God's Combination Effect

“What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder,” Matthew 19:6.

It is a trait of humankind to take apart. Boys start with family property. Men pry into the Creator's secrets. Barium sulfate, used for ingestion for taking X-rays of the digestive tract, is an example of a conjoint substance. Barium, when not compounded with sulfate, is very poisonous.

This planet trembles under the treat of nuclear insanity. The laboratory has found a way to take the atom apart and disturb its organization. The next time you look at ordinary table salt (sodium chloride) remember that sodium reacts forcefully when exposed to water, and carries with it explosive elements. In addition, chlorine is a death-dealing explosive gas.

God has built a harmony and a balance into His universe. It doesn't take long to make that discovery.

This thought of joining pinpoints a simple message. There are many things that belong together. They complement and strengthen each other. When separated, they become enemy of the public rather than its friends.

Parent and children belong together. It is a natural and God-ordained as the combination of infant dependency and a mother's love. The hatred, the venom, the riot, the anarchy disturbing youth today is the result of trifling with this combination.

God takes oxygen and hydrogen, both of them odorless, tasteless, and colorless, and He combines them with carbon, which is insoluble, black, and tasteless. The result of this combination is sugar.

God deposits a handful of sand in the heart of the Earth. Great heat is applied from beneath and ponderous weight from above until, when it is found by man, it has been miraculously changed into a dazzling fiery opal. Doing it God's way ensures beauty and success. It is critical to point out that this text has its roots in the conversation between Jesus and the Pharisees about marriage. Marriage is a contract designed by God to fuse two distinct personality types and make the union work for good. If marriage isn't the answer, what is? There is a ground-swell during this age that clamors for alternative approaches to marriage. North American society has dimensions that cry out: “Let us break their bands asunder, and cast away their cords from us,” Psalm 2:3. Doing that would heighten the risk of helping to unleash more misery on Earth than nuclear warfare.

There is something else that is joined together. It is evangelism and social action. We have a responsibility toward God and toward man. You cannot separate the one from the other without making the Christian message a negative one. I cannot conceive of any person, reconciled to God, enjoying an inward peace, who does not want to share. It is just too good to keep to one's self. Social action carries with it the mandate to allow Christ to be seen, heard, and felt. Acts of service that carry no thought of suffering, love, compassion, and concern for reconciliation is empty if there is no risk, no cross to bear, and no chance for self-giving.

God has set the combinations. Notice the combination of grace and justice in Christ's love toward you that will carry you through the challenges of womanhood and manhood. I challenge all women and men who dig into this special issue to allow God to join you to Himself. You will discover that nothing can separate you from the love of God, which is in Jesus Christ our Lord (Romans 8:29).

SURF – An Answer to Prayer

BY OLSON PERRY

The Poinciana Church Miracle

It was all on schedule. The target goals were in place. The architectural surveys had been done. Full scale plans had been prepared. Plumbing and electrical permits had been approved. Financing had been discussed and approved by the various committees. The foundation was now poured, and the footings put in place. Everything was in place for the 300-member Poinciana Church in Poinciana, Florida; or so it seemed. Little did they know their world was about to fall apart.

The congregation, which had been renting for 17 years while wishing for a church building of its own, raising funds at every opportunity, and building confidence for a loan from a bank, having been pre-approved, was ready for the next step.

arrived, he asked the congregation what was its priority. The overwhelming response was, “Complete the church.”

Edwards estimated he needed $1 million-plus to finish the project. He immediately went into overdrive. He brainstormed with his building and finance committees as they took a look at the various options. He brainstormed with his Southeastern Conference president, Hubert Morel Jr., and Randy Robinson, Southern Union treasurer and vice president of the Southern Union Revolving Fund (SURF). The Conference had reached its borrowing limit with SURF. Edwards wouldn’t stop. He asked Florida Conference to back him up, as he had done successfully on a previous project at another location. It didn’t have that lifting power, but recommended Georgia-Cumberland Conference.

After months of hard work, convincing potential investors of Poinciana’s needs, negotiating with conference leaders, supernaturally guided phone calls missed and unmissed, and much prayer, SURF approved a loan to the Poinciana Church in the amount of $1 million-plus to complete the building project, with an endorsement from Georgia-Cumberland Conference.

Edwards says, “I thank God for everything ... and the financial supporters. My wife and I have been supporters of SURF from the time we learned about it and its mission. We have also encouraged the churches and the current group that I oversee to do the same. So please join us with your financial and sacrificial investment so that other churches like Poinciana will experience this miracle.”

Spring Meadows Challenge

Spring Meadows Church in Sanford, Florida, is the result of the Winter Springs Church and Seminole Church merge on the Seminole location with its large acreage. The combined years of existence is about 50. This congregation of 800 members was bursting at its seams while burdened with a $2,000 a week rental facility. If a member wanted one of the 500 seats, he or she had to arrive at Sabbath School on time. The congregation had to do something.

Associate pastor and building coordinator, Bob Boggess, rallied members in a capital campaign. Having a demographic of stable, financially sound committed members with a good spread of seasoned members, growing families with more than 100 children in cradle roll, primary, and youth with an additional sprinkling of college students, he felt his congregation had the resources and the ability to garner adequate financing to meet the policy of 80 percent cash in hand. The campaign generated $1.5 million.

Once the basic building shell was completed so worship services could be held, Boggess and the finance committee explored their financial options of completing the 66,000 square foot project. The Southern Union Revolving Fund provided the best option.

“SURF enables facilities to grow,” says Boggess, “Adventists are the envy of other denominations. Most don’t have a borrowing mechanism like SURF. With SURF, a congregation can borrow at extremely reduced costs with the support of the conferences,” he says.

The SURF Plan

SURF is a structured mechanism for providing capital for projects in the Southern Union. It is a ministry in the form of granting loans for school projects, and to churches and building projects such as construction, acquisition, and renovation. It is an investment where the greatest immediate reward is knowing you have partnered with God and fellow Christians in ministry. And, the financial reward is receiving an interest rate higher than any bank is currently paying.

You can be a part of this unique and exclusive ministry. It is open to anyone, but it is unique and exclusive because it takes a person committed to God’s cause to see the blessings of providing funds for properties, equipment, and physical structures which will enhance worship to God, fellowship with others, and educational advantages for children and youth. You may not be able to travel as a missionary to foreign lands. You may not have the stamina to distribute truth filled literature. You may not have the skills to physically help in constructing an assisted living home; however as an investor in SURF, you know you are partnering with others in helping to build God's kingdom.

Members raised funds by working overtime while raiding their savings, youth and children scurried to find ways to help in fundraising, and one sister put her home up as collateral to purchase the 10 acre property. These funds were put to use to start the building project until the road-block.

The property had to be raised due to the low terrain. The bank reneged on the loan agreement. The funds in hand were now being exhausted. And, the pastor, Maxwell Berkel, was now being assigned to another congregation.

The family of investors in the Southern Union has made SURF the largest revolving fund in the North American Division, providing loans in the millions without losing any invested funds in its history; it is a ministry reaching out across the Union territory.

A church may borrow up to a maximum of four times its average annual tithe, and the local conference underwrites the loan. Currently, the borrowing interest rate is three-and-a-quarter percent (maximum term of a loan is 20 years). Loans of more than $99,999 require a mortgage, which is held by the Southern Union Revolving Fund, Inc.

Investors in SURF have continually appreciated the safety of their funds. Eighty percent of funds are invested in loans to institutions. Unloaned SURF funds (a maximum of 20 percent of available funds) are invested in fixed income instruments, the majority of which are government, corporate, and foreign issued, according to Carlos Salazar, director of SURF.

"We loan up to a maximum of that any investment comes with a certain amount of risk. The investment is unsecured, non-negotiable, and non-transferable. A SURF investment is a 90-day demand note; however, withdrawal requests are usually fulfilled in less than a week.

A SURF investor can be any Adventist individual living in the Southern Union, revocable trusts can be invested in SURF, and other Adventist entities such as churches and organizations may also invest. Interest is compounded monthly and paid quarterly. You can open a regular investment account with SURF through your local conference. A minimum of $1,000 is all that is needed.

