What Camp Yorktown Bay Means to Me

I remember when I was a little girl climbing out of bed early, before the sun came up, and crawling into the back of a car. I remember waking up to the sounds of birds singing, the light shining through the trees, and my mother saying, "Wake up, we're here." I remember stretching my arms to the clouds, yawning, trying to breathe in a piece of the blue, blue sky and make it mine forever.

Of the sweet, hazy memories I have of childhood, the ones that stand out the most clearly are of warm summer nights under the stars, singing around a campfire, feeling the spray as the ski boat skimmed the surface of the lake in the early morning.

To me, as a young child, Camp Yorktown Bay always seemed the epitome of summer. I daydreamed in school, counted the days until I would be there again. I remembered the smell of glue and horse sweat, and the feel of cool, green water and hot sun.

As I grew into the preteen years, camp came to mean a place to meet people, to giggle over childish jokes, to get crushes on the guys and sometimes the counselors, to sleep on the docks and in the wagons, to feel the rough wooden benches under my legs at morning devotion. It was running down the hill with the wind in my hair, struggling to stay ahead of the girls who ran laughing behind me.

Now I walk down the same hills; I have learned to walk softly; I have learned to listen. The same, gentle wind plays at my hair, but what it says to me is not the same. I sit on the same benches where we sang to the strumming of a guitar, touch the saddles where I rode, feel the same things I felt then. I still lie peacefully on the same rocks, still hike through the same woods, but what camp means to me has changed and grown different.

It means that there is always a hand to wipe away my tears; always a place to run to. It means a thousand whispers in my mind that say this is where I belong; that part of me is forever here. ●

Everybody Was Thankful

By Virginia Burton

Sketchy bits of information came over the scanner. The ambulance was being sent to the scene of an accident a few miles out of town.

Over an hour later our phone rang. My husband Gordon was being called to the hospital. Wesley Herber, head deacon for 26 years of the Shattuck, Oklahoma, church, greatly respected in the community, was in critical condition with a broken neck and other injuries. The family wanted to have special prayer for him before he was transferred to a hospital in Enid.

Six weeks later, on an icy Sabbath morning, church attendance was down by about 50 percent. Near the end of Sabbath School, two people walked in, creating an electrifying effect on the congregation — Wesley Herber and his devoted wife Virginia. Wesley was wearing his "halo," a device with four screws into his skull and clamps against his chest and back to keep his neck immobile.

Virginia Burton is the wife of Gordon Burton, Shattuck pastor.

It is customary in the Shattuck church for those who feel a special gratitude to God to bring a thank offering to the altar during the opening song. Many times no one goes forward; other times, one or two do. This day, as soon as we began singing, Virginia Herber moved quietly forward with her thank offering. Soon she was followed by another. And another. They kept coming throughout the song. It was a tender moment. Our brother was back in church and the praise belonged to our merciful Heavenly Father. ●

Our Partnership With HIM

YOU HAVE THE RIGHT...

Of course you do! Everybody does! But sometimes you had better be careful how you exercise it. It's almost like having the right-of-way at an intersection — but it isn't going to help much if the other fellow can't stop.

Sometimes folks get into trouble (even in church) because they exercise their rights.

One man didn't like the way some of the decisions of the building committee were being carried out. He felt so strongly about it that he attracted quite a following. The building came to a halt, and he quit going to church.

Nobody questioned his right to feel as he did, but they weren't sure about his staying home from church — after all, it wasn't God's fault.

One wonders how it would have turned out if he hadn't come across a principle one day that completely changed his thinking. Here it is: Sometimes one may have the right to feel the way he does, but he dare not exercise this right if it might bring disunity.

You see, unity is a most important thing. A group may be lacking in lots of things, but if they have unity they can accomplish anything, for God will bless them.

Unity is so important to Christians because it is the convincing evidence that God sent His Son into the world to save sinners. It is the unmistakable evidence that God can change men's lives — if they will only let Him.

Every group is composed of individuals who have different likes and dislikes. If they have the love of God in their hearts they will be in perfect unity. It's a miracle! We have the right. There's no question about this, but sometimes it is better not to exercise it.

Nursing Department Relocates

Southwestern Adventist College is in the process of moving its nursing program into new facilities. The new nursing building will be located on the corner of Magnolia and Mockingbird Lane, situated between Leiske-Pultar Gymnasium and the Committee of 100 Cafeteria.

According to Teresa Kennedy, professor of nursing, SAC's nursing program needs the new facilities because of the expanded growth and interest in the nursing field. Marvin Anderson, president of SAC, says, "Southwestern Adventist College wants to meet the need of the growing number of students who desire a Christian education in the field of nursing."

The building that houses the nursing program, Moran Hall, has become too small to hold the current nursing students, while studies predict that interest in nursing as a career will continue to grow in the years to come. Evelyn Grosboll, nursing assistant professor, says, "The classrooms are too crowded. They are now holding right up to their maximum of students for lectures and at least one is too small for test taking. We've just plain outgrown our space!"

The largest classrooms in the new nursing facility will be able to hold up to 60 students at a time, while the current classrooms can only hold 45. In addition to having larger classrooms, the nursing building will bring all the nursing offices under one roof, improving their efficiency and communication. Grosboll believes the new facilities will "unify the nursing program" in other ways, too. "Having all the instructors and students under one roof is an improvement, and we'll have better student and work flow patterns," she adds.

The new nursing facility, to be located in the former Texas Adventist Book Center, will not be as isolated from the SAC campus as Moran Hall. It will be within convenient walking distance from the Mabee Center, Scales Hall, the Gymnasium, and just a few feet from the cafeteria.

Construction and remodeling of the new nursing center began in late January and Dale Hainey, head of building maintenance, says it should be finished by the first of April. Grosboll says that as soon as the new nursing center is ready, the nursing program will move in "lock, stock, and barrel," and continue its curriculum without interruption.

