spiritual focus. Receiving the Holy Spirit in a fuller measure was emphasized through a renewal of Oklahoma's Faith Covenant, read in unison. "The Family of God," sung as the closing commitment left each delegate with the good feeling that to be pictured in "Our Oklahoma — a Family Portrait" is a wonderful privilege and joy. Let the Lord be praised!

Church Warns Against Misuse of Name

The name Seventh-day Adventist carries special meaning. If its significance is to be retained, the church must protect it from those who would misrepresent it. Deliberate theft of this name requires the same quality of protection we would exercise were we responding to any other invasion of property interests, including forgery and the theft of funds.

The problem of unauthorized use of the church's name has emerged in a variety of formats. It has become so serious that the General Conference has created a Trademark Committee structured to carefully and prayerfully implement procedures for protecting the church's interest in its name in the context of Christian understanding.

We regard the use of the church's name by a group that is not a duly recognized component of the Seventh-day Adventist Church organization, as a fraud upon the public. To upsurp the church's name by taking money from the public in the name of the church, or by giving the impression that the church sanctions the group's goals and philosophy often creates confusion as to the church's mission as well as its fundamental principles and beliefs.

The church's trade names are registered and protected under United States law. When unauthorized use is discovered, the process of reviewing the issues and proceeding to protect the name is done with deliberate care and Christian charity. If it is determined that there is an authorized use that could mislead the public, the procedures require that an appropriately worded request be forwarded to the individual to cease and desist. After much time and patience, if the request is ignored or rejected, a more firm and direct reminder is sent, usually by the attorney retained as special counsel to represent the church in trade name matters.

If after further time cooperation is not gained through voluntary understanding, the church has no choice but to utilize the injunctive relief established by federal law to protect its property — the good name of the church. The church does not sue the offending organization for the purpose of obtaining damages or punitive judgments; it simply asks that the courts restrain the organization from unauthorized use of its name.

The adversary of all that is good is the master counterfeiter. A deliberate misappropriation of the church's good name, for whatever alleged rationale, is a contribution to his effort. It is regrettable that the patient, protracted process by which the church encourages groups and individuals to voluntarily cease and desist is sometimes ignored. But Christ has observed, "By their fruits ye shall know them" (Matthew 7:20) and taking property rights without permission, and misrepresentation to the public are outside the scope of acceptable legal conduct as well as Christian behavior. As in the matter of dismissing church members for unbecoming behavior, we all are pained to take such measures, but if, after carefully following all of the lengthy steps outlined above, cooperation is not achieved, we know of no other means to protect the interests of God's cause.