Salazar shares that some individuals simply want to do something. They invest in SURF then realize the financial benefits. Then there are others who invest for the financial returns. They don't understand what is happening. They later realize they are in a partnership investing in ministry, and the spiritual blessings come from the satisfaction and joy of knowing they helped build a church, school, or youth chapel for fellowship.

80 percent of available funds keeping the remaining 20 percent in liquid investments," says Randy Robinson. "In addition we keep another 25 percent equivalent of loaned funds on hand as a 'just in case of an emergency fund.'" Financial managers marvel at SURF's investor safety since its inception. During the country's economic slump SURF investors showed economic gain. The financial advisors and fund managers used by SURF exercise extreme prudence. The safety of the fund is in the secured loans guaranteed by the conferences.

"Where else can you get this kind of safety with a one-and-a-quarter percent interest rate?" exclaimed Robinson. "This kind of security on the market would yield at most one-quarter percent. SURF is currently paying one-and-a-quarter percent." The mechanism is built with redundant safety nets: safe investments, "just in case funds," and conference backing. Despite these incredible precautions, the returns are way more than market rate, and the greatest reward of all is knowing these funds are being invested in ministry, and ministry is happening.

Despite the safety of SURF investments, investors are reminded

Braille Readers' Club Studies ADVENTIST BELIEFS

BY DEXTER THOMAS, D.MIN.

Every week, a secular organization for the blind, located in West Palm Beach, hosts an educational ministry—the West Palm Beach Braille Readers' Club — where visually challenged adults learn to read braille using the 28 fundamental beliefs of Adventism as their study materials.

Dexter Thomas, D.Min., Florida Conference disabilities coordinator, designed the curriculum with the help of members from several local as the basis of the study materials.

Each lesson highlights one of the fundamental beliefs to illustrate a braille concept. He explains one of the many contractions in braille, and then the students read a fundamental belief to see how it uses the contraction. “Blind individuals improve their braille literacy and, at the same time, learn these precious biblical truths,” said Thomas, who is blind.

Every bit as important as the lessons is the fellowship. “We advertised our free braille classes as a fun and exciting learning experience with food, friendship, and fellowship,” said Thomas. “The food and fellowship doesn't only attract the visually challenged. It also attracts their caregivers and other church members who create a warm, non-threatening ministry environment.”

churches. Because of its brevity and simplicity, Thomas used the children's version of the 28 fundamental beliefs

Church in Loxahatchee, Palm Springs Church of West Palm Beach, South Palm Company of Delray Beach, and Boynton Beach Church. The generosity of members in these churches has also funded the braille books used in the sessions.

Thomas would like to see these Braille Readers' Clubs formed in communities throughout Florida. It is surprisingly easy to run such a Club. The church receives a manual that explains how to organize and run a Club, and the church provides volunteers and refreshments.

“Our prayer is for such a ministry to spread throughout the Conference. Churches can partner with the disabled and their families for their wholeness, and give them a foretaste of the unconditional love and acceptance we will all experience in the Earth made new,” said Thomas.

CAROLINA CONFERENCE GOES TO CUBA

BY HASKELL WILLIAMS

A team of “12 apostles” left the comfort of the Carolinas bound for Holguin, the fourth largest city of the Republic of Cuba on January 22, 2014. These ShareHim volunteers included, among others, a civilian logistic officer, a physician’s assistant, a dentist, a management instructor, a retired professor and a mechanical engineer. Their mission: to share the Everlasting Gospel with the people of the Province of Holguin.

The evangelists came from several churches throughout the Carolinas and preached in varied churches in the Eastern Association (Conference) of Seventh-day Adventists — from downtown Holguin, a city of more than a quarter-million, to the village of Potrerillo, so small that its 100 homes don’t appear on many maps. In each of the churches the evangelists found warm-hearted fellow believers who were praying for God’s harvest.

My First Time

Before this trip to Cuba, Carlos Ortega had never preached before. He was nervous. Even his son tried to dissuade him, “Dad, are you sure?” But he had a jump on all the other team members — he was fluent in Spanish. “I had very good response,” he said. And though it was his first experience preaching, 21 people were baptized from his site.

Ortega was even able to witness to his taxi driver each night as they drove to and from Cueto. The “taxi driver” was actually a talented orthopedic surgeon who specialized in hands. This doctor, whose monthly salary is only $25, was earning a little extra cash using his 1950s Pontiac to transport Ortega nightly from Holguin to Cueto.

Beverly Winsted had pictured herself doing volunteer medical work after she retired, but God nudged her to join the ShareHim team mission to Cuba instead.

Cuban congregation

Winsted had never preached an evangelist sermon before, much less a series, but she was amazed by the enthusiasm of her listeners. “People of all ages responded,” she recounted.

One man asked for help in getting rid of a spiritualistic idol. He was also a heavy smoker, but on the last Sabbath he joined his mother and brother in baptism, joyful in his new freedom in Christ. That night as the team gathered to

He was steeped in cynical atheism, having worked in the Siberian oilfields during the 1990s. But each night his wife, Nereyda, gathered a small group to pray for Haskell Williams, Carolina Conference ministerial/evangelism director, and the meetings in Alcides Pino.

Robiel began attending during the first week, and then he came every night. “It was a shock to everyone who knew him when he came forward to be baptized,” Williams noted. But there was also a surprise for Robiel. Through special arrangements with the Association president, Robiel’s son, an elder in the church, had the privilege of baptizing his father.

Having fallen in love with the Cuban people through previous Share-Him campaigns, Mary Ann Roberts, Ph.D., jumped at the chance of holding a fourth campaign in Cuba. On a previous trip, her husband, at the time was not an Adventist, came along for the unusual opportunity to visit Havana. Roberts asked him to keep an eye on the equipment at the meetings.

During the final meeting, he was the first one to respond to the appeal to be baptized.

On the first night of this trip the sermon graphics did not work, so Roberts, known as “Ms. ShareHim” because of her numerous campaigns around the world, gave her personal testimony instead. It was compelling. People could identify and see how God had transformed her life.

The Spartanburg Church sent a team of evangelists: Jerry LaFave, pastor; his wife, Barbara LaFave (who had come because of a last-minute cancellation); Ron Fowler, D.M.D.; and Patricia Davis. LaFave was impressed by the commitment of church support and their dedication to attend nightly. In Delicias where he spoke, as in most other churches, many of those attending had worked long hours in sugar cane fields, then traveled several kilometers in trucks, carts, or on foot to hear the Word of God.

LaFave reported, “One individual, who had not been an Adventist very long, worked diligently to get 45 guests to attend. He is actively giving Bible studies. His 78-year-old mother was won to the Lord during the meetings. I had the privilege to baptize her in the ocean in front of her home.” This new member has been instrumental in establishing a home Bible study group that meets weekly in this very poor community.

Leslie Louis, president of the Carolina Conference, set the example of evangelistic service by leading this all-Carolina team. Hundreds of visitors were present each night in the Central Holguin Church as he spoke. Many had travelled dozens of kilometers to hear the Word. Louis committed to finding partners to raise the funds recount God’s victories, everyone but Winsted was present. Finally the yellow 1942 Chevrolet taxi drove up with her beaming. She wouldn’t leave the church until the last of the 38 people who had responded were baptized.

“Life-changing.” That is how Gary Himmelwright describes his Cuba experience. “There were a huge number of children,” he says, “Sixty-two of them — all visitors.” Every day Himmelwright tailored his messages to reach his young audience and designed ways to engage them in the message. “All wanted to give their hearts to Jesus, so we had a special altar call just for the children.” Though they were too young to be baptized at that time, their commitment is recorded in Heaven.

Surprise!

Robiel was a hardened secularist who adamantly opposed his son’s and wife’s involvement in church.

for a church structure in a remote village called Pedernalis. Through God's providence and the generosity of the members, the amount has been raised and exceeded!

“Side Benefits”

To find translators fluent in English, Luis Leonor, ShareHim trip coordinator, was forced to hire several individuals who were not members of the Adventist church. Himmelwright's translator was a teacher of socialistic philosophy at the local college. What started as a chance to earn more money profoundly impacted his thinking, and demeanor, as Himmelwright unfolded the soundness of God's Word.