SAC Constituency to Meet May 3

Southwestern Adventist College will hold its biennial constituency meeting at 10:00 a.m., Friday, May 3, 1991, in the Mabee Center's Wharton Auditorium. According to the bylaws of the College, the constituency of the corporation is composed of:

1. The members of the Executive Committee of the Southwestern Union Conference of Seventh-day Adventists.

2. The members of the Board of Trustees of Southwestern Adventist College.

3. The officers of the college and associates in administration, the assistant professors, associate professors, and professors of the college, and the Alumni Association Board members and Committee of 100 Board members.

4. The members of the Executive Committees of the member conferences of the Southwestern Union Conference of Seventh-day Adventists.

5. The members of the Board of Education of the Southwestern Union Conference of Seventh-day Adventists.

6. Such authorized representatives of the General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists as may be present.

The constituency of the college meets every two years for the purpose of hearing reports from the college officers, making changes in the bylaws, if required, and electing one-third of the members of the Board of trustees. Every two years one-third of the board members are elected for six-year terms. Board members whose terms expire in 1991 are: Marvin Anderson, Keene, Texas; K.C. Beem, Keene, Texas; John McKinney, Albuquerque, New Mexico; Robert Rider, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma; V.L. Roberts Cleburne, Texas; Max A. Trevino, Keene, Texas; Arlene Tucker, Keene, Texas; Don Welch, Fort Worth, Texas; Ernest Wolfe, Jones, Oklahoma; and William Woodruff, Shreveport, Louisiana.

Members of the constituency should plan now to be in Keene on May 3 for this important constituency meeting.

Student Missionary Scholarship Established

"A new scholarship has been established at Southwestern that will tremendously benefit our student missionary program," reports Marvin Anderson, president of Southwestern Adventist College. The funds for the scholarship were provided by Dr. and Mrs. Robert Smith of Keene, Texas.

The Smiths have been longtime supporters of Southwestern, according to Anderson. Former missionaries to Thailand, they wanted to encourage more students to serve as student missionaries.

Each year from five to seven Southwestern students participate in the program, according to Victor Brown, chairman of SAC's Student Missions Council. He says: "This will make it a lot easier for some students who want to serve, but just aren't able to because of finances."

Interest from the Bob and Karen Smith Scholarship Fund will help students either to pay air fare to and from their assignment, or to assist with tuition costs upon their return to Southwestern. Student missionaries also receive stipends from the conference or division in which they minister.

"This is the first scholarship at Southwestern that has been specifically designated for student missions," says Sharon Leach, vice president of advancement. Leach continued, "We hope that this gift will encourage others to be supportive of the program, too." The first scholarships will be awarded this spring to students who will serve during the 1991-92 school year. Scholarship amounts have not yet been established. The student missionary program is administered through the chaplain's office at the College.

KJCR Surpasses Fund Goal

The annual fund-raising appeal of Southwestern Adventist College's FM radio station, KJCR, has ended successfully. February 9-16 was "I Love KJCR Week." The total raised this year was $21,245.

KJCR continues the tradition of meeting and surpassing their $20,000 goal. Last year's total was $20,430. Funds invested by listeners pay for nearly 40 percent of the station's operating expenses, including student announcer's wages, programming, and minor equipment.

Bob Mendenhall, general manager, says, "I'm so pleased with listener response this year." One of the reasons "I Love KJCR week" was so successful this year, he said, is that there are more listeners in a wider range who have pledged their support. Three new "88's," listeners who pledge $88 or more, came in from Granbury this year. With the completion of a new transmission tower and antenna last May, the station's signal, 88.3 FM, has been able to reach into a new area of 15,000 square miles, including Granbury, Weatherford, Mineral Wells, and Glen Rose.

A new feature of "I Love KJCR Week" was an open house. From 2 to 6 p.m. on February 16, listeners could come and visit KJCR, 300 North College Drive, and observe how the station works. Most visitors were given a tour of the station.

SAC Hams to Send Messages Overseas

Southwestern Adventist College's Ham Radio Awareness Group (H-Rag) is sending messages via amateur radio to troops involved in Desert Storm. Todd Goodman, junior business administration major, uses his ham radio and computer to send the messages overseas.

Initially, message forms are filled out at the recruitment/chaplain's office in the Findley Memorial Library and Administration Building. Messages must be 30 words or less and must be accompanied by the name of the service person, their Social Security number, APO/FPO number, and unit, and indicate the branch of the Armed forces in which they are serving.

Steve Sowder, instructor of computer information systems, puts these forms into the proper message format at the college's computer center. The messages are grouped into "books" on a floppy disk and given to Goodman. Goodman uses his radio-computer interface and links the messages to a bulletin board in Burleson, which is similar to an electronic phone system.

Goodman says, "Sending these messages for people who have loved ones overseas is part of the Code of Ethics of amateur radio operators, which includes serving the public." Goodman, along with other amateur radio operators, have also served the public by setting up emergency communication lines during disasters in their communities.

Goodman has had his amateur radio operator's license for three years, and carries the call sign KB5FGL. Steve Sowder has just passed his ham radio operator's license test and is waiting to receive his call sign from the Federal Communications Commission. Others on campus who have just passed their license test are Rob Durkin and Randy Goodman, sophomore biology majors.

Anyone wishing to send a message overseas can fill out a form at the recruitment/chaplain's office at Southwestern Adventist College, or call 817/645-3921, extension 294, for more information.

Todd Goodman, SAC junior, prepares to transmit messages from his room to service personnel in Operation Desert Storm.

Perryman Elected Chief of Staff

Huguley Hospital's medical staff has elected William Perryman, M.D. as chief of staff for 1991 and 1992. He replaces Elvin Adams, M.D. who was completing the unexpired term of Alex Bokovoy, M.D.

William Perryman

Perryman has been a staff physician at Huguley Hospital since June, 1976, and his specialty is obstetrics and gynecology. He is a graduate of Loma Linda University School of Medicine, Loma Linda, California, and served his residency at John Peter Smith Hospital in Fort Worth, Texas.