Since her interpreter had no religious background, Roberts let her take the laptop home so she could become familiar with the sermons. The interpreter kept exclaiming, “This is so beautiful!” As the Holy Spirit touched her there was a marked change in her appearance. Since returning home, Roberts received an email inviting her to come back for her baptism.

LaFave's translator was the wife of a Baptist minister (and the child of three generations of Baptist ministers). She was truly moved by the nightly messages, and expressed several times that the meetings were for her, too. “She had serious questions to ask about our faith and requested a copy of The Great Controversy, which we presented to her at our last meeting,” said LaFave. “Through our ongoing communication, we're praying for her acceptance of God's last day message of truth.”

Barbara LaFave's translator, a

Pentecostal, made her decision to join the church. She and Barbara continue in communication. She said that she visited her former congregation and found it unappreciative of the new truths she had learned. Though she lives some distance from Palmarito, she longs to get back. The Carolina ShareHim team solicits your prayers for her and all of the translators, as well as the 134 individuals who were baptized, and more than 400 who made decisions to accept Christ and prepare for baptism.

Future Plans

“I would love to do [an evangelistic series] every month if I could,” Ortega says. Already he and his pastor are planning for outreach in his home church in Jacksonville, North Carolina.

Winsted's pastor asked her to do a ShareHim series in her home church in High Point, North Carolina. She knows that groundwork needs to be done first, and is looking at people's needs and interests. Community services, ads in newspapers, and surveys are some things she is considering.

Roberts does several homeland campaigns each year. She is looking at renting a small storefront in a shopping mall that, with a large screen, could be turned into a mini-theater. Before doing a series, however, she wants to create interest.

Himmelwright is excited about possibly doing a ShareHim series in Ethiopia using one of his High Point Pathfinders (a native of Ethiopia) as an interpreter and associate speaker.

Louis and Williams are each planning to hold a series of evangelistic meetings this year in Hickory and Rocky Mount, North Carolina respectively. They solicit prayers for those who will hear.

For those who want to experience the joy of soul-winning, the Carolina Conference is planning a ShareHim campaign in 2015 (late January or early February) to Central or South America. Plan now and watch for upcoming details on the website www.carolinasda.org or in the Carolina Action.

If we care about others, or only care to finish the work so that we can go home, we must share the hope — ShareHim. But, how much better if we do it from genuine love for those who are perishing.

Haskell Williams is the ministerial/evangelism director at the Carolina Conference.

Blessing and Being Blessed

BY KRIS FUENTES

The choir with their tour coordinator and translator Frank Artavia.

The Madisonians, the Madison Academy choir under the direction of Waldemar Wensell, just returned from a musical mission trip to Costa Rica. While on the trip, the choir travelled more than 1,000 miles, performed 22 times for more than 4,000 people at a variety of venues including an evangelistic series, a church plant in a tourist town, three libraries, city hall, the conference office, primary and secondary schools, two universities, and a soccer camp for at-risk teenagers sponsored by ADRA and the U.S. Embassy.

They shared the gospel with lifetime Adventists and with non-Christians. They ministered in cathedrals, in the halls of a geriatric hospital, in a Nicaraguan immigrant community, and even provided music at the last minute for the funeral of the bus driver's brother-in-law.

Thanks to Frank and Rodrigo, the guide and driver, the choir experienced the culture and flavor of "pura vida" or "pure life". While there, the

24 ... He Deserves It

BY MARVIN L. ALLISON SR.

As I was traveling to Jackson, Mississippi, for the 2014 South Central Conference Youth Congress, I questioned how I should write the article this year. Truthfully, I expected more of the same. The youth would travel from all over the Conference, the hotel lobby would be jammed, and friends would share in the excitement of seeing each other again.

“24 He Deserves It,” was this year’s theme. Wayne Hewlett, South Central associate youth director, opened the Congress with an emphasis on 24. What would it be like if we spent 24 seconds with God alone, even 24 minutes alone with God? But, better yet, what would it be like if we spent 24 hours alone with God? Interesting thought.

Kymone Hynes, pastor of Overton Park Church in Memphis, Tennessee, taught the youth the value and importance of praying for others; therefore, each prayer session focused on intercessory prayer. As the prayer emphasis went forward, there were beneficial elements. Each young person wrote their name on a wristband and turned it in, and then they all went up front and grabbed a wristband off the table of someone they didn’t know and put the wristband on. They were then challenged to pray for four things: wisdom, health, their walk with God, and their relationships with family and friends for the person whose name was on the wristband throughout the Congress. They were to pray 24 seconds, 24 times each day.

Another prayer exercise saw the delegates placing a prayer request in balloons, blowing them up, and then batting the balloons around the auditorium. At the command to stop, each delegate grabbed a balloon to take back to their hotel rooms, where they were to pop the balloon and pray for that request.

There was also a prayer session where one had to text someone back home and let them know that right at that moment attendees at the Congress were praying for them. Prayer became an integral part of this year’s Youth Congress. Teaching young people the value of interceding for others really made the Congress better.

Not only has intercessory prayer become a major component of Youth Congress 24 He Deserves It, community services has also been implanted in the fertile hearts and minds of the youth. Community services consisted of planting trees and flowers, feeding the homeless, and painting walls at the shelter.

Another aspect that was helpful in training young minds to be like Jesus was the complimenting exercise. Each delegate was challenged to compliment 24 individuals they never met before. It was refreshing to see the youth take this challenge seriously.

Sabbath was welcomed in with yet another 24 challenge. This time it was a 24-hour challenge. Spend 24 hours communing with God in His presence.

One highlight this year was when the Conference youth director, Vandeon Griffin, was invested as a Master Guide. Lorenzo Shepard, former South Central youth director, had the privilege of placing the vestments on Griffin. The new South Central youth ministries logo was also unveiled — “Building a Generation One Youth at a Time.”

Sabbath afternoon was the Pathfinder Parade and Rally in the Park to bring awareness to the plight of homelessness. Just before the Sabbath ended, individuals from the community flocked into the convention center. Gospel phenomenon and two-time Grammy Award-winning artist Tye Tribbet was the featured guest for the evening’s praise concert.

Each speaker for Youth Congress had something of exceptional value to offer the delegates. The speakers included Kirk Franklin, multi-award-winning recipient; Greg Nelson, pastor of Madison Mission Church in Huntsville, Alabama; Debleaire Snell, senior pastor of First Church in Huntsville;

Nurse Sews for Breast Cancer Patients at Florida Hospital Flagler

As a registered nurse in Florida Hospital Flagler's Post Anesthesia Care Unit (PACU), Vicki O'Hanlon is one of the first health care providers to attend to women with breast cancer immediately after their mastectomy. Here, she, along with a team of critical care nurses, closely monitors patients and assists them in their initial moments after surgery, when they are "waking up" from anesthesia. It is in the PACU where patients begin their recovery back to health.

As part of the mastectomy procedure, patients have a post-operative Jackson Pratt drain inserted to collect bodily fluid from the surgery site for two to three weeks as they heal. These drains simply hang from the body, and can be inconvenient and even uncomfortable.

Seeing the need, O'Hanlon, who happens to be a skilled seamstress, decided to do something to help these women. During her personal time, she began sewing "drain pouches" for Florida Hospital Flagler mastectomy patients. The pouches, which O'Hanlon sews in an array of colors and patterns, are worn like a cross-body purse and hold the drains, making them more comfortable during the healing process.

"Going through a mastectomy is a very difficult experience, and I am happy to be able to make it just a little bit easier by sewing and providing the pouches," O'Hanlon said. "It makes me feel good to be able to provide a bit of comfort to our patients."

Working in the PACU, O'Hanlon can spot patients who would benefit from her homemade pouches. She helps patients select a design they like and explains how to use it. If a patient has had a double mastectomy, she gives them two pouches.

"I designed the pouches to be soft and machine washable," O'Hanlon said. "One patient told me that they are so comfortable, she even wears it in the shower."