Orthopedic Unit Dedicated to Dr. Thomas

Huguley Hospital has dedicated its new orthopedic unit to the late James M. Thomas, M.D. During his 13 years at Huguley, Dr. Thomas has touched the hearts and lives of patients, physicians, and staff.

James M. Thomas

A graduate of the Loma Linda University School of Medicine, and a fellow of the American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons, Thomas was an active physician at John Peter Smith Hospital in Fort Worth, Texas, and Hinsdale Hospital, Hinsdale, Illinois, before joining the Huguley medical staff. He died after a short illness in September, 1990.

Donald Welch, hospital president, says, "James Thomas' contribution to Huguley Hospital and to our community will always be remembered and appreciated. The opening of this unit will serve as a reminder of his professionalism, his love for his patients, and his dedication to serving mankind."

Texarkana Students Conduct Bible School

"Christ began His church with only 12 apostles," says Robert Willis, teacher of the Texarkana Adventist Elementary School. "Let's see what He can do with 10 students who are willing to be used by Him."

Willis's students are operating a Bible Correspondence School. Twice each month they go into the community to pass out invitations to accept free Bible reading guides. Cards that are returned are promptly processed by students. The first two lessons are either mailed or hand delivered to the people, with a personal note expressing appreciation for their interest in studying the Bible.

Interests who do not return their lessons promptly receive a letter of encouragement and a copy of Steps to Christ. At the time of this report, 45 people have requested Bible lessons; 24 lessons have been graded and returned; and 24 Steps to Christ have been delivered.

Several adult church members have elected to become involved in the Bible School along with the children. The goal is to have over 100 enrollments by the close of the VISITOR PLAYS BALL. Floyd Eccles, adviser and assistant to the Arkansas-Louisiana Conference Education Department, recently visited the Lake Charles Adventist School. As the students went outside for physical education class, Eccles donned a glove and grabbed a bat to join them in a game of ball. Astonished students watched balls sail over their heads as the visitor flashed down the base paths. Education is more than books. It is also talents shared and love expressed.

Rider and Knutson Returned to Office

Robert D. Rider was elected to serve a sixth term as president of the Oklahoma Conference by the 330 delegates attending the Sixty-Second Regular Session on March 3, 1991. Reelected as secretary-treasurer was Deryl Knutson. The departmental staff was also returned to office.

During the new Triennium the following will serve as members of the Executive Committee: Robert D. Rider, chairman, Deryl Knutson, secretary, Rollin Bland, Donna Cox, Dan Hansen, Oliver Harris, Paul Hoover, Dan Jensen, Lowell Meister, Palmer Steinert, William G. Straight, Trevor Thompson, Ethel Whitacre, Ernest Wolfe, and Ciro Castillo, as observer representing Hispanic work.

Mile Markers of progress during the 1988-1990 Triennium were represented in the President's Report and in an audio visual presentation, "Mile Markers of God's Heaven-Bound Remnant", produced by Rodney Grove. Mile Markers of the future were outlined in the 1991-1993 Conference Objectives mapped out by the Oklahoma Conference Lay Commission. The longed-for final Mile Marker, Heaven, was expressed at the close of the meeting through the song "We're Trav'ling to Immanuel's Land" where, praise God, we will "Never, never part again!"

Tulsa Celebrates Ingathering Victory

The Tulsa church reached its Ingathering goal of $16,025 before bad weather set in and could relax while the snow and ice were on the ground.

Under the leadership of Steve Tuter, Don Pifer, Greg Breese, and Jack Wall, the campaign was short. The members worked and gave and then worked and gave some more.

Nona Breese designed a weekly display device which was constructed by Don Pifer and Greg Breese.

The victory banquet was planned by Virginia Aitken, Glenna Huff, Sandy Hold, Joada McGehee, Eula Mae Pifer, and Dorothy Wall. About 100 attended. Jerry Schnell, interim pastor, introduced the keynote speaker, Howard Voss, of Keene, Texas. Voss told of his Ingathering experiences in Wyoming, making all grateful for the relatively mild weather in Oklahoma. Entertainment was arranged by Mary Alyse Francisco.

BAPTISM. Mr. and Mrs. Kevin Firth were baptized by Mike McPeters, pastor of the Muskogee church. They are already involved with Sabbath School responsibilities.

Woodward Church Welcomes Converts

Three new members were added to the Woodward church by baptism on January 19, 1991.

Seven months earlier, Myrta Paph, a Woodward member, was impressed to mail Steps to Christ to the homes and rural routes in the Woodward area. Soon requests for Bible studies began coming in and the baptism of two ladies was the direct result of those studies. More studies are in progress.

Ruby Wells has been a student of the Bible for many years, and readily accepted the new beliefs as Laura Carson presented them to her. "She has been a delight to study with," says Laura.

Gordon Burton, pastor, studied with Debi Ward. Although her activities are limited because of a car accident two years ago, Debi is full of enthusiasm and praises to God for His leading in her life.

George Roberts' introduction to Adventism began when he was a child being raised by his Adventist grandmother. Two other Adventist ladies have had an influence on George's life. One is Shirley Bellows who gave him some studies and Adventist literature. The other is the former Virgie Walls, whom he married two years ago.

Spanish Churches Report 923 Baptisms

B.L. Roberts, director of the Spanish Department of the Texas Conference, reports that in 1990, 923 persons were baptized, joining the Spanish churches of the conference. That number is 55 percent of the conference total of 1,673 baptized. The Spanish Department's 1990 baptisms show an increase of almost 17 percent for the year.

Roberts' report includes three new churches and three new companies organized during the year. Four Spanish churches were dedicated free of debt. Tithe from the Spanish churches for 1990 totaled $2,066,244.92.

The membership of the Spanish churches is 6,012, with 56 organized churches and three companies. There are 25 full-time and eight part-time Spanish pastors. They have set themselves a goal of baptizing 1,175 new members, and raising up 11 new churches in different areas of the Texas Conference this year.

Carson to Speak at Youth Congress

Benjamin S. Carson, director of pediatric neurosurgery at the prestigious Johns Hopkins Hospital, will be the featured speaker at the 1991 Texas Youth/Young Adult Congress on Sabbath, at 4:00 p.m. in the Dallas Convention Center.

Dr. Carson gained international recognition for his participation in the historic separation of the Binder Siamese twins in 1987. Despite his noted accomplishments, this master surgeon is refreshingly humble and is well known for his compassion and sensitivity. He has become a role model for all people, especially youth.

In his best-selling autobiography, Gifted Hands, Dr. Carson details his struggle from inner-city childhood to famed neurosurgeon. Over 100,000 copies of the book have been printed. Individuals attending the youth congress will be able to purchase his book the evening of April 6, and have it autographed by Dr. Carson.

Students Help Teach Language

Having a knowledge of two languages is very important if you live in the Rio Grande Valley. In order to help people learn both English and Spanish, the Harlingen Adventist Elementary school is teaching language classes to the community three evenings a week. Students in grades five through eight are assisting the teachers, Kenneth and Agida Henderson, in the instruction of the adults attending the language classes. The school's goals are to meet a need in the community, have students participate in community outreach witnessing, and make the community more aware of the church and school.

Lewisville Receives Seven New Members

Seven new members were recently baptized into membership in the Lewisville church. Bill Harper, elder of the 65-member congregation, is conducting a new members class each Friday evening to help the new members understand the different aspects of the Seventh-day Adventist Church, such as its organizational structure, the education system, and tithes and offerings. Occasionally guest speakers from the Texas Conference office have presented the topic of discussion.

The new members were baptized as a result of a Prophecy Seminar conducted in North Carrollton by Jim Peterson, lay pastor. H.E. Walker baptized Douglas Thornton, Kirsten Wilson, Christopher Lester, Deborah Vest, Christopher Martie, Theresa Collins, and Willie Foster.

Students' Reading Club Inaugurated

The Texas Conference Office of Education announces the start of a new reading program entitled Dr. Carson's Reading Club. It was initiated by the Southwestern Union Conference, and is being launched as a pilot program in the Texas Conference. It is a joint effort of the Review and Herald Publishing Association and the Education Department to provide materials to Adventist schools for promoting more book reading and less television watching among students.

The concept grew out of Dr. Ben Carson's personal experience as a child, as recounted in his autobiography, Gifted Hands. He didn't have a father. He was showing a nasty temper. Looking at the zero on his test paper, he thought he was the dumbest kid in school. It didn't appear that Ben Carson would ever get out of the Detroit ghetto. Then his mother insisted that he read two books a week and limit his television watching to three programs a week. Mrs. Carson's bold move was a turning point in Ben's life. Today he is director of pediatric neurosurgery at Johns Hopkins Hospital.

His story is making a deep impression on the readers of his book. Among them are teachers who want their students to strive for the same reading goals. This need sparked the book club idea in the mind of Billie Peckham, associate superintendent of education in the Texas Conference.

The Review and Herald is developing free book club materials for the use of Adventist educators. In addition, the program provides opportunity for children as well as schools to purchase Review and Herald books. Peckham says, "We're expecting 100 percent participation on the part of all Texas schools."

Barbara Russell, a teacher in the Scenic Hills Adventist School in San Antonio, was so impressed by Dr. Carson's story that she gave a copy of the book to parents of her students as a Christmas gift. She says, "When I read how this successful young neurosurgeon's mother plotted a course for his life and helped him develop the skills to achieve, I was impressed that we could all benefit from their experience.

"Nearly every activity of life these days is dependent upon good reading skills. Children who don't learn to read with a high level of comprehension are handicapped for life. As adults they won't be able to evaluate a contract and protect themselves from fraud. They will be poorly informed about the things going on around them. The ideas of their peers will go over their heads. Worst of all, they are unlikely to experience the sheer joy of reading for pleasure."

To enroll in the Dr. Carson Book Club, students pledge to read two or more books every week, while watching no more than three television programs. As incentives, they will earn pins and certificates marking their progress.

The success of the program depends on more than just students and teachers. "Parents need to make a commitment to the program, too, and be persistent in supporting it," Russell adds. "With everyone's involvement the program will undoubtedly reap great dividends."

It is hoped that the Dr. Carson Book Club plan will spread to the whole North American Division for the 1991-92 school year.

COVER STORY

“I love doing flowers”

Jerry Toews, senior elementary education major, is the artist of the painting featured on the cover of this magazine and the 1991-92 Southwestern Adventist College Bulletin. The painting is a watercolor montage of Texas wild flowers against a black background which took Toews from 15 to 20 hours to complete. The SAC commissioned painting is the perfect vehicle to display Toews' skill because it consists of everything he likes best; painting, painting flowers and using watercolors as the medium. "I love doing flowers," he says, "And I like using watercolors because of their colors, the shades and texture."

Though Toews was always interested in art, he didn't receive any formal training until he started attending college at Oklahoma Christian College where he earned a Bachelor of Arts degree in Art. When he decided to continue his education by obtaining a Bachelor of Science degree in education with an emphasis on teaching art, his mother persuaded him to spend at least one semester here at SAC. He went, but reluctantly. "I dreaded going to SAC," he says, laughing, "The college in Oklahoma had such a nice campus and a very good, first-rate art program, and I didn't know what to expect at SAC. I agreed to attend for at least one semester and I loved it so much I've ended up staying for three."

Toews' plans for the future include teaching art classes as a private instructor and possibly working with his sister, Lisa Toews, also a student at SAC. "When I'm older, like 50 or so, I'd like to teach art courses in college," Toews says, musing on his future. Whatever his future may hold, art will always be an integral part of it. "All I could ever think about doing was art." Even though Toews is almost finished with his second college degree, he is first and foremost an artist. "I'd rather paint any day than go to school," he laughs.