Multi-Hospital Competition Improves Stroke Care

Six Adventist Health System hospitals with award-winning primary stroke centers recently participated in an intramural competition to further reduce the time it takes stroke patients to receive brain-saving treatment.

The goal was specifically to lower the door-to-needle times for patients who are having an Acute Ischemic Stroke (AIS), which occurs when there is blockage in a vessel that delivers blood to the brain. Tissue plasminogen activator or "clot buster" is a medication given to patients with AIS. The earlier this medication is given to patients, the better their outcomes are.

During the six-month competition, median door-to-needle times were reduced from 72 minutes to 54 minutes for the participating hospitals. In addition, the patients observed during the competition had shorter lengths of stay, and more were discharged to their homes or a rehabilitation facility.

A poster featuring this competition was presented in February at the American Heart Association's 2014 International Stroke Conference in San Diego, Calif. The participating hospitals — Adventist Hinsdale Hospital, Adventist La Grange Memorial Hospital, Florida Hospital Altamonte, Florida Hospital Orlando, Florida Hospital Zephyrhills, and Shawnee Mission Medical Center — are part of a national forum of Seventh-day Adventist hospitals that collaborate to exchange ideas and improve stroke care.

"Our forum is expanding and recently announced plans for a stroke core measure improvement project, and collaboration with the University of Texas at Houston to better assess outcomes after acute stroke intervention," said Evan Allen, M.D., medical director of the Florida Hospital Stroke Program and director of the stroke forum.

New York Times Bestselling Author Speaks at Adventist University Colloquium

Adventist University of Health Sciences (ADU) held their most recent University Colloquium on March 19, 2014. The University Colloquium is designed to engage students, faculty, staff, and community members in conversation. This year's theme was Moral Courage and, to go along with that, ADU asked Rebecca Skloot, author of the number one New York Times Bestseller The Immortal Life of Henrietta Lacks, to come speak.

Skloot told her story of how she once sat in biology class learning about these immortal "HeLa" cells that have helped to advance science in so many ways. Her teacher informed her that they were from an African American woman who died. She asked her teacher, "What else do we know about her? Does she have any kids? What do they think about all this?" He responded with, "Sorry, nobody knows anything." The idea was spellbinding to Skloot that so little was known about something so big. She said, "It lit this fire under me, this real curiosity about science and school." She gained more of an interest in school after that, and eventually went on to a four-year college.

Years later Skloot decided to research these "HeLa" cells and found that they belonged to a woman by the name of Henrietta Lacks. That's where scientists had originated the name "HeLa" cells. It had been decades since Lacks had passed away and the cells were originally used. After doing some digging, Skloot was able to find the whereabouts of Lacks' children (who were now grown), and reached out to them to try to learn more about their mother's story.

However, what she found wasn't what she had expected. Lacks' children didn't understand what had happened with their mother's cells. Scientists had come to them throughout the years to try to test some of their own cells but they thought that it was to see if they had cancer like their mother. They didn't know that their mother's cells had been taken so long ago and that they were still being replicated and used for research. They weren't interested in listening to Skloot. They didn't trust anyone.

Over time, Skloot

began to gain their trust. She dug deep into the family's history to provide them with answers that they wanted. Their mother died when they were very young, so learning anything about who she was meant something to them.

Due to the perseverance of Skloot's research, we have learned that Henrietta Lacks was an African American woman in the 1950s who was diagnosed with cancer and had no insurance. After performing various tests on her cells, scientists found that her cancer cells could replicate and become immortal. They began to replicate and sell them without her knowing. Over time, these cells were vital in developing the polio and HPV vaccines, cloning, gene mapping, in-vitro fertilization, and much more.

Skloot never gave up on Lacks' story. She explained what she likes to call a "what moment." They are moments in life that make you stop and go "wait, what?" It was a moment like she had in biology class so long ago. She believes in asking questions and pursuing curiosity. That is what helped to get her so far in her research. Students often attend the Colloquium to learn more about certain topics, to practice active listening, or simply for community involvement. Skloot left them specifically with some advice. She said,

"Don't have tunnel vision. Let your curiosity and passion get the best of you!"

Conference Evangelist Retires After Decades of Service

Since 1991 Dale Pollett has been the evangelist for the Carolina Conference. He plans to retire this year; however, he quickly states that he's not totally retiring. He plans to continue conducting meetings, only not as many of them.

Thinking back over his years of evangelism ministry, Pollett recalls that the most successful meetings have been those where the church was actively involved in the preparation and follow-up for their campaign. And where church members earnestly prayed for the success of the event.

There are many miraculous stories that this evangelist can tell. He fondly recalls one young man from Spartanburg, S.C., who received a colorful brochure in the mail. The young man, along with his wife, attended the meetings. At the conclusion of the event he and his wife were baptized. "What's so thrilling about this," Pollett recalls, "is that this man, Jeff Donaldson, went on to Andrews University and the seminary. Today he's one of our pastors right here in Carolina."

Another story that comes to Pollett's mind is when he held an evangelics event in Charleston, S.C.

RON QUICK

"We pulled out all the stops," Pollett recalls, "We bought television time, we had newspaper ads along with direct mail, and radio — we did it all." The array of advertising made such an impact that it got the attention of the religion editor of the Charleston newspaper. The reporter phoned the pastor and asked, "What's going on at your church? I see all this advertising... would you mind if I come to the meetings?"

The reporter came out on opening night along with his photographer, sat through the meeting, and afterward interviewed some of those who attended the meeting.

There was some concern that the article may not be favorable, or at the least would be buried inside where it wouldn't be noticed.

But when they went to the news stand the next day to pick up a paper, they were amazed to see that it made the front page above the fold, and was on display in every news stand in town. "Well, that definitely brought out more people the next night," Pollett remembers.

Pollett may retire this summer; however, we've learned that quitting is not in this evangelist's vocabulary. Slowing down may be, but not quitting!

Evangelism Through Children's Church

The Adventist church in Monroe, N.C., has been making an effort to both grow their church and reach out to the community. With that goal in mind, their Children's Ministries and Community Services Departments have partnered to bring fun, educational, and inspirational programs that the children in their church and community can enjoy.

For children's church in February, the children were treated to a small critter petting zoo. The children took turns holding a variety of animals, from chinchillas and snakes to lizards and guinea pigs. They even got to meet (and ride) the zoo mascot: Mr. 30lb Tortoise.

In March, children's church featured Mt. Pisgah Academy's Creative Ministry team, who thrilled the children with their puppets, stories, and illusions, bringing Jesus and the plan of salvation to their level. The team accompanied the community service group to a local nursing home, where their performance brought smiles and applause from the residents. It was a big hit!

A specific outreach has been to the children from the Union County Battered Women's Shelter. Several of these children have attended, and it is a delight to see their faces light up with laughter or interest in what they are learning.

Guests have enjoyed the events so much, they have expressed interest in the children's Sabbath School program, and have asked to be invited to future events.

Elders Use Retreat to Unite, Live Generously

For a little over a year, the Carolina Conference has been promoting a new stewardship initiative called

Generous Living. At the 2014 Elders' Retreat held March 28-29, with speaker Philip Saaman, D.Min., at Nosoca

Pines Ranch in Liberty, S.C., the elders from the Carolina churches took that theme seriously and made a genuine gesture of generosity that will be felt nearly 1,000 miles away.

During a recent Share-Him campaign in Cuba, Carolina Conference President Leslie Louis became aware of a great need. A group of Cuban Adventists needed $800 for a church to worship in, and a local pastor needed money for a bicycle (because he couldn't afford gas for his motorcycle on his $25 monthly salary). So Louis added it to his Presidential Prayer Partners list.

When he mentioned it to the group of elders, they requested an offering be taken right then and there. The amount was raised and exceeded — enough to purchase a roof and pews for the new church! These are true leaders by example.

Training Participants Challenged: Ocala Church Promotes Healthy Lifestyle

On a Sunday morning at Jervey Grant Park, 40 Ocala, Fla., Church members of various ages gathered to launch the Let's Move Health Walk. Each participant wore a shirt that emphasized his or her commitment to a healthy lifestyle.