Toews' own personal philosophy on art shines through in his paintings. "You need to express yourself in your art," he says. "Your true self." Taking one look at his paintings tells you what Toews is like. "I like to paint pretty things and I'm kinda a happy camper, pretty much, and I think it shows in my paintings. I try to make people happy. If they look at my paintings, it makes them smile." He looks up and smiles, "At least I hope so."

EDITORIAL

Individual Dignity

Karl Marx, the father of communism and Adam Smith, the father of capitalism were both "classical" economists. In other words, they both believed in the same set of economic rules—the laws of supply and demand. Smith believed that if government adopted a laissez-faire policy of no control of economic affairs the magical "invisible land" of capitalism would automatically control society, so that all citizens would receive the maximum benefits that that society could allow. The ultimate state would, of course, be Utopia. Marx believed that if the laws of supply and demand were left unchecked eventually one surviving competitor would become so strong that he would rival the government itself, thus bringing down the entire structure and cause a dictatorship. He felt that a free democratic system has elements that would cause the system to self-destruct from within unless the government controlled it. His way to Utopia was for the government to control all of life.

The main reason that America has become such a great power is because it recognized the dignity of the individual people. It allows for capitalism slightly kept in check with anti-trust laws. It allows for the government to act with compassion with respect of social programs for the aged and disabled.

SAC is in many ways subject to the same forces as any other system of government or business. If it is run with too much control and order it will destroy itself by power hungry, insensitive individuals. If it is allowed to run with no control it will eventually fail out of financial and political chaos.

The administrators shown in this issue are examples of professionals who are able to maintain order, but who also recognize the dignity of the individual.

“See Dave Hope”

Registration day, August 18, 1972, was busy. A long line of students were trying to get registered. All students were required to stop at the business office to see Dave Hope before their registration process could be completed.

Students wanting campus jobs—see Dave Hope. Needing student aid—see Dave Hope. Parents of freshmen who wouldn't leave town until their child had a campus job—see Dave Hope. Married students who needed an apartment to move into immediately in order to turn in their U-Haul—see Dave Hope. Students paying tuition—see Dave Hope.

Enrollment had doubled since 1965 when Dave Hope pioneered the position of student finance director at Southwestern. That's twice as many students to see Dave Hope. In that 7-year period, student aid alone had increased from $144,000 to $1.5 million.

That was 1972. Today, someone else arranges for student housing. Someone else collects tuition. Someone else arranges loans and grants and scholarships. Dave's day-to-day burdens are weightier. He's now SAC's financial vice president, responsible for the $12 million dollar campus, the $6 million operating budget and the $5 million conglomerate, Southwestern Diversified Industries.

As executive vice president and chief operating officer for SDI, Dave meets weekly with the managers of Southwestern ColorGraphics, LaLoma Foods and the SDI properties.

As Southwestern's financial vice president he meets regularly with the college's administrative team and the heads of various departments.

His steps up SAC's financial career ladder have been steps of strong initiative, hard work, and long hours. Dave Hope first arrived on campus the summer of 1963, a married student with children, pursuing a degree in business. The head of the custodial department had just retired, and Dave asked for the job.

In addition to custodial duties it was Dave's responsibility to fire the boilers early each morning, and to open and secure all buildings. In those days all buildings were locked during the hours when classes were not in session. College classes were conducted in the morning, academy classes in the afternoon, and more college classes during the evening.

The job ran 70-80 hours each week, and study schedule around his work responsibilities. Raymond Moore's mandatory morning work

As Dave's family grew and became established roots grew deeper. He worked closely with a work obligations while continuing his education. He calls the names of Southwestern's presidents: Moore, Paul Wilson, E. C. Wines, Leroy Leisner, McAdams, and now Marvin Anderson.

Looking back at SAC's presidents, Dave for mark of a good leader," he says, "is the ability to meet the needs." He feels sure that SAC has had a presidential role at the right times. "More than we've needed from our board chairmen, and

"Back when SAC was the 'new kid on the block' SAC's move to senior college status in 1965, we had more than the usual incentive because we had a tradition or reputation to lean on. We moved it quicker and better than anyone anticipated motivated."

Doing it better seems to be a way of life for Dave. "My objective for the college is that we live by a 'bail-out' philosophy. At SAC we try to be reasonably sure we're going the right direction. We make decisions that are not pleasant or popular. We stabilize during the tough years and keep the budget on no debt and a stable enrollment. That's the way we come, we plan on steady, consistent growth. You don't get large enrollment gains that way. You have and build on it little by little."

"I am very optimistic about our future," Dave says. "In our long range projections, we're in a good part of the way. We have high growth because we are in a good financial posture. We have strong leadership. We have a well-informed faculty and staff who know their job like what they do. We have excellent communication and, best of all, we're privileged to be working in a just kind of gets in your blood!"

"She works with students"

Patty Norwood joined the SAC staff in 1985 when she became administrative secretary to the financial vice president. Three years later, when the position of financial aid director was offered, she accepted the challenge of working directly with students.

"One of the most enjoyable aspects of my job," she quietly beams, "is getting to visit all seniors in the Seventh-day Adventist high schools in the Southwest. We do a seminar at each school, and then talk to each student. I like to let them know what financial aid will be available to them when they enter college, and I help them become familiar with the process of application."

She enjoys being available to answer the questions of college students and prospective students year-round. She urges individuals to stop by her office on the campus, or to call SAC for answers to their financial questions. She likes to build trust. "An important part of our job," she emphasizes, "is to feel that every transaction is done in confidence and we are sensitive to each college student's need to share personal financial information."

Patty monitors government grant, work-study and loan funds, makes student aid awards, and keeps informed of ever-changing federal regulations. She says, "There's a tremendous amount of responsibility because of the changing government regulations. There's variety in this job. I like that!"

“Accountant’s perspective”

Larry Garrett thinks he has the perfect job. He’s the assistant financial vice-president at SAC, and hopes to work at the college for the rest of his life. In fact, Larry has never worked anywhere else!