The following week's speaker for church service was Grace Daley, a former 15-year Women's National Basketball Association (WNBA) player. Daley shared how God orchestrated her journey to bring about a greater understanding of the Sabbath. The journey also led her into BeSmart, a ministry which promotes health and worship in a positive light. Many people, including nonAdventists, now join the BeSmart team in weekly Sunday morning exercises at Ocala Church.

Church temperance leader Lori Doperalski, and her assistant, Cheryl Rilea, followed up with cooking demonstrations.

Communities Reached on Global Youth Day

Part of Global Youth Day (GYD), a General Conference initiative, was designated for young people to reach out to communities worldwide. Tampa First, Brandon Spanish, and Riverview, Fla., churches, converged on the Tampa Bay area for a day of service to distribute lunches, literature, and clothes as they visited with the homeless.

Of particular joy for one man was a book tucked into the sack with his lunch. "People help us with food, and we're grateful," he said, "but we eat and have nothing again. This book gives us something to hold on to."

A 93-year-old man from Bolivia welcomed literature and a Bible study card from Andrea Bennett of the Tampa First Pathfinder Club.

Over at MacFarlane Park, 14-year-old Victor came to meet a friend and found many other young people talking about Jesus. He spent the afternoon with the Global Youth Day activities, including the prayer walk.

Young people talked with individuals as they gave out literature and clothes packed in clear bags and labeled according to gender and size. The recipients' gratefulness was evident in one homeless person's response: "That's so sweet! We need clothes so bad!" Florida Conference office employees cleaned out their closets and donated almost 100 articles of clothing for the young people to give to the homeless.

Eleven other GYD events throughout Florida Conference included blood drives, concerts, visiting shut-ins and missing members, free lunches and dinners, beach cleanup, street ministry, homeless youth ministry, a donation center for needy mothers, literature distribution, Vacation Bible School, and drive-through prayer.

Mirlene André distributed certificates to participants who successfully completed prison ministries training.

Ambassador Church in Lauderdale Lakes, Fla., hosted Prison Ministries Day for 50 attendees representing 15 congregations. Fort Myers Shores Pastor Robert Ferguson, presented the theme, “The Joy of Ministry.” Ferguson also serves as Florida Conference’s south region prison ministries coordinator.

After a fellowship meal, an afternoon training program began for prison ministries certification. Twenty-five individuals who had completed an earlier certification training program were awarded their certificates.

New prison ministries team members will join their counterparts in service opportunities by giving Bible studies, being part of the pen pal ministry, and getting involved in the Love A Mother’s Baby (L.A.M.B.) program.

Prison ministries is a rewarding program, but church members won’t have that experience if they don’t step out. So, “Go Ye Therefore” into prison.

Journey Stories Highlight Baptism

It was a high Sabbath at Fort Myers Shores, Fla., Church when Robert Ferguson, pastor, baptized seven candidates who had recently finished Bible studies.

Three candidates for rebaptism each had different stories. One woman, who was already a member and baptized with her new husband, wanted to start their journey together with the Lord. Another felt the need to be rebaptized, so she asked her friend to join her. They met 24 years ago when they heard the Adventist message for the first time. Since then, they have seen each other through many of life’s misfortunes.

After the baptism, Ferguson shared his sermon, “The Joys of Life,” followed by a blessing of physical food and fellowship.

Original Play Recreates God’s Warning

Members of Fort Myers Shores Church performed The Midnight Cry in March before an audience of nearly 100. The play’s theme was based on the warning God has continued to give through the years, “Don’t let it be too late.”

Written and directed by Olive Ferguson, the pastor’s wife, the play featured Jacques Sinjuste as the main character, Lot. There were 19 other cast members, and church young people pro-

During the closing song, “Go Light Your World,” the entire cast and audience joined the song leader, broke open glow sticks, and brightened the room with colored candles.

In the last scene, Lot walked away saying, “It was too late, too late.” The cast members’ greatest wish is that it will not be too late for those who saw or heard about their performance.

Cancer Survivors “Celebrate Life” at Cohutta Springs

Peggy Hallman, Cohutta Springs Conference Center mission outreach coordinator, husband is battling cancer.

She saw the benefits of Memorial Hospital’s cancer survivor weekends that were held at Cohutta Springs over the years, and wondered if the same thing could be accomplished by teaming up with the local Adventist institutions, so her husband and people like him could have a therapeutic retreat.

“We [Cohutta Springs] have partnered with Gordon Hospital, Emory Adventist Hospital, Winship Cancer Foundation has been included through Emory, and the Health Ministries department of Georgia-Cumberland Conference,” says Hallman. “We have all partnered together to sponsor this weekend, so each family only had to pay $50 to attend. We have 66 people registered, that includes children and teens, as well as 27 volunteers.”

“It’s exciting because it gives our families a retreat, an opportunity for spiritual renewal, physical, emotional, mental, and social” remarked Lanell Jacobs, director of Oncology Services at Gordon Hospital in Calhoun, Ga. “Folks make a lot of connections with one another. They’re able to share their story, get education, and enjoy nature. So this is our treat to them.”

The activities include seminars, small group sharing time to discuss cancer and how it has affected them, crafts, pontoon boat rides, hay rides, and a campfire with smores. Compassionate Paws, a volunteer group out of Rome, Ga., paid their own way to bring five therapy dogs around to the groups for pet therapy.

Faris Jordan, speaker for the March 7-9 weekend, is a licensed psychologist, motivational speaker, and a cancer survivor. He focused on the themes of laughter and a positive attitude. “Life doesn’t come with a menu, ‘I’ll have a hangnail and a small pimple, and that’s all I’ll have’” quipped Jordan. “Laughter is biblical, in James it’s a virtual stress manual. In James 1:2, we’re told when we fall into diverse temptations count it joy, and John 16:33, my favorite verse in the world, you’ll have trials and tribulation, but be of good cheer.”

Hallman felt the Celebration of Life Weekend was a success, and would like to see it continue and grow. “Sometimes cancer patients feel like they’re going through it alone. My personal investment in this is my husband’s cancer and thinking about what he’s going through and what would be beneficial. Even for those of us who don’t have cancer, we don’t know when our last day is, and we need to take each day and celebrate life as it comes.”

Peachtree Church Reaches Out with Health Fair

Peachtree City Church in Sharpsburg, Ga., opened the doors of their Family Life Center on Sunday, March 16, to host a “Free Community Outreach Health Fair.”

George Pangman, pastor, challenged the church board in mid-2013 to prayerfully seek to find ways that they, as a church, could reach out in a meaningful way to the community that surrounds them in the Coweta/Fayette counties.

It was decided that a health fair could be a successful vehicle to bring people in the area together to build bridges and relationships that could lead to other outreach projects in the near future.

Twenty-eight booths were manned by exhibitors spotlighting their service, product, or organization. They include:

- Organic Farming
- Chemical Free Cleaning Products

- Wellness/Nutrition
- Gluten Free/Allergy Free Information
- Crohn’s and Colitis Advocate
- Essential Oils
- Juice Plus
- Autism
- Special Needs Therapy
- Breastfeeding

God Moves in a Mobile Home Park

Mobile Home children learn the song "Peace Like a River."

Her eyes were bright with unshed tears as she said, "You are an answer to prayer," said the manager of a mobile home park. Todd Casey, pastor, had just told the manager that Blue Angel Parkway Church in Pensacola, Fla., wanted to help some residents of her community. He asked her to identify five or six of the neediest families, and the church would deliver food baskets and gifts to them for Christmas.

"For two years I have been trying to get a church to come and provide some Bible studies to the kids here at the clubhouse, but I received no response from one of the churches I contacted, and another only wanted to come and take the children to their church," she added.

That was November of 2013 after Thanksgiving. That weekend, four members of the church went to ARME Bible Camp hosted by Ivor Myers, pastor. The topic was prayer. There were many prayer sessions petitioning God to move on the hearts of the Blue Angel members and show them what ministry He wanted them to do.

God was already answering their prayer before they prayed it. That Sabbath, Casey asked me to share the results of the meeting with the congregation. I recounted the manager's desire for religious instruction, the fact that the community was home to 27 elementary-age children, and that Blue Angel was the answer to a mobile home park manager's prayer. These members have since organized prayer cells consisting of two or three individuals praying for specific needs. God has been answering those prayers, and they rejoice as they share the answers with the congregation.

That Saturday night, a member, Terri Church, called and volunteered to lead out in a Branch Sabbath School. During the following week, another member, Nina Correa, who is a certified instructor in the public school system, volunteered to provide tutoring one afternoon each week. Correa called a friend at University Parkway Church to tell her about the missionary activity. Her friend, Kathy Brennan, was also praying for the Lord to show her what she could do for Him. She signed up to help with the Branch Sabbath School.

On Sunday, January 26, 2014, 33 children attended a promotional fun day. The next day tutoring was launched, and five children came for help with their lessons. Now, six members are tutoring 15 children each week.

Many of us would like to travel around the world and see many exciting sites. However, since most people cannot do that, about 80 members of the Montgomery, Ala., Church did the next best thing and attended the Winterfest program organized by Imelda Lin-ao, Montgomery Adventist School principal, on the night of February 23, 2014, in the school gym.

Anita Kane is from The Netherlands

Some church members brought foods native to their countries of origin. For a donation to the school, those who attended the event could sample foods from India, the Philippines, Indonesia, The Netherlands, Italy, and, of course, the United States. Several who brought food came in their native attire, which added to the international flavor of the night.

“The Montgomery Church is truly a multicultural church,” commented Samuel Riemersma, pastor, “as we have members from every continent across the globe except for Australia, including myself, as I am Dutch by birth.” Illustrating the multicultural origins of Montgomery Church members, the children sang the well-known song “It’s a Small World” from Disney’s Magic Kingdom.

In addition to the food, there were several games for the children to play. For a small donation, attendees could purchase tickets to play the games.

“The Winterfest was a great opportunity for the church and the school to work together to have a program like this,” Lin-ao commented. “We not only wanted this event to be a blessing to the school, but also to be an opportunity to fellowship and build a deeper and stronger relationship with one another in Christ as a Christian family.”

The program truly illustrated what the apostle Paul wrote to the Romans many years ago, “For just as we have many members in one body and all do not have the same function, so we, who are many, are one body in Christ, and individually members one of another,” Romans 12: 4-5.

“The Montgomery Adventist School hopes that the Winterfest program will become a part of the school program each year, as we anticipate more growth and development in the coming years,” stated Lin-ao.

Kentucky-Tennessee Holds Annual Conference-wide Music Festival

The Annual Kentucky-Tennessee Conference Music Festival was held March 13-15, 2014, on the campus of Highland Academy in Portland, Tenn. The purpose of the festival is to provide students an opportunity to expand their musical skills in cooperation with experienced musicians to inspire spiritual growth and enhance cultural development. The festival featured grades 5-8 choir, grades 9-12 choir, the concert band, and the string ensemble. Each performing group rehearsed Thursday afternoon and most of Friday for two concerts: a sacred concert Friday evening, and a secular concert Saturday evening. Each evening, the program concluded with all four groups participating together with a combined piece — “All the Glory Belongs to Jesus.”

This year’s clinicians were Benjamin Gish, Walla Walla Academy, Walla Walla, Wash., directing the string ensemble; Byron Graves, Andrews Academy, Berrien Springs, Mich., directing the band; Robert Malin, South Lancaster, Mass., directing grades 5-8 choir; and Waldemar Wensell, Madison Academy, Madison, Tenn., directing grades 9-12 choir.

Thirteen Conference schools sent students to the festival along with homeschool students, public school students, and participants from an academy in Illinois for a total of 327 students.

For many of the students, this was their first opportunity to sing in a large choir or play in an instrumental ensemble. Students travelling from outside the metropolitan Nashville area were housed in the Highland Academy dormitories. Rehearsals were held all over the academy campus, including Highland Elementary School. Highland Church also opened its doors for sacred repertoire rehearsals. On Sabbath, Highland Church hosted the Sabbath services, an afternoon chamber concert, and Vespers provided by the clinicians.

Aspiring Nine-Year-Old Chef

Nine-year-old chef, speaker, and upcoming television show host, Shiona “Shi” Curry, is transforming how children value what they eat and think. Authoring her first cookbook, Shi educates children on how fun and awesome it is to be healthy in a fast food society.

Since the age of four, Shi has been fascinated by cooking shows and has kept busy reading every cookbook at her disposal. As her parents only supplied a healthy diet of natural foods, it is no mistake that Shi has a natural approach to cooking. Her passion for natural cooking served as a signal to her parents that cooking was more than a passing fancy, or merely a hobby. This passion was fueled when she saw pictures and videos of sick children. From that point, she decided that she wanted to devote her life to sharing the simple, fun message of what she calls S.H.A.R.E. W.I.T.H., which stands for Sunshine, Healthy food, Air, Rest, Exercise, Water, I love myself, Trust, and Help (others).

Shi creatively presents the S.H.A.R.E. W.I.T.H. message in a way that engages her audience of very limited attention spans. It is amazing to watch how effective Shi is with the elementary and middle school children at schools where she has presented many of her workshops. As Shi presents spiritual, emotional, and physical health “for kids by a kid,” children easily grasp the concepts and willingly apply them to their lives. For these students, Shi has become a household name.

Recently, she was able to see the effects of her mission realized when during one of her workshops, a many times “left out” child with known food allergies was ecstatic to find that she too could participate in a tasting because all of the ingredients were natural. Shi is determined that all children will be able to take part in her message. In fact, one of her affirmations is “My cooking show is on TV and every child in the world is watching, even the poor children.”

Recognizing the detrimental effects of negative thinking on the body, Shi incorporates an “I love myself” piece in all of her workshops, and challenges children to think healthy thoughts about themselves and others. The coolest thing about this is that it works! The children who have been consistent with the “I love myself” exercises have also been more consistent with eating healthy, despite ethnic or economic background.

In October 2013, Shi was a speaker at the Coca Cola headquarters in Atlanta, Ga., where she presented for corporate professionals on the topic: “Think Inside the Lunchbox.” The topic focused on the struggles a child has to be healthy in a fast food society, along with common mistakes that adults make in the contribution of unhealthy choices for children.

Shi realizes that God has called her to creatively share His message of spiritual, emotional, and physical health to the world. She attends Maranatha Church in Atlanta, Ga., where Sherwin Jack is the pastor. Shi was baptized in 2013 after independently approaching the pastor about baptism, and being persistent.

Civil Rights Trailblazer Speaks at Mt. Olive Church

As part of a series of programs focused on celebrating Black History month, Mt. Olive Church in East Point, Ga., welcomed Willie Bolden, pastor and Civil Rights trailblazer, to share his experience working with Martin Luther King Jr. during the Civil Rights Movement. King recruited Bolden from a pool hall when he was 18 years old, and invited him to join the movement. After one meeting with the Civil Rights leader in Atlanta that changed the course of his life, Bolden became an integral part of the movement. While active with the Southern Christian Leadership Conference and the Poor People's Campaign, Bolden worked with voter registration drives, and led efforts to integrate hotels and restaurants in St. Augustine, Fla.

During the program, Bolden recounted his experience during the events of Bloody Sunday, the Civil Rights March from Selma to Montgomery, Ala., during which police beat protestors as they walked across the Edmond Pettus Bridge. He shared little known facts about King, and answered questions about his experience working alongside other Civil Rights leaders such as Hosea Williams, Andrew Young, and U.S. Representative John Lewis.

Since working with King, Bolden has received medals and accolades for his tireless efforts working with the Civil Rights Movement, and in 2012 was inducted into the Trumpet Awards Foundation's International Civil Rights Walk of Fame. The Mt. Olive members were honored to have him as a guest speaker for their Adventist Youth Society program, and presented him with a plaque in appreciation of his work with the Civil Rights Movement.