He came to Keene from Wichita Falls, Texas, when he was a junior in academy, living in Hamilton Hall, the men’s dormitory, while he attended Chisholm Trail Academy. After graduating from CTA he thought it only right to continue on at Southwestern. He says, “I never thought of going anywhere other than Keene. My mother and several other relatives attended Southwestern. It was also close to home.”

Larry majored in accounting. While he was a student he landed a job in the business office, doing accounts payable and other duties as assigned. He married Laura Hooten the summer between his junior and senior year, and in 1972 when he received his degree he began to work full time in accounts receivable and as cashier.

In his current position, Larry acts as chief accountant, preparing financial statements and reports, cost studies and financial analyses. He keeps track of all institutional property records, funds and titles, maintains internal financial controls and supervises the preparation and distribution of pay checks. And, during those rare times when the president and the vice presidents are all out of town, Larry’s in charge of the college!

When asked the reason for SAC’s financial stability he speaks with assurance. “We have been fortunate to be able to limit fixed cost and create a budget that can expand and contract to different enrollment levels.” He thinks the college is doing extremely well, and there’s not much he would change. He believes the ideal for all colleges would be to maintain enrollment and concentrate on academic excellence. Understating his personal philosophy, Larry emphasizes that he is happy to see our institution successful and running smoothly.

When Larry turns off the computer and closes the ledger at 5:00 p.m. he balances his day with personal activities. He’s an avid sports fan, a doting father, and he loves to trade cars.

“You can’t afford not to . . .”

Beth Lowry, director of student finance, keeps up with student indebtedness. She’s the one who sends statements and does collection activities. She knows when a student owes money to the college. She knows when a former student defaults on a loan. She releases and holds transcripts.

Students often perceive Beth as the person in the business office who urges them to work longer hours, work weekends, work holidays, spend less money, be responsible . . .

“It is often difficult when you have to tell people some of the things that must be said in my position,” states Beth. “I understand that in some situations one can be misinterpreted.” Despite sometimes unfavorable opinions, she is dedicated to giving 100% tender loving care.

Beth conscientiously counsels the students, searching for work opportunities for each of them. Often she hires them to do yardwork at her house, or calls people in the community who might need temporary help.

In her spare time, she keeps up with her favorite people—the students she has come to know so well. In her office there is a wall dedicated solely to photographs of students.

On campus you can catch her at a basketball game or almost every social function. Beth comments, “I go to see the kids. They are important to me and I enjoy watching them do well. I am a strong believer in Christian education. It seems that you can’t afford to do it, but reality is you can’t afford not to do it.”

“To help my people”

When Jerome Kabayiza was a little boy in Rwanda he often gathered the village children and preached to them, using words from a language he did not yet understand, imitating the white missionaries he had heard preaching in English.

Now that he is grown, Jerome is a busy theology student at Southwestern Adventist College, studying homiletics, Hebrew and history of Christianity. Jerome says he never dreamed that he would have the opportunity to study in America, or to receive a college education, but SAC is just one of many opportunities he has seized.

Jerome was born into a Seventh-day Adventist home. Because he lived with his grandfather in Uganda during his teen years he was privileged to attend an Adventist academy, and to learn English along with Swahili and three tribal languages. When his grandfather died, and it seemed that he would not be able to continue his education beyond high school, Jerome found work as a translator, first for a building project, then for a missionary who taught him to use a computer as he translated children's books.

In his country, young men are expected to earn sufficient money to purchase a bride and then support her and a large family, so Jerome expected that he would “save some money, get married, and make a life.”

Instead, an American missionary was observing Jerome's lifestyle. Jerome says, “Even though we were poor, my father always told his children, ‘Never steal, just be faithful in everything, and God will bless you.’” Jerome had followed his father's counsel, maintaining honesty during difficult financial circumstances. And it paid off.

The American was so impressed with Jerome's integrity that he decided to send Jerome to college—to the Adventist University of Central Africa—about 100 miles from Jerome's village.

There he learned to speak French and completed requirements for a degree in secondary education.

In 1989, when Elder W. C. Jones held evangelistic meetings in Rwanda, Jerome learned that Elder Jones needed an interpreter, and he volunteered. During the meetings Elder Jones asked Jerome, “What do you need in order to better serve your people?” Jerome responded, “An education.”

Because of Elder Jones' suggestion, and his American friend's financial support, Jerome found himself in Texas in September, 1990.

Encouraged by board of trustees chairman Cyril Miller, Jerome enrolled at Southwestern Adventist College two weeks after the fall semester had started. Soon afterward he learned that civil war had erupted in Rwanda, and several of his friends had lost their lives.

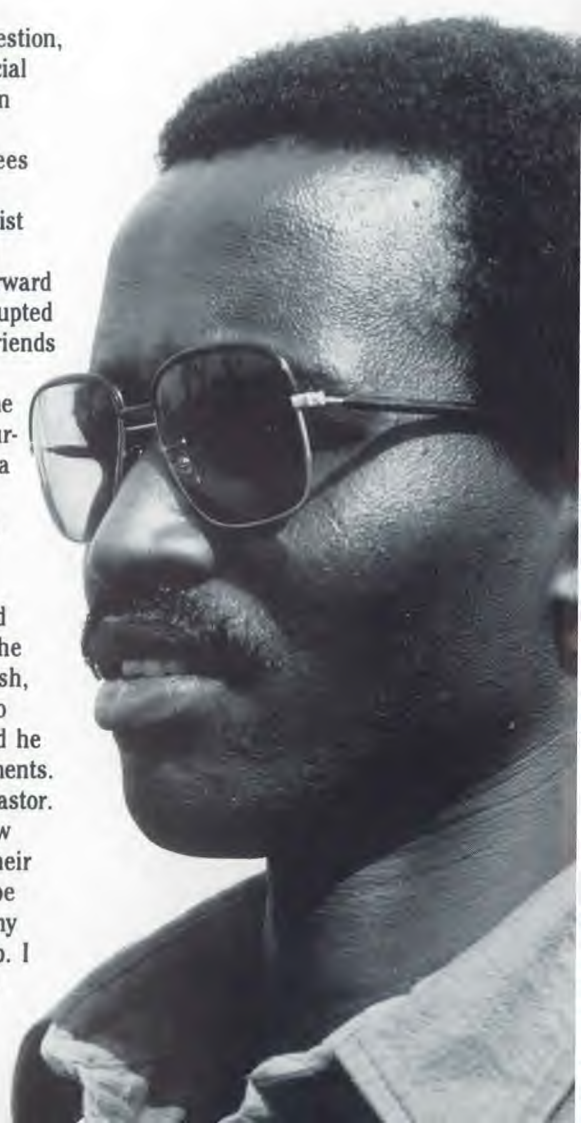

Hearing this sad news, Jerome concluded, “God must have a purpose for my life. He must have a reason for letting me live and get an education. I must return someday to help my people.”