Miracles are Raining at Emmanuel Junior Academy

Emmanuel Junior Academy's new student body

Not light showers, but heavy showers of blessings have been poured out on Emmanuel Junior Academy in Mobile, Ala. Threatened with the possibility of closure after the present school year ended, God intervened with an emphatic "NO!"

When school was dismissed for Christmas on December 20, 2013, there were 19 students with a faculty of two. At the re-opening of school on January 6, 2014, there were 70-plus students with a faculty/staff of five. Needless to say, the school is now bursting at the seams with students and personnel.

After receiving information about scholarships for private schools on December 22, 2013, Emmanuel Church in Mobile, Ala., and two faculty members became busy beavers recruiting students for the full scholarships that were being offered by the Alabama Opportunity Scholarship Fund. Response was tremendous with applications pouring in daily for the new program. One parent has expressed what seems to be a general consensus, that she is grateful for the opportunity to send her children to private school which would not have been possible without the scholarship fund.

And, like most schools, the students are from varied backgrounds and experiences. One new student, Rubi Scott, has expressed that she was praying to God for a place to go to school other than public school, and is blessed that her prayer was answered to attend Emmanuel Junior Academy.

Plans are already on the drawing board for a new school building by the opening of the 2014-2015 school year in August. The land stands ready for the new building and Emmanuel ancillary personnel is already pursuing the necessary building permits through the local Planning Commission for the chosen site.

The summary indication of all of this is that God still rules from on high and pours out miracles on His people. To God be the glory for Emmanuel Junior Academy. May this school become the bright light that is needed in the city of Mobile, that it might aid in pointing the local citizens to a loving heavenly Father Who just wants to grant them a life that will never end.

Conference Holds ACS Grant Writing Seminar

South Central Conference Adventist Community Services (ACS) Department sponsored a Grant Writing 101 seminar on March 6-9, 2014, at the Cooper Science Complex on Oakwood University campus in Huntsville, Ala. The seminar presenter was Derek L. Lane, owner of the Lane Consulting Group.

This well-attended seminar was designed to help ACS volunteers, pastors, and others with interest in community-based ministry to learn how to identify the essential elements of a grant proposal, how to organize key information and documents before the writing process begins, to explore the concept of resources versus relationships in Christian community development work, and to prepare and submit a mock proposal in real-time. The class attendees were both Seventh-day Adventists and non-Adventists from the faith-based community.

Not only was the seminar educational, but spiritual as well. The seminar began on Thursday morning at 8:30 a.m. with prayer and devotion by Alfred Hill, associate pastor of First Church in Huntsville, Ala. Other morning devotional thoughts were given by Derek Lane, elder; C. E. Cunningham, pastor from the Southwest Regional Conference; and T. Marshall Kelly, pastor, who blessed all with his message in song.

Others guests included Kenny Anderson and David Person. Anderson is director of the Office of Multicultural Affairs for the City of Huntsville. He shared with the class the importance of developing partnerships with local city agencies, and the development of community outreach. Person is a media personality and consultant, and is the director of communications at Phoenix, a nonprofit company in Huntsville that provides jobs, job placement, and other services to people with disabilities. He also hosts "WEUP Talk," a daily talk show that airs on WEUP-AM.

The teaching process was very interactive. Games were played such as "The Non-profit Family Feud" to test how much the participants had learned. The class was separated into four groups. Each team competed against the other to win the game.

At the conclusion, all participants received a certificate. Many of the participants stated that the seminar met their expectations. Some were glad they had attended and felt they were prepared to write a proposal. They also learned that relationship with the community is the key to writing a successful grant.

Legacy to Family and the Lord's Work

Elder Isaac J. Johnson served faithfully in the South Central Conference as director of stewardship, trust services, ASI, communication, and other areas. His daughter, Sharon, referring to his values, says, "He was a true believer in total 360 degree stewardship. He taught that everything you have, including your talents, is a trust from God. It is the Christian's duty and privilege to give back to God that which He has so freely given." She also stated, "He practiced what he preached. He proved the Lord. In life, his talents and time and work were devoted to building God's Kingdom. In death, he made a bequest to the conference for the furtherance of the Gospel." His legacy lives on.

Ephesus Church Members Honor Centenarian

On November 16 2013, Mercedes Harris celebrated her 100th birthday with family, friends, and church members at Ephesus Church in Jacksonville, Fla., where she has been a lifelong member.

Born on November 12, 1913, in Jacksonville, Harris is the second child born to the late Joseph and Annie Mae Singleton, charter members of Ephesus, a 107-year-old Seventh-day Adventist institution with a church, school, and daycare.

Harris hails from a family whose heritage is rich in Christian service and dedication. This rich heritage, along with her personal conviction, led her to dedicate her life to the Lord's service at an early age.

Her brother, Harold Singleton, served as the first president of the South Atlantic Conference, one of the first Seventh-day Adventist conferences established to serve African-American congregations in the United States. Her sister, Juanita, is married to Ralph Peay, former president of the South Atlantic Conference.

In his tribute, Mark Brown, pastor of Ephesus Church, congratulated Harris on achieving this milestone, and thanked her for her long and faithful service to the work of God.

Harris holds the distinction of being Ephesus' longest serving pianist, a position she held for more than 60 years. Along with serving as church pianist, she has served as choir director, school treasurer, board member, Sabbath School teacher, Adventist Youth Society leader, and treasury board member. Though no longer able to participate in church activities, the family tradition of service continues. Her son Dwayne Harris serves as an elder at Ephesus.

Her family remembers the work ethic and family values she not only taught but demonstrated through the years. Many remember being taught Christian values while attending the daycare facility she ran from her home. "She would always tell us, 'Honor thy father and thy mother that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth Thee,'" recalls her granddaughter LaShawn Smith. Other family members also shared fond memories and recalled that, "She attended Camp Meeting faithfully, and stayed in the same cabin on 66 Parkway for many years."

Harris is a gifted seamstress, and through the years would be seen donning her own creations and designs.

"She loved doing crossword puzzles, reading, and other wholesome activities; she believed an idle mind was dangerous," added Smith

When presented with a cake and flowers to commemorate the occasion, overwhelmed with joy, she humbly and graciously said a simple, "Thank you."

Mt. Olive Member Wins South Apopka Ministerial Alliance Oratorical Competition

On Sunday, February 9, 2014, Mt. Olive Worship and Educational Center in Apopka, Fla., had the privilege of hosting the South Apopka Ministerial Alliance Oratorical Scholarship Competition. The competition has been sponsored by the South Apopka Ministerial Alliance annually since 2011. Members of the community and fellow churches come together to support the young people from their congregations. Mt. Olive is the only Seventh-day Adventist church that participates in the event. Courtney Lalanne, a member of Mt. Olive Church, was this year's first place winner.

Incredibly, every year since its inception, the young people of Mt. Olive have taken first place. Past winners are Lorna Jack, 2011; Angelica Laloo, 2012; and Brianna Barrett, 2013.

Mt. Olive member Renee Cooper has coached every winner of the competition. The proud father of this year's winner exclaims that Cooper even coached his daughter from her hospital bed. Cooper was hospitalized briefly during the preparation for the event. Lalanne's family took her to Cooper's bedside at the hospital to help her prepare. Lalanne also practiced her speech with Cooper over the phone.

"We are extremely proud of all the wonderful work of our young people. We hope to win many more competitions in the future," said Carl Ware, pastor of Mt. Olive.

Maviean Masson Wins Southeastern's Annual Spelling Bee

Maviean Masson, 12, a 7th grade student at Ephesus Jr. Academy in West Palm Beach, Fla., emerged as the winner of the 16th Annual Southeastern Conference Spelling Bee held on February 22, 2014, on the campus of Miami Union Academy, Miami, Fla.

After 24 rounds, Masson won the competition with the correct spelling of the word spritz.

Second and third place winners were Jean Jacques, a student at Miami Union Academy, and Rigaud Chostel, a student at Mt. Calvary Jr. Academy, Tampa, Fla.

The competition featured contestants from 11 of the 15 schools that comprise the Southeastern Conference school system. To qualify for the spelling bee, each student had to win a qualifying spelling bee that was held at his or her school.

The other contestants were Jewel Murray, Mt. Olivet Junior Academy, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.; Kayla Charles, Broward Jr. Academy, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.; Amari North, Ephesus Junior Academy, Jacksonville, Fla.; Anthony Anson, Shiloh SDA School, Ocala, Fla.; Kaitlyn Taylor, Perrine SDA School,

Tabernacle Sponsors Block Party, Reaches Out to Community

Since its beginning in 1977, Tabernacle Church, North Miami, Fla., has had a long history of serving in Miami's Little Haiti and Little River communities. On January 19, 2014, the day before Martin Luther King Jr. holiday, the members honored the day by funding a block party to reinforce that Tabernacle is ready to serve the needs of the community.

The block party was spearheaded by the Personal Ministries Department, led by Selwyn Carrington. The purpose was apparent in the preparations leading up to the event.

"Our goal is to take care of this community," Carrington said. "We do not just come here to go to church. We are part of this community, and must show the people they can count on us."

The area was flooded with literature promoting the events and the services the church provides, including free food and clothing distribution on the third Sunday of each month.

When the day of the block party arrived, the parking lot was transformed into a festival complete with a stage, music, and booths provided with a variety of food and activities. There was a bounce house and games for the children, tables with information on ministries such as Pure Reality, and food for everyone.

In case a visitor was curious about the people who attend the church, members put their best foot forward and provided entertainment through songs and skits that showed Tabernacle is a warm and welcome place to attend.

"Tabernacle is a place for people to get well," said Olinto Groce, pastor. "And 2014 begins now. The goal of this church should be to help people get well through the love of Jesus."

With the block party, the year was off to a flying start.

Oakwood Student Named 2014 HBCU All-Star

The White House Initiative on Historically Black Colleges and Universities (WHIHBCU) announced in early February its first class of HBCU All-Stars, recognizing 75 undergraduate, graduate, and professional students for their accomplishments in academics, leadership, and civic engagement.

Antoine Southern, from Houston, Tex., is currently enrolled at Oakwood University, one of the 62 HBCUs from which the 445 All-Star applicants were selected.

During the next year, the HBCU All-Stars will serve as ambassadors of the White House Initiative by providing outreach and communication with their fellow students about the value of education, and the Initiative as a networking resource. Through social media and their relationships with community-based organizations, the All-Stars will share promising and proven practices that support opportunities for all young people to achieve their educational and career potential.

In addition, the 45 female and 30 male All-Stars will participate in regional events and web chats with Ivory Toldson, deputy director of the WHIHBCUs, and other Initiative staff and professionals from a wide range of disciplines. They will also have opportunities to engage with other scholars to showcase individual and collective talent across the HBCU community.

At press time, it was announced that Antoine Southern was accepted into Harvard Law School.

OU Strives to Stay Fit Through Fitness Classes

U.S. News and World Report recently named Alabama as the second most obese state in the nation. It has an obesity rate of 31.2 percent listing it as one of the top 10 most physically inactive states. Oakwood University Alumnus Tyrel Thomas isn't taking this information lightly. He and a few friends have taken seriously this health prognosis of the state and have decided to begin close to home to try to make changes.

Every Tuesday and Thursday evening from 6-7 p.m., Tyrel Thomas and Eric Ramey lead out in circuit training classes right on Oakwood's campus to try to help students, faculty, and staff understand how they can help Alabama get out of its #2 ranking. "Our classes are centered around metabolic circuit training which includes cardio and calisthenics," said Thomas, who graduated from Oakwood in 2012 with a Bachelor of Science degree in pre-physical therapy.

Approximately 50 people participate in Thomas and Ramey's twice-a-week class. "We were happy that one of our own decided to come back and give of himself though this fitness class," said Raymond King, director of student activities at Oakwood.

Both Thomas and Ramey are Action Certified Trainers and are currently taking online classes at Vanderbilt University dealing with nutrition. "In our fitness classes, we also make sure that the participants understand that it's not just about exercising, it's also about making sure you are putting the right things in your body," said Ramey.

Oakwood Participates in Global Youth Day

March 15, 2014, marked the second annual Global Youth Day (GYD) sponsored by the General Conference's Youth Department. GYD is dedicated to spending time as the "hands and the feet of Jesus" in serving others. This year, Oakwood University was given the opportunity to report on both its reoc-curing community service activities, sponsored by the Office of Spiritual Life, and its GYD activities, during a one-hour broadcast that was one of 22 sites broadcasting LIVE on Hope Church Channel within a 24-hour period.

On that day, more than 300 students participated in clothing and food distribution in three of Huntsville's urban housing communities. "Since its inception, Oakwood has had a culture of helping students understand what it means to serve others," said George Johnson Jr., director of integrated marketing and public relations and executive producer/host of Oakwood's one-hour broadcast. "We were happy to share in this event that allowed us to be a part of a global compassion initiative," said Johnson.

The General Conference Youth Department has planned the next GYD for March 21, 2015.

Southern Students, Faculty Win Awards During SONscreen Film Festival Held on Campus

Southern Adventist University hosted the 2014 SONscreen Film Festival March 20-22, 2014. Begun by the North American Division in 2002, the event is a premier destination for Christian filmmakers to share their creative work, gain exposure, and network with other media and film professionals.

This year's SONscreen showcased more than 20 independent projects and provided 11 workshops. The festival culminated in an awards ceremony with individual prizes as high as $2,000. Judges honored junior animation major Jason Dull for Best Animation on Disconnected, and senior film production major Matthew Disbro with four awards (Best in Fest Sonny Award, Best Dramatic Short, Best Cinematography, and Audience Choice Award) for The Hideout. Jesse Rademacher and Daniel Cooper, both of whom teach in Southern's School of Visual Art and Design, took home a Best Sound Award for their work in Sideshow.

Because of its location on Southern's campus this year – the festival has traditionally been held in California – junior film production major Joseph Cartwright was able to attend SONscreen for the first time. He took to heart the message of keynote speaker Dave Christiano who said that writing scripts with sex, violence, sin, and greed is simple. But creating a positive message of lasting and eternal value requires greater skill, dedication, and inspiration.

“Southern teaches us how to do that!”

Cartwright said. “We learn how to make professional looking films, and use those talents to bring people closer to God.”

Summer Evangelism Training Targets Lay Leaders

In its third year of operation, the Soul Winning and Leadership Training (SALT) program at Southern Adventist University continues to grow. One option for those unable to commit to an entire semester of study is Summer SALT, the condensed version of its fall program. Summer SALT registration is now open with classes running June 22-29.

According to Michelle Ducomes, SALT program coordinator, Christians enroll in these classes with the primary goal of effectively channeling their enthusiasm for Kingdom work. And it works! Students often leave SALT and immediately go home to begin an evangelistic series or Bible studies in their own church. The possibilities are endless as students take away a wealth of knowledge. Summer SALT covers a variety of topics, including friendship evangelism, health evangelism, public evangelism, creating and giving Bible studies, awakening spiritual interest, answering objections, and how to start contagious evangelism in a church. Classes are held all day Monday through Thursday, and a half day on Friday. Instructors include professors from the School of Religion and both the evangelism director and the speaker for It Is Written, Southern's partner organization for SALT.

“Everybody wants to do something, but they don't know exactly how to get started,” said former attendee Jerome Williams. “After this week they will know how to get started!”

Summer SALT averages between 30 and 40 students, ranging in ages from 14 to 80. For more information regarding registration rates or housing and food options, visit www.southern.edu/salt.

MASTER'S DEGREE IN SOCIAL WORK

Facilitate Positive Change in People's Lives

Southern Adventist University's Master of Social Work program prepares you for excellent service and leadership in the social work profession.

It works.

Our evidence-based program equips you with effective intervention tools.

It's convenient.

Classes meet Sunday afternoon and all day Monday, twice a month.

You'll be ready.

Our approach is competency based. That means you get hands-on skills and experience in social work practice while you're in school.

Call or visit online to find out how you can get started.

Master of Social Work

With a multi-disciplinary approach and a variety of concentrations, a master's degree in social work from Southern prepares you to serve a wide variety of people in need.