Commenting on his studies, Jerome says he loves Greek, and each day in his devotional time he compares verses in Greek, English, and his native language. He also loves to share his testimony, and he accepts many speaking appointments.

He reflects, “I want to be a pastor. I like people. Jesus liked to know about people and take care of their needs. I know that I will never be able to satisfy all the needs of my people, but I will be able to help. I won't be making enough money, working for the church, but Jesus tells me to help my neighbor.

“My father was not able to send me to school, but through the help of fellow Christians I have been able to receive an education. I want to do the same for others. There are many people in my county who would like to have a Christian education. I will return to help make that possible.”

Spanish Series Yields New Members

A six-week Spanish evangelistic series was conducted at the Albuquerque Rio Grande Spanish church by Eduardo Canales, associate publishing director of the Southwestern Union. He commuted from Burleson, Texas, to Albuquerque for the week-end series.

As a result, 23 persons were baptized and two joined the church on profession of faith.

With an average attendance of over 100, each meeting began with a color film of the Life, Passion, and Death of Christ. Song services and special music were directed by Marcello Javier, with introduction of guests and prayer by Larry Vigil, first elder, and other officers of the church.

The series was followed with a Revelation Seminar conducted by Jorge Guzman, a literature evangelist.

Northeast Church Holds Cooking School

A cooking school was held recently in the hospitality section of the Northeast El Paso church by Mary Russell, registered dietician and employee of the Texas Department of Health and a member of the Northeast church. Pauline Howard and Ben Chir assisted.

The school was attended by both church and community members who received instructions and demonstrations in preparing healthful and nutritious meals for their families.

Broadcasts Lead to Conversion

Because of radio broadcasts by the Amarillo Spanish church, a new family has been added to the church.

The church continues to present the radio program, "The Three Angels' Messages" on Radio Variedades. One and a half hours of additional time has been given by the station, free of charge, for another program, Amanacer Cristiano.

Pastors Rocky Guerrero and Harold Bohr have taken an active part in presenting messages. Milton Peverini, speaker of La Voz de la Esperanza, has supplied that program for use in Amarillo. Musical tapes have been shared by Ysis Espana of Keene, Texas, and Jose Ocampo of California.

Olsen Park Bids Farewell to Millers

On December 31, Amarillo's Olsen Park church traditionally celebrated New Years with the annual Chili Cook-off and a talent program. After the supper, the talent performance included light classical piano music, violin and harmonica selections, a funny reading entitled "Betty and the Ball Game," inspirational poems, and humor.

The master of ceremonies was Pastor Sam Miller. This was his last such performance, as the Millers are moving to Colorado Springs, Colorado, where he will be the senior pastor of the Colorado Springs church. Words of appreciation and love were expressed to them for their dedication and service to the Amarillo Olsen Park church.

The program ended with the presentation of a gift to the Millers and a special blessing for the new year.

Andrews Sets Workshop For Residence Hall Deans

The Andrews University School of Education and Lifelong Learning will again hold a workshop for residence hall deans, June 16-25, 1991, in Berrien Springs, Michigan.

According to Donald W. Murray, workshop director, "this experience is appropriate for pre-service or in-service training. The curriculum is structured for rookie or experienced deans, students who are planning to work in an Adventist boarding school, and counselors or administrators who want to increase their understanding of the residence hall perspective."

For full information, contact Lifelong Learning, Andrews University, Berrien Springs, Michigan 49104; 616/471-3286.

Maranatha Announces Mission Adventure, 1991

Maranatha Volunteers International, along with the Northern California Conference, the Carmichael Adventist Church, and Mr. and Mrs. Denzil McNeilus are sponsoring Mission Adventure 1991, an all-day short-term mission conference, on April 20, 1991, in Sacramento, California.

The purpose of the conference is to bring together mission-minded youth and youth leaders who have participated or wish to participate in a team short-term mission trip. Youth leaders and sponsors of youth mission trips will be featured. Workshops will address mission related issues.

For full information on Mission Adventure 1991, contact Maranatha Volunteers International at 5240 Garfield Avenue, Sacramento, California 95841; 916/344-4300, or consult your conference youth director.

It Is Written, Now on National Cable System

It Is Written may now be seen on the nationwide ACTS cable television network, Sundays, at 10:30 p.m. CST. This includes numerous cable systems in Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, and Texas. Faith For Today's Lifestyle Magazine and reruns of Westbrook Hospital are also carried at various times on ACTS.

Christian Record Names New Director

Christian Record Services, Lincoln, Nebraska, has named Will Kowarsch, new area director for the southwest. He comes from South Carolina where he was area director for CRS for the past five years. Prior to that he had served as a pastor.

Dan Miller, former area director for the southwest, is now associate field director for CRS for eastern North America.

Cedar Lake Foods Moves to California

Cedar Lake Foods, a Michigan-based health food company operated by Seventh-day Adventists for more than 40 years was sold in October, 1990. The company was purchased by a group of Adventist businessmen, and is now being headed by Alejo Pizarro, former president of La Loma and Loma Linda Foods of Riverside, California.

Plans are underway to expand the Cedar Lake product line. "We are in the process of introducing some new meat analog products, keeping the prices as low as possible," says Pizarro. "We want to give our church members some new and tasty choices."

Cedar Lake Food products continue to be available through Adventist Book Centers, college market stores, and health food centers. Marketing expansion also calls for the products being made available in larger retail grocery stores.

Flight Instructors Refresher Course

The North American Division Aviation Advisory Council is considering sponsoring a flight instructor refresher course at an Adventist college with an aviation program. If there is enough demand, a course would be held each year, alternating between the West Coast and the Midwest. If you are interested in such a course, please write or call the Adventist Aviation Center, Andrews University, Berrien Springs, Michigan 49104; 616/471-1455; Fax: 616/471-9751.

"Lifestyle Magazine" Announces Changes

New programming for Faith For Today's Lifestyle Magazine will focus on health issues, and is designed to appeal to a general audience.

"The programs will communicate all the major principles of positive living known to Seventh-day Adventists," says Dan Matthews, director.

Matthews will be joined on the program by Walter Thompson, an Adventist surgeon and health educator from Hinsdale, Illinois. The new series is scheduled for the beginning of the Fall '91 season. Some of the "commercial" time on the program will be available for the promotion of local church outreach efforts. For information about local advertising, write to Faith For Today, P.O. Box 320, Newbury Park, CA 91319; or call George Swanson at 805/373-7686.

Anniversaries

Orin and Edna Redelsperger Anniversary Noted

The 50th wedding anniversary of Orin and Edna Redelsperger was celebrated at a surprise dinner party in Woodward, Oklahoma, on January 5, 1991. The couple were married on the bride's birthday, January 29, 1941, in Arnett, Oklahoma. They have lived in the Follett, Texas, area all their married lives and have been active members of the Shattuck church since their baptism in 1947. A memory album from the couple's many friends and relatives was presented to them.

Robert and Frieda Wearer Observe 50th

Robert and Frieda Wearer celebrate their golden wedding anniversary on June 4, 1991. At the same time Elder Wearer thanks God for the opportunity of serving in the ministry for 50 years.

They served in the Texas Conference from 1942 to 1955, including the Sulphur Springs, Commerce, Mount Pleasant, Paris, East Houston, Baytown, Austin, Elgin, and Luling churches.

Their three sons were born in Texas. Ronald, born in Cleburne, is now a pastor in Oregon. Neal, born in Houston, is a physician, practicing in Tennessee. Duane, born in Austin, is a registered nurse, working in Florida.

After Texas, the Wearers have labored in the South American Division (Uruguay, Peru, and Brazil) and in Virginia. In retirement they now live at 630 Doe Drive, Murfreesboro, Tennessee 37129.

MOTHER SAID THERE WOULD BE DAYS LIKE THIS!

The kids are fighting. The house looks like it should be condemned. You're exhausted and ready to send the children to an orphanage. And on top of it all, you're guilt-ridden because Christians aren't supposed to feel this way.

Sound familiar? Sometimes I Don't Like My Kids, by Candace Schap, deals with the frustrations of mothering and gives common-sense suggestions for recovering your joy in the Lord and in your family.

Before I Was A Kid

Illustrations by Mary Rumford

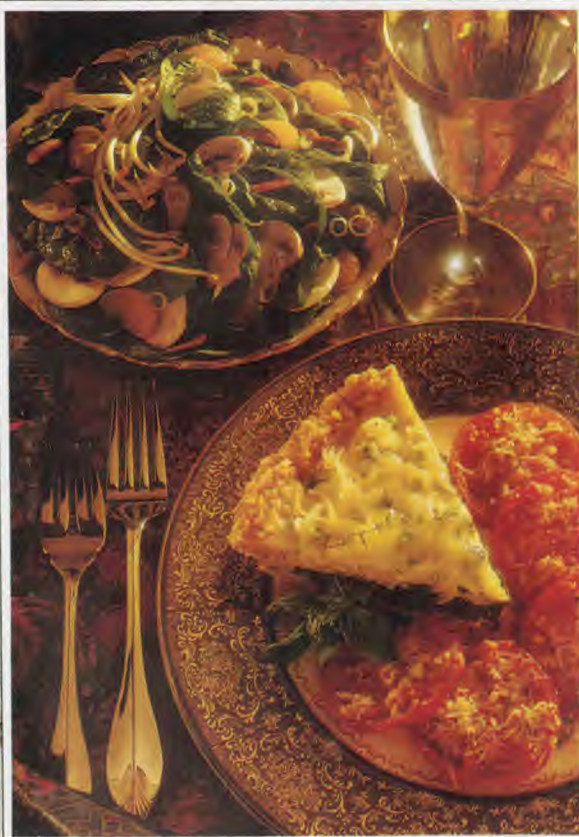

YOU ARE SOMEBODY!

"Mommy, before I was a kid, what was I?" A little boy's question has just opened the door to one of life's greatest truths. The answer will thrill parent and child with the wonderful reality that we have always been loved by God—even before we were born—and always will be. Before I Was a Kid, by Reta Spears-Stewart, gives children the gift of self-worth and the advantage of knowing they aren't here by accident.

For less than the price of one of these...

...you can share God's love and truth with someone you care about for an entire year.

You care about them. They matter to you.

Family members who don't know Jesus as you do. Close friends who are caught up in all sorts of strange beliefs and ideas the Bible doesn't teach. Good people. Decent, friendly people. And you want very much for them to know Jesus as you do.

Have you thought of sending them SIGNS?

For a limited time, you can send SIGNS for just $9.50—less than a single Saturday-night pizza.

Order your gift subscriptions now through the Personal Ministries coordinator in your local church. Or through your nearest Adventist Book Center.

When God sent just one Gift, it made an enormous difference. So will yours.

Please send a twelve-month gift subscription of award-winning Signs of the Times to each of the people listed below. I have enclosed $9.50 for each gift.

Order from your Adventist Book Center or ABC Mailing Service, P.O. Box 7000, Boise, Idaho 83707. Or, simply contact your Personal Ministries coordinator at church.

Make check payable to Adventist Book Center.
